Reformed Church Messenger.

"AS THE TRUTH IS IN JESUS."

VOL. LIX.—NO. 1. PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 1, 1891. WHOLE NO. 2921.

Entered at the Post-Office, Philadelphia, as second-class matter.

The Reformed Church Messenger.

ISSUED WEEKLY

IN THE INTERESTS OF THE

REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES

BY THE

REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE,

CHAS. G. FISHER, Proprietor,

Office: 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(For Terms, see page 11.)

Editorial Notes.

"A HAPPY NEW YEAR!"

—To step from the Old to the New Year is a thing of no little moment. The past is irrevocable, the future is to be spent. The shortcomings and failures of the past if regretted should have much to do with the shaping of life and conduct in the future. Hence the first step in the New Year should be in the right direction. To do that requires resolution and the seeking of the ever present help of Him who allots time to His, to prepare for the other higher and better life. Such as enter upon the New Year with a sincere purpose to serve the Lord throughout its days well and faithfully, will find it to be indeed a happy New Year.

—Entered into rest, Tuesday morning, December 23d, Rev. Simon Wolf, pastor of the McConnellsburg charge, Fulton county, Pa., at an advanced age. His burial took place on Christmas afternoon. An obituary will appear at a later date. May the Lord comfort and sustain the bereaved!

—The account of the dedication of St. Mark's Memorial church, East End, Pittsburgh, Pa., by Rev. John H. Prugh, pastor of Grace church, that city, is interesting. It tells of a novel and pleasing event in the Church, and the gentleman erecting this memorial has set a noble example to others who might likewise help forward the Church in her work.

—The Christmas number of The Independent of New York is a superior one. It contains a number of articles upon Christmas subjects written by representative men of the different denominations, Rev. Em'l V. Gerhart, D. D., LL. D., President of the Theological Seminary, Lancaster, Pa., representing our Church. The copy upon our table is printed in gold upon fine paper, for which the publisher has our thanks.

—It is officially announced that Rev. Sylvanus Stall, who was elected by the Lutheran Observer Association as Assistant Editor of that paper, has accepted the position, and will on February 1st, enter upon his duties. Rev. Stall is heartily welcomed by the editorial fraternity to their ranks and the hope is expressed that he may in his enlarged sphere of usefulness in the Church of his choice, find abundant opportunities for the exercise of his well known abilities and his past experience in similar work.

—The address of Rev. Chas. A. Sntee of Kansas City, Mo., is not given correctly in our Almanac. It should be 1618 Central street. His correspondents will please note this.

—We were favored with a visit to our sanctum on last Saturday afternoon from the venerable Dr. Schaff, who was on his way to attend a meeting of the Society of Church History in Washington, D. C., this week. He seemed to be in good health and possessed with his old time vigor. He made many inquiries about the Church, showing his continued interest in the Church of his fathers, and in which he spent the earlier years of his life in this, his adopted country. His old students and friends in the Church will unite in the wish that his useful life may be lengthened out many more years so that he may be permitted to complete the work he has so well begun and carried forward to the present.

—The following bequests were made by the late Elder Henry Wirt in his last will and testament: Ministerial Relief Society, $2000; Bethany Orphan's Home, $1000; St. Paul's Orphan's Home, $[illegible]; Board of Home Missions, $[illegible]; Board of Foreign Missions, $1000; Library of Emanuel's Reformed church, Hanover, Pa., $3000; towards a new parsonage for Emanuel's Reformed church, $2000. Total $11,000, which is about one sixth of his estate. The balance he left to his widow and sixteen lineal heirs. He did not forget his Church whilst living and devised generously for the benefit of the different objects of benevolence under her care, and thus has perpetuated, if needs be, his name in them for all time to come. A worthy example to all who have of this world's goods to bestow.

—The Church will regret to learn of the extreme illness of the wife of Dr. Peter's of Danville, Pa. It is to be hoped the worst fears may not be realized. The son who has been very ill is now convalescing. The prayers of the Church should be offered for the recovery of the wife and mother.

—We have received a copy of The Holiday Courier, issued at Rimersburg, Pa., from the press of Clarion Collegiate Institute, located at that place. Should proper encouragement be given to the enterprise, the Principal of the Institute, Prof. W. W. Deatrick, proposes to publish it weekly after January next, under the title of the Rimersburg Courier in the interests of the town and community. The work will be done in the Manual Training Department of the Institute. It will start as a five column quarto. The subscription price will be one dollar a year in advance. From the specimen before us we have no doubt the enterprise will prove a success.

—Our Christmas number was well received and highly spoken of by our many readers. We would like to make improvements upon future numbers. An increased circulation will bring all these. Our friends can by a little effort, bring this all about. Shall we have their aid? Every subscriber could without much trouble secure at least one new subscriber. That would double our present number. For two new ones a copy of our new and handsome book, "In Olden Days Beyond the Sea," will be sent. We hope our Book Department will be kept busy mailing it to our friends in return for sending us the names of new subscribers. It is a book every Reformed family should have. The translator and the writer of one of the stories are both in the Reformed Church; the latter is a German minister in our Church in Iowa.

—Our Almanac has so far met with a large sale. There are no doubt many congregations that have not yet been supplied. It should be well circulated through them. Those who have not yet ordered a supply we hope will do so. We desire it to reach a larger circulation this year than in past years. We know of some pastors who ordered several hundred copies and put them in the hands of some active boys in the congregation to sell. In no time the supply was exhausted and more were ordered. Others can do this and the Missionary Society or the Sunday-school can have the profits in their treasuries. As we have said before, it is a wonder to many who are aware of the cost of things, that our Almanac can be sold at the low price of 5 cents apiece by the hundred. The truth is the publisher is selling them barely at cost to him. He could issue one inferior in illustrations, contents and paper, and sell it at the same price, but he prefers to issue such as will be a credit to the Church, and well worth preserving.

Sometimes pastors are requested by subscribers to inform the publisher of the church paper to discontinue sending it to them. Pastors as a general thing, do not like to do so. They endeavor to induce those making such a request, not to stop its weekly visits to their homes, and in a number of cases succeed. But when they are not able to change their minds, may we suggest, when sending notice to discontinue it, that they try to send the name of a new one with it, so as not to lessen the number upon the list? Is it not a good suggestion? We hope it will be generally adopted.

—There are always some subscribers who for one and another reason send word to the publisher of their church paper, to discontinue sending it to them at the end of the year. Some give as a reason that they must curtail expenses during the next year, and the first thing they think they can do without is the church paper. They may be subscribers for several secular papers, but not one of them can they think of doing without. Why should they so easily decide against the best of them all if they only could think so? They can best answer the question themselves. What a great pleasure and source of information they are depriving their families of. Do not do without the church paper! Renew it from year to year and do not stop at that, but induce your fellow members to subscribe for it.

Poetry.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

BY FRANCIS RIDLEY HAVERGAL.

A happy New Year! Oh, such may it be!
Joyously, surely, and fully for thee!
Fear not and faint not, but be of good cheer,
And trustfully enter thy happy new year!

Happy, so happy! Thy Father shall guide,
Protect thee, preserve thee, and always provide!
Onward and upward along the right way,
Lovingly lead thee day by day.

Happy, so happy! Thy Saviour shall be
Ever more precious and present with thee!
Happy, so happy! His Spirit thy Guest,
Filling with glory the place of his rest.

Happy, so happy! Though shadows around
May gather and darken, they flee at the sound
Of the glorious voice that saith, "Be of good cheer!"
Then joyously enter thy happy New Year!

Communications.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

OUR CHURCH BOOKS.

An ideal Church book includes the liturgy in full, all the great chants, the gospels and epistles, the hymns and suitable family and private prayers.

The catechism should have bound in with it hymns for the catechetical class, confirmation and communion, and prayers for committal and use by the members of the class, adapted for the period of instruction and for after life.

When we now look at what we actually have in these respects, it must be owned that we are much at sea. We have all these things, and it is orthodox Reformed to have them; but we have them in a scattered form, separate, and not at hand when needed. We are getting along, and we have been getting along, certainly; and yet it cannot be denied that our public worship has generally a certain limp in it, a weak step here and there, growing out of this very state of things; a defect not necessary in itself, but solely owing to the circumstances described.

And our catechetical instructions would also gain in force for the future by the incorporation of hymns and prayers, which should be learned by the young like the catechism itself. Catechism, hymns and prayers, as in the book, should form a service during the hours of instruction.

Let any pastor or intelligent layman reflect on these statements, and we think he will agree with us that there is wide room here for work to be done by the Church in the way of its own perfecting and for the perfecting of its membership.

We are rich in liturgies, hymn-books and editions of the catechism. We are rich also in the variety of optional service in our public worship. And free service (so-called) has also its forms and regulations with us, as with everybody else who uses it. The very abundance, however, carries with it a weakness often painfully manifest.

The congregation which the writer serves as pastor, has services in two languages—German and English.

In German we use a hymn-book claiming to be of the union sort, published by the firm of Radde, of New York. Of late years the title-page, as a rule, has printed on it the name Lutheran and excludes the name Reformed, apparently in deference to the renaissance of Lutheranism within the last thirty years. The type is worn out and the paper poor. In place of this book we would like to adopt our German (Schaff's) hymn-book, published at our own book concern [illegible] What stands in the way? Sim- [illegible] that our own hymn-book lacks the gospels and epistles. Our German people are used to follow the minister when he reads the gospel and epistle for the day, turning to them in their hymn-books. It is a praiseworthy habit, and altogether Reformed whatever else it may be at the same time. It ought not to be weakened but strengthened. It ought not to die out for lack of opportunity. It is an interesting sight to see the whole congregation, book in hand, follow the pastor when he reads the Scriptures. Let our hymn-books, German and English, have also the gospels and epistles of the Church year.

Our old "Psalms and Hymns" and the so-called Chambersburg German hymn-book were sadly defective in these respects, as well as in some others, and did their share in bringing about the popular notion that there is nothing distinctive in the doctrine and worship of the Reformed Church. The fact that those books have been retired is one evidence that the distinctive character of the Church has begun to assert itself.

The "Hymnal" is a great improvent on "The Psalms and Hymns." It follows also the popular habit of having tunes printed with the hymns. It is an open question whether that is desirable or not for the book in the hands of the great congregation, however convenient it may be for those who can read the notes. Two editions, the one with notes and the other without them, cover the ground in this matter. The gospels and epistles, nevertheless, should not be wanting.

"Hymns for the Reformed Church" is a book which was meant from the first to go with the Order of Worship and be bound within the same covers. The two together, including of course the lessons, constitute the most complete book of worship which the Reformed Church in this country has produced. We think no one can successfully question this statement, no matter what his theological predilections may be. In fact, theological bias has very little to do in determining what fulness, beauty and richness mean in a book of worship. One may have all these attributes and yet not be to our particular taste. Who is right on the theological score is a separate, and measurably an independent question.

"The Directory of Worship" has so far stood practically alone. If the prospective new hymn book of the General Synod meets with favor, it were desirable to bring it and the "Directory" together, and have the lessons also printed with them.

Whenever a liturgy is used in part or as a whole, the hymns and lessons should form one book with it, so that the people, the congregation, could have them conveniently at command. It is awkward to have to reach for several books to get through one service; against the habits of our membership; not suited to the mode of sitting in many of our churches, or to the structure of the pews in them.

If no liturgy whatever is in use, then the hymn book should contain the gospel and epistle lessons, whether the habit to follow the minister in reading them obtains or not. Where the habit does not exist, it is one of the things to be restored by all means. It is a Reformed habit out and out. Let it come back to us everywhere.

"Have the Bible in the pew, and that will meet the case." Well enough. But how few congregations form the habit of having it there? And then the inconvenience of leaving it, or carrying it along, when the service closes, in so many of our churches, where families do not have particular pews. Some congregations can have the Bible in the pew, and it is well if they do have it; but it is practically almost impossible for many others to have it there.

WYOMING.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE RECENT ENDOWMENT MOVEMENT IN THE POTOMAC SYNOD.

The completion of the endowment movement inaugurated six years ago at Hanover, by the Synod of the Potomac has been a subject of congratulation to the Synod. All who were present at that meeting will remember that, notwithstanding the enthusiasm manifested in the project, there were many doubts and misgivings concerning the accomplishment of the work. That these doubts and misgivings were groundless and that the Synod has been enabled to see even in six years the fulfillment of the obligation which she then assumed may well call forth the spirit of thankfulness.

It may be well, however, in the midst of the general satisfaction over the result which prevails, to reflect upon the significance of the movement which has been in progress during the last six years in the Potomac Synod. When the project of securing thirty-five thousand dollars was started, it was the intention to secure this amount in large contributions. Notwithstanding the efforts made by the committee to do this they failed of success, and it was then determined to make the work a general one by bringing it before the membership of the whole Synod. The necessities of the case forced this change of procedure. But the necessities were deeper than were at first apparent. The necessity of adopting a method so general in its character as to reach almost every member of the Synod, in order to secure thirty-five thousand dollars revealed a deeper necessity, namely, that of awakening an interest in our Theological Seminary in the membership of the Church. Why did not the wealthy members of the Church promptly respond to the appeal which was so urgently made first to them? Because they felt no interest in the movement. The Theological Seminary is an institution concerning which a large proportion of the membership of the Church knew comparatively nothing. Many even of the more intelligent portion of the membership of our Synod knew little, and thought still less of its claims upon them, the character of the work done in it, and of the necessity of enlarging its capacities for work. The very failure to secure a prompt and willing response to the appeal of Synod revealed either an ignorance of the importance of a fully-equipped Theological Seminary, or an indifference towards the subject. If it was ignorance, information and enlightenment were needed. If it was indifference an interest had to be awakened. The committee, fully alive to the necessities of the case, determined to inaugurate a general movement in the Synod in the interest of our educational institution and with particular reference to our Theological Seminary and the project to increase its endowment. For this end conventions were held in every charge in the Synod. The owners of our Theological Seminary were made acquainted with the condition of their institution. The relation between the members of the Church and the Theological Seminary was dwelt upon. The claims of this institution upon the benevolence of the people, and the necessity of development in our institutions of learning commensurate with the growth of the Church, numerically and intellectually—these and other subjects of a kindred character were thoroughly discussed and every member of the Church was made to reflect upon them. From a movement inaugurated to secure thirty-five thousand dollars there was developed a movement to awaken an interest in higher education and disseminate information concerning our literary institutions. The thirty-five thousand dollars was almost lost sight of (the committee will bear witness that it was not altogether forgotten). But very little was said about money. The money came because of the general interest that was awakened. Never before in the life of the present generation of this section of the Church, had the members of the Church and our Theological Seminary been brought so closely together. Seeds were sown broadcast over the Synod. The first fruits were thirty-five thousand dollars and an increased number of students both in the College and Seminary. The ground has been broken up. The seed has been sown. It needs now but cultivation. Already the bud and blossom of another harvest appear.

Need we wonder that our rich men did not quickly respond to the first appeal of the Synod? The rich are generally men of mature years. When they give of their possessions, it is generally to objects in which an interest has been awakened in early life, an interest which has been fostered as they grew in wealth. Until the recent endowment movement little or nothing had been done in the Potomac Synod within the memory of the present generation to awaken and develope a hearty interest in our Theological Seminary. But many are the poor and the men in moderate circumstances, who willingly contributed in small amounts to the recent endowment fund, and who will be the rich in a few years. And when the Church asks again for contributions for the cause of higher education (if she does not wait too long to ask), she will meet with a more prompt and liberal response from the rich because of the thorough work done during the last six years. The truth that the work of endowing our literary institutions should devolve mainly upon the wealthy members of the Church was emphasized in the endowment movement, but there is a deeper truth which properly received more emphasis. It is the truth that every member of the Church ought to feel a deep interest in our institutions of learning, and especially in our Theological Seminary, and that because of the interdependent relation subsisting between the Seminary and the Church at large, every member of the Church ought to feel it a privilege to give according to his means to its support. If this truth be fixed in the minds of the members of the Church, it will in due time bring forth its fruit. If the Pittsburgh and the Eastern Synods are fortunate enough to secure by a few large contributions the amounts for which they are pledged, it will, none the less, be of permanent advantage to both our educational institutions and the members of the Church, to hold educational conventions throughout the boards of these synods and it will be of still further advantage for the members generally to give and for the Seminary to receive contributions large and small. No one should be debarred from the exercise of a privilege because his gift is necessarily small. The final result of this work thoroughly done, will be, not merely the securing of a sum fixed upon as now necessary, but also the awakening of an interest in our Seminary, which will continue to manifest itself in an increased number of students as well as of gifts.

The work done in the Potomac Synod during the past six years was not merely the work of securing thirty-five thousand dollars. Those who look upon it in that light fail to see its true significance. It was a work in the interests of higher education, from which we may with reason look for greater results than those which have already accrued. Nor are we disappointed in our hopes. Already the signs point towards their realization. The large classes in the College and Seminary, the movement looking towards the erection of a Seminary building and towards the esablishment of the Potomac Synod Fellowship, are but the natural results of the persistent and patient work done in the Potomac Synod during the last six years. C. S. S.

Westminster, December 16, 1890.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A LOW VIEW OF THE MINISTRY.

"The idea of a clerical caste is wholly foreign to the New Testament; the terms 'clergy' and 'laity' are inventions of the dark ages."

A friend has sent us a slip containing the above quotation, taken from a monthly publication in our Reformed Church. There is danger that such language may be understood as setting aside all distinction between the ministry and laity in the Church, ignoring altogether the office of the ministry as of New Testament origin. It is true that the word "clergy" is seldom used in the New Testament. In Acts 1: 25 it is used to designate the lot cast in the election of Matthias, and in 1st Peter 5: 3, as referring to the charge allotted to the Christian ministry. But while the word was seldom used, yet the office itself designated by it is frequently referred to in the New Testament. We grant that the Old Testament office of the priesthood was abolished when Christ came, and that the New Testament does not teach an office like that of priest in the Roman Catholic sense, as one who offers the sacrifice of the Mass, but certainly our Lord did ordain a ministry in His Church, including a class of men holding office as distinguished from the ordinary membership. Indeed there could be no organization at all without this rudimental distinction between those governing and those governed. At first the ministry included only the Apostles, whom Christ called and commissioned to go forth into all the world and make disciples of all nations. But these Apostles then ordained elders and deacons to carry forward the work of the ministry, and these certainly formed a class, if not a caste, whom the members of the Church were enjoined to reverence and obey. (Heb. 13: 7.)

It is true, we repeat, that the New Testament does not teach a radical and essential distinction between the ministry and the laity, in the Roman Catholic sense, according to which the ministry moves on a plane above, and separate from, the laity. The ministry is a function in the Church, not above and separate from the membership, but we should be careful in making this distinction not to ignore entirely the office of the Christian ministry, as an office deriving its authority, not from men, but from Christ. In a sense all are kings and priests, but in a sense also there is a class set apart and ordained to teach and rule in the Church different from the ordinary members. All are called to teach the glad tidings of salvation by virtue of their position of Christians, but all are not called to occupy the pulpit and preach as ministers in the special sense. Else why do we speak of a call to the ministry? And why does the Church seek out and train a special class of young men for the sacred office? And why allow only those thus called and trained to occupy the pulpit and dispense the holy sacraments? There must be a class to attend to this duty, and they are to be reverenced as those sent by Christ to minister in His name. And there must be names or titles by which to distinguish them. The terms "clergy" and "laity" are very generally used, and we see no evil in such use in an evangelical sense. We may use the words ministry and membership, the name is not important, but it is important that we recognize the distinction they imply.

And surely such recognition of the ministry in the Church is no reflection upon the members, nor does it interfere with recognizing a sphere for the members to work in. The minister and layman, each has his sphere of work, and they should mutually co-operate, and thus work together for the spread of the Gospel. A good deal is said, and wisely said no doubt, in our day, about the work of the laity, personal effort, &c., but nothing can be gained in emphasizing this point by ignoring the special office of the ministry, and the directing and governing authority in the Church. All tendency to organizations apart from the ministry in the Church must in the end work out dangerous consequences, for, after all, it is the Word of God preached to dying men that is to work a change in their spiritual condition. It was the sermon of St. Peter on the day of Pentecost that wrought to the conversion of the three thousand, and it was mainly by the preaching of the Apostles, including St. Paul, that the Church was established among Jews and Gentiles. Let us then encourage what is called lay work and personal effort, but not to the disparagement of the office and work of the ministry. Even the "dark ages" were not altogether dark. The labor performed in those days by such devoted missionaries as Augustine, Columbanus, Boniface, Ansgar, and others, resulted in the Christianizing of semi-barbarous Europe, and the teaching of such men as Anselm, Bernard, Thomas of Aquin, and others, can compare very favorably with the greatest lights in this 19th century. When we have done as great a work in Christianizing China, Japan, India, &c., as they did in Christianizing Europe before the end of the 10th century, we may congratulate ourselves that our work is at least equal to theirs; but even then we may not boast. X.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE MUTUAL RELATIONS BETWEEN THE EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS AND THE LAITY OF THE CHURCH.*

An Address delivered before the Potomac Synod at Hanover, Pa., October 26, 1890,

BY REV. A. T. G. APPLE.

Every profound movement in the life of any Church has found its inspiring, guiding and governing forces in the Schools. From the times when Samuel's Schools of the Prophets became the centre of influence in the intellectual awakening of Israel, to the present day when our Theological Seminaries are leading off in the remarkable advances in church work as well as theology that are taking place,—all along the course of history we find the same principle in operation. To show this, we need only refer to the Catechetical schools of Antioch and especially those of Alexandria in the third century, the schools established by Charlemagne and Alfred in the eighth century, the schools of the Middle-ages, and the epoch making impulses originating in each, which left their marks on whole ages succeeding, or to bring its search nearer home, we need only refer to the fact that until the founding of our own educational institutions the Reformed Church can scarcely be said to have had a history in this country, and that the birth of those institutions marks the first beginning of her really self-conscious-life; while their subsequent development was productive of such a struggle as to bring to a systematic expression the peculiar genius and life of the Church, as marks that period as one of the most remarkable eras in our history.

The reasons for all this are not far to find, and in this connection they need be only briefly stated. In the first place, right-thinking is very closely related to right-acting; a man's beliefs will invariably show themselves in his life. False doctrine produces false ideals, which in turn produce false character. While, indeed, there are exceptions—men whose lives are better than their beliefs,—yet, as a rule, what a man thinks and believes set the pace for his walk in life. What is true of the individual is true of a Church. Let a false or rationalistic system of doctrine be promulgated in the Seminaries of a Church and eventually the morals of the people will become paralyzed by the dead virus. On the other hand, a true system of teaching will conduce to the moral and spiritual health of even the humblest church-members. In the second place, our views of truth are constantly advancing—growing broader, higher and purer. Each age sees the truth from a standpoint that is an advance upon the preceding age, in a form especially adapted to its own peculiar needs. Theological science, therefore, is a living thing. It must grow, or it dies. It must constantly advance, or it petrifies. It must ever produce treasures new and old from the inexhaustible sources of revealed truth,—treasures to satisfy the especial wants of the time. And in this onward march from the darkness into light it is from the mountain tops of our educational institutions that there is first seen the dawning of a better day. And finally it is not only intellectual leadership that we find in these institutions, but where they truly subserve their purpose, the moral and spiritual power also that is inspired by all right-thinking finds it origin in them, whence the spirit of the whole Church is fructified.

---

* Published by request.

But while it is true on the one hand that strong and vigorous educational institutions are the life of the Church, and make themselves felt eventually even in the practical life of the humblest member, it is equally true on the other hand that there is a reflex influence of the laity upon the schools. We might in this view liken the Church to the body; and as sana mens in sano corpore is the ideal man and the sanum corpus is the only foundation for the sana mens, so an earnest, zealous membership in a Church is the foundation on which the educational instutions of that Church must rest if they would continue to be a power in the Kingdom of Christ. From them, as from the brain centre, there must radiate and ramify through the whole body new fibers that not only bear outwards the impulses originating in that center, but which bear back again responsive influences that by their reflex action serve to sustain brain life and bind together the whole body in a vigorous activity. In this therefore, as in everything else, there is no giving without receiving, no action without reaction. The relation between the Educational institutions of a Church and its membership is a mutual one. This is seen to be especially true in the case of our own institutions at Lancaster. The movement which resulted in their establishment was to a greater degree than is commonly supposed a popular one. It seems to have been typified by the meeting at Bedford, where the project had its birth; for we are told by an eye witness* that the people filled the church and crowded the doors and even the windows anxiously watching the course of debate. And in the subsequent struggle for existence, although the brunt of the battle fell upon the devoted, recently deceased, leaders, yet had not their hearts and hands been upheld by an earnest intelligent laity, their work must have ended in failure. But more decidedly popular has been the movement that has just been brought to a successful completion. Here the general character of the response to the appeal that went forth and the heartiness with which that response came was a surprise even to its most ardent supporters. And the people of the Reformed Church within the bounds of the Potomac Synod have shown, and nobly shown, that the interests and wants of the Church need only be properly presented to them in order to meet with a ready and willing answer. It has been the privilege of the greater number of pastors here, as it was our own, to help in this good work, and we feel certain that the experience of all must, like our own, have been one of unalloyed pleasure at the showing which our membership gave of an earnest, hearty, working interest in our Seminary at Lancaster. This evidence is far more encouraging than the endowment itself to one who has the future welfare of our Church at heart. What the Seminary wants is not so much the money as the hearts of the people; for when it once has these, all else needful will come, not only money, but what is better, consecrated young men to swell the ranks of the ministry. And it is not only because the Endowment movement has strengthened the financial foundation of the Seminary but also because it has been effective in enlisting the interest and love of the Reformed people that it has been so signal a success. Were the results to be measured by the financial return alone, we might doubt, as some did in the beginning of the movement, whether the severe and wearing labors of the devoted men who bore the chief part, have met with an adequate return,—important as is the addition to the endowment of the Seminary. But when we look upon it in the light of what might be called a missionary movement, that is the rousing of the people to the great work of the Church, and to the importance of our institutions as the centres in that work, it is at once apparent that the arduous labors expended have been but the sowing of precious seed that will spring up and bear fruit in the years to come. There is not the least doubt that many a father or mother as the pledge was signed, made a far greater pledge which dedicated a son to the ministry; while how many of the boys as they gave their mites had stirred up in them a desire to be ministers will be known only when all secrets will be revealed.

Most devout thanks be to God that the work is so gloriously completed! Most heartfelt gratitude do we raise to Him that He has crowned our efforts with success. Praise and glory do we give Him for the evidence of the Holy Spirit He has shown us so many times. We believe the endowment work just accomplished to be another act in the carrying out of God's great plan of saving men in which He is using our beloved Church as His instrument.

But while we give heartfelt thanks let us be clear as to the spirit in which we do so. Do we say "thank God" in the sense in which the galley slave says it, when dizzy and exhausted he sinks down upon the sand his journey ended; or do we say it in the spirit of the happy farmer when he thanks God for the harvest of the one year at the same time that he strikes in the plow for the harvest of the next. In other words, shall this work stand out as a solitary effort in the history of our institutions, or shall it mark the beginning of an era in which our institutions, and especially the theological seminary, shall receive increasing attention, an era in which the mutual bond uniting it with the people shall go on growing stronger and stronger. A long period of comparative inaction, so far as any general effort is concerned, stretches through the years immediately preceding the inaugurating of the endowment movement. Shall the Church lapse back again into the same inactivity and enter upon another period barren of any advance along the lines we have started? If there were the least disposition to complain, the Seminary would be justified in urging that the growth and advance in scholarship on her part through many fruitful years has not met with an adequate response from the Church in the way of temporal assistance. The endowment just raised, great as it is, and timely, is yet but part payment of the debt the Church owes not only to the Seminary but to herself. And shall this debt be allowed to go unpaid? Shall we not rather answer this challenge by making our present position to be but a vantage ground from which to accomplish still more for our School of the Prophets?

To say that with the new endowment and the new professor which it will place there, the wants of the Seminary will be met, would be to say the building is built when the corner-stone is but laid. The very professorship itself will create new needs, not to speak of the many wants already existing. In fact we, the ministers and people of the Reformed Church, in justice to the Seminary—in justice to the trust bequeathed to us in the dear Church of our fathers—in justice to our own selves, cannot say enough is done until that Seminary, in its equipment, stands side by side with the best in the land.

The importance of the work for the life and growth of the Church; the pressing needs of the Seminary that remain, even after one great want has now been met; the encouraging character of the present outlook; all are a challenge that we dare not neglect or refuse. A most eloquent appeal from the Seminary is now before the Synod asking for a home in the way of a suitable building for library, recitation rooms, &c. The two institutions that have been living peaceably in the old college building for so many years, have been growing so rapidly of late that they are beginning to jostle each other, and this demands enlargement. The suggestion recently made in the columns of the papers for the establishment of scholarships whose ultimate effect would be the raising of the standard of scholarship opens up a broad field of advance. The prosperous condition of the Seminary is a call to us to go forward. One needs only to come in contact with the present students, and to feel their zealous spirit not only in theology but in practical mission work, to find that never before has more thorough and aggressive work been done than is now doing. And one needs only remember the fact that the roll of the Seminary runs up to fifty men or more to see that the work is increasing no less in extent than in intensity.

And now if all this has been done under present equipment what an inspiration to reflect what may be done with still more enlarged facilities! The condition of the Church within the bounds of the Synod is a call. Never before has the cause of the Seminary been nearer the hearts of the people. Never before has a more intelligent interest been manifested in her welfare.

And now, with our divine Master thus showing us His favor, opening up the paths before us and going before us by His power, shall we waver or hesitate to enter in to possess the land?

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE PROPHECY OF SIMEON.

One of the most beautiful pictures of human devotion is the presentation of the Infant Jesus in the temple at Jerusalem. It was a very simple service, but the act of dedication is without a parallel in the annals of sacred history. The mother of our Lord knew the worth of the treasure in her arms. Though she cannot cope with the presents of the rich, yet, she will bring an offering far more precious than all the sacrifices ever slain on Jewish altars, because in her babe dwells the Son of the Highest.

At the moment of consecration, an old man comes up to them. His locks are white with the frost of age and his form is bent with the weight of years. He bows with adoring reverence before the pious family, takes the holy child into his own trembling arms, presses it to his heaving bosom and sings one of the sweetest and noblest songs that mortals ever heard. The Nunc Dimittis is a chant that the Church of all ages has loved to sing.

---

* Elder Abraham Weisel.

Who was this ancient poet? "And behold, there was a man in Jerusalem whose name was Simeon." The name appears nowhere else in the New Testament. All that we certainly know of him is found in the few verses of this chapter. He was a man of faith. As the fruit of this faith, he was "just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel." He was a believer in the promises of the past and a student of the prophecies of the future. It was a wonderful insight into the mystery of the Incarnation that enabled Simeon to proclaim the Infant Jesus as the salvation of God. But when we carry Jesus in our arms, there will be a sweet song on our lips, a bright hope in our hearts and a fervent devotion in our lives. Jesus is salvation. He is the salvation of God for all the people, "to the Jew first and also to the Greek."

The conception of salvation as a gracious provision for the whole world, germs and buds in every chapter of the Gospel. "Only a salvation that was for all peoples, classes, races and nations could be a divine salvation." The salvation of which the aged Simeon sings is "a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of thy people Israel." Jesus is the light of the world. The heathen are sunk in the darkness of sin and sit in the shadow of death, but the advent of Jesus into the world, brought with it salvation for them as well as for Israel. "Behold I bring good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." The salvation of God came through the Jews, but its blessings shall extend to every heart. The Jewish idea of the Messiah did not include the Gentiles as sharers of His blessings. But Simeon's faith grasped the wider scope of God's plan of salvation, "a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of thy people Israel." The great wonder to the heart and mind of this saint was, not that the Lord should visit his people in the form of a little child, but that He should embrace in His love, the poor, forsaken, idolatrous heathen. Hence he puts, "a light to lighten the Gentiles" before "the glory of thy people Israel." "And well is the enlightening of the Gentiles put before the glory of Israel, because when the fullness of the Gentiles shall have come in, then shall Israel be safe." The glory of Israel will depend upon the diffusion of the light among the Gentiles. This is a truth, the force of which can only be apparent to the eyes of those, who, like Simeon, hold Jesus in their arms. No man can have Christ in his heart and say, that Christians need not spread the light of the Gospel among the heathen. Such a man would be a living contradiction. That the Messiah was a Jew glorified that nation. They might have become the centre of the world's civilization, but, "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." Verily Christ was the glory of Israel. Do you wonder, then, that the saintly form of old Simeon should bow in profoundest reverence over the infant form of the world's Redeemer? Do you wonder, then, that the Holy Ghost should prompt him to say of the babe of Mary, "A light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of thy people Israel?"

The idea of Christian missions is not an offspring of man's mind. It was born in heaven in the secret counsel and will of God. The execution of this idea is not the result of man's zeal. Had the work of missions been dependent on the activity of men, it would have, ere this, come to naught. Since God is the author and finisher, it cannot be overthrown. Men may resist it, but they are only fighting against God. If the Spirit of God is in our hearts, we will exclaim with Simeon,—"A light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of thy people Israel."

America is to the modern world, what Israel was to the nations in the time of Christ. The salvation of about twelve hundred millions of heathen souls in the world at the present time, depend, in a large measure, upon the prayers and efforts, the men and means of our own dear native land. We cannot, dare not, shut our eyes to our vast privileges, our golden opportunities and our incalculable resources. We are the richest nation on the face of the globe. Rich in population, rich in intellect, rich in wealth. Jesus Christ comes to us as He came to the Jews, almost nineteen centuries ago, and our glory as a nation will depend in all probability, upon how we receive Him. We need to pray for the spread of the missionary spirit; that spirit which produces missionaries as the military spirit produces soldiers. In the darkest days of our national history and before the Government had time to call for troops, a multitude came forward and laid their lives and their fortunes upon the altar of Freedom's holy cause. The spirit of war was in the air, and men came forward in crowds to rescue the nation from its imminent dangers. What a mighty host of workers would be marching towards the heathen world if the spirit of peace would possess the hearts of Christians to the same extent as did the spirit of war, the hearts of the patriots! The Church of God needs the healthful dew of the Holy Ghost to awaken her members from the sleep of ease and unconcern, for until the whole church shall become a burning bush, the people will not exclaim, "Here, Lord, am I, send me." The great cry from the heathen world is, "Send us more reapers into the harvest field of God." The work has grown to such proportions that more helpers are necessary to bring in speedily the full victory of the eternal kingdom of our God.

What should be our attitude towards this dearth in the working force of missions? That there is urgent need for missionary work admits of no argument. Fully two-thirds of the entire population of the world are under bondage to the powers of darkness. There is a painful groping after the true light. There is a constant yearning for deliverance from the power and guilt of sin. That the untaught heathen are anxious for the Gospel, is evident from the manner in which they receive and enjoy the glad tidings of salvation. That they are grateful for their Gospel privileges is seen in what they do for the cause of Christ. But it is not only the cries of the heathen for help, but the calls of God to duty, that we should hear and heed. If a man has the gift of usefulness, that becomes his divine call to be useful. God often calls through the spiritual destitution of men, and so long as one sinner remains from the fold of heaven, Christians should not cease in their efforts to rescue him.

The work of redemption is complete. Christ made it possible for every sinful man to inherit eternal life. We need not do the work; we shall only make it known among all the people. "That thy way may be known among the heathen, thy saving health among all nations." The more we diffuse the knowledge of salvation, the sooner we can expect the full victory of the Gospel. The Gospel of Christ shall cover the mountains and fill up the valleys, until the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our God, and He shall reign forever and ever. What Jesus was to Simeon He may be to every one of us. Holding the Babe in his arms was the crowning act of his life. What is Jesus to us? What place does He occupy in our hearts? With Simeon we may all embrace Him as the Lord's salvation, the Gentiles' light and Israel's glory. Let us spread the Gospel among the heathen, and the earth will be full of the glory of the Lord.

A. R. BARTHOLOMEW.

Pottsville, Pa.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

ORPHANS' HOME COLUMN.

BY REV. T. M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

Eighty-one children in the Home.

Next regular meeting of the Board of Managers and Ladies' Committee will be held on Friday, January 9, 1890. All persons having business with the Board will please address the superintendent before that date.

Christmas, as usual, brought with it much cheer for the orphans at Womelsdorf. The boxes began to arrive early in the week and by Thursday there was an abundance wherewith to supply the whole and enable it to celebrate the day according to good old Pennsylvania custom.

An early dawn service was held at 6 o'clock, opened with the beautiful old German hymn, "Stille Nacht." After this service the Christmas-tree was exposed to view, which gave great delight to the children, and then the presents were distributed. At ten o'clock in the morning a second service was held for which special preparation had been made for several weeks previous. Just before the service we received the following telegram, which gave us much cheer, "Riegelsville, Pa., Dec. 24, '90. Rev. T. M. Yundt: A merry Christmas to family. Collection, three hundred and fifteen dollars. FERER."

Christmas dinner consisted of one goose, three ducks and twelve chickens (variety to suit the taste of all) with the regulation side dishes. That the children enjoyed it goes without saying.

What will the sum total of the Christmas collections amount to? We are naturally anxious to know. Let those who have money in hand for the Home forward it promptly to the proper parties, so that we may know the result by the time of the Board meeting, and that early acknowledgement may be made in the Church papers.

Missions.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Since my release from pastoral duties as Secretary of the Foreign Board, I have sought to visit the churches in the interest of its work, to present it to the congregations, and where this was impracticable, to solicit the active and early co-operation of the pastors. I have made two excursions, and two more are arranged for in the quite near future. These jaunts are extended from a few, to ten days or more. I am rejoiced in being able to say, that judging from my limited observation, the coolness and inaction which had appeared to a partial extent, as regards our foreign work, are happily passing away—that whatever question may have arisen, or differences have existed in the past, the feeling is that the work remains, and must receive the prompt and efficient support of the Church. Our missionaries are in the field, the fruits of their labor are growing more abundant every week and month; God is answering our prayers in almost overflowing measure, and the home Church dare not, if it would not prove recreant to its trust to God and to the souls of men, withhold that material aid which is absolutely indispensable to the reaping of the harvest which God has set before it.

The outlook is promising, and gladly would I take wings, that I might bear to every congregation of our communion, the words of cheer, of exhortation and solicitation. But our limitations forbid this. It is a physical impossibility to visit every congregation or even pastoral charge. And to intensify this difficulty, just at the commencement of my excursions, here are the barriers of winter. At this date, here in the "sunny South," we are hedged in by an eighteen or twenty inch snow—roads drifted shut and unbroken, so that we cannot reach the railroad only on horseback, and the thermometer threatening a raid in the direction of zero. We take refuge, therefore, in the only way left open to us—in the columns of the Church papers.

To emphasize the importance, indeed, the necessity of immediate and energetic action on the part of every minister and member of the Church, we beg to say, that the trouble caused by the appreciation in the value of silver, is much more embarrassing than many may be aware of. The Board has already been under the necessity of increasing the appropriation for the current year by $1500, and also to vote $1000 more towards the erection of the Theological Seminary. So that here is the item of $2500 increase, beyond expectation at the opening of the year. Now, brethren and sisters in the Lord, the necessity is upon us, and to you only can the Board look for the needed help.

The relation of the foreign missionary work to the churches in the matter of contributions, is different from that of most other branches of Church work. Most of them are largely provided for by synodical and classical apportionments. We are dependent upon gifts outside of this organized arrangement. We therefore feel compelled to ask for special, and just at this time, unusual efforts in our behalf. We call upon brethren in the Church for special gifts and offerings to the Lord, in this most glorious work, upon which He is so steadily pouring His abounding and increasing blessings. The windows of heaven are opened, let us make room for the descending mercies, and there will be joy in heaven over repenting souls.

S. N. CALLENDER, Sec.

The Family.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE YOUNG PROPHETESS:

A TALE OF THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE.

BY REV. R. LEIGHTON GERHART.

CHAPTER I.

THE GATHERING OF THE CLANS.

The events recorded in the following story occurred during the romantic period of history embraced by the Crusades. The Crusades were mediæval wars begun and carried on by the nations of Europe for the purpose of wresting the Holy Land from the dominion of the Saracens, into whose hands it had fallen, and placing it under the authority of a Christian king. They were called Crusades because the armies of the Christian nations fought under the banner of the cross and for a cause believed by every one to be especially sacred.

For eighty-eight years, as the result of two of these Crusades, Palestine was ruled by Christian kings. But at the expiration of this time, Saladin, the Sultan of Egypt and Syria, by a number of brilliant and successful battles, re-conquered the land, driving the Crusaders from all but a few of their hardly-won strongholds. The news was received with consternation throughout Europe, and efforts to retrieve the disaster were immediately put forth. The third Crusade, undertaken by the German Emperor, Barbarossa, and the English King, Richard Cœur de Leon, promised in the beginning to be crowned with success, but ended in failure. A fourth and fifth terminated with the same discouraging result. Ptolemais, Tripoli and Antioch were now the only three cities acknowledging the sway of the King of Jerusalem, John, of Brienne, and against these the victorious Saracens were preparing to advance in overwhelming force. The despairing cry sent to Europe was answered with tardy indifference, and not until several years after the Pope of Rome had proclaimed a sixth Crusade, did the Christian armies set out for the scene of conflict. During this period of inactivity the romantic rising of the children occurred.

The chief instrument employed to bring about this event was a French boy by the name of Stephen. He was born in Cloyes, then a wretched little village on the banks of the Loire, about twenty miles west of the city of Orleans. His father was a shepherd, and as soon as he was old enough to be entrusted with such a care, Stephen was sent to lead his flock over the plains and through the woods surrounding his home. In the loneliness of his wanderings by day, and desolate watches by night, he seems to have brooded long and intently over the wild and romantic tales told of the achievements of the Crusaders, and of the terrible stress under which they rested at that very hour. Naturally very imaginative and enthusiastic, dreams of romantic adventure, glorious victory, fame and power began to inflame his mind. In this excited state, while watching his flock as usual, he was accosted by a stranger, who, after a brief conversation, announced himself to be the Lord Jesus Christ. He came, he said, for the purpose of commissioning Stephen to preach a Crusade among the children. He provided the boy with a letter addressed to the King of France, directing that monarch to give the bearer every encouragement and assistance in his power. With assurances of supernatural protection and help, of certain success, of future glory and honor, the stranger (supposed to be a priest in disguise) then abruptly departed.

Stephen believed every word spoken to him. Transported with the hope of accomplishing a task that had foiled the efforts of the most famous kings and warriors of his day, he at once began to fulfill his mission. From his native village he went to St. Denys, a city near Paris, where, in a costly sepulchre, rested the bones of a celebrated martyr, Dionysius, the founder and first bishop of the Church of Paris. This was considered an exceedingly holy place in those days, and was consequently visited yearly by thousands of pilgrims. To the multitudes of superstitious and devout people congregated here, Stephen discoursed daily; and such was the force of his eloquence, and such the magnetism of his enthusiasm, that old and young were moved as never before. This wonderful boy is said to have been only twelve years old. The children soon began to respond to his appeals. The best qualified were sent at once into the surrounding country to proclaim the Crusade in other cities and towns. Thus the excitement spread. In a little while all France was in a turmoil; and when Stephen finally set out on his eventful journey, he marched at the head of a host numbering twenty or thirty thousand.

From St. Denys the news of Stephen's work was carried by the pilgrims into Germany. Here a lad, by the name of Nicholas, incited, it is said, by his father, began to imitate the young prophet of Cloyes. He began to preach in what was then the religious centre of Germany, the famous old city of Cologne; a place visited like St. Denys by tens of thousands of pilgrims annually, for resting under the shelter of a cathedral built by Charlemagne, in a costly shrine, were precious relics—the bones of the Three Kings of the East. At least, so it was believed by all in that day; and this belief soon made Cologne famous throughout the world.

Nicholas was even more successful than Stephen. He preached with such fervor that not one army but two assembled at Cologne. At the head of one of these he placed himself, and on a fair day in the spring of 1212 set out on his march along the banks of the Rhine, going by way of Geneva to the Mediterranean, where he expected to find passage to Palestine. About the same time, the second army, crossing the Rhine at Cologne, set out by a more circuitous route, one that led through the more central parts of Germany, for the distant and beautiful Swiss city of Constance, from where by the pass of St. Gothard it would descend into Italy, and so reach the sea. The purpose of the leaders of this second army gathered by Nicholas, seems to have been to rouse the children and enlist followers in those parts of Germany where the Crusade had not yet been preached,—places where the news of the wonderful uprising of the children was little known. For in those days, when no regular means of communication existed, when newspapers and telegraphs were undreamed of, weeks sometimes elapsed before even the people of populous cities got word of important events transpiring within a few hundred miles of them. So no surprise need be felt that the people in the more remote parts of Germany were very largely in ignorance of the wild excitement prevailing in distant Cologne.

But surely, you cry, these children did not expect to conquer by force of arms enemies who had proven themselves worthy foemen of the chivalry of all Europe? Such seems to have been the hope of Stephen,—a hope based on the belief that children innocent of crime, with hands untainted by blood, and relying entirely upon God for strength and guidance, would be able to overcome the armies of the Saracen and accomplish what the mail-clad warriors had failed to do. "For the last time," cried he, "have we heard of defeat, hereafter shall children show mailed warriors and proud barons, how invincible are youth when God leads them!" "Long enough," reiterated his enthusiastic followers, "have your knights and warriors, so boastful and so honored, been making your fruitless attemps to rescue the tomb of Christ! God can wait no longer! He is tired of your vain, puny efforts! stand back, and let us, whom you despise, carry out the commission! He who calls can insure the victory, and we will show you what children can do!" Nicholas, however, laid particular stress on the spiritual nature of the victory to be gained; it was to be a triumph of peace,—a triumph won by converting the Saracens, not by slaughtering them, and so he cried, "We go to get the cross beyond the sea, and to baptize the Moslem infidels!"

No opposition was sufficiently strong to withstand the enthusiasm. In vain did the King of France and the Emperor of Germany order the Crusade to cease. In vain did parents and teachers persuade, command, warn, entreat. As though a mania had seized the children, they forsook their homes to join the bands hastening to the appointed rendezvous. When forcibly restrained, it is said, "those whose hearts were set upon the enterprise mourned and pined, so that their lives were frequently endangered as by disease, and it was necessary to allow them to depart." Many people of mature years became infected by the enthusiasm and believed that at last God had indeed prepared an instrument for the furtherance of His will, which would bring to an end the cruel wars in which so many had died, and in which so many were then hopelessly involved. These people served greatly to strengthen the determination of the children. So the young prophets gathered adherents daily, until at the head of vast armies they were able to begin their march.

---

Copyrighted by Chas. G. Fisher, 1890.

The first of the two armies raised by Nicholas, was already several hundreds of miles on its way, when the second, the one whose history we will particularly follow, set out from the gate of Cologne. At first, it pursued a northern course, then, turning southward, journeyed through the rich lands watered by the Neckar and the Main.

At this time there stood on the eastern shore of the Neckar, about two miles north of the town of Heilbrun, then called Heiligbroun (holy well), one of the most formidable castles of southern Germany. It was built on a lofty and wooded eminence commanding a view of the rich and fertile country for miles around. Thirty miles to the southeast rose the rugged summits of the Rauhe Alps, while a score of miles to the southwest brought one to the borders of that range of dark hills, known as the Black Forest. The castle, together with a vast stretch of country embracing the town of Heilbrun and villages of lesser note, was owned by a gentle and noble lady, the Countess of Heilbrun. Her husband, Baron von Hieldrich, ten years before the opening of our story, had set out, in company with a number of noble gentlemen, to do his part in battling for the defence of the Christian Knights, so hardly beset in Palestine. About a year after his departure, word came that he had been captured in battle by the Saracens, though whether afterwards slain or carried off into the interior of Arabia, to be sold as a slave, was not known. The years slipped by, but, though often despondent and melancholy, the Countess never wholly abandoned hope.

One son, Otho, now about fifteen years old, was born to this noble couple. He, together with a beautiful and brilliant girl, called Serena, the orphan daughter of the only brother of the Baron, made up the entire family of the Countess. There were, of course, many servants, waiting-women, men-at-arms and retainers in the castle, subject, under the authority of the Countess, to a little company of stewards officers and commanders of different degrees and importance. Though surrounded thus by willing and obedient servants, the discipline of the castle had sadly relaxed its rigor, and the great fortress itself, wanting the vigilant eye of the master, began in many places to show the need of repairs. An intense lover of peace, and by her gentle and humane disposition averse to everything severe or harsh, the Countess allowed the affairs of her household to drift on quietly, trusting that the warden of the castle, an honest and faithful old servitor, would be sufficiently vigilant and faithful to save her from any disaster. As the sequel will show, the warden, though faithful and honest enough, had, in sympathy with the easy rule of his gentle mistress, become somewhat careless and indifferent in the discharge of his duties.

(To be Continued.)

THE DEPARTING YEAR.

How differently sounds the bell that tolls the dying year to different individuals! Some are filled with regret, for during the year has passed what seemed to them the supremest moments of existence, never, perhaps, to be revived. Others have been so sorrow-stricken and deeply laden with misery and woe, as to long for the dawning of another year, which may bring solace and peace to their aching hearts. And so our lives run along. Some days are joyous; others are sad; and thus should we look for a perpetual interchange while sin and sorrow exist in the world. For it seems to be needful for our spiritual betterment that dark days should come, else might we become intoxicated with continuous sunshine, and forget the Giver of all happiness and abiding peace in an overwhelming love and regard for self. If we could only be rid of that word "self." It so narrows and confines men to such small boundaries. It does us great good to have our egotism exposed, and to be made to see that a regard for the welfare of others is absolutely essential to true and lasting happiness.

And as the new year advances with elastic tread to take its place with the centuries, let us resolve to be less selfish and more charitable, just and kind to those about us, that many happy moments may be made to be cherished forever. This is not so bad a world if we will only look on its bright side, and strive to make others, and especially the needy, more comfortable. Would that our years had less of horrible and revolting crime to be stained with! Would that they overflowed with peace and good will to all! Would that their annals might not be so dreadfully disfigured with the red finger of murderous crime, but replete with stories of Samaritan good and benevolence. But though the wish seems vain, may we not help to improve the time and correct wickedness? Alas! we vainly strive to seek pleasure and happiness in forbidden ways, and we only reap in the end remorse and regret. So when men come to die, too often they are all unprepared and reluctantly leave behind the things they most cherished. Fatal error! remediless mistake! For is it not man's chief end to glorify God and enjoy Him forever?"—Alexander Macaulay.

Youth's Department.

GOOD-BYE, OLD YEAR!

Good-bye, Old Year! God bless you, too;
You've borne our joys and hopes and fears;
You've seen the one we love lie low,
And known the fall of anguished tears.

Old Year, we cannot bid you stay,
Yet shrinking, dread the last "good-bye."
God bless you! Ah, the door is closed,
And the New Year is standing nigh.

JACK'S NEW YEAR GIANT.

The holidays were ended. The little candles on the Christmas tree had burned out. The visit to grandma's was over, and the New Year party broken up. Even the story-books had been read through, and now, on this bright, cold second of January, there was nothing for Jack to do but to collect his scattered books, put them in his school-bag and trot back to school.

"Oh, ho!" sighed Jack; it feels very dull to go back to school. I wish I was Jack the Giant-killer, and had nothing to do but climb a bean-stalk."

But when he glanced slyly at the dining-room window, on his way out of the door, there was no sign of a bean-stalk, though he had dropped a whole handful of beans out there on purpose.

"Well, boys, a happy New Year!" said Miss Lucy as the boys chattered noisily in the school-room, and "Happy New Year!" echoed all the fresh young voices.

After a sober little talk about the old year that was gone and the New Year that was coming, Miss Lucy said, "There is one job I've laid out for you this year, boys, and that is to kill a giant."

Jack started. Had Miss Lucy heard him talking to himself a little while ago?

"I won't tell you the giant's name now," said the teacher, "but I will let you know if see him around."

As I told you, Jack didn't feel a bit like going to school, and he missed his spelling, and got his sums wrong, and blotted his copy-book, until Miss Lucy had to give him several ugly marks on his report.

"Ah, Jackie!" she said, "that giant has met you in the way and got the best of you."

"Is it Giant Laziness, Miss Lucy?" asked one of the older boys.

"That's his name, Frank, and here is the sword to kill him with, and Miss Lucy wrote across the blackboard, "Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."—Sunbeam.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

"'Happy, happy New Year,' why do they call it so?
I've been guessing all the morning, and now I know, I know;
The reason is that everybody tries to find the way
To make somebody else enjoy a happy New Year's day."

—Youth's Companion,

A PRINCE OF A BOY.

"He is just a prince of a boy," said Mrs. Hatton, of Willie, and I listened and watched, for a prince, you know, is the son of a king, and I wanted to see if Willie was like a King I read of.

When he dropped his hoop and ran in to amuse baby for mamma, and did it so pleasantly, I began to get my answer. When he came out of school, smiling, instead of pouting because he had been kept late, I felt pretty sure. But when he cut his apple in two and gave one-half to ragged Ned Brown, I was satisfied.

Yes, Willie is a "prince of a boy," because he tries to do just like that King who is kind to all, and like that Son of a King, who came to minister and not to be administered unto.

Pleasantries.

"A certain man hath said," but his hearers did not dream that they were indebted to that "certain man" for the whole sermon.—Christian Inquirer.

A verdant gentleman, whose correspondence is limited, received a letter upon the envelop of which was the conventional business card: "After five days return to ———." The epistle was carefully perused and preserved until the expiration of the allotted five days, when it was returned to the writer.—Terre Haute Express.

When a lady living in Chelsea sent to London for a doctor, she apologized for asking him to come such a distance. "Don't speak of it," answered the M. D. "I happen to have another patient in the neighborhood, and can thus kill two birds with one stone."

Lady Lecturer on Woman's Rights (growing warm)—"Where would man be if it had not been for woman?" (After a pause, and looking around the hall.) "I repeat, where would man be if it had not been for woman?"

Voice from the gallery—"Ee'd be in Paradise, ma'am."—The Jester.

New York Mail: "Were you at Mrs. Jones's ball two seasons ago?" he said to Miss Rosebud at the Patriarch's ball. "Oh, no!" she answered, "I am a débutante this winter." "Are you?" he exclaimed, "why, somebody told me your folks were Episcopalians?"

NOTICE.

☞ Edito[illegible] Correspondence address to THE REFORMED CHURCH M[illegible]ENGER, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ [illegible]ters pertaining to subscriptions and other business, [illegible]EFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch add[illegible], Philadelphia.

☞ No notice taken of anonymous communications.

For Terms, see page 11.

THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER,

907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 1, 1891.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

At this interesting season of the year, we extend to our readers our sincere congratulations, and wish them all, old and young, and not in the way of empty compliment, a truly happy New Year. The MESSENGER has many readers, and, as we know, many warm friends. It is gaining more and more, as we believe, the confidence of the Church. It ought, however, to have more readers, and more such enthusiastic friends as we meet with occasionally as we get around through the churches. That will be the case, we are sure, in proportion as our people get to see and read the paper. Let some at least, if not all, therefore, unite and combine during the present year to extend the era of its usefulness and weekly visits.—This will be a handsome method of returning our New Year's greetings, by wishing us practically "the same."

LOOKING BACKWARDS.

At the close of the year when we take a retrospective view of the past, the scene which it presents to our view predominantly one of struggle and conflict, if not of wars and rumors of wars. A large part of the past year, as of other years, consists of honorable, industrial pursuits, but these could not be carried on successfully without effort. They all involved an invasion in some degree of the domain of nature, and combats ensued to control its agencies in such a way as would best subserve the interests of society. But honorable as they were, the actors, brave and heroic, were not always allowed to live in peace with all mankind. Competitions in wise and generous rivalries frequently degenerated into pitched battles; and if we employ a glass in looking over the ground, we shall see that opposition against good true workers at times had no better basis than mere spite or cussedness. All over the field we may see men contending with each other by twos, or in duels, if not with swords and pistols, yet with such weapons as are deemed best to destroy some imaginary adversary. But such combats are sporadic. Men, if they must fight, prefer to do so in company with others. Hence they organize themselves into parties, large or small, in the community or the State, and too often in the Church also, and carry on war in their own way year in and year out. To this, the past year was no exception. It was a battle-field like all the rest. True, there was no literal war, no cannon's roar, no field covered with the slain or wounded, for which we must now be thankful; but in what may be regarded as a peaceful flow of society, internal conflicts or wars were just as real and fierce at times as when armies appear in the field to decide a nation's destiny. And now, at the end of the year, we may with propriety ask, What has been the result of such campaigns that are now over and gone? Were they of no use, mere idle spectacles? We say, by no means. Whether we can see it fully or not, society has advanced through storm and sunshine, and the Kingdom of Christ has also advanced. It had been so far ordained. As matters now stand no upward progress in the world can be made without conflict or struggle. Truth is resisted, and the power of this world is concentrated to hold it down and cover it up. But it is mightier than falsehood, and if covered up beneath mountains of those for a time, it has strength sufficient to throw off the incubus and assert itself. At the end of every year, therefore, all men, good and true, may congratulate each other as warriors, loyal and true. Another campaign is ended, and now for the next one. To such as are still fighting on the wrong side, we may also extend our best wishes, hoping that they may enlist on the right side during the coming year, as it will be another year of grace.

LOOKING FORWARD.

Looking back over the past and finding everywhere the indications of progress in the victories of truth over error, we are so much the better prepared to look forward in the exercise of hope. What though in places iniquity may have abounded, and unrighteousness held up its head, claiming for itself triumph after triumph? It has become more apparent every year that all such boastings are vain and empty. God rules and reigns, not the Arch-Enemy emerging from Stygian darkness. He rules also in ways not understood by us at the time, but afterwards, in results as clear as a sun-beam, which show that in history, and in our own lives too, He is ever present, bringing good out of evil. During the present year we may expect that the great conflict between light and darkness will continue to be waged as fiercely as ever. Our faith assures us that in the end victory will perch on the banner of truth and righteousness. But let us remember well that Christ carries on the war through His followers. They are His soldiers and the Church is still in a militant, not in a triumphant state. They must, therefore, endure the hardness involved in their holy profession. They know this in fact by their past experience. They may have passed through sore trials, severe affliction or painful sorrow, some more so and some less, during the year now ended, and it may be so again. Let all alike then be prepared to meet and endure whatever may befall them in the future with the courage and faith of true Christians. The outlook is encouraging. The dogs of war seem to be held back by some invisible power, and the fires beneath us, apparently, can find no such vents as they did in days gone by. The nations are at peace with each other, and seem at least to be cultivating and strengthening peaceful relations. The times are propitious, and the opportunities for the spread of the Gospel and of peace on earth exceptional. May the Good Being permit no fell spirit from the pit below to throw apples of discord among the nations, into the churches, into the families, or into our hearts. Then in peace we may all alike, high and low, walk at liberty, to subserve the chief end of man, to glorify God and serve Him forever.

HEATHEN INCARNATIONS.

When we come to think of the Incarnation and of the Word made flesh, in the way of thought and reflection, we pause and involuntarily ask the question, How can this be? Bewildered, confounded, and humiliated, we feel that we stand on the border of an abyss in the region of thought which it is impossible for us to fathom by means of imagination, reason or any other faculty of the human mind. But when we look on the results, or developments of Christ's life in history, we recognize the fact, that the Eternal Word did of a truth tabernacle in our human nature, and that Christ was no less the Son of God than the Son of Man. We then think as we ought, and like Cato musing on the immortality of the soul midst the ruins of Carthage, we exclaim, It must be so, without giving our logical apparatus time to begin to think or reason any further. But the modern skeptic steps up and reminds us that the history of heathen religions is full of the incarnations of their gods, and suggests that as these have all turned out to be mere empty myths, so it may be with the Incarnation of Christ,—that it may have grown simply out of ancient mythologies. We promptly reply, no, that cannot be. The old heathen stories took their rise in an Ecumenical truth, and that Truth was Christ Himself. They all betray an arbitrary fancy, as we might expect in the circumstances, but taken as a whole, they are interesting types or prophecies of some central truth, of which Christ is the reality or fulfilment. It is said that heathen sacrifices ceased in many places after His sacrifice on Calvary, and it is certain that heathen incarnations also became less numerous. Christ exhausted the necessity of both alike.

THE CHURCH REVIEW.

The October number of this periodical is on our table. We have been looking for it, expecting it to contain replies to several articles contained in the April number, on the Historic Episcopate. In that number were a dozen or more articles prepared on invitation by the editor, by as many members of the Non-Episcopal Churches, expressive of their sense of the adequacy of the Lambeth propositions as a basis of Church Union. A rejoinder to them was promised, and here it is. The prevailing, though not unanimous sense of the writers in the April number, was that the first three of the Lambeth propositions, were upon the whole acceptable, but the fourth affirming the necessity of the Historic Episcopate, met with unanimous disfavor, as taken in the old sense of Apostolic Succession. But judgment was largely suspended on account of the indefiniteness of the proposition, and a general call made for explanation as to its precise meaning. The eleven articles in this October number, written in an admirable, Christian spirit, leave no further room for doubt as to the meaning and contents of this now familiar term.

The consensus of the articles is, in a word, that the Historic Episcopate implies an unbroken tactual succession of order through Bishops, from the Apostles—that non-episcopal ordination is not only irregular and illegitimate, but invalid—and that there has been from the beginning three distinct orders in the Christian ministry.

Well, it is a great satisfaction to know precisely what the House of Bishops and the Lambeth conference meant in their terms of Union. They are now open for that carefnl consideration to which they are entitled. But we feel fully warranted in saying that without a complete revolution in the belief of non-episcopal Churches, there will be a universal dissent. It cannot be otherwise, short of—we might almost say, self-stultification. We are asked to repudiate our ordination, to concede the invalidity of our ordinances, and to surrender our claim to be included as branches or members in the Body of Jesus Christ, and to acknowledge that all that remains of the wreck of the Reformation, is the comparatively small body of the Anglican Church. Verily, if this be true in the case, if the gates of hell have not prevailed against the Church, it looks mightily like it. The very enormity of the demand, ought to give the Anglican Church pause, and prompt to the re-examination of the validity and reasonableness of its assumptions.

We woud not for a moment question the sincerity and conscientiousness of that body, considering its standpoint, in its amazing claims and demands. But from our point of view, we could near about as easily repudiate the Reformation in toto, and ask our sister Anglican Church to join hands with us in a return to the Church of Rome. No competent exegete will attempt to base the assumptions of the Anglican Church directly upon the Holy Scriptures. They are inferences drawn from them, as interpreted by history. That is, history as a succession of events. The reliance is therefore upon history in this sense; and even a tolerable Church historian knows, that in the purely historical argument, the Anglican Church is powerless before the Church of Rome.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

ELDER HENRY WIRT, HANOVER, PA.

The announcement of the death of this good man appeared in the MESSENGER of the 18th instant. In the same issue were published a few facts pertaining to his high Christian character and exemplary life. It has been requested that a fuller sketch be published for the benefit of the large circle of friends in the Church who monrn his departure.

From the papers of Hanover we gather the following statements with regard to the family history of the decedent.

Henry Wirt was born in Hanover in 1827. His father, Henry Wirt, was the eldest son of Christian Wirt, and grandson of Henry Wirt, the founder of the Wirt family of Hanover.

Henry Wirt, the subject of this notice, was educated in the schools of Hanover, and early in life entered his father's store.

At the age of twenty years he began business for himself, continuing as a successful merchant until 1858, since when he was engaged in no other business than that of assisting in the direction of various corporations. For two terms he served as head of the town government, and up to the time of his death was identified with nearly all of the public local interests.

He was married in 1854 to Miss Louisa, daughter of the late Matthias N. Forney, who survives him, no children having been born to them.

Mr. Wirt was a man of rare judgment. In financial matters his advice and counsel were sought for by many and always freely given.

He was reserved and unostentatious in his deportment and social habits, refined and cultured in his tastes and averse to all manner of display. He was a man of fine mind, and of great general information. Much of his time was devoted to reading, which was confined to books of the highest grade. His library of religious and scientific works is one of the best private collections in the county.

Mr. Wirt was broad and liberal in his views, charitable in thought, word and deed, and was sustained to the last by the faith in the Christian religion, which he professed in his youth and constantly lived throughout his life. His example may well be followed by those who knew him.

When we read these testimonies from the press of Hanover to the excellency of the character and life of Elder Wirt, and accept them as true and just, we are made to feel how difficult—how impossible—it is to portray the character and life of a good man in print. The good man stands for something more than anything or everything that may be said of him. The good man never fully reveals himself in what he says or does.

Mr. Henry Wirt was well-known in the community in which he spent his life as a man who always stood on a high plane, controlled by high ideals. No one would ever question his word or motive. The sense of right seemed to govern his every action.

As a member of Emanuel's Reformed Church, in which he had been reared, serving as an elder for twenty-two years, he was ever found faithful in word and work,—an example to the entire congregation. He was an example not simply in his devotion to the interests of the congregation, but also in his devotion to the interests of the whole Church.

Throughout the Church Elder Wirt was well and widely-known. The high appreciation of his character and services is evinced by the fact that he was honored by the Church by being placed repeatedly in the most prominent and responsible positions which a layman can occupy. Whilst he was free from denominational narrowness, and felt a deep interest in all the movements of the Church Catholic, he had a very special love for his own mother Church. He never wearied of discussing her many interests, and proved his love by generous contributions to the support of all her educational and benevolent operations. It was his rule to support whatever the Church would commend. His method of giving was in accordance with the Apostolic principle, not spasmodically, under the pressure of appeal, but freely—from week to week.

But, as in his relation to the community, so in his relation to the Church, the value of the man's character and life cannot be properly and fully estimated on the basis of what he said or did. The man was always greater and better than his word or his act. If it be asked: what great thing did he do or say? we cannot answer. But if asked, what was the character of the man? all who knew him join in the answer: He was a Christian, "the highest style of a man;" a Christian in every relation of life; exemplifying in word and work the beauty and power of the religion which he so humbly professed. It is in the lives of such Christians that we find the authentication of the claims of Christianity. In the presence of truth incarnated, we need no collateral proofs. In defence of Christianity we need and can find no stronger argument than that which confronts the world in the character and life of the faithful Christian.

It is the one argument unanswerable, and outweighs all the apologetics of the ages.

Elder Wirt for several years was in failing health, and awaited patiently and resignedly for the hour of his release, in the full assurance of the resurrection of the body and of the life everlasting.

On the afternoon of the 12th inst., a large congregation of mourning friends assembled in Emanuel's Reformed church of Hanover to take part in the last rites which the church could bestow upon her faithful son.

It was a just tribute to the character of Elder Wirt that the following clergymen joined in the pastor in heading the solemn funeral procession. viz., Revs. E. V. Gerhart, D.D., T. G. Apple, D. D., J. H. Dubbs, D.D., J. B. Kieffer, Ph. D., E. R. Eschbach, D.D., Prof. W. E. Krebs, A. C. Whitmer, J. G. Noss, L. F. Zinkhan, W. H. Herbert, C. S. Slagle, H. Ditzler and J. H. Hartman.

"He was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith."

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

J. C. B.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

How many will wish in their hearts for a happy New Year for themselves, and wish with their lips a happy New Year to others. Will it be a happy New Year to you? Can you begin the New Year thanking God for the pardon of your sins?

One said to me the other day, "This will be the brightest, happiest New Year I have ever had, because I have found Jesus as my own Saviour, in 1889." There can be no true happiness without the forgiveness of sin, and if you want to know present happiness, you must know present forgiveness.

Surely you would like to have a happy New Year! "Happy is the man whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered." Here is the benediction of the pardoned one! Here is true happiness! Is this blessing yours to start the New Year? Here is the one who is safe in Christ, and satisfied with Christ: safe because standing under the shelter of precious blood; satisfied, because trusting in and kept by, a living, loving, personal Saviour.

Holiness is the only road to true happiness, and holiness here leads to heaven hereafter. Holiness and happiness are as inseparable as sin and sorrow. Holiness is to be like Christ; happiness is to be in Christ; heaven is to be with Christ. Be humble, be holy, then you will be happy.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A NOBLE SHIP.

On New Year's Eve I had a dream, nor was
It all a dream. Methought I stood somewhere
On briny ocean's shore, when lo! a stately ship
Came plowing through the waves, her sails unfurled,
Like giant wings, to waft her on her way.
Her name, inscribed on streamer floating high,
In words of fire, was Human Destiny.
In sailing round the world, at ev'ry port
Or islet passed, she gathered gems of truth,
All sparkling bright, and pure beyond compare.
But cunning sailors, to all rules untrue,
By secret craft, to gratify their greed of gain,
Had sought to store away in corners dark
Much smuggled goods, the shameful wares of sin.
Though loaded down the vessel proudly sailed
O'er many a league of calm, pacific seas;
But storms arose and ocean madly yawned
To swallow ship and crew beneath the waves.
Then man arose in native sovereignty,
And laughed to scorn the tempest wild and fierce;
All hands on board one manly voice obeyed,
And pilot steered the vessel on her course.
The freight in part must now be thrown away:
Yet naught save glitt'ring falsehoods or deceit,
Sophistries, or lies as black as Erebus,
Or old traditions, now no longer true,
Were hurled into the sea, to appease its rage.
They were but silly trash, and nothing worth,
And now must sink to dark oblivion's realm.
Yet truths, like gold or pearls, or precious stones,
Firm ballast in the storms, came safe to land.
Thus errors oft invade the home of Truth,
And cover o'er its brilliant forms divine,
Till nought is left save dust or mould or rust,
Which hardens in the sun and more persistent grows,
Till every trace of hidden wealth is lost;
But when wars or revolutions come,
The rubbish disappears in empty smoke
And diamond glitter in the dust.—
Then in my dream, our ship, the ocean's pride,
Came into port and scattered o'er the shore
Its treasury of pearls and golden sands.
Well done! the gathering crowd exclaimed;
And thanks from the vast throng along the coast
Like noise of many waters rent the skies.
Well done! thou noble ship of man, well done!
Thy dang'rous passage o'er, now rest at anchor
In yonder bay for one brief wintry day.
'Tis New Year's Day and all the land is glad;
And then, ye mariners, again go forth
O'er trackless surface of the wat'ry waste.
At night, be Christ your pole-star on the main,
By day your sun to guide you on your way.
Sail on! thou noblest ship of all, sail on!
O'er the glad waters of the dark blue sea,
In flutt'ring sails, thou bearest human weal:
Our brightest hopes and aspirations high.
Non vehis Cæsarem, sed Humanitas,
All art and science with true philosophy;
The State and Church with meek Religion's shrine.
Vehis Christum. He rules o'er land and sea,
And holds the stormy tempest in His hand.
Then when we shouted all for voyage safe,
And breezes soft returned a faint response
Far out at sea, my happy dream was o'er,
And New Year's dawn illumed the eastern sky.

*

Poetry.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

CHARLOTTE ELLIOTT.

This year will prove a happy one,
If gladdened by Thy smile,
Jesus, my Saviour, that alone
My heart with bliss can fill;
That smile can cheer the saddest hour,
And gild the darkest sky,
And, with its soul-refreshing power,
Joy e'en midst grief supply.

This year will prove a happy one
If, quickened by Thy grace,
With swifter, firmer steps I run
The arduous, heavenly race;
If stumbling, lingering now no more,
"Forgetting things behind,"
I press toward those that are before
With undiverted mind.

This year will prove a happy one,
Bring with it what it may,
If, Lord, Thy strength be made my own
In every trying day;
For Thou canst make all grace abound,
Thou canst my grace increase,
And with Thy mercy fence me round,
And keep my mind in peace.

This year will prove a happy one
If every moment lent,
Each day, each hour, with Thee begun,
For Thee alone be spent;
If, as the weeks revolve, my aim,
My one desire on earth may be,
On earth to glorify Thy name,
To live, my God, for Thee!

Selections.

NEW YEAR'S GREETING.

"Not as the world giveth,
Give I to you!"
Saith the Redeemer,
Faithful and true;
May He enrich thee,
This New Year's Day,
With gifts from His treasure
That pass not away.

The goal of yesterday will be the starting point of to-day.—Carlyle.

The end of all things is at hand; be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer.—Peter.

Even for the dead I will not bind
My soul to grief—death cannot long divide;
For is it not as if the rose that climb'd
My garden wall, had bloom'd the other side?

—Alice Carey.

Real glory springs from the silent conquest of ourselves; and without that the conqueror is nought, but the first slave.—Thomson.

Stay the present instant, . . .
Imprint the marks of wisdom on its wings:
'Tis of more worth than kingdoms! far more precious
Than all the crimson treasures of life's fountain.

—Nathaniel Cotton.

This world is but the vestibule of an immortal life. Every action of our lives touches on some chord that will vibrate in eternity.—Chagren.

Be like the bird, that, halting in her flight
Awhile on boughs too slight,
Feels them giving way beneath her and yet sings,
Knowing that she hath wings.

—Victor Hugo.

Science and Art.

The wholesale price of whalebone is now $10,000 a ton. A project is on foot to organize whaling expeditions from Australia to the Antarctic seas, where it is believed plenty of whales are to be found. It is an almost untouched whaling ground.

Modern Light and Heat estimates the capital invested in electric lighting plants in the United States has reached the enormous aggregate of $118,758,500, and there are at the present time in use 1,590,667 incandescent lights, 127,441 arc lights, and 1,379 stations. These figures tend in a measure to show the importance to which electricity has advanced within a few years. This does not consider the thousand and one applications of the element other than lighting.

Items of Interest.

The directors of the World's Fair in Chicago have appointed Moses P. Handy, the well-known journalist, to be Chief of the Department of Publicity, at a salary, it is understood, of $5,000 a year.

P. T. Barnum celebrated Thanksgiving Day and his recovery by presenting a house and lot, valued at ten thousand dollars, to his favorite church, the Universalist Church of the Redeemer, at Bridgeport.

The will of the late August Belmont, the rich New York banker, so widely known in financial and political circles, distributes at least $10,000,000 among his wife, one daughter and three sons, but gives nothing to any charitable or religious object.

Government officers have captured seven counterfeiters in Ohio. Two were captured at Canton, one at Massillon and four about 25 miles southeast of Massillon. They made $10 bills, and one of the tricks to "age" them was to soak the fresh bills in vinegar.

Mr. Dogan, an iron workman on the dome of the State House, Topeka, Kansas, fell and was killed. He fell 150 feet and struck an iron cross-bar, and was frightfully mangled. He was the ninth iron workman that has been killed within the last five years while at work on the State House.

The Rev. W. C. Cattell, D.D., has returned home from his trip to Europe, where he went as the representative of the Reformed Church to the Council of the Reformed Church of Bohemia. He greatly enjoyed his visit, and comes back to his work vigorous and hopeful. In the October number of the Church at Home and Abroad he gives an interesting and valuable account of the Reformed Church of Bohemia and Moravia.

Hints and Recipes.

Washing Fluid.—Have a wide-mouthed bottle in which to put small pieces of soap, that bad economists generally waste. To a pint of these add a teaspoonful of powdered saltpetre, the same of ammonia, and a quart of warm water. This mixture is good for washing paint, taking grease from clothing, and all similar cleansing.

Rest as a Medicine.—A physician, writing of rest as a medicine, recommends a short nap in the middle of the day for those who can take it, as a beneficial addition to the night's sleep. It divides the working time, gives the nervous system a fresh hold on life and enables one to do more than make up for the time so occupied. A caution is given against the indulgence in too long a sleep at such a time, under a penalty of disagreeable relaxation. There has been much discussion regarding the after dinner nap, many believing it to be injurious, but it is, nevertheless, natural and wholesome.

Farm and Garden.

Covering strawberries, spinach, kale, pansies, etc., should now be attended to at once if it has not been done already. Bear in mind that the covering should be light, evergreen boughs are the best; salt sedge or thatch next, and coarse, strawy horse manure next.

Chicken Foods.—Buckwheat is fattening. Feed sparingly and no better egg producing food can be found. Wheat is acknowledged to be one of the best egg-producing foods. Oats come next to wheat. Corn is fattening. Excellent for night food. Corn should be the feed for setting hens. It keeps up a continual heat in the body of the hen. Rye makes a good occasional food, and gives life to the stock. Ground bone and oyster shell form egg shells. Always keep them handy for the fowls. Sand and gravel help the gizzard to chew up the food. Beef scraps mixed with corn meal mash and fed several times a week make a big increase in the egg supply.

Books and Periodicals.

Any of the books here noticed can be had through our Publication House, 907 Arch Street.

Bits of Pasture; or, Handfuls of Grass for the Lord's Hungry Sheep, being selections from Sermons of Rev. J. R. Miller, culled and arranged by Mary A. Butler. Philadelphia: Presbyterian Board of Publication. Pp. 255. Price 60 cents.

The title here given gives its contents. A selection has been made from the sermons of the preacher one for each day in the year. Many wholesome bits are offered to the hungry sheep of Christ's fold.

Outpourings of the Spirit. A Narrative of Spiritual Awakenings in Different Ages and Countries. By Rev. W. A. McKay, B.A., Pastor of Chalmers Church, Woodstock, Ont., Canada. Philadelphia: Presbyterian Board of Publication. Pp. 141. 40 cts.

Here we have the story of revivals in Bible times, in different countries, this and other beyond the sea. We are told first what a revival is, and at the close the question is, Shall we have a revival?

Miss Mordech's Father. By Fani Pusey Gooch. New York: Dodd, Mead & Co. Pp. 288. $1.

A tale of interest, well wrought, to give the workings of a peculiar form of brain trouble: A man living a double life with two families, residing with each one six months at a time, with change in character and mode of life, but all beyond his power to change. A surgical operation brought about a solution of the mystery.

In Darkest England and the Way Out. By General Booth. Funk & Wagnalls, New York. Pp. 300. Price $1.50.

We are in receipt of advanced sheets of the above book. Its appearance in England has made a great stir. The first edition was sold in London within three hours after its issue. The plan for the betterment of the lower strata of society in England proposed in this book by General Booth, the great leader of the Salvation Army, is well received and large contributions are being received, so as to enable him to carry it out. It grows out of the experience of the Army among the class of people it is designed to reach. It is a grand scheme and much good would flow out of its successful operation. No book has created such a sensation, nor set minds to considering the grave subject it presents. It promises to have a wide sale in this country.

Hints on Child-Training. By the Rev. H. Clay Trumbull, D.D. A Series of thirty articles on the Nature and Scope and Methods of the wise training of children. John D. Wattles, Philadelphia. Pp. 300. $1.

The author is known as a successful educator. He gives in this volume a result of his experience and study. It treats of home-training—and is just the book for parents to study and follow.

A Class Book of Biblical History and Geography, with numerous Maps, by Prof. H. S. Osborn, LL.D. American Tract Society, New York and Phila. Pp. 312. $1.25.

The title is sufficient to tell of its value and importance in the study of the Bible in an intelligent way. Text is clear and large and the maps are well executed.

The Angelus. American Tract Society, New York. 25 cents.

This is a beautiful edition of the poem based upon the celebrated painting of Millet. It is printed on heavy paper and very appropriately illustrated.

Two Little Tots on their way through the Year. New Pictures in Colors by Pauline Sumter. New Verses by Josephine Pollard. Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York. $1.

A beautiful souvenir of the season. The pictures and verses are beautiful and expressive. It will delight the little folks.

The Cupid Calendar, with fac-similes of water color designs, by Mrs. J. Pauline Sumter. 75 cts.

A chain connects these calendars for each month of the year, handsomely painted and with appropriate verses upon each.

New York Ledger. Christmas number. New York: Robert Bonner's Sons.

The Christmas issue of the New York Ledger is a beautiful souvenir. It contains a choice selection of articles by different eminent writers.

The Andover Review. The December number of this valuable Review presents the following table of contents:—1. Influence of Modern Psychology upon Theological Opinion, by Prof. George T. Ladd; 2. The Preludes of Harper's Ferry—John Brown, Practical Shepherd, by Wendell P. Garrison; 3. Leaders of Widening Christian Thought and Life—Thomas Erskine (concluded), by Miss Agnes Machar; 4. Another Aspect of the "Faerie Queen," by Miss Ellen Clark; 5. What is Reality? part IX., Evolution, by Rev. Francis H. Johnston; 6. Editorial Notes; together with book reviews and other matter.

From this the reader may perceive what a rich intellectual treat is afforded him by the present number of the Andover. Prof. Ladd's article alone is worth far more than the price of the whole number. His theme is one of great importance, and, as was to be expected from him, is handled with clearness and ability. Mr. Garrison begins a series of historical papers which promise to be of much interest. Miss Machar concludes her loving sketch of Thomas Erskine, and Mr. Johnston continues his thoughtful series in answer to the question, "What is Reality?" It is a refreshing and stimulating number.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. Yearly subscription, $4.00; single numbers, 35 cents.

"Waiting" ushers in The Magazine of Art for the new year. The contents are a sketch of Fernand Khnopff, The Walls of Stamboul, The Chemistry of Paints and Painting, The Modern Schools of Painting and Sculpture, Embroidered Book Covers, The English School of Miniature Art.

Cassell Publishing Co., New York, 35 cents a number, $3.50 a year, in advance.

"A Sharp Experience" opens the January number of CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE. Then follows—Sea Bells, A Chapter of Accidents, German Pottery, Gentlemen of the Jury, The Temptation of Dulce Carruthers, Home-made Christmas Gifts, Lucky! and Gatherer.

The Cassell Publishing Co., New York, 15 cents a number; $1.50 a year in advance.

The first number of THE QUIVER for the new year is a good one. The frontispiece is "A Roman Holiday." Contents—Overlooked Neighbors, God in the Book of Nature. The Perfect Work of Patience, The Character of Job, An Old-World Scene in Modern Babylon, Fairy Gold, or Bank Bullion, Father William and His Dog, St. Paul's Praise of Love, The Message of the Paving Stones, and the Short Arrows, Short Stories and Serials, Poetry and Music.

Cassell Publishing Co., New York, 15 cents a number, $1.50 a year in advance.

THE ROYAL CALENDAR. Sacred Thoughts for the King's Daughters, embodied in Scripture Texts, one for each day of the year. Gathered by Mary Lowe Dickinson, General Secretary of the Order and editor of The Silver Cross. The Calendar for 1891 is mounted upon silver-faced cardboard in the form of a Maltese Cross—the badge of the Order—with the letters I H N conspicuous. Size, 6½x6½ inches. Instead of the Passion Flower, as last year, we have substituted Pansies, representing "Thought." The words "How precious also are Thy thoughts unto me, O God," is engraved on the lower arm of the calendar. On the reverse side is a clear and distinct yearly calendar. The only calendar published in the interest of the Order. Price 50 cents, by mail 55 cents. Orders should be sent direct to the publisher, E. Scott, 463 Hudson street, New York City.

HARPER'S BAZAR for December 19 contains—The Pretty Woman, The Teachers' Bazar, Pattern-sheet Supplement, New York Fashions, Visiting Toilettes, Embroidery Designs, etc., The True Story, and how Mammy helped to Write it, Her Love and His Life, Washington Gossip, Little Social Circles, Raphael's Miraculous Draught of Fishes, The Flower Show in Madison Square Garden, and Illustrations.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE for December 23 contains—The Boy from North Jericho, What can be done on Snow-shoes, Campmates; A Story of the Plains, Our Artist in the Tropics, The Stool of Fortune, Our Post-Office Box, and Christmas at Peltyville.

The HEALTH CALENDAR or Housekeeper's Kitchen Roll for 1891 contains a bill of fare for each day of the year, tells about healthful foods with directions how to prepare them. Diet for the Sick, What to do in Emergencies, Antidotes for all kinds of Poisons, etc., etc., making it a valuable aid to any housekeeper. Price, 30c. postpaid. Frank E. Housh & Co., Fublishers, Brattleboro, Vt.

WORDS OF LIFE is a wall roll of 32 pages 1[illegible]x21 inches, adorned with a handsome white cover, fastened to an Antique Oak Rod. Each page contains a Bible gem for morning, noon and night, in neat, clear type. Price, 75 cents postpaid. Frank E. Housh & Co., Publishers, Brattleboro, Vt.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE. The number of The Living Age for December 27 contains—The Oxford Movement of the Fifteenth Century, by F. T. Palgrave, Eight Days, part IX., Customs, The Decay of Canine Fidelity, A Shy Australian, Big Birds, Le Coup de Jarnac, The Sufferings and Death of Books, Poetry. Title and Index to Volume CLXXXVII.

$8.00 per year. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

Marriages.

December 16th, 1890, by Rev. N. J. Miller, at Manchester, Md., Mr. J. Freeman Redding to Miss Ellenora M. Coker, both of the Manchester congregation.

By the Rev. W. G. Engle, on the 18th of December, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. Charles Warren Masteller, of Columbia county, near Buckhorn, to Miss Fannie Holdren, of White Hall, Montour county, Pa.

On Tuesday, December 8, 1890, at the bride's home, by Rev. T. R. Dietz, Mr. James A. Kepner to Miss Laura B. Noaker, both of Shippensburg, Cumberland county, Pa.

Deaths.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than two hundred and fifty words.

DEAD, AT THE FARM.

Penned in loving memory of Grandpa Frantz, who died at his old home, near Centre Square, Pa., Nov. 15, 1890.

In a quaint little house at the foot of the hill,
He lies all unheeding to-day;
And the poor dim eyes cannot open at will,
For his body is only clay,
So folded his hands,
On his now pulseless breast,
And glad the bright bands,
In the home of the blest.
Already they've welcomed his spirit above,
Far up to God's heaven of Infinite Love,
And things earthly have fled.
He would not return to us now if he could!
He lives with the pure, and the faithful, and good—
Yes, dear Grandpa is dead!

'Twas just after midnight the death-angel came,
To free from all trouble and pain,
He paused for an instant to whisper his name,
And all that was dark was made plain.
Gone from the fond clasp,
Of the ones he loved best,
Slow-losing life's grasp—
Utter mis'ry, for rest!
And swift he ascended on wings far away,
To view the fair dawn of a new-coming day,
Leaving sad hearts behind.
They see but the couch which his cold form has prest,
And instead of the East, they turn way to the West,
So but sunset they find.

And poor Grandma sits by in her old rocking-chair,
So weak and so weary at heart,
The love of her youth and her old age is there,
And soon they will now have to part!
How softly she weeps,
As she looks on his face!
How soundly he sleeps!
Oh, but death lends him grace!
No more is he wrinkled, gray-headed, and old!
He still is her husband, strong, youthful and bold—
How different things seem!
His voice holds her ear in a magical spell!
She listens in rapture! 'Tis love's golden bell!
With old age but a dream!

The sun sympathizing, shines in on the floor,
The gray hills in pity, bend low.
The fields they creep up to the old kitchen door,
The deep sighing willows must know.
The cattle all stand,
In their place in the stall,
They miss his kind hand,
His measured foot-fall.
The birds circle down o'er the little brown house,
The rabbits run softly, with step of a mouse,
For deep sadness is there!
But the sleeper sleeps on in his strange fashioned bed,
A fleecy white pillow supporting his head,
Only joy for his share.

They'll lay him to rest in old Boehm's sacred ground,
With kindred and friends at his side,
His loving old parents in neighboring mound,
His children who, too, early died.
The rain and the snow,
Will fall light on his grave,
So, ready to go,
'Cross the Jordan's cold wave!
And Grandpa is safe in bright heaven to-day,
His sickness and sorrow all taken away,
O so happy above!
Will we meet him, I wonder, some time at the gate,
Where patient, expectant, he ever will wait,
With a heart full of love?

We only can follow where he surely trod,
The path of the righteous below,
And hope for a home in the City of God,
And pray for true wisdom to know,
The right from the wrong,
And just do it, each day,
As we journey along
Over life's stormy way.
With no thought of rewarding for duty well done,
Where crowns will be given for victories won,
And sweet rest after toil!
And oh, the rejoicing when loved ones we meet!
What rapturous pleasure each other to greet,
After sin and turmoil!

MRS. FINDLAY BRADEN.
Phila., Nov. 16, 1890.

DIED.—Departed this life, in Valley township, Montour county, Pa., October 28, 1890, William Pursel, aged 82 years, 6 months and 19 days.

The deceased was reared in the Church of England. In early life he migrated from New Jersey to the section of Pennsylvania in which he spent the greater part of his life, and where he died. Here, by marriage, he came into contact with the Reformed church, with which he united, by confirmation, in January, 1860. Of the St. John's Reformed church of Mansdale, a congregation of the Danville charge, he acted for many years as an exemplary official, first as a deacon, then as elder. In the latter capacity he repeatedly served as a delegate to Classis and to both the District and General Synods. He was an intelligent Christian; read his church paper faithfully and ever took an earnest interest in the more general and public affairs of the church. He "fell asleep" calmly, peacefully, hopefully. One of his last conscious acts was, with his beloved wife, to unite in receiving privately, at the hands of his pastor, the emblems of his Saviour's body and blood in the Holy Supper; in connection with the administration of the sacrament in his congregation.

Servant of God, farewell! Thou hast been faithful over a few things: the Master will make thee ruler over many things: Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!

THE ALMANAC

FOR THE

Reformed Church in the United States

—TWENTY-EIGHTH ISSUE—

FOR 1891.

We are ready now to receive orders for our Almanac for 1891, at the following rates:

100 Copies, per express, $5.00
50 " " 2.75
12 " " .75
1 Copy, Postpaid, .12

When to be sent by mail 18 cents per dozen must be added for postage.

Also,

WESTERN ALMANAC

At the same prices as above.

GERMAN ALMANAC.

12 Copies, 90 cts.
Postage, 18 cts.
Single Copies, Postpaid, 12 cts.

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House.
907 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA.

Business Department.

TERMS:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage free. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.

No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrearages are paid.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made before the date transpires.

When the address of a paper is to be changed, the OLD and the NEW should be given.

☞ Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

☞ We do make mistakes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

☞ Remittances should be made payable by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, or Registered Letter to the order of THE REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHAS. G. FISHER.

ADVERTISING RATE,

10 Cents Per Agate Line

Each insertion (fourteen lines to an inch).

Special Notices, set solid, double the price of display per counted line.

Reading Notices, leaded, three times the price of display per counted line.

Subject to the following Discounts:

FOR TIME.		FOR SPACE.
2 insertions	5 per ct.	100 lines	5 per ct.
4 "	10 "	250 "	10 "
8 "	15 "	500 "	20 "
13 "	20 "	750 "	30 "
20 "	25 "	1,000 "	40 "
26 "	30 "	1,500 "	45 "
39 "	35 "	2,000 "	50 "
52 "	40 "

No advertisement of less than 5 lines inserted at time rates on a contract for variable space.

To be used within one year.

Advertisements discontinued before completion of order, either by direction of advertiser or for non-payment, shall be paid for at regular rates for the advertising done.

An advertiser may use either scale of discounts, but cannot combine them. An advertiser is entitled to the highest discount which the entire amount of advertising done by him in any one year will secure.

Address all communications about advertising to

The Religious Press Association,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE NEW BOOK.

IN OLDEN DAYS BEYOND THE SEA.

Translated from the German, to which are added Introductory and Closing Parts,

BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

An interesting book, giving a thrilling account of the trials and persecutions of those who were true to their faith in "olden days beyond the sea." Pages 305. Illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of retail price, $1 25.

Address,

Reformed Church Publication House,
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK,

"In Olden Days Beyond the Sea,"

AND

THE MESSENGER.

To any one sending us two new subscribers for THE MESSENGER and $4.00, we will send a copy of the above book postpaid.

To an old subscriber for THE MESSENGER, remitting $2.75, we will give credit for a year's subscription and send a copy of the above book, postpaid.

Address

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

Miscellaneous.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

PITTSBURGH LETTER.

BY REV. JOHN H. PRUGH.

It is Dr. Dorchester, I believe, who states that the populational and romantic fact in all history is the wonderful growth of America's millions. And the late census reveals the fact that our greatest growth is in our cities.

Pittsburgh is said to be the best Sabbath observing city of its size in the United States. It may be accounted for from the fact of the rapid growth of the Church here. I do not know that we are warranted in saying that the growth of the church in our city, during the past ten years, has been equal to the increase of our population. Possibly that cannot be said of any large city of the land. Still the statistician declares that the increase in the membership of American evangelical churches since the year 1800 has been three times greater than the increase of population. And certain it is that those who have been residents of Pittsburgh during the past decade, and have noted the marked change for good between the years '80 and '90, attribute it largely to the increased Christian sentiment, to the growth of our old congregations, the many new organizations that have been effected, and the vast number of beautiful church edifices that have been erected or enlarged.

The last one, to which the whole city has turned its attention, is St. Mark's Memorial Reformed church. And it begins a career so strikingly peculiar to itself, that our entire city press has been freely commenting upon it, as having no parallel in history. At least it has no parallel in the history of Pittsburgh.

The conditions briefly stated, are a handsome stone edifice, old English style of architecture, most tastily fitted up within, churchly in every particular, and the decorations chosen with such rare taste and care, that the result is a delicate and beautiful blending of colors that gives the structure an especially attractive appearance. Everything was done in accordance with the builder's wishes, and no expense was spared to make the edifice all that the most devout heart could desire. But as I write, the church has no pastor, no consistory, no congregation. It simply stands with open doors, inviting all who will to come and worship God.

Yesterday St. Mark's Memorial Church, corner Hiland avenue and Harvard street, East End, was consecrated, and another beautiful and substantial place of worship was added to Pittsburgh's long list of edifices devoted to Christianity.

The main entrance, which is on North Hiland avenue, is surmounted by a handsome tower. Turning to the right, on entering, the visitor faces the altar, which is of pure white marble, in front of which runs a brass railing with a little gate in the centre. To the right of the altar is the pulpit, to the left, the reading desk. To the left of it is the consistory room, and to the right of the pulpit is the pipe organ, an instrument of most delightful tone, built by Mr. Samuel Bohler of Reading, Pa. The organ, pulpit and reading desk are of cream white and gold. Running the length of the building, between the consistory room and the organ are steps leading up to the altar.

On the wall of the consistory room, facing the altar is a marble tablet, which bears the following inscription;

> This building, consecrated to the worship of Almighty God, was erected by B. Wolff, Jr., as a memorial of his brother, Christian H. Wolff, born April 6, 1815, died February 28, 1887.

To the right, on entering, are two memorial windows, of most beautiful design. One is of Christian H. Wolff, with the inscription, "Rejoicing in Hope." The other is in memory of Mr. B. Wolff's son, and has the inscription, "In memory of Bernard Withers Wolff, born February 21st, 1872, died January 18th, 1890." "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Over the altar is the inscription, "And the Spirit and the Bride say Come."

The seating capacity of the church is about 400. The work of the interior is of solid cherry. The windows, the heating apparatus, ventilation, and dressing rooms are of the best workmanship and design. In fact, no details were omitted, even the organ being worked by a water motor.

In the rear of the church, and facing Harvard street, is a commodious chapel, for Sunday-school purposes, lectures, etc., and most tastily arranged and furnished throughout. Just below this, on the same lot, is to be erected a sexton's residence.

Yesterday Grace church closed its doors in order that the congregation might worship in St. Mark's and take part in the consecratory services. The Grace church choir furnished the music. And large audiences were assembled both morning and evening. The ministers present were Revs. A. E. Truxal, of Manor, Pa., Cyrus J. Musser, of Huntingdon, Pa., and the writer.

Rev. Mr. Truxal preached the sermon in the morning. It was historical in character, a masterly effort, full of information, and especially appreciated by those who love the church called "Reformed."

The sermon in the evening, by Rev. Mr. Musser, was on "Christian Character." It was full of rich thought, and bristled with points from beginning to end.

Both sermons were timely, especially adapted to the day and the occasion. The speakers caught the inspiration of the hour, and the hearers showed their appreciation in no unmistakable way.

The consecration of St. Mark's was an event long to be remembered by the Reformed people of Pittsburgh.

A new congregation is soon to be effected, and when the consistory is chosen, Mr. Wolff intends making them a present, in fee simple, of the entire property. Just north of it are 10,000 people who have lately gone into that new part of the city, and St. Mark's is their nearest church. A number of Grace church families will go into the new organization, together with some of the members of what was once known as Zion's congregation, and its success is assured. But Mr. Wolff intends to remain a member of Grace church. With his characteristic modesty he declines to say anything about the cost, but it has been estimated to be between $40,000 and $50,000.

The new congregation will start on its career self-supporting from the beginning, and the hearty prayer of us all is that God may guide and richly bless it.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 22, 1890.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A KANSAS CHURCH DEDICATION.

On December 8, 1889, the Superintendent of Missions organized a Reformed Mission in Circleville, Jackson county, Kansas, consisting of sixteen members. Services were held every two weeks on Sunday afternoon. On February 6, 1890, the State of Kansas issued a charter to the Reformed church of Circleville. On April 17, 1890, the members and the Superintendent met and discussed the subject of building a church, and the decision was in the affirmative. A subscription was at once started, headed by Deacon S. H. Stauffer, one lot 60x120 feet, on the best corner of the town, for which he paid $150 a few weeks previously, for church purposes. This subscription was followed with that of Elder Michael Fisher with $150 cash, and then others $25, $10 or $5. A Ladies' Aid Society was organized the same evening by the Superintendent. These faithful ladies went to work the next day and they have been busy ever since.

But the drouth came and all prospects of crops vanished away. Many believed that the church building project would now be at an end for this year at least. Kansas Classis, which had been invited to hold its next annual sessions in Circleville, even refused to accept the invitation, because no church would be there to meet in, and therefore voted to go to another place. During the summer nothing was done, except while the Superintendent was in Pennsylvania attending the General Synod at Lebanon and the International Sunday-school Convention at Pittsburgh; he spent a Sunday with Rev. E. H. Dieffenbacher, in the Pleasant Unity charge, preaching at the Ridge church A. M., United School-house P. M., and in Pleasant Unity in the evening. Most of the Circleville members formerly resided in this charge.

On Monday certain families were visited by Rev. Dieffenbacher and the Superintendent, who solicited donations for the new enterprise. We publicly acknowledge the gifts received—Adam Fisher, $10.00, Samuel B. Fisher, 5.00, Harry A. Fisher, 2.00, Marks Lowe, 1.00, E. W. Sarver, 1.00, John L. Stouffer, 25 cts., Mrs. Davis, 25 cts., Hettie Sarver, 25 cts., Mrs. Lowe, 25 cts., May Fetter, 25 cts., Anna Lowe, 25 cts., George W. Young, 1.00, George Fry, 1.00, Mrs. J. L. Stouffer, 1.00, Joseph H. Brinker, 10.00, Mrs. Florinda Bash, 5.00, Thomas H. Higher, 3.00, Jos. C. Kuhns, 5.00, Fanny Christman, 1.00, Simon Fisher, 5.00, H. E. Fisher, 3.00, C. B. Fisher, 5.00, John Fry, 1.00, John A. Fisher, 5.00, Geo. Fisher, 5.00, Dr. Thomas H. Brinker, 10.00, amounting to $81.50.

In July the Superintendent worked up the plan and specifications for a frame church building, 28x48 feet and 16 feet high. The church is entered on the corner through an eight feet square vestibule placed diagonally with the building. This vestibule rises into a tower and belfry nearly 50 feet high. On August 2d the bids were opened and the contract for lumber and hardware was given to F. C. Nuzman of Circleville, and the carpenter work to Jackson Baker and John L. Myers of Holton. Then came a long delay on account of the lumber not arriving, so that the mechanics could not begin active operations until about October 1st. Since that time everything moved along smoothly. The carpenters followed the specifications without looking after. If there was any deviation it was that they made it even better than it was called for. On Friday, December 19th, the whole job was completed.

On Sunday, December 21, the church was solemnly dedicated to the Triune God by the Superintendent after Rev. T. F. Stauffer preached the sermon. The church contains ten windows of stained glass of beautiful designs, though inexpensive. The Superintendent wrote to a number of friends during the fall, some of whom have not yet responded, and hence four windows are not yet donated. (We hope to hear from them soon to help us

Continued on Page 13.

HOOD'S
COMPOUND EXTRACT
OF SARSAPARILLA
TRADE MARK
Hood's Sarsaparilla has by its peculiar merit and its wonderful cures won the confidence of the people, and is to-day the most popular blood purifier and strengthening medicine. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, dyspepsia, headache, kidney and liver complaint, catarrh, rheumatism, etc. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is peculiar to itself.

Hood's Sarsaparilla sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT ESTABLISHED 1810.

UNLIKE ANY OTHER.
As much
For INTERNAL as EXTERNAL use.
Originated by an Old Family Physician in 1810
Could a Remedy
WITHOUT REAL MERIT
Have Survived for Eighty Years?
Dropped on Sugar, Children Love It.
Every Traveler should have a bottle of it in his satchel
THINK OF IT.
In use over 40 YEARS in one family.

Dr. I. S. JOHNSON & Co.—It is sixty years since I first learned of your JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT; for more than forty years I have used it in my family. O. H. INGALLS, Dea. 2d Baptist Church, Bangor, Me.

Every Mother Should have JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT in the house for Croup, Colds, Sore Throat, Catarrh, Tonsilitis, Colic, Nervous Headache, Cuts, Bruises, Cramps, Pains, Soreness in Body or Limbs. Delays may cost a life. Relieves Summer Complaints like magic. Sold everywhere. Price, 35 cts., 6 bottles, $2. Express paid. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

P. E. Arline
At Home
January 1st to December 31st

Makes home cleaner, brighter and better. Cleaner—because it takes away what soap and other things leave. Brighter—because it does away with labor and hard work. Better—because it saves wear and tear on everything it touches, and nothing can be hurt by it.

Pearline "receives" every day. It gets blessing from millions of old friends—pleasant calls from a host of new ones. The best families welcome it. It goes everywhere. But it's "a stayer." When it once makes a call upon you, it stays forever—and you're glad to have it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 245 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

Snug little fortunes have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bonn, Toledo, Ohio. See cut. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time. Big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and wonderful. Particulars free. H. Hallett & Co., Box 880 Portland, Maine

SPENCERIAN STEEL PENS Are the Best If You Wish To Try Them,

Samples of the leading numbers will be sent FREE on receipt of return postage, 2 cents. The Spencerian Pen Co., 810 Broadway, New York.

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE of 16,600f.

QUINA-LAROCHE'S INVIGORATING TONIC,

CONTAINING

KINA
DEPOT GENERAL A PARIS
QUINA LAROCHE
Peruvian Bark, and Pure Catalan Wine.

Endorsed by the Medical Faculty of Paris, as the Best Remedy for

LOSS of APPETITE, FEVER and AGUE, MALARIA, NEURALGIA and INDIGESTION.

An experience of 25 years in experimental analysis, together with the valuable aid extended by the Academy of Medicine in Paris, has enabled M. Laroche to extract the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark (a result not before attained), and to concentrate them in an elixir, which possesses in the highest degree its restorative and invigorating qualities, free from the disagreeable bitterness of other remedies.

22 rue Drouot, Paris.

E. FOUGERA & CO., Agents for U. S.,
30 North William street, N. Y.

LAROCHE

For Gas BAILEY'S For Oil
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass REFLECTORS, A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. A. J. WEIDENER, 36 South 2d St. Philada.

ALSO CHANDELIERS for OIL and ELECTRICITY

BLATCHLEY WOOD FORCE PUMP Cheapest and most efficient. A Complete Fire Department on your premises. Write for descriptive circular. CHAS. G. BLATCHLEY Philada.

out.) The other six contain these inscriptions in the windows: Ladies' Aid Society of Circleville, Kansas; Woman's Missionary Society, Synod of the Interior; In Memory of Anna Margaret Stauffer; In Memory of William Skiles; Elder Charles Sntee, Phila., Pa.: Rev. D. B. Shuey, Emporia, Kansas. The Ladies' Aid Society procured the funds to pay for the following articles beside the window mentioned—two stoves complete, four handsome Rochester lamps, two pulpit chairs, fourteen choir chairs, carpets for the pulpit and choir platforms, and the aisles of the church, and a bell weighing 335 pounds. B. Wolff, Jr., of Pittsburgh, sent $[illegible], and John Zollinger, of Chicago, $5, which were used to pay the pulpit which Contractor Myers made. The organ, a 12 stop chapel, from the Miller Organ Co., was a contribution by the Superintendent, the manufacturers donating a part of the price. The pews and altar are not yet made but have been reckoned in the cost. The whole church complete (seating 200 people), including the ground donations, and all furniture (and the church is certainly very handsome), cost less than $1,800. It can readily be seen that no money was wasted.

On Sunday the weather was beautiful. Not cold and the ground dry. The church both morning and evening was packed full, every available space in the aisles and around the pulpit was filled. The choir was under the direction of the Superintendent. The services opened with the anthem, "Father, O Hear us." Members of other choirs of town assisted, and to them much credit is due. Brother Stauffer's sermon merited the closest attention. Six hundred dollars was still unprovided, but a plain statement to the audience brought a response of over $500. (Now if our friends in the East will respond for the other four windows we will be out of debt.)

On Sunday evening Brother Stauffer preached in the Lower Banner Schoolhouse, a new preaching point which the Superintendent lately established, while the Superintendent preached in the new church. As a first fruits of the labors in occupying the new church was the reception of eight members into the church on that evening. Two were received by adult baptism, three by confirmation and three by certificate. A Sunday-school will be organized in two weeks and the indications are that it will be a success from the very beginning. But we need singing books. If any Sunday school has books in good condition which it no longer uses, please communicate with Rev. D. B. Shuey, Emporia, Kansas.

We are truly grateful to the Great Head of the Church for the innumerable blessings bestowed upon this young mission. On Monday evening Brother Stauffer preached again. Although Sunday was the shortest day of the year, according to the almanac, it was one longest to be remembered by the people of Circleville, Kansas.

D. B. S.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

Sulphur Springs Charge, Bedford County, Pa., Rev. S. C. Long, Pastor.

The congregation known as Dry Ridge, six miles from Mann's Choice, on the Bedford and Somerset pike, worshiped in a stone church, built by the community in 1842. John Metzger was the principal actor, and furnished most of the funds. The building was deeded, with the ground attached, to the Reformed and Lutheran congregations. The Reformed congregation was organized by Rev. Henry Heckerman, one of the pioneers in church work in Bedford county. Revs. N. H. Skyles W. A. Gring, and E. H. Dieffenbacher were his successors, with the present pastor. In 1889 the stone building being in a dilapidated condition, the Reformed congregation purchased from the Lutheran their interest.

June [illegible]d, 1890, the same corner-stone was laid for a new church, and December 7th, 1890, the new church, named Trinity Reformed, was dedicated to the Lord free of debt, the whole cost being near $2,000. It is a beautiful frame structure, on same plan as the one dedicated at Mann's Choice two years ago, size 32x50 feet, vestibule on either front corner, extending two feet wide, making 36 feet front. A beautiful spire and belfry on one corner contains a bell weighing over six hundred pounds.

There are twelve memorial windows in the audience room, two of which, in the pulpit recess, are in memory of former pastors; the others by families in the congregation. The walls are beautifully papered, which, with the natural wood, in hard oil finish, presents a beautiful appearance. A beautiful and substantial set of pulpit furniture adorns the chancel and recess. The church is illuminated by a nickel-plated chandelier holding two lamps of three hundred candle power each, supplied with oil from a large font in centre, and a lamp of the same power on each side of the recess. The vestibules have each a beautiful lamp, the gift of Mr. Albert A. Beam, in memory of his deceased wife, once a member of the congregation. The chancel and recess platform is covered with a beautiful carpet, and the aisles with cocoa matting, purchased with funds collected by Misses Grace Shoemaker, Katie Kerr and Emma Turner. A beautiful silver communion set was purchased by funds collected in Grace and Trinity congregations, by Miss Nerva Gernand, Mrs. Erva Shoemaker and Miss Grace Shoemaker. An extra cup, gold-lined, was presented by Guy Shoemaker, Esq., of Buffalo Mills. The bell was purchased with funds collected by Messrs. John M. Corley and Cornelius Diehl. The building is heated from the basement by a No. 136 Keely Heater.

Revs. R. L. Gerhart, Robert O'Boyle, S. C. Stover and J. B. Stonesifer, members of Juniata Classis, assisted the pastor, the former preaching the dedicatory sermon.

The congregation is, and can well be, proud of their church. It will stand for succeeding generations, and be a monument to those who, by their self-sacrificing efforts, have caused it to be erected. The congregation is equipped better than ever for carrying on the Master's work in their midst. To Him be all the praise for the successful completion of the long desired and much needed house of worship.

L.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A CORRECTION FOR ALUMNI MEETING.

In the report of the meeting of the Southern Alumni of Franklin and Marshall College at Claremont, September 25, 1890, it was stated in the MESSENGER that the association had resolved to meet on the last Thursday in January of each year, beginning with 1891. The date should have been 1892 instead of 1891 for the first meeting on this basis.

It is proper that this correction should be made to meet enquiries of Alumni not present September 25, who have been anxious to learn where the expected meeting in 1891 was to be held.

C. C.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

SPECIAL MEETING OF ILLINOIS CLASSIS.

Pursuant to a call issued by the President, Illinois Classis met in special session at the Lutheran church, in Dakota, Ills., December 18th, 1890, at 1 o'clock, P.M., and adjourned to the Reformed parsonage near by, where the items of business claiming the attention of Classis were attended to as follows:

1. Rev. F. Wetzel was received from Lincoln Classis and his name entered on the roll of this Classis.
2. A call from the Dakota charge to Rev. F. Wetzel was confirmed, and a committee appointed to install him.
3. Rev. H. L. Beam was received from the Tuscarawas Classis, Synod of Ohio, and his name entered on the roll of this Classis.
4. President of Classis was instructed to write to our attorney at Jonesboro, Ill., (who so nobly defended our suit at court in securing our church property at Anna, Ills.,) in regard to a settlement of the balance due him.
5. The pastoral relation between Rev. G. E. Metger and the Astoria charge was dissolved.
6. Rev. G. E. Metger was dismissed to the Tuscarawas Classis, Synod of Ohio.

Classis adjourned with prayer by Rev. H. Bair.

JOSEPH SECHLER, Sec. pro tem.

Church News.

☞Stated Clerks of Classes and Pastors will oblige us by sending such Items of News as will be of interest to the Church.

CHRISTMAS TIDINGS.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Lancaster.—St. Paul's, Rev. J. W. Meminger, pastor. Services Christmas Day: Church service, 6 A.M.; primary school, 2 P.M.; advanced school, 6.30 P.M. All the services were up to the high order of this school. Too much praise cannot be given to Mr. D. C. Haverstick who had thrown his wide knowledge and business tact into securing of persons to take part in the exercises and in the management of the entertainment. The music was in charge of W. A. Heitshu, and the elaborate decorations were the work of the school and a committee under the leadership of Mr. Jno. Hollinger. Happy is the minister who has so many men able to lead and conduct affairs, and every minister who will develop the material in his congregation can have leaders. Offerings and gifts were for Bethany Orphans' Home.

Norristown.—Church of the Ascension, Rev. S. R. Bridenbaugh, pastor. This congregation held a delightful service on Christmas morning at 6.30 o'clock. The attendance was large and all seemed glad for the privilege of thus celebrating the Saviour's birth in the early morning hour. The children's service was held in the evening. The beautiful service was well rendered. The offerings were for Bethany Orphans' Home, and amounted to $95.

Jeannette.—Rev. N. H. Skyles, pastor. A very pleasant and spiritually edifying service was held in Grace Reformed church on Christmas night, in which the Sunday-school took a leading part. Although a heavy snow storm was raging at the hour of assembling yet quite a good audience was present. The church was appropriately, though not elaborately, decorated. The order of service observed was that given in "Immanuel." Contributions were made in the interest of the orphans' cause. Gifts were distributed to the entire school.

Waynesboro.—Trinity, Rev. F. F. Bahner, pastor. In this church the new service by Messrs. Leinbach and Hill, "Immanuel, God with us," was rendered on Christmas evening, with full orchestral accompaniment. In the Salem church, in the country, the western service, "Christ-

Continued on Page 14.

Cleveland's Baking Powder
Absolutely the Best.
Is Absolutely the Best,
BECAUSE (1.) It does not contain ammonia. "Ammonia is a drug, not a food; an excrement, not a nutriment. The long continued use of ammonia impairs digestion by neutralizing the gastric juice."—Pacific Medical Journal.

MELLIN'S
FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS.
TRADE ORA ET LABORA MARK.
FOOD
THE ONLY
Perfect Substitute for Mother's Milk.
INVALUABLE
IN CHOLERA INFANTUM AND TEETHING.
A quickly assimilated Food for DYSPEPTICS, CONSUMPTIVES, CONVALESCENTS.
A PERFECT NUTRIENT in all wasting diseases.
REQUIRES NO COOKING. KEEPS IN ALL CLIMATES.
SEND for our book, "The Care and Feeding of Infants," mailed free to any address.
DOLIBER-GOODALE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
Appetizing--Easily Digested.
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [66

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

Rubifoam
FOR THE TEETH
Deliciously Flavored
25¢
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS

A NEW
Twilled Lace Thread
For CROCHETING.
BEST in the world!
Crocheting Book No. 2
50 Illustrated Patterns.
TEN CENTS.
Series of 12 Beautiful Illus. Tidies from London and Paris. Inquire for them of your dealer, or send 10 cents for spool—500 yards. 5 cents for Single Tidy or 60 cts. for 12 Tidy patterns, including copy of Crocheting Book No. 2.
GLASGO LACE THREAD CO., Glasgo, Conn.

HAIR
—ON—
Ladies' Faces
Destroyed forever. No pain, scar, shock, or injury by the Electric Needle by
DR. J. VAN DYCK,
Electro Surgeon,
1106 WALNUT ST., Phila.,
and 502 PENN AVE.,
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Never fails. Book free. Call or write.

CHOICE CARPETINGS
IN ALL GRADES,
AT POPULAR PRICES.
A full line of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and Standard Domestic and Imported Carpets.
☞ We request only an OPPORTUNITY to show you our stock.
IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE.
NEW STORE,
1217 Market Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

CARPET buyers had better purchase of J. & J. DOBSON, 809 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, in order to receive full value for their money. They retail Carpets of their own make, which are reliable in every way.

Over 350,000 acres of Choice Farm Lands. Failure of crops never known. Best all-the-year climate in the world. Soil adapted to all kinds of farming. Plenty of water. Low prices, and unusually liberal terms. C. E. SIMMONS, Land Com., C. & N.-W. R'y, Chicago, Ill.

The PENN MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO. Issues all approved forms of contracts adapted to every legitimate need, at the lowest, sure rates. Send for rates, etc. Home Office, 921 Chestnut Street, Philada.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.
Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and indorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your Grocers ought to have it on Sale Ask him for it. D. S. WILTBERGER, Prop., 232 N. 2d St. Phila., Pa.

mas Voices," was used on Christmas eve. Both churches were suitably decorated. The pastor, Rev. F. F. Bahner, and his family, received a handsome present in money, besides other valuable gifts. The offerings were devoted to the cause of the orphans at Womelsdorf.

Conyngham.—Rev. J. B. Kerschner, pastor. Confirmation and communion services were held in Trinity church on Christmas morning. A class of four was confirmed—two of these are heads of families. Many refreshed their souls at the Lord's table. The offerings were devoted to home missions. In St. John's church services were held by the Sunday-school on Christmas evening. These were very largely attended and interesting. Appropriate selections were read and recited. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion. During these services Elder and Superintendent of the Sunday-school L. B. Wenner, in a neat speech, announced that the members of the charge had resolved to make their pastor a life member of the Ministers' Relief Society, that the amount to do so, $65, he now tendered to the pastor, as a Christmas present. Rev. J. B. Kerschner was taken by surprise. The largeness of the gift and the much larger kindness and love which inspired and gave it, overwhelmed him. He could scarcely speak. In a few well-chosen words he thanked the kind givers. Special thanks are due to Dr. C. B. McClure, Elder L. B. Wenner, Mr. Edwin F. Drasher, Mr. John Fritzinger, Elder Chas. Smith, S. S. Supt., T. W. Shelhamer and Miss Rosie B. Mumie, for soliciting this splendid gift. He highly appreciates this mark of Christian love from his members. The pastor's family was not forgotten. Among the presents is an elegant polished brass piano lamp, costing $25. This is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Scheidy of St. John's congregation.

PUBLIC SAFETY DEMANDS

That only honest and reliable medicines should be placed upon the market. It cannot, therefore, be stated too emphatically, nor repeated too often, that all who are in need of a genuine Blood-purifier should be sure and ask for

Ayer's

Sarsaparilla. Your life, or that of some one near and dear to you, may depend on the use of this well-approved remedy in preference to any other preparation of similar name. It is compounded of Honduras sarsaparilla (the variety most rich in curative properties), stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, and the iodides. The process of manufacture is original, skilful, scrupulously clean, and such as to secure the very best medicinal qualities of each ingredient. This medicine is not boiled nor heated, and is, therefore, not a decoction; but it is a compound extract, obtained by a method exclusively our own, of the best and most powerful alteratives, tonics, and diuretics known to pharmacy. For the last forty years, Ayer's has been the standard blood-purifier of the world—no other approaching it in popular confidence or universal demand. Its formula is approved by the leading physicians and druggists. Being pure and highly concentrated, it is the most economical of any possible blood medicine. Every purchaser of Sarsaparilla should insist upon having this preparation and see that each bottle bears the well-known name of

Sarsaparilla

J. C. Ayer & Co.,
Lowell, Mass.

In every quarter of the globe Ayer's Sarsaparilla is proved to be the best remedy for all diseases of the blood. Lowell druggists unite in testifying to the superior excellence of this medicine and to its great popularity in the city of its manufacture.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by Druggists. $1, six $5 Worth $5 a bottle.

Philadelphia.—The First church and Christ church, this city, held their services on Sunday evening, December 28th. The service, "Immanuel, God with us," was rendered at both to the satisfaction of all present. Both services were favored with the presence of Ferd. K. Hill, of Sunbury, author of the musical part of the service, which was accomplished by being present part of the time at one and the balance at another.

Middleburg.—The Reformed church Sunday-school at Middleburg celebrated Christmas in their usual hearty manner on Christmas night. The church was nicely decorated with evergreen festoons, and two Christmas trees stood in front of the pulpit, on which hung many gifts from teachers and parents to children and vice versa. Nor was the pastor forgotten in the distribution of valuable gifts.

The Sunday-school, with organ and cornet accompaniment, rendered a good programme of Christmas hymns, etc. A large number of good selections were spoken with good effect by the scholars. Rev. Cort spoke to a very attentive audience on the significance of the occasion and the great gift of God to mankind in the person of His beloved Son. The Christmas treat given to each and every member of the large and flourishing school was unusually bountiful. Nothing occurred to mar the peaceful and joyous spirit of the occasion and all present agreed that it was one of the most orderly and pleasant Christmas festivals that they had ever attended. It was surely good to be there.

Greencastle.—For thirty years the Reformed church and Sunday-school in this place have annually observed with appropriate services this day. This year it was celebrated on Christmas eve. Christmas hymns and carols were sung by the choir and Sunday-school, and some good selections were spoken in fine style by the children. An address was delivered by Pastor Cort, and the usual gifts were dealt out to the members of the Sunday-school. The church was quite tastefully decorated with various kinds of evergreens. A collection for the benefit of Bethany Orphans' Home at Womelsdorf, Pa., was lifted.

Boalsburg.—Rev. A. A. Black, pastor. Christmas was properly and appropriately observed in St. John's church, Boalsburg, Pa., on Christmas eve. The service, "Immanuel, God with us," was used with entire satisfaction. Gifts were given to all the children of the congregation. The offering was for the cause of orphans.

The little Sunday-school at Pine Grove Mills held its first service on Christmas evening, as the school has been in operation less than a year. The joyful occasion was celebrated by having a Christmas tree. All the children of the congregation were treated. An offering was made for the orphans.

MARYLAND.

Walkersville.—Glade church, Rev. S. M. Hench, pastor. The Glade Sunday-school held its service on Christmas eve. The service entitled "The Son of God," "The Son of Man," was used. The school was assisted in the singing by several musical instruments. The church was more handsomely decorated than ever. The offerings were for St. Paul's Orphan Home. The pastor and wife were remembered with gifts from the school. A new parsonage will be erected in Walkersville by the charge for the pastor.

OUR OWN CHURCH.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Chambersburg.—Rev. J. B. Shontz and wife celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on Saturday, December 20th in a very quiet manner, but when they went to St. John's Reformed church in the evening to attend choir practice they found a delightful surprise awaiting them. The members of the congregation to the number of one hundred and fifty had gathered in the church to greet their beloved pastor. Mr. Charles A. Yoh was chairman of the meeting and in a very effective speech presented the pastor and his wife with a silver waiter on which was arranged twenty-five dollars in silver so as to make the figures "25." Mr. Shontz was completely surprised and responded in a feeling speech, thanking the congregation for this new evidence of their love and esteem. A half hour was spent in congratulation and social intercourse and the occasion was full of pleasure for all. During the evening an original poem upon their silver wedding was read by one of the members of the congregation.

WINTER HUMORS

Cold, raw winds of winter fan to fury itching, burning, and scaly humors and diseases of the skin, scalp, and blood. No pen can describe their severity, no language can exaggerate the suffering of those afflicted, especially little babies, whose tender skins are literally on fire. Winter is the best time to effect a permanent cure. Cuticura Remedies are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies of modern times, are absolutely pure and agreeable to the most sensitive, and may be used on the youngest infant and most delicate invalid with gratifying and unfailing success. CUTICURA, the great skin cure, instantly allays the most intense itching, burning, and inflammation, permits rest and sleep, heals raw and irritated surfaces, cleanses the scalp of crusts and scales, and restores the hair. CUTICURA SOAP, the only medicated toilet soap, is indispensable in cleansing diseased surfaces. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new blood and skin purifier and greatest of humor remedies, cleanses the blood of all impurities, and thus removes the cause. Hence, the Cuticura Remedies cure every humor of the skin, scalp, and blood, with loss of hair, from pimples to scrofula, from infancy to age, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail.

☞ "HOW TO CURE DISEASES OF THE SKIN AND BLOOD" mailed free to any address, 64 pages, 300 Diseases, 50 Illustrations, 100 Testimonials. A book of priceless value to every sufferer.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Boston.

Pimply Skin, red, rough hands, painful finger-ends and shapeless nails are prevented and cured by Cuticura Soap, incomparably the greatest of skin purifiers and beautifiers, while rivalling in delicacy and surpassing in purity the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only medicated toilet soap and the only preventive and cure of inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, rough, red, and oily skin, and simple humors of infants and children. Sale greater than the combined sale of all other skin soaps. Sold everywhere. Price, 25 cts.

OHIO.

Cleveland.—Grace church, Rev. W. R. Stearly, pastor. The Chapter of Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip connected with this active mission purposes to have a winter lecture course. The first lecture will be by Rev. John I. Swander, D.D., January 8th, 8 P.M., subject, "Courtship, Marriage and Home;" second, by H. A. Griffin, associate editor of the Cleveland Leader, subject, "Practical Reform in Practical Politics," January 15th; third, by Rev. Rufus C. Zartman, subject, "Better than Gold," January 22d; fourth, by Rev. W. R. Stearly, subject, "Mistakes," January 29th. The course will be given in Sherman Club Wigwam, and the proceeds will be for the benefit of the building fund of Grace Reformed church.

Carrollton.—Rev. L. S. Hahn has resigned the charge located at this place, resignation to take effect January 1st, 1891.

Goshen.—On Sunday, November 23rd, twenty persons were added to the church at this place by confirmation and six by certificate. Rev. P. Ruhl is pastor.

IOWA.

Imogene.—The Schlatter Missionary Society of Third Street Reformed church, Easton, Pa., sent the pastor of Imogene Mission and family a very liberal Thanksgiving gift, consisting of a check for $25 and a large box of bedding, clothing, etc., which adds greatly to their comfort. For the favor conferred upon them by kind donors, the hearts of Pastor J. F. Butler and wife respond with thanksgiving, accompanied with the prayer, that God richly reward them for this their act of Christian liberality.

PERSONAL.

Rev. J. Kretzing, of Brodheadsville, Pa., who has been disabled for almost two years by an ulcer of the cheek (pronounced incurable by high medical authority of this city), is still rather comfortable amid all his afflictions. His general health continues good. He is thankful that he can do some work, read, enjoy his meals, and rest at night. Also for much substantial kindness and sympathy which has been shown to him.

We failed to mention that Mr. F. E. Heller, of Brodheadsville, Pa., graduated a year ago with the highest average of merits of any student since the organization of Peirce's College of Business. He was an instructor in the institution from which he graduated for some time, and a member of Christ church, this city; but has again returned to his native place and accepted a more lucrative position in Statz's great Egg House.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

At the request of the Committees of the Eastern and Potomac Synods, the Board of Trustees of the Theological Seminary will hold a special meeting in the College Building at Lancaster, on Thursday, the 22d of January next, at 2 o'clock, P.M., "to consider the location and such other matters as may be necessary in regard to a Seminary building." These committees were appointed at the last meeting of the Synods and are earnestly moving in the matter. They ask and will, no doubt, receive the hearty co-operation of this Board.

D. W. GROSS, President.

Dec. 27th, 1890.

FOR DERANGEMENTS OF THE BRAIN
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. D. P. Boulster, Augusta, Me., says: "In functional derangements of the brain and nervous system, I have prescribed it with gratifying results."

For Reformed Church Messenger.

SCHUYLKILL HAVEN.

Prof. J. H. Dubbs, D.D., of the Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, Pa., lectured on "Rough Diamonds," in the Jerusalem church, on Saturday evening, December 20th, for the benefit of their missionary society. Eiler's Horn Sextette furnished music for the occasion.

Prof. Dubbs is a pleasant speaker, and easily commands the attention of his hearers. And with his ever-ready supply of witty sayings and anecdotes, combined with his fine knowledge of the subject, he makes "Rough Diamonds" a literary treat indeed.

Rev. Thomas M. Yundt, of Womelsdorf, Pa., preached to the St. John's congregation on Sunday morning, December 21st. In the evening the pulpit was occupied by Prof. J. H. Dubbs, D.D.

On Friday evening, December 19th, a number of the members of the St. John's congregation, laden with good things, proceeded to the parsonage, and tendered their pastor, Rev. O. H. Strunck, a pleasant surprise. After depositing their remembrances on a convenient table, and without giving Bro. Strunck and his wife time to recover from their surprise, Bro. G. H. Gerber, in behalf of the congregation, stepped forward and with a few appropriate remarks, presented him with a beautifully chased, gold hunting-case watch, the outside of which bore the monogram, O. H. S., and engraven on the inside was "From the St. John's Reformed congregation to Rev. O. H. Strunck, December 19th, 1890."

After partially recovering from his surprise, he thanked them for their tokens of love, and for all the kindness they have shown to him and his family from time to time since he became their pastor.

The evening was spent very pleasantly by all, and when Rev. Strunck had thanked God for His goodness to him and his congregation, and asked His blessing upon all, the assembled persons returned home, feeling amply repaid for what they had done.

A. L. B.

TOPICS

Suggested for the Week of Prayer by the Evangelical Alliance for the United States.

January 4–11, 1891.

SABBATH, JANUARY 4th.—Sermons. The glory of the Triune God.—Jer. x. 6, 7; Hab. iii. 3, 4; 2 Cor. iv. 6, and xiii. 14.

MONDAY, JANUARY 5th.—Confession and Thanksgiving. For the nation, community, Church, family, and the individual. Confession: Hosea xiv. 1, 2; 1 John i. 8, 9; Psalm xxxii. 1, 5; 2 Sam. xii. 13. Thanksgiving: 1 Thess. v. 18; Psalm c.; Psalm ciii.; Neh. xii. 43.

TUESDAY, JAN. 6th.—The Church Universal. Prayer that the power of the Holy Ghost may rest upon it, Acts ii. 1–18; that the disciples of Christ may be one, John xvii. 21; that the Church may gain a truer and broader conception of her mission, Matt. xxii. 35–39; Matt. xx. 28; John xvii. 18. Prayer that the International Conference at Florence, next April, may be crowned with special blessing.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 7.—Nations and their Rulers. Prayer for all in authority, 1 Tim. ii. 1, 2; for peace, Isa. ii. 1, 4; for the abolition of the slave, opium and strong drink traffic, Exodus xxi. 16; Psalm lxxii. 4; for all needed reforms—temperance, Hab. ii. 5, 12; Sabbath, Neh. xiii. 15–22; industrial, Jer. xxii. 13; social, 1 Cor. vi. 18–20; political, 1 Sam. ii. 36, and viii. 3.

THURSDAY, JAN. 8th.—The Church at Home.—Prayer for a sense of personal responsibility and for co-operation in the evangelization of the city, country and frontier. Matt. x. 5–13; Mark xiii. 34; Acts viii.

FRIDAY, JAN. 9th.—The Church Abroad. Prayer for increased missionary spirit, co-operation and enlargement. Joel ii. 28–32; Eph. iv. 11–16; Psalm lxvii.

SATURDAY, JAN. 10th.—The Family. Prayers for sons, daughters and servants; for Sunday-schools and all Christian associations for young people; for schools, seminaries, colleges and universities. Prov. iv.; Deut. vi. 4–15; Mark x. 13–16; Eph. vi. 1–4.

SABBATH, JAN. 11th.—Sermons. The manifestation of Christ in His people. John xvii. 21–23; Col. i. 27; 2. Thes. i. 12; Eph. iii. 10–21.

A CARD.

Harbor Mission at New York, Office: 30 State Street.

All those who may expect relatives or friends from Europe to arrive at the port of New York, and those departing from here to Europe, should communicate with our Harbor Missionary, Mr. Paul Sommerlatte, No. 30 State street, New York City, and he will gladly give them all the advice and assistance possible, without any charge. The names of the parties expected from Europe and the name of the ship they will arrive in, should be given to the missionary in time, and steerage passengers should be advised to carry the name of the missionary in sight while landing at New York, because the missionary is always present upon the arrival of the steerage passengers in the Barge Office, and will take care of those directed to him.

Convenient lodging, good transportation, railroad and steamship tickets, passes, etc., can also be secured through the aid of our missionary. Address

PAUL SOMMERLATTE,
30 State Street,
New York City, N. Y.

NOTICE.

The next meeting of the Lehigh Valley Ministerial Association of the Reformed church has been postponed until the first Monday of February, 1891. Due notice of the place of meeting will be given.

N. Z. SNYDER, Pres.

Beecham's Pills cure sick-headache.

Be wise in time. You have too many gray hairs for one so young looking. Use Hall's Hair Renewer, the best preparation out to cure them. Try it.

The greatest stamp collector in England says he has at last got a Brattleboro stamp (American) of 1846. He thinks it is the only specimen in existence and is worth £250.

If every woman in this land knew for herself the actual quality of Dobbins' Electric Soap, no other washing soap could be sold. Millions do use it, but other millions have never tried it. Have you? Ask your grocer for it.

Restaurant Guest — "Everything you have brought me are stone cold." Polite Waiter—"Here are the mustard and pepper, sir."

LADIES, MAKE THE EXPERIMENT.

Men and women who refuse to try new ideas or new articles virtually combine to make the world stand still, and check the advancement of those things which conduce to happiness, comfort, and the getting of more into an ordinary life. Sweeping improvements—such as the telegraph, steam, electricity—push themselves in at all odds; and although it may not be suspected, a household article is doing the very same by its judicious, convincing, argumentative advertising. That article is Pearline—the very name is becoming a household word, which means cleanliness with ease and comfort. Readers of this paper who do not use Pearline should make an experiment with it. Surely such rapid growth as it is enjoying must be due to merit, and yet it is old enough to have been buried out of sight long since did it not continue to please and satisfy those who use it. It claims much by way of reducing drudgery and saving of wear and tear, and if it fulfils its promises, the more it claims the better; and the sooner you know all about it, the sooner you will share in the benefits afforded by a purely scientific household article.

BEECHAM'S
PAINLESS. PILLS EFFECTUAL.
☛ WORTH A GUINEA A BOX. ☚
For BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS SUCH AS
Sick Headache, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Constipation, Disordered Liver, etc.,
ACTING LIKE MAGIC on the vital organs, strengthening the muscular system, and arousing with the rosebud of health The Whole Physical Energy of the Human Frame.
Beecham's Pills, taken as directed, will quickly RESTORE FEMALES to complete health.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 25 cents per Box.
Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England.
B. F. ALLEN CO., Sole Agents for United States, 365 & 367 Canal St., New York, who (if your druggist does not keep them) will mail Beecham's Pills on receipt of price—but inquire first. (Mention this paper.)

THE J. P. BUSH M'F'G. CO.
BOVININE

BOVININE
A CONDENSED FOOD

A NOTED CANADIAN PHYSICIAN, DR. E. T. ADAMS OF TORONTO, recently said in conversation: "As a food for invalids or those debilitated from any cause I regard BOVININE the very best I have ever used, and not only for those sick or convalescing, but for exhausted professional or business men, BOVININE will, better than any nutrient I know of, build up and restore the overtaxed mind and body." It Makes Blood Fast and Supplies the Vitalized Fluids so Essential in Expelling Deleterious Accumulations. BOVININE is the only raw meat food condensed by a cold process, by which ALL the nutritive elements of selected beef are preserved in a palatable form, ready for immediate use.

Books New Issues every week. Catalogue, 96 pages, free on request.
Not sold by Dealers; prices too low. Buy of the Publisher,
JOHN B. ALDEN, 393 Pearl Street, New York. Please mention this paper.

Ely's Cream Balm For
CATARRH
THE POSITIVE CURE.
ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.

The Great Church LIGHT.
FRINK'S Patent Reflectors give the Most Powerful, the Softest, Cheapest and the Best Light known for Churches, Stores, Show Windows, Parlors, Banks, Offices, Picture Galleries, Theatres, Depots, etc. New and elegant designs. Send size of room. Get circular and estimate. A liberal discount to churches and the trade. I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl Street, N. Y.

LATEST DISCOVERIES OF SCIENCE.

One of the most valuable and interesting Series of Papers ever published will be contributed to The Youth's Companion by Prof. Norman Lockyer, of South Kensington Museum; Sir Richard S. Ball, Astronomer Royal of Ireland; Professor E. S. Holden, of Lick Observatory; Prof. C. A. Young, of Princeton University; Professor Shaler, of Harvard; and Camille Flammarion, the famous French astronomer.

Victoria is reported to be worth $45,000,000.

CHURCH BELLS.

We have received a copy of the Catalogue of the Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio, containing descriptions and prices of Church, School and Fire Alarm Bells, and over 2500 Testimonials from purchasers in the United States and Canada. These Testimonials are from every State and Territory, and a large proportion of them from ministers, and speak in highest terms of the bells. The prices are comparatively low, and within reach of even feeble communities. Churches needing bells—and none should be without—will do well to write for the Catalogue, which is offered free to all who may apply.

FOR COUGHS, SORE THROAT, ASTHMA,

Catarrh, and diseases of the Bronchial Tubes, no better remedy can be found than "BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES." Sold everywhere, 25 cents.

DO NOT STAMMER.
Mr. E. Waterman, Lebanon, Conn., writes: "It seems to me almost a miracle that, after years of stammering, I can now talk and read with ease." Refer also to J. D. Wattles, Publisher of The Sunday School Times, who saw him before and after cure.
Send for 54-page pamphlet to E. S. JOHNSTON'S Institute, N. E. Cor. 11th and Spring Garden Sts. Phila., Pa.

Sensible Mothers BUY THE "GOOD SENSE" Corset Waist for themselves and their growing children.

THE WONDERFUL LUBURG CHAIR
COMBINING 5 ARTICLES OF FURNITURE.
50 CHANGES
INVALID SUPPLIES AND WHEEL CHAIRS
100 STYLES BABY COACHES
Automatic Brake on all Coaches
FREE

We retail at the lowest wholesale factory prices, and ship goods to be paid for on delivery. Send stamp for Catalogue. Name goods desired.
WHEEL CHAIRS TO HIRE. SPECIAL FREE DELIVERY.
LUBURG MFG. CO., 145 N. 8th St., Philada., Pa.

ASTHMA—CURED DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA!
Delicious, nourishing, absolutely pure. Costing less than one cent a cup.

CHURCH, HALL AND LODGE
Furniture. Pulpits, Chairs, Pews, etc.
BAXTER C. SWAN, 244 & 246 S. 2d St., Phila. Pa.

TACOMA $100 to $10,000 carefully invested here brings annually from twenty to $100 % Test us. Tacoma Investment Co., Tacoma, Wash.

THE LATEST SUCCESS.
OUR SIXTEEN DOLLAR
English Lambswool
(Cassimere Lined) ULSTERS.
E. O. THOMPSON,
SPECIAL CLOTHIER,
1338 CHESTNUT STREET,
(Opposite the Mint.) Philadelphia.

BLAIRSVILLE (Pa.) SEMINARY, Rev. T. R. Ewing, D.D., Principal.

PIANOS

Every style, price and kind. Bargains always on hand, some used only a little. Call or write for list. Easy Terms.

ORGANS

The choicest styles from various factories. The maker's highest skill is always displayed on our floors.

The "ÆOLIAN" is like a parlor orchestra; any one can play it after five minutes' instruction.

·C·J·Heppe·&·Son·
·Philadelphia·
Sixth & Thompson Sts. Established 1865.

CLINTON H. MENEELY BELL COMPANY,
TROY, N. Y. Manufacture a Superior Grade of
CHURCH CHIME PEAL AND SCHOOL BELLS

Best quality Bells for Churches, Chimes, Schools, etc. Fully warranted. Write for Prices. BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY, VAN DUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY,
BALTIMORE, MD.
Best quality Copper and Tin BELLS for Churches, Schools, &c.
Also CHIMES AND BELLS.
Price and terms free. Name this paper.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N.Y., Bells
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others.

BULBOUS ROOTS for FALL PLANTING. Send for illustrated priced Catalogue. D. Landreth & Sons. 21 and 23 South Sixth Street, Phila. Branch Store, Delaware Ave. and Arch St.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE

KNABE
PIANOS.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
BALTIMORE, 22 and 24 East Baltimore Street,
New York, 148 Fifth ave. Washington 817 Market Space
F. A. NORTH & Co., Sole Agents,
1308 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS

Over 200,000 ESTEY ORGANS are singing their own praises the world over, as the most reliable organ made for tone, durability and fine finish. The ESTEY PIANO is as thoroughly and carefully made and guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has. If you want a first-class Piano that is sure to please you buy an ESTEY. Lowest prices for cash, or on easy monthly payments.

ESTEY. BRUCE & CO. 18 N. Seventh St. Philadelphia, Pa.

THE VOCALION

A complete church organ in miniature, of equal power and quality of tone, at one third the price, of pipe organs. Requires no tuning. Portable; can be shipped anywhere. It is destined to replace small pipe organs and large reed organs everywhere. Recommended by all the greatest organists, including:

Clarence Eddy,	Frederic Archer,
A. H. Messiter,	Eben Tourjee,
S. B. Whitney	Chas. J. Toof,
Walter Damrosch,	D. Austin Pearce,

and hundreds of others.

Send for catalogue, postpaid.

WM. D. DUTTON & CO.,
GENERAL AGENTS,
1115 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Most Worthy Books for Purchase

CHOICE AND POPULAR ALTO SONGS.
33 songs—each one a Gem. Price, $1 in heavy paper, $1.25 in bds., and $2 in gilt binding.

THE SONGS OF IRELAND.
A new and carefully revised collection of the best and most celebrated Irish songs. Some of the best melodies in existence, and bright, spirited words. 66 songs. Price, $1 in heavy paper, $1.25 in bds., and $2 in gilt binding.

Choice Song Collections.

SONG CLASSICS. Vol. 1,	50	songs.
SONG CLASSICS. Vol. 2,	39	"
SONG CLASSICS. Low Voices,	47	"
CHOICE SACRED SOLOS,	34	"
CHOICE SACRED SOLOS, Low Voices,	40	"
CLASSIC, BARITONE AND BASS,	33	"
CLASSIC TENOR SONGS,	36	"
GOOD OLD SONGS WE USED TO SING,	115	"

Choice Piano Collections.

PIANO CLASSICS. Vol. 1,	44	pieces.
PIANO CLASSICS. Vol. 2,	31	"
CLASSICAL PIANIST,	42	"
POPULAR DANCE COLLECTION,	66	"
POPULAR PIANO COLLECTION,	66	"
OPERATIC PIANO COLLECTION,	19	operas.

Price of Each Book, $1.00. Cloth Gilt, $2.00. All are Valuable Collections of the Best Music.

Churchill's BIRTHDAY BOOK of EMINENT COMPOSERS. A handsome and useful gift, $1.00.

Any Book mailed, post-paid, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY, Boston
J. E. DITSON & Co., 1228 Chestnut St., Phila.

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE TRUST CO.
Capital paid up $1,500,000 Surplus over $100,000
DENVER, COLORADO.
First Mortgage Loans and Gold Debentures.
Loans fully guaranteed. Safe as Government Bonds.
Philadelphia Office, Room 302 Bullitt Building,
ROBT. FORESMAN, Manager.

RIGGS & BROTHER,
Branch Store, 1005 Walnut St., Phila.
Ladies' 14-Carat Gold Watches, $25.
" 14-Carat filled case " 18.
Boys' Silver Watches, $7.00.
Watches and Clocks repaired.

AMERICAN FIRE
INSURANCE COMPANY,
Office, Company's Building,
308 and 310 WALNUT STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

A.D. 1810

CASH CAPITAL,	$500,0[illegible]0.00
Reserve for Reinsurance and all other claims,	1,733,0[illegible]3.18
Surplus over all Liabilities,	409,6[illegible].79

TOTAL ASSETS, JAN. 1, 1890.
$2,642,669.97.

THOS H. MONTGOMERY, President.
CHAS. P. PEROT, Vice-President.
RICHARD MARIS, Secretary,
JAMES B. YOUNG, Actuary.

DIRECTORS.

Thos. H. Montgomery,	Alexander Biddle,
John T. Lewis,	Charles P. Perot,
Israel Morris,	Joseph E. Gillingham,
Pemberton S. Hutchinson,	Samuel Welsh, Jr.

Chas. S. Whelen.

ARCHITECTURE

CHAS. W. BOLTON, 1510 Chestnut St., Phila

Sketches of Churches, Public Buildings, Dwellings, etc., furnished gratis. Then, if desired, drawings and specifications will be prepared for a reasonable consideration.

DO YOU WANT
MONEY?
WORK?
HEALTH?
A FARM?
A HOME?
BUSINESS?

WRITE to F. I. WHITNEY, St. Paul, Minn., and say just what you desire, and answer will be sent free, together with maps & publications.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address. T. A. Slocum. M. C.. 181 Pearl St.. N. Y.

VIRGINIA FARMS FREE CATALOGUE.
R. B. CHAFFIN & CO. RICHMOND, VA.

400,000 The largest circulation of any periodical in the world. "The Phila. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies free. CURTIS PUB. CO., Phila., Pa.

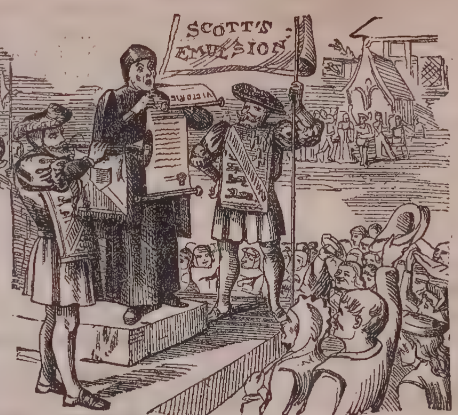
Proclaim



Remember last winter's siege. Recall how trying to health

the Victory

were the frequent changes of the weather. What was it that helped you win the fight with disease, warded off pneumonia and possibly consumption? Did you give due credit to SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda? Did you proclaim the victory? H[illegible]e you recommended this wonderful ally of health to your friends? A[illegible] what will you do this winter? Use Scott's Emulsion as a preven[illegible] this time. It will fortify the system against Coughs, Colds, Consumpti[illegible] Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases (specially in Children). Palatable as Milk.

Dr A.H Strickler
14Feby90

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. All Druggists.

Reformed Church Messenger.

"AS THE TRUTH IS IN JESUS."

Vol. LIX.—No. 2. PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 8, 1891. WHOLE No. 2922.

Entered at the Post-Office, Philadelphia, as second-class matter.

The Reformed Church Messenger.

ISSUED WEEKLY

IN THE INTERESTS OF THE

REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES

BY THE

REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE,

CHAS. G. FISHER, Proprietor,

Office: 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(For Terms, see page 11.)

Editorial Notes.

—The Lutheran Observer comes to us at the opening of the new year in quarto form of sixteen pages. It is greatly improved in appearance and promised further improvements will enable it to take rank with its contemporaries. The Messenger extends congratulations.

—The Acts and Proceedings of the Synod of the Interior, held at Wichita, Kansas, Oct. 16th, 1890, have been published. They give evidence of vigor and activity on the part of this young Synod. It now numbers 5 Classes, 39 ministers, 69 congregations and 2762 members. Its next meeting will be in Coneville, Iowa, on the third Thursday in October, 1891.

—Rev. I. E. Graeff, D.D., of Harrisburg, Pa., was so unfortunate on Tuesday night, the 30th ult., as to fall and break his right arm between the wrist and elbow. He is to be congratulated that no worse injury was the result. He will be confined to his house for a time, but expects to meet his catechetical class in his room.

—With the best of care typographical errors will occur. There is no use of worrying over them, but it should be taken for granted that those who discover them would make all due allowance. A very provoking one occurred in the address by Rev. A. T. G. Apple, published in our last issue, where the words "recently deceased" should have followed the name of Elder A. Weisel in the foot note, but instead were inserted in the text.

—On the 23d ult., Rev. A. K. Kline arrived in our city, having set sail from Liverpool earlier than he anticipated. After spending a few days with relatives here, he and his wife left for Westmoreland county, Pa., and after a short visit there, turn their faces southward, where a warm "welcome home" awaits them from the people of Woodstock, Va., from whom they have for nearly a half year been separated.

—During the past two weeks we have had the pleasure of welcoming to our sanctum a number of our ministers who have been visiting our city. It afforded us much pleasure to see them. The account they had to give of their work assured us that the Lord is blessing them in their efforts to build up and strengthen His kingdom. Come again, brethren. The "latch string is always out." We are never too busy not to give all a welcome.

—We hope pastors will give kind and substantial attention to the circular recently sent them from our House in reference to efforts in behalf of the Messenger. Should this be done we are sure in no time the circulation of our church paper would be doubled and the Church be that much more benefited. An earnest effort on the part of all whether pastors or those selected to undertake the work, will bring untold results. Come, fellow laborers in the Master's cause, help in this good cause to the best of your ability.

—Some time ago we expressed a wish to hear from those who had been subscribers for the Messenger for a long time and what each had to say of it. We received quite a number of responses, and at no distant day we will give our readers some account of them. There are others no doubt who have been readers of it for a number of years that have not yet reported to us. We would be pleased to hear from them before we make our report.

—At the opening of another year we would kindly request pastors and others to send us at the earliest moment all items of Church News, that will be of interest to the Church in general. To insure insertion such items should be in our hands by Monday, as we go to press on Monday evening or early Tuesday morning. We prefer to receive items direct, and not cull them from other papers. To be inserted at the earliest moment they should be sent to us direct. In this way errors are avoided and the information is reliable.

—Mrs. Rebecca Schneck, widow of the late Rev. Benjamin S. Schneck, D. D., died at her late residence in Chambersburg, Pa., on Wednesday, December 31st, 1890, in the 86th year of her age. The deceased was a daughter of Hon. James Riddle, a member of the Franklin county bar, and was a woman of superior culture. She was, until her health failed some years ago, fully identified with different interests in the work of the Church. She is said to have organized the first Sunday-school in Chambersburg. June 30th, 1836, she was married to Dr. Schneck, who preceded her to the heavenly world, April 19th, 1874. Two sons were born to them, but they died when young. An adopted daughter, Miss Kate Hayman, kindly and devotedly cared for the deceased in her declining years. Mrs. Schneck was well known in our Church and was highly esteemed by all of her acquaintainces.

—The Missionary Guardian for January, after delays that must necessarily occur in starting a new publication and getting mailing lists ready, has gone forth to win its way into favor. We think every one will give it a warm welcome and find much in it to promise a great work on its part in behalf of the glorious cause of missions at home and abroad. The editors and publisher will do their part and the full support and encouragement of the members of the Church are needed to make it a success. Those receiving the January number as subscribers should speak of it to others and those receiving specimen copies should not only subscribe for it but also interest themselves so far as to induce others to join with them in remitting for it. The subscription price, fifty cents a year, is very low and places it within the reach of every one.

—During the Holiday Season just closed many were recipients of gifts that were of more significance than others, and in the presentation of them, no doubt, the donors were as much gratified as those whom they remembered. The most of our pastors were handsomely remembered by their people and in this way the bond of union has been strengthened between pastor and people. It is seldom, however, the case that a congregation remembers in the joyous season a former pastor, as the Second Reformed church of Greensburg, Pa., did their late pastor, Rev. S. B. Mase, who, much to their and his regret, was obliged on account of failing health, to resign and retire from active work for a time. On Christmas morning he was made the recipient of a draft for $52.00 as a gift from this people. No one can imagine the feelings of the receiver. His gratitude cannot be estimated at thus being so kindly remembered, and there is every reason to believe that the donors were glad that it was in their power to thus cheer the heart of him who had been so faithful in his service among them. We are happy to say that Rev. Mase is greatly improved in health, and is able at times to fill appointments. It is hoped he may be soon restored to his wonted health and again enter the active service of the Master.

—The good words "R." has to say about our Almanac for 1891, are appreciated and the playful allusion he makes of "The Messenger-Man," means more than is at first supposed. It is quite natural that the present publisher of our time-honored paper should be greatly interested in its success, and should be untiring in furthering its interests and, at the same time making it a power for good in the Church whose cause it has voiced for more than half a century. Some may attribute this to the probable pecuniary benefit it may be to himself. But not so, the best days, covering a period of forty years, the energies and abilities of a sainted father, all spent in behalf of a cause so near and dear to his heart, would, if nothing else, spur him to follow in his footsteps and do all in his power to bring the Publication interests of the Church up to that high plane to which the departed one had hoped to see them. And in this work, undertaken at the call of the Church, he only builds upon the labors and successes of those who preceded him. He is never unmindful of what they have accomplished and is only able to do that which he does in and through that which they were permitted to do. Not many have preceded him. The list is easily given:—Drs. Mayer, Schneck, Fisher, Bausman and Davis, with Revs. Miller (Samuel) and Dr. Russell, as assistants to the third in the list. "R." also gives points of interest in the early history of some of the publications that are now being regularly issued with greatly increased circulation. The recalling of these are not without their value to the Church.

Poetry.

WE SHALL BE LIKE HIM."

1 St. John 3: 2.

We shall be like Him, like the King immortal,
The Lamb enthroned in heaven,
Whene'er, to pass the bright celestial portal,
The summons shall be given.

Like Jesus, brightness of the Father's glory,
And see Him as He is!
Oh, who can comprehend the wondrous story
Or grasp the unutterable bliss?

Not like the helpless child of Bethlehem's manger,
Denied the village inn;
Not like the sufferer here, a homeless stranger,
'Mid the abodes of sin.

Not like the Christ betrayed, by friends forsaken,
By foes condemned to die:
Insulted, mocked and scourged, to Calvary taken,
'Mid shouts of "Crucify."

But as He is—exalted, crowned forever.
In glory none can tell.
With saints and angels, heavenly hosts that never Refrain His praise to swell.

Ah, can it be, we shall our Lord resemble
When heaven's gate within,
While here, imperfect souls, we often tremble
At consciousness of sin?

Oh, promise great! confirmed by words of Jesus,
That fill with joy our hearts,
From sin His precious blood it is that frees us,
And purity imparts.

Oh, matchless grace of God! that gives us meekness
To be like Christ we love,
Pursue thy work in us to grand completeness
For the bright world above.

The Christian Inquirer.

Communications.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

SOME NOTES ON CURRENT FACTS.

DISBANDING CHURCHES.

We quote from The Workman:

"In the Missionary Review of the World for December is the following: "In the Minutes of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church for 1889, page 140, it is stated that 36 per cent. as many churches are annually disbanded as new ones organized; that the ratio of disbandments is gradually increasing, and last year was greater than ever before. In the Congregational Year Book, giving the statistics for 1889, it is stated that 251 new churches were organized during the year, and 121 disbanded. For every three churches organized by the Presbyterians one is disbanded; and among the Congregationalists, for every two new churches organized one is disbanded. If these statistics are correct and coming from the reliable sources above referred to, we presume they must be, they indicate one of two things, either, that an undue number of churches are organized without due preparation, or that too large a proportion of the membership gathered into congregations is composed of elements, which have little doctrinal unity. Our pastors often complain of the want of unity in the faith, and the difficulty of assimilating a half a score of elements of native and foreign origin, but such a disintegration as this is happily unknown among us. A true Lutheran church is a hard thing to kill, and often when others pronounce it dead, it awakens to a new and higher life in Christ Jesus. With all our weaknesses and short-comings, our congregations ordinarily have a long and vigorous life.'"

On the foregoing we have this to say: The record is a deplorable one, and implies mistakes or evils probably both, of a very serious nature. It is only when facts are brought out officially by persons who have no interest in exaggerating, that one can bring himself to believe in the existence of such a state of things. How comes it to pass? It is suggested, in the first place, "That an undue number of churches are organized without due preparation." No doubt there is a measure of truth in that, and the truth has an especial application in those denominations which are in an over-hurry to spread all over the land generally, and into every nook and corner of it particularly. There must needs be organizations without vitality in such cases. It is probably, in the main, the fault of too much ecclesiastical machinery in those bodies; said machinery being under a sort of moral stress to show results. What is apt to be overlooked, however, is the fact that in religion, results can not be permanently made to order. The framework can be put up, but vitality cannot be given. It is only when the Lord has need of a congregation that one can thrive. A second suggestion assumes as possible, "That too large a proportion of the membership gathered into congregations is composed of elements, which have little doctrinal unity." And there is truth in this, also.

It comes in two ways. The one, when a denomination (as a number of those who write themselves down as "leading" do), makes a large portion of its additions from elements which have no immediate affinity for it, but naturally belong to some other denomination, seeking them without being sought by them. Sooner or later the incongruity will show itself, and then division and disorganization are not far off. The other way is taken when the moral and religious fences are down; when any one may be a member without reference to his faith and life. In such a case there is chaos at hand from the start.

Few Reformed congregations die; very few. How do we account for it? So far as we know our answer would be that we scarcely ever make an organization where there is not a clear and sufficient reason why. Limited in men, means, and managing machinery, we must be prudent. Add to this the system which prevails among us in constituting charges and in serving them. It is the combination of congregations which saves the weak ones.

DENOMINATIONAL HISTORY.

The Christian Instructor, a United Presbyterian paper, has the following notes from Pittsburgh:

"The Theological Seminary is having some very interesting special lectures this winter. The first, by Dr. Wishart, of Monmouth, Ill., "The History of the Associate Church," was replete with most interesting matter.

"The second, by Rev. R. A. Browne, D D., "The History of the Associate Reformed Church," we had not the pleasure of hearing, but it is highly complimented by those who did hear.

"The third, Wednesday, Dec. 3d, by Rev. J. T. Brownlee, D D., "The History of the Union between the Associate and Associate Reformed Churches," was most intensely interesting. It was full, correct and graphic. It is a pity such men would not write more, and in a permanent form, for the public. It is expected these lectures, with others to follow weekly, will be published. As judged by these three, they will deserve to be, for permanent and general use."

There we have outlined as being done in another Church what is very much needed in our own. We refer particularly to the drift of the lectures themselves. They make for the history of the denomination. That is a thing that deserves attention in any Church. The Reformed Church has an exceedingly rich history on the continent of Europe, with ever-changing sunlight and shadow to it. That history is a sealed book to our people and to the most of our ministers. Practically it has never been written on its own basis. We have it as incident, here, there and elsewhere, with other matters, which are allowed to overshadow it. We have not the history of the Reformed Church on the Continent as a whole; we have it not distinctly and clearly in its parts. What we do have consists of some leading facts, often repeated, and the lives of a few of its more prominent personalities. Dr. Nevin broke through this limit in the publication of his "History on Genius of the Heidelberg Catechism," and in his statement of the Reformed doctrine of the Lord's Supper in his "Mystical Presence." He struck salient points, but then they had been neglected as though they were no salient points. The effect those books had on our Church shows what power there lies in the truthful portrayal of the history and spirit of the people. Lectures, sermons, essays, criticism in the Church papers, books, all are in place, if only they bring us to see our own past history, and increase our knowledge of ourselves. There is a loud call for work in that direction, and those who enter upon it, and do it well, will render the Church a lasting service.

Wyoming.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

MINISTERS' CHILDREN.

In Scotland, it is often said, that the son of a minister is certain to be "a ne'er do weel child destined to the de'il." The Germans have a rude proverb to the effect that "ministers' children and millers' cows are apt to become fine cattle." Even in our own country a similar judgment is often confidently expressed. At a meeting of ministers which we attended, many years ago, an aged pastor, who was justly reputed to have a habit of saying "things which had better be left unsaid," solemly remarked, "I am glad I have no children, for everybody knows that ministers' children never turn out well." One of the company heaved a deep sigh and replied: "That's hard lines for the rest of us!" and it was actually found that all the ministers present were sons of ministers.

It must surely be confessed that the ranks of the ministry are largely recruited from ministerial families. We have no statistics on the subject, but the number of ministers' sons who are now engaged in the active work of the ministry must be immense. The writer was himself once connected with a classis, the majority of whose members were either sons of ministers, or grandsons on the mother's side. In some instances, the ministry has been handed down, like a precious legacy, for a number of generations. We need but refer to a single pastoral charge in our own denomination, which has been served in regular order by four generations of the same family, for one hundred and eighteen years. One of our ministerial brethren takes pleasure in the tradition that in his family the chain of ministerial descent has never been broken since the time of the Reformation; though it is not likely that each successive link could now be verified. When it can thus be shown that many sons of ministers follow in their father's footsteps, is it not unkind to denounce them all, in such sweeping terms as a thoroughly bad lot?

That the sons of ministers have distinguished themselves in every walk of life, might easily be shown by brilliant examples. They take to literary pursuits as naturally as ducks take to water; and among authors, editors and educators they are especially well-represented. A little research would show that they hold many of the foremost places on the bench and at the bar; and several of our recent Presidents have rejoiced that they were "sons of the parsonage."

Of course, the children of ministers sometimes go astray, and thus bring shame upon an honored ancestry. As the world is constituted, nothing else is probably to be expected. Sometimes, it may be, parents may fail to win the affection of their children; and the truth which is really beautiful and attractive appears hideous and repulsive. With these things we have, on this occasion, nothing to do. They do not constitute the rule but the exceptions. We do not claim for the children of ministers exemption from human frailty; but simply protest against a general judgment which is manifestly undeserved.

The people who are most known are most talked about. In most communities ministers are especially well-known, and their families share in their publicity. In some instances they have come from distant places, and in dress and manners they differ from their neighbors. They come to be regarded as legitimate subjects of criticism, and the social and moral tests which are applied to them are sometimes extreme and unjust. How often, too, the minister's son is made a "buffer" by his companions, to protect themselves from the consequences of their mischief and disobedience. After an unlucky escapade there is a certain satisfaction in being able to say, "The minister's son was with the party."

Certainly, the children of ministers are often mischievous, and sometimes in special danger of being led astray: but that as a class they are worse than their companions, we utterly deny. While we may not be prepared to assert with Dr. Haven, that "three-fourths of the great men of the nation are not over two degrees removed from the clergymen's families," we agree with Macaulay, that "the families of Protestant clergymen are centres of light and culture and a blessing to the land." D.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE REFORMED QUARTERLY REVIEW.

It will be conceded, we believe, by every reader, that this January number is one of unusual strength. There is not a weak article in it, or rather, we should say, all its articles have more than ordinary merit. The last number was very good; this is, if anything, still better. Let the Review, which has done such valiant service in the past, maintain the vigor of thought it is displaying at present, discussing the living questions of the day, and discussing them with ability and earnestness, and it cannot fail to exert a powerful influence in the sphere of theology, especially as the Christological thought which it represents is needed at this time more than ever before. It must be apparent to every one who watches the currents of religious thought, that they have set in towards the very positions always maintained by this Review, whether in regard to dogma, or culture, or the practical religious life. We refer, of course, to the fundamental distinctive truths of the theology of the Review, truths which have their centre in the person of Christ as the principle of Christian faith and life. These have ever been the same, while there has been progress in theological thought, in the course of which, errors have been eliminated and obscurities cleared up. He must have but a meagre acquaintance with the mind of the age who does not see that the central truths for which the Review has stood are coming to an ever full and heartier recognition, even in quarters where formerly they were regarded as heterodox, if not, indeed, heretical. We believe the Review still has a mission. Let it go forward on this mission in the fear of God and with a deep sense of responsibility to Him.

Dr. Reily deserves thanks for the account he gives in this number of Kaftan's tract, entitled, "Brauchen Wir ein Neues Dogma." A theological Review should mirror the thought of the age. This it can do not only by furnishing original articles, but also by giving abstracts and reports of valuable work done in the several departments of philosophy and theology. Few have access to the latest literature, especially in foreign languages, yet all wish to know what a leading theologian, like Kaftan, has to say on the important religious questions of the time. It is well known that Kaftan is Dorner's successor, though he belongs to a different school of theological thought. The old Mediational theology, of which Schleiermacher was the father and Dorner one of the last and ablest representatives—the theology of Nitsch, Julius Müller, Lange, Ebrard and substantially of the old Mercersburg Review—has lost its hold on the German mind. A new theology takes its place. It is that of Ritschl, to whose school Kaftan belongs. It seeks to re-construct theology on a new basis. Metaphysics and speculation must be thrown aside and recourse must be had directly to the Bible. To show the need of such re-construction is the aim of Kaftan's pamphlet, which Professor Reily here brings to the notice of the reader.

Dr. Wm. Rupp's article, "The Influence of the Christological Principle on the Doctrines of God, of Man and of Grace," is one of marked ability. It would command attention anywhere in theological circles. Hardly any one to-day would deny that the idea of Christ, both in His person and in His work, must be central in a system of Christian theology. And yet, as theology has for ages been determined by other ruling ideas, the Christological principle is not always allowed to exert its full and legitimate influence. In view of this fact, Dr. Rupp considers a few of the leading theological doctrines, and seeks to show how, in the light of the Christological principle, they should be constructed. This he does with a strength of thought, and clearness of expression and an earnestness of style, which, while they may not win assent to all his positions, cannot fail to command respect.

Rev. Calvin S. Gerhard contributes an excellent paper on "The New Birth." The subject is one on which he has evidently bestowed much thoughtful consideration, though not more than its importance justifies. Dangerous errors are widely prevalent, and it is the aim of the writer to guard against these. On the one hand there is a false sacramentarianism, which virtually, if not wholly, regards baptism as a magical ordinance working ex opere operato; and on the other, an equally false subjectivism, which, setting aside the Church and the sacraments, trusts wholly to individual experience wrought by the Word and Spirit of God. The true solution of the problem, Mr. Gerhard rightly says, "lies not in depreciating the Word of God and experimental religion, but in properly recognizing the imortance of the Church and the sacrament on the one hand, and the Word of God and experimental religion on the other." We commend the article to the serious attention of all.

Another paper which is sure of a wide circle of readers, is that on "The Intermediate State in its Relation to Salvation," by Dr. Titzel. Eschatological questions have of late years greatly agitated men's minds. The view ordinarily held that the present life is decisive of man's final destiny, has proved unsatisfactory to many earnest thinkers. Various hypotheses have been proposed, of which Dr. Titzel gives an admirable and learned survey. His candor enables him frankly to acknowledge the strength of the several positions under examination, while he faithfully points out their weaknesses and defects from a Biblical and philosophical point of view. The position which he himself reaches after a careful critical review of opposing theories is, that man's eternal destiny is irrevocably decided in this world, though his salvation is not at death made actually complete. In this way he seeks to preserve what is true in other theories, while at the same time he holds to the substantial correctness of the current view. This article will be generally read with interest.

"Simon Bar-Jona: The Stone and the Rock" is a continuation of the series by Mrs. T. C. Porter, with the character of which the reader is already acquainted.

For the Reformed Church Messenger.

REV. JOHN JACOB CRIST.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

John Jacob Crist was a son of Jacob Crist and his wife Catharine, a born Troxel. He was born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, on the 11th day of December, in the year of our Lord, 1845; and in the following February he was baptized by the Rev. Stein. The sponsors were Wm. Stein and wife. In later years, having been duly instructed, he was received into full membership in the Lutheran Church, by the rite of confirmation. He was educated in the public school, and afterwards, in order to fit himself for the profession of teaching, he took courses of study in the State Normal schools at Kutztown and Bloomsburg.

After teaching for a number of years, he felt himself called upon to study for the holy ministry. With that end in view he entered the Reformed Theological Seminary at Lancaster, Pa., where he studied faithfully for three years, and having completed the full course, he graduated, and was recommended for licensure on May 9, 1876. On the 26th day of the same month, he was accordingly licensed to preach the Gospel by the Classis of East Pennsylvania, then in session at Macungie, Lehigh county.

In May, 1877, he was unanimously elected pastor of what is now Salem Reformed church, Catasauqua, Pa., and soon thereafter began his labors in this his first and only charge. He remained pastor of this charge for nine years, during which he had to contend with many and great difficulties. But he labored faithfully, and, in the opinion of his brother ministers, very successfully, taking into consideration the peculiar condition of his charge. During the last two years of his pastorate his health gradually failed, of which we have sad evidence in his private record, which makes very frequent reference to services omitted on account of headache, hoarseness, etc. Often, too, we find that his brethren came to his assistance and preached for him. Indeed during the last years of his pastorate he could not preach at all, and his pulpit was supplied by Rev. T. N. Reber and Rev. Jared Fritzinger, of Allentown, Pa. Finally, in June, 1886, he resigned the pastorate, and was succeeded by Rev. Wilson F. More.

Since his resignation his health was so poor that for some years he was not able to do anything. For the last few years he found secular employment by which he was enabled in part to support his family.

Early in September last he was stricken with typhoid fever, by which disease he was confined to his bed for about eight weeks. Then he gradually gathered strength again, and gave good promise of a return to the vigorous health and hopeful disposition of his early manhood. He even talked hopefully of re-entering upon the active duties of the ministry, when on Tuesday morning, December 9th, he was again stricken very severely, and his strength gradually wasted away, until Tuesday morning, December 16th, when he peacefully passed away. His age, therefore, was 45 years and 4 days. Rev. Crist married, on August 2d, 1877, Anna, a born Scheirer. Their union was blessed with five children, (two sons and three daughters,) who remain with the widow to mourn the death of a kind and loving husband and father.

With reference to his ministerial labor, the following, gleaned from his private records, may be of interest: Including funeral addresses, he preached about 750 sermons; officiated at 65 weddings, baptized 158 children, confirmed 81 persons, and officiated at 74 funerals.

The funeral took place on Saturday, December 20th. Rev. W. F. More conducted the services, which were very largely attended. Rev. T. O. Stem, President of the Eastern Synod, preached the German sermon, and Rev. H. M. Keiffer, D.D., preached in English, taking as his theme, "Death, a departure." After the services in Salem Reformed church were over, the body was taken to Miller's church cemetery, where the earthly remains were laid to rest.

Father, in Thy sacred keeping
Leave we now Thy servant sleeping.

Revs. Tobias Kessler, T. N. Reber, M. H. Diefenderfer, C. J. Becker, Wm. R. Hofford, D.D., and Wm. Reily, Ph. D., served as pall bearers, and the Protestant clergymen of the various denominations in town were present as honorary pall-bearers.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

ORPHANS' HOME COLUMN.

BY REV. T. M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

A happy New Year from eighty one orphans to their many friends throughout the Church.

St. John's congregation, of Allentown, has been in the habit, for several years past, of sending, in their Christmas-box, besides other things, a sufficient number of stockings already filled with candy, to supply the whole family. This especial feature of the St. John's box is always highly appreciated by the children.

One of the important questions to be considered by the Board of Managers and the Ladies' Committee at the meeting on January 9th is, shall the Home be enlarged next summer? This will, no doubt, be largely dependent on the answer to the question, can we raise the means? If the members of the Reformed Church could occasionally look into the superintendent's desk and read the appeals that come from widows, pastors and consistories in behalf of poor orphans, we believe that the money could be readily raised to provide such additional room as we feel we ought to have.

Death has again entered the ranks of those who are directly connected with the management of our beloved Bethany. Elder Henry Wirt, of Hanover, Pa., for many years a member of our Board of Managers, was called to his rest on December 9, 1890. Latterly, on account of his illness, he had not been able to attend the meetings of the Board regularly, but he took a warm interest in the work and was always pleased to hear of the prosperity of the Home. His interest, however, in this work, was not confined to one locality. God's poor appealed to his sympathy and he was ready to give assistance. The result of his counsels will continue to be felt at Bethany, and his gifts of $1000 each to the Bethany and to the St. Paul Homes will help to care for orphans through many years to come.

Very few of our children go home to their friends either in the summer vacation or at Christmas. For reasons best known to the Board it was thought that it would not be desirable to make it a rule to let them go at such time, though there are always exceptions. But the relatives and friends are always at liberty to come and visit the children at the Home. It was a pleasure to have a number of the friends of the children with us during the holidays. They came from Easton, Allentown, Macungie, Reading, Minersville, Harrisburg, Mechanicsburg and other places.

As there are different faces and different dispositions, so there are different ways of serving the Lord and doing His will. Several families with children have been in the habit of giving to the Orphans' Home every Christmas as many dollars as the children are years old. A good idea. As our work grows, so the child grows, as our needs increase, so the income increases. Not everybody may be able to carry it on on such a large scale. A happy grandfather contributes thus in the name of his grandaughter; a family of three children has been contributing according to this plan for several years. If not a dollar, why not halves or quarters? It is a good plan. Try it.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

FOR THE BRETHREN.

What has come over our men! Why all this display of apprehension that woman is going to enter man's "sphere," and is seeking to take man's work out of his hands, or deprive him of some of his exclusive rights and privileges? The immediate cause of this sensitiveness seems to be the fact that a few women have gotten a little of the missionary spirit into them, and are undertaking to do, and stimulate others to do, some of the neglected work of the Church,—work that should have been done years ago by men. Dear brethren, we do not wish to enter your "sphere" of action—except when duty calls us there—but we do want you to move on a little faster. There is plenty of room in front. When you stop to drive us back or out, you not only retard our progress, but are not advancing yourselves. Woman was created a "helpmeet" for man. Then why not let her fulfill the object of her creation, and accept the help which God has provided for you? Or is it possible we are to understand that some still think that means she must only cook his meals and keep his wardrobe in order? If men will only get a little more of St. Paul's faith, courage and zeal, and work with a little more of his spirit, the exegesis of some of his words will not give them so much trouble. For they will then, like him, "Let the women keep silence in the churches," because there will be very little left for them to do or say.

Now will some one of our learned men, who is willing to let St. Paul and Dr. Nevin rest awhile, give us, through the columns of the "MESENGER," an explanation of what the Holy Ghost moved St. Peter to say, on the day of Pentecost, quoting from the prophet Joel, Acts 2: 17, 18? "And it shall be in the last days, sayeth God, I will pour forth of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams; yea and on my servants and on my handmaidens in those days will I pour forth of my Sprit; and they shall prophesy."

If some one will give the interpretation of this Scripture in the light of modern Bible study, he will throw some light on the question under discussion, and oblige at least one WOMAN.

Missions.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

OUR SCHOOLS IN SENDAI.

The Church has already learned of the case of a young convert in Japan, moved by the Spirit of God to consecrate himself to the work of preaching the Gospel to his benighted countrymen, applied over a year ago, to be admitted into our Theological Training School. It was, at that time, the grief of our missionaries' hearts to be compelled to decline his application, on account of want of means to support him. Not disheartened by his failure to gain admittance, he traveled through the country, somewhat as a colporteur, scattering Christian books, and testifying to those who would hear, of the pearl of great price, which he had found. His case coming to the knowledge of a Christian lady of our home church, she adopted him as her beneficiary, and he is now a student in that School, and in due time, if God spares his life, he will go forth as a herald of the cross of Christ.

It really seems singular that there are so few individuals in our Church, persons of ample means, who have not given this mode of doing "it unto one of the least of these my brethren," and thus doing it unto the blessed Saviour, more serious consideration. Only $60 a year, for several years, is necessary to send forth a living minister, to a life work of preaching the Gospel. Most parents are prompted to accumulate means as far as they may, by the desire of making provision for their children after they are gone. And we are very far from condemning this impulse of parental affection. But were a parent to contribute, in the course of several years, some $400, or even $500, to this holy cause, what amount of injury would he inflict upon his children? He might, perhaps, leave each child, say $100 less than he could by neglecting to "do it unto Me." Would such a small abatement from each child's portion, inflict any injury upon it? Would $100 more or less, seriously affect the welfare and comfort, or success in life of any one of them?

How many parents have been called in the providence of God, to lay one of their dear children in an early grave? Had it lived, it, of course, would have received its portion of the estate, and thus have lessened the distributive share of its brothers and sisters. But it is gone. Would it be wrong to them, to consecrate a portion or even all of that child's portion to the saving of souls? Not a few have experienced the exquisite pang of standing by the grave of the partner of their bosoms. And the bleeding affections struggle to devise some abiding memorial to their buried love. And monumental piles are erected, at less or greater cost, only to lose their significance in a generation or two, in this cold and forgetful world. How much more befitting true love and sanctified affection, would it be, that that monument should be a minister of Christ, who, for years after, and as a result of his labors, extending to generations yet unborn, should labor to win souls to the Saviour in whom the departed one trusted—to point them to the heavenly rest, in which that sainted soul now abides. Could a voice come back from the spirit world, which monument would the departed one choose?

The Secretary will be glad to correspond with any one on this subject.

S. N. CALLENDER, Secretary.

For Reformea Church Messenger.

CHRISTMAS TIDINGS.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Lancaster—First Church.—The first service on Christmas Day at the First Reformed church was at 6 o'clock in the morning, and was well attended. This service was of song and prayer and Scripture reading. The music, a feature of the exercises, was very fine, under the leadership of Hiram Stamm. The musical selections were "Adeste Fideles," by Novello; "Gloria in Excelsis," from Mozart's Twelfth Mass; "Magnificat," by M. D. Williams; "Benedictus," by Dr. John Smith; "Bright and Best of the Sons of the Morning," by Lowell Mason, and the "Te Deum," by J. D. C. Parker. The church was handsomely decorated. The Sunday-school entertainment was held on Sunday evening.

"Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," a service of song, addresses and Scripture reading was the programme. Rev. Dr. Titzel delivered an address.

The Sunday-school gave presents instead of receiving, and the scholars made liberal donations of candies, cakes, fruits and money. The candies, cakes and fruits were donated to the Children's Home, and the contributions of money will be sent to the Womelsdorf Home.

—St. Luke's.—The festival service of St. Luke's church for the Sunday-school was held at 7 P.M. The church had been beautifully decorated. On the wall was the word "Immanuel," in old English lettering. The pastor, Rev. Wm. F. Lichliter, conducted the service.

The service consisted of appropriate Scripture selections, hymns and carols, the collects for the festival season and recitations. Rev. A. C. Whitmer delivered a very appropriate address. The candles on the tree were lighted and gifts were given each scholar. The offering was a good one, and was for the benefit of Bethany Orphan Home, at Womelsdorf, Pa.

—St. John's (German), Rev. G. Seibel, pastor. Services were held at St. John's church at 9.30 o'clock on Christmas morning, with sermon by Rev. Seibel, the pastor, from Luke ii. 8–12. His theme was the birth of the Saviour. In the evening the Sunday-school entertainment was given. A fine programme of hymns and recitations were given, and in addition an address by Rev. Seibel, the Superintendent of the school. A quartette rendered several selections. The only decorations were two large trees, on which were placed the gifts for the children.

—Rockland Street Sunday-school.—The festival of the Reformed Rockland Street Sunday-school was held on Sunday. The school was opened with singing. The remaining part of the programme consisted of recitations, singing and an address by Rev. Theo. Appel, D.D. Gifts followed.

Worcester.—Wentz's Reformed Sunday-school, Rev. S. M. K. Huber, pastor, had its Christmas entertainment in the church. The members of the Sunday-school numbered 205, and at the close were presented with gifts. Miss Mattie Huber, of the infant department, Geo. Stong, Superintendent of the Sunday-school, and John Hendricks, librarian, received suitable tokens of regard.

New Providence.—Services were held at New Providence on Christmas morning, in which the Sunday-school and congregation participated. They were conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. Souder, and the aged superintendent, Daniel Helm. After an opening by the choir, antiphonal reading and devotional service, recitations, exercises and dialogues followed. An address was delivered by the pastor. The Sunday-school received a treat, and the orphans of the Bethany Home, Womelsdorf, were remembered with a collection. T. G. Helm made an impromptu address, in closing which, on behalf of the congregation, he presented the pastor with a well-filled purse.

Quarryville.—The Sunday-school held its services on Christmas evening. Miss Elizabeth Groff delivered the address of welcome, and the service consisted of recitations, dialogues and music. Rev. J. M. Souder, the pastor, delivered an address; and the children were not forgotten. The collection will be appropriated to the Bethany Orphans' Home.

Pleasant Unity.—Rev. E. H. Dieffenbacher, pastor.

Christmas services were held in St. Luke's at 9 o'clock. The children received the usual gifts. The offerings, amounting to $7.21, were for the Orphan Home, at Butler, Pa. The St. Luke's Missionary Society sent an album quilt to the Home for a Christmas gift.

The St. Paul Sunday-school closed for the winter on Sunday, the 21st of December. The school and children of the congregation were given gifts. The Sunday-school and church services were combined in one. And just before the congregation was dismissed the pastor was surprised by being presented with an envelope containing $43.00, as a gift from members of the congregation. The pastor in turn had the pleasure of presenting the organist, Miss Nettie Fry, with an envelope containing money, as an appreciation of her services. The pastor was often reminded, during the year, by gifts of various kinds from members of his charge, that the comfort and welfare of himself and family were not forgotten. The Sunday-school of the Youngstown congregation closed on Sunday, December 28th, with a special service.

Latrobe, Pa.—Christmas services were held in this charge as follows: At Beulah—On Christmas eve the service "Christmas Voices" was rendered to a large and appreciative audience. This was a delightful service, old and young vying with each other in making it a great success. Christmas cheer and "good will" prevailed most auspiciously. Besides the general treat a surprising number of valuable gifts were given. Besides other gifts received, the pastor, Rev. C. M. Hartzel, and wife, were each made the happy recipient of a handsome gold coin. This congregation never allows a Christmas-tide to pass without making happy the pastor and family with kind and valuable tokens of affection. Addresses were delivered by the pastor, Prof. Burkholder and Prof. Kimmel. Collection for orphans, $3.45.

—St. John's.—On Christmas afternoon, at 2 o'clock, a pleasing and successful service of scripture, song and recitation was rendered to a full house. Here the decorations were unique, and "Jacob's Ladder" was the principal attraction. All the scholars were given a treat.

—Latrobe.—On Christmas evening the beautiful service "Immanuel" was rendered to the delight of all who heard it. The excellent rendition of this most delightful service was led by the choir, composed of Daisy Heacox, as organist; Prof. Shaw, violinist; P. H. Saxman and J. McMillan, cornetists; Tillie Shrum, soprano; Rebecca Lohr, alto; J. K. Stauffer and D. H. Fisher, bassos. Miss Daisy Heacox, who had charge of the "little folks" in the preparation of the infant class song, and the service "Immanuel," deserves special credit for having the children so well drilled, for this was one of the leading features of the service. The decorations were pretty and appropriate. The children and all members of S. S. were remembered as usual. The collection for Butler Orphans' Home amounted to $10.53.

New Centreville, Pa.—Rev. J. S. Wagner, pastor. St. John's Reformed congregation and Sunday-school, of this place, observed the joyous festival by rendering the beautiful service Immanuel God with us on Christmas eve. The special service for nine children with banners was very impressive. The address for the occasion was delivered by Mr. J. Grant Walter, a member of the senior class in Heidelberg University, Tiffin, Ohio. His theme was the title of the service.

Under the direction and skillful hand of the Assistant Superintendent, Mr. J. C. Knable, an evergreen pyramid, surmounted by a gilt star, over which was arranged an evergreen arch, was constructed in the pulpit recess. This took the place of the customary tree. Upon it were arranged the usual ornaments and candles. When lit up, the effect was very pleasing.

The children received, each one, a gift. The pastor and wife were very kindly remembered. The latter received two beautiful rugs, one made by the loving hands of a lady member, the other, a "Sultan Smyrna," from the congregation. The former had handed him a large basket, well filled, donated by one of the elders. Its contents are sufficient to keep the wolf from the door of the parsonage for some time. The pastor and his wife very highly appreciate these evidences of good will on the part of the members. An offering of ten dollars for St. Paul's Orphan Home was laid on the altar.

Rockwood, Pa.—Rev. J. S. Wagner, pastor. Trinity Reformed congregation and Sunday-school, of this place, held their service Christmas evening. Here the service, Immanuel God with us, was acceptably rendered in the presence of a large audience. The special service with banners was beautifully rendered by nine young ladies. Festoons of evergreens ornamented the windows. The chancel was occupied by three symmetrical trees of suitable size, tastefully ornamented. After these had been lit up, at short intervals they would gracefully revolve, the middle one turning in an opposite direction from the others. The effect was very pleasing and highly delighted old and young. This arrangement was the result of the skill of the efficient Superintendent, W. H. H. Bake, who who was ably assisted by a number of the members and friends of the congregation. Each member received a generous gift. The pastor and wife were the recipients of a large, beautiful oil painting. They are very thankful to the donors. An offering of $7.76 was laid on the altar for St. Paul's Orphan Home.

Sellersville, Pa., Leidy's.—Rev. J. G. Dengler, pastor. This congregation presented its pastor with a well-filled purse, to the great surprise of the recipient.

Manheim.—Rev. D. W. Albright, pastor. The service rendered by the Sunday-school was well received and left a lasting impression.

Centre Hall, Pa.—Christmas entertainments were held by the respective Sunday-schools of the Tusseyville and Spring Mills congregations. At the close of each the children were given gifts. Service was held in the Centre Hall church on Christmas morning. The Sunday-school sends a Christmas gift of over $13.00 to Bethany Orphans' Home. The pastor, S. H. Eisenberg, was the recipient of a handsome sleigh, presented by the Centre Hall congregation.

Philadelphia, Pa., First Church, Tenth and Wallace Sts.—Rev. J. H. Sechler, pastor. The Sunday-school in connection with this church held its Christmas festival on Sunday evening, December 28th. The beautiful service, "Immanuel" was used. All were delighted with the exercises; many pronounced the service the most beautiful they had ever heard. The school, accompanied by Prof. C. H. Wood, on the organ, and Mr. Val. B. Lee, on the cornet, never sang with more earnestness.

Nine prizes were awarded for regular attendance; fifteen having attended more than fifty Sundays during the year. Some of the officers and teachers were remembered by their classes.

Schuylkill Haven.—Rev. O. H. Strunk, pastor. The cantata entitled, "The Frost Queen and Santa Claus," was very creditibly rendered to a large audience on Christmas evening by the St. John's Sunday-School. An admission of ten cents was charged; and the proceeds, amounting to thirty-six (36) dollars, are for the benefit of Bethany Orphans' Home. This, with the offerings of the morning, made a nice donation of sixty-six (66) dollars. By request the Cantata was repeated on Friday evening, and no admission charged. In the morning the scholars received gifts. Early service was also held at six A. M. A special Christmas service was also held in the Jerusalem Church and the children kindly remembered.

Cressona.—Rev. C. E. Bartholomew, pastor. The Christmas service entitled "The Son of God and the Son of Man," was rendered in the St. Mark's Church on Christmas evening. The offerings were devoted to home missions. Early service was held at 6:00 A. M. and at 9:00 A. M. the scholars received their gifts.

Arendtsville.—Rev. B. F. Bausman, pastor. Christmas was observed with appropriate services. Offerings for Bethany Orphans' Home was given as follows: Zion's $12.15; Bender's, $9.75; total, $21.90.

Elizabethtown.—The services were held in this congregation on Xmas exening. Not for many years have our Xmas services throughout been so successful and appropriate as this year. The recitations, dialogues and the singing were unusually fine. The pastor, his estimable wife and the two organists of the church and Sunday-school received handsome and valuable presents, whilst every member of the Sunday-School received a gift. The offerings for Bethany Orphans' Home amounted to $15.61. Rev. S. M. Roeder, pastor.

Mifflinburg.—Christmas was appropriately observed at Mifflinburg, Ray's Church and Laurelton. At Mifflinburg a box was made up for the orphans consisting of clothing and eatables. Also a collection of $19.00. The programme was very well rendered, consisting of music, recitations, etc. Rev. L. D. Steckel, pastor.

Mechanicsburg.—Pastor, Rev. W. I. Stewart. Christmas was observed with an appropriate service in the morning at six o'clock, and with a children's anniversary in the evening at six o'clock. The music, under the direction of Mrs. C. H. Titzel, with Mr. D. C. Titzel as organist, was most excellent. Collections for the support of orphans were lifted which amounted to over $17.00.

Phœnixville.—The school of the Reformed Church in this place rendered an excellent service on Christmas night. Rev. H. A. Bomberger, of York, Pa., was present and added to the occasion by an address and song. The offering for Bethany Orphans' Home amounted to $17.00. Rev. F. C. Yost, pastor.

Plum Creek.—The "Order of Worship for Christmas," prepared by our own house, was used in two of the congregations of the Plum Creek charge. Rev. W. D. Lefever, pastor. The churches were beautifully adorned and the services were well attended and heartily enjoyed, Christmas offering, $9.89; communion offering, $7.05.

Danville.—The Christmas season was observed in Shiloh Reformed Church, Rev. J. A. Peters, D.D., pastor, by services in the morning at nine o'clock and a children's service in the evening at half-past six. An interesting, though brief service, was gone through with, consisting of the usual exercises found in the Christmas services published, though in a modified form. The school was assisted by several string and wind instruments. Gifts were given to each member of the school and also to all children in the audience. The offering of the school for Bethany Orphans' Home was $43.00.

The joy of the Christmas-tide was not without its alloy—sadness—owing to the fact that the pastor's wife, who is also a teacher in the school, lies critically ill.

Prospectville.—Rev. A. H. Hibshman, pastor. The Christmas festival celebrated here on Saturday evening, the twenty-seventh, was a memorable one. It was the first time the church has had a Christmas. The Sunday-School is less than a year old and has grown rapidly. The confidence of the community has been gained and strengthened by this last entertainment. The room was too small for the number of people who came together. The programme was pronounced by all to be excellent, was well rendered by the school, assisted by the Sunday-school orchestra.

The Family.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE YOUNG PROPHETESS:

A TALE OF THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE.

BY REV. R. LEIGHTON GERHART.

CHAPTER II.

A SONG IN THE AIR.

"I will be a knight, too."

"Ay."

"I will go on a crusade to the Holy Land."

"Ay."

"Why do you say 'Ay,' to me, Serena? It seems to me as if you did but mock me."

"You have done neither," was the caustic reply.

This brief interchange of words was held one bright afternoon in the spring of the year 1212, as mounted upon spirited and well-groomed horses, the cousins rode slowly over a broad stretch of soft meadow-land in the neighborhood of their home. They were in search of amusement, the nature of which could readily be inferred, for each bore a falcon on the right hand.

Otho was about to reply to the speech of Serena, when a man in the attire of a falconer came abruptly into view from behind a dense clump of hazel bushes, a few rods in advance.

"Look, look! my young master!" cried the new-comer, waving his arms, "the quarry! the quarry! and the falcons not even unhooded!"

"Otho's, but not mine, good Harold," answered the young girl, laughing merrily, as with a graceful motion of the hand upward, she tossed her falcon into the air. Otho, meanwhile, a crimson flush suffusing his cheeks, fumbled awkwardly at the leather hood covering the head of his bird. The falcon was free at last, the keen eyes glistened in the sunlight; but when it darted upward, as if shot from a bow, the bird of Serena was already high in the air. The quarry, a white heron, unaware of its danger, was flying lazily across the valley, its long neck curved backward so far as to permit the head to rest comfortably on the arched back, while its slender legs trailed out behind to their fullest extent. The falcons darted forward with swift, rapid strokes of the wing, flying not directly toward their prey, but to a point some distance above it. Whether as they drew near the sound of their pinions reached the quick ears of the heron, or whether through the peculiar construction of the eye, which enabled it to see almost directly behind it as well as directly before it, the bird saw their approach, we cannot say, but now it evidently took in the situation of affairs, and began to increase its speed, at the same time rising rapidly in the air. The falcons, uttering a peculiar scream, at once altered their flight, and for a few minutes pursuers and pursued rose in nearly parallel lines to a greater altitude.

"Look at my falcon! look at my falcon!" cried Serena, "he is gaining! he is gaining!" but, without waiting for an answer, she gave rein to her black jennet and galloped forward to a slight rise in the meadow, to command a better view of the sport. Otho followed, keeping his eye intently fixed on the birds as he rode.

"He will soon dart," the boy said, drawing rein beside Serena, for her falcon had now risen to a height almost directly above the heron.

"Isn't he a noble bird? Look at your laggard, Otho, he is not even on a level with the quarry. I'll wager thee a ducat, the quarry'll be down before he is even ready to strike."

"Don't be too sure of that, fair cousin," was the reply, "the heron is by no means at his wit's end."

"Is he not? Is he not? Look! look!" and the excited girl clapped her hands together and laughed in a taunting, merry way.

Even while she spoke, the falcon poised fluttering directly above the heron, and then, closing his wings, shot downward with lightning-like rapidity. But quick as was the descent, it was not quick enough, for the heron, anticipating the attack, swerved slightly, and the stroke missed; the falcon, unable at once to recover itself, descended fully fifty feet beneath the heron. Perceiving the disadvantage at which its enemy was placed, the beautiful white bird altered its course, and flew directly for the thick woods clothing a neighboring hill. It would have escaped but for the second falcon, that of Otho, which, having now attained a proper altitude, suddenly descended upon the heron, seizing it by the neck. For a few moments the birds struggled in mid-air, then the strength of the heron weakened, and still wildly fluttering its great, white wings, the two sank slowly to the ground. They had hardly fallen before Harold was at the spot. He found the falcon, still clinging to its prey, though the latter was struggling violently to free itself. Despatching the unlucky bird, he seized it by its long legs, and calling the victorious falcon to him turned back to the place where Otho and his beautiful cousin awaited him.

As you would naturally suppose, the young lady was not in a very amiable mood, at thus seeing her hopes of triumph so unexpectedly and completely overthrown. Her dark eyes flashed with anger, a line of white encircled her mouth, her brows contracted, and the whole expression of her countenance changed. Her disappointment was intensified by the hearty peal of laughter that broke from Otho, on beholding the turn of affairs which so unexpectedly raised him to the position of victor, while dashing the hopes of his cousin.

"Laugh you? laugh you?" cried she, "and yet if the heron had not swerved, even in the darting of my falcon, yours, yours, Otho, would have had a sluggard's dessert." The girl spoke bitterly, as though determined to rob her cousin of any pleasure he might feel in the gain he had made. Whatever discomposure he had shown in the opening of our story, had however, completely disappeared; his broad, strong face resuming its wonted calm and steadfast expression. Evidently to placate Serena, he replied,

"Undoubtedly, undoubtedly; the bird is yours, and you shall have it."

But his kind acquiescence was met only by an abrupt refusal. In silence the two rode forward in the direction of a swampy piece of woodland, where they hoped to continue their sport. The falcons had been returned to them, and with leathern hood over the head, sat silently perched, one upon the hand of the young girl, and the other upon that of the boy.

They had proceeded thus for some distance, when Otho slowly reined in his horse, and turning his head toward a large hill to his right, around whose base the highway ran, listened as though his attention had been caught by an unusual sound. Harold, the falconer, to whom we have before referred, had evidently heard the same sound, for he was seen running to the turn in the highway to enable him to gain a view of the road further on. The sound that had attracted the attention of the boy resembled the singing or shouting of many voices, though so faint and far off as to be scarce distinguishable, the roaring of the wind through the forests rendered it still more difficult to determine what the unusual noise was. A few moments later, however, all uncertainty was dispelled; in a lull of the wind, the sound of many voices singing came out strong and clear. That an unusual spectacle was rapidly drawing near was evident, for Harold, who had by this time gained the road, was seen beckoning to them in an excited manner with one hand, while in an equally excited way he pointed up the road with the other.

"Come, Serena," cried Otho, "let us see!"

"Go yourself, I come not at your bidding," was the haughty answer.

A slight flush overspread the boy's face, but silently ignoring the rude reply, he said,

"Come, come, let us see what has happened," and striking spurs into his horse's flanks, he galloped forward to the road. His companion followed slowly.

The sight that met the eyes of Otho filled him with utter wonder and astonishment. From the turn in the road, the highway could be seen for several miles as it ran smoothly down into a narrow valley lying at his feet crossed a noisy creek by a stone-bridge, and mounting an opposite range, followed the slope until lost in the shadows of distant forests. It was a vast advancing army. Like an enormous serpent, pursuing the windings of the road, descending into the valley and reaching away until the outlines of every figure was lost in a confused mass of human beings, it came forward steadily. The gleam of armor, the flash of swords, spears and battle-axes was no where to be seen. In all the long line, the boy could not detect the gleam of a single weapon. Yet he could plainly see mingling with the people on foot, a number of others mounted, while along the whole line gleamed and fluttered banners and ensigns of every conceivable hue and shape.

"Who are they, Harold?" inquired he of the falconer.

"I cannot tell, sir; such a sight I never beheld."

"Nor I, nor I," cried the other. "Thousands of them!"

"Tens of thousands," returned the falconer. "The line has no end. They come pouring out of yonder forest like a stream from the side of the mountain."

"Haste, Harold! haste! bid my lady Serena return to the castle. There may be danger in this, we know not of. Bid my mother beware. See that the draw-bridge is ready to be raised, and the portcullis lowered. Only yesterday, I heard the warden say, the chains were so eaten by rust that they might break at any moment. It would be bad indeed, if we were unable to close our gates,—such a horde as this!"

"And you, my young master?" inquired the faithful servant, turning to depart.

"I? Here I remain until they draw near enough for me to learn who and what they are; then I will follow you."

"But you have no armor!—you have no arms!"

"I need none. I will turn before they reach me. Fear not, Harold, my horse is fleet! But stay," he added, "take my falcon and give me your good oaken staff. It will serve better than an empty hand."

Harold did as he was commanded, and turned to depart, but had scarcely taken a dozen steps before he paused to call back:

"Have a care, my young master! Have a care! Your mother's sun rises and sets in you; and should any harm befall you, it would be her death. Think, sir, should I not remain? Two are better than one, though both unarmed."

"And leave my mother without warning? No, no, Harold! It is for you to return, and do it quickly. I will expose myself to no danger."

The falconer had gone but a few minutes before the tramping of the feet of the advancing host sounded on the bridge in the valley below. The song had ceased, and mingling with the continuous, uninterrupted beating of countless feet, came the low murmur of thousands of voices. Steadily eyeing the approaching multitude, Otho sat silently on his horse.

---

Copyrighted by Chas. G. Fisher, 1890.

To be Continued.

MAKE HOME A SCHOOL.

Make home an institution of learning. Provide books for the center table, and for the library of the family. See that all the younger children attend the best schools, and interest yourself in their studies. If they have the taste for thorough cultivation, but not the means to pursue it, if possible, provide for a higher education. Daniel Webster taught at the intervals of his college course, to aid an elder brother in the pursuit of a classical education, and a volume of his works is dedicated to the daughters of that brother, who early closed a brilliant career. Feel that an ignorant brother or sister will be a disgrace to your family, and trust not to the casual influence of the press, existing institutions, and the kind offices of strangers. If the family becomes, as it may be, an institution of learning, the whole land will be educated.

A MOTHER'S HEART.

We ought to watch closely the character of the memories we leave in our homes. One person has left this testimony: "Many a night, as I remember lying quietly in the little upper chamber, before sleep came on, there would be a gentle footstep on the stair, the door would noiselessly open and in a moment the well-known form, softly gliding through the darkness, would appear at my bedside. First, there would be a few pleasant inquiries of affection, which gradually deepened into words of counsel. Then, kneeling, head close to mine, her most earnest hopes and desires would flow forth in prayer. Her tears bespoke the earnestness of her desire. I seem to feel them yet where sometimes they fell on my face. The prayers often passed out of thought in slumber, and came not to mind again for years, but they were not lost. I willingly believe they were an invisible bond with heaven that secretly preserved me while I moved carelessly amid numberless temptations, and walked the brink of crime." Is it not worth while for every mother to try to weave such memories into the early years of her children's lives?

Youth's Department.

NOT YET,

My boy Bert with the dancing eyes,
Flushed and eager goes from play
Half a dozen times a day
Straight to where a red book lies
On the lowest library shelf,
Finds the page all by himself,
Where a lion is portrayed
Springing toward a shrieking maid;
Long he looks at this attraction,
Then remarks with satisfaction,
Flinging back his curls of jet;
"The lion hasn't got her yet!"

That was years and years ago;
Still the trembling little maid
In the red book is portrayed
Facing her terrible foe,
And my boy with dancing eyes
Views them now without surprise,
When my heart is full of fear,
Fancying there is trouble near,
And I dread what is to be,
Then he breaks out laughingly;
"Auntie, don't you fuss and fret;
The lion hasn't got you yet!"

—Ethelwyn Wetherald, in Wide Awake.

KILLING TIME.

"Oh dear!" sighed Tommy Dodd, "I wish I had something to do."

"Is it possible," asked Aunt Mary, that a boy of fourteen can find nothing to do? Has he mastered all his studies?"

"Oh, I guess I know a good deal!" said Tommy sulkily.

"And have you explored all the surrounding country within ten miles? Your uncle says this mountain and valley region is very rich in mineral and botannical treasures."

"I haven't traveled around very much," admitted Tommy reluctantly.

"Then, of course, you have put the hinges on the back gate, mended the horse trough, fixed the chicken coop, and done the ten or fifteen other jobs your father spoke about last Saturday?"

"No. I haven't."

"But I thought you said you had nothing to do?"

"Now, you're laughing at me, Aunt Mary."

"Well, isn't it laughable?"

"I don't think you understand me, Aunt Mary," said Tommy, earnestly, "I feel awful dull, and I want something to do—not exactly work, you know, but something that will interest me."

"Yes, I do understand you. You have got into a languid, listless way of thinking and working, until time hangs heavy on your hands. You lie back and dream of doing something great instead of doing something useful; you are always looking abroad for objects of interest, while you shut your eyes to the many beautiful and interesting objects close at hand. When you come of age you will come into a large fortune, and then you will spend your money killing time and doing really nothing."

"Oh, no, I won't!" he cried, a little angrily. "When I am a man"—

"The boy is father of the man," said Aunt Mary, quietly. "If you can find nothing to interest you now, while you are young and fresh, what will the world be to you when you are old? I hope you will find out, before it is too late, that the days are too short for busy men. Do you know that Newton, the great astronomer, after a life spent in perfect grind of work, sighed to think that he had accomplished so little?"

"Did he, though?"

"Yes, indeed; and he was only one of many. Mr. Edison, the great inventor, limits his hours of sleep to four or five daily, because he has so much to occupy his time. He never has to think how he can kill time."

"No, I suppose not," said the boy thoughtfully.

"Then there is the great Gladstone. He is more than eighty years of age, and you would think by this time he would have known everything worth knowing and want to take a rest. But he is the busiest man in England. Every day he studies and works and writes, and his only complaint is that life is too short for the work he wants to do."

"That's very strange," commented Tommy.

"No, it isn't. Nobody has really more time than he can use—he only thinks so. A busy man can find something to occupy every waking hour. Emerson, in one of his essays, wonders why people should be permitted to live who have more time than they want, and Pliny said of some dull, sleepy men, who had complained of having lost an evening by hearing an essay, that they were angry, not because they had lost an evening, but rather because they had been compelled to make use of it."

"Perhaps I am lazy," admitted Tommy, with an uneasy laugh.

"That is the best name for it," replied Aunt Mary, with a smile, "and you should begin right away to cure yourself. Commence to-day by doing everything you possibly can that needs doing. Work—work until you are tired out, and, as you work, you will think of something else to do when that job is finished. Try it for a week, and I warrant you will not find any necessity for killing time."

"I'll do it," said Tommy, resolutely; "and I'll start this very day."

"This very minute," corrected Aunt Mary.

"Yes, I mean minute. Here goes for the back gate."—Golden Days.

GLAD AND SORRY.

Little Cary had come in to see us as he often does, and was eating some sweetmeats we gave him, listening to the conversation of two or three people in the room.

They were telling about a neighbor who had been drinking and his horses ran away with him, throwing him off the wagon and hurting him very much.

Carey ate very slowly, then looking up he said very gravely, "I m glad my papa doesn't drink. I'm sorry for Georgie."

Georgie was the little son of the man we had been talking about. He often goes cold in winter because he is so poorly clad. He cannot go to church or Sunday-school because his father is too proud to let him take clothes as a gift. Would it not be better if Georgie's father was too proud to drink?

Dear children who have fathers who do not drink, do you ever thank God for this great blessing? And do you pity and pray for the poor little ones whose fathers are made unkind by drink?—Morning Light.

TOM'S GOLD DUST.

"That boy knows how to take care of his gold dust," said Tom's uncle often to himself, and sometimes aloud. Tom went to college, and every account they heard of him he was going ahead, laying a solid foundation for the future.

"Certainly," said his uncle, "certainly that boy, I tell you, knows how to take care of his gold dust."

"Gold dust! Where did Tom get gold dust? He was a poor boy. He had not been to California. He never was a miner. Where did he get his gold dust? Ah, he has seconds and minutes, and these are the gold dust of time—specks and particles of time which boys, girls, and grown-up people are apt to waste and throw away. Tom knew their value. His father had taught him that every speck and particle of time was worth its weight in gold, and his son took care of them as if they were. Take care of your gold dust.—Selected.

Pleasantries.

Miss Plessy: "Do you ever have tableuax vivants at your house?" "No. My wife is a dyspeptic and has to be very careful what she eats."

Mrs. Goslow: "And how did you enjoy Paris, Mrs. Quickly?" Mrs. Q.: "Oh, beyond imagination. Pa and me have got to be regular Parisites."

It is told of Abbe Liszt that on one of his concert tours through Germany he was tendered a banquet at a small town by his admirers. When it was found that thirteen were seated at the table the general embarrassment was checked by Liszt remarking:

"Do not be alarmed at such a trifle. I can eat for two persons."

NOTICE.

☞ Editorial Correspondence address to THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters pertaining to subscriptions and other business, address REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ No notice taken of anonymous communications.

For Terms, see page 11.

THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER,
907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 8, 1891.

A PROPOSITION.

The Epiphany of Christ is something different from His Incarnation. For the Word to enter into nature and tabernacle in the Flesh was one thing, but to make His presence manifest to men and get them to believe in it as a fact, or as an unerring truth, is quite another. There are many in our day who will not believe it at all, and by artful arguments try to misrepresent it, or set it aside. The whole life of Christ on earth was so arranged in the Divine mind as to show forth His glory. It was as a whole a manifestation or epiphany of what and who He was. As this was undeniably so, we make a proposition to our readers, which we believe will be of great advantage to them, and that is: That during this year we will study the life, the works and words of Christ as the months come and go, in historical order, from His birth to His ascension into heaven. We know that many are doing this now, and that this Christological way of looking to Christ is finding its way into our Sunday-schools,—to the unspeakable benefit of the rising generation. We have pursued this method for a number of years ourselves, and speaking from experience, we can say that Christ appears to us, each year in a new light, more precious, more exalted, more glorious, more human, more affectionate, and more concerned for his fellows than ever before. Hence we make the proposition at the right time—at the beginning of the New Year—, a favorable time for the formation of good resolutions, provided we are faithful in carrying them out.

THE YEAR 1890.

The year 1890 will take its place in history as a memorable one—a veritable annus mirabilis, perhaps. In addition to struggles and conflicts, some of its strides in the way of progress had no offsets and were pure gain to the world, without abatement or discount. We can refer here only to a few of them. In our hemisphere an important advance has been made towards the unification of all the republics in North and South America. Arbitration has been established as a permanent law or rule, no longer a mere expedient, and all difficulties between the respective governments will be settled by a Court of Appeal, when diplomatic methods fail. This arrangement has now become the code of International Law on our western continent. If it works well, as it no doubt will, it will extend over the old word at no distant day.—In connection with this new movement we may refer to the march of the railroad kings, who are laying their tracks from the great Republic of the North down to Patagonia. The iron rails will complete the good work which wise statesmen have inaugurated.—Africa has been opened to the world as it never was before by the safe return of Stanley to civilization. As a whole, it may be said that it has just been united to the family of nations.—Japan has now a constitutional form of government and many of the people vote for their own rulers.—The Emperor of Germany has gone out fishing and hunting, but at the same time in his trips, he has done what he could to promote peace among his fellow-rulers, so that Europe has had one more year of peace. He is a wise ruler himself, and may yet do more for Germany than Bismarck did in his day.—During this era of peace the Churches have been active in promoting the missionary cause and in many other good works. In this country large donations have been given by the wealthy to benevolent objects, to schools, colleges and other seminaries of learning.—The Presbyterians have faced the question of a revision of their standards like brave men, something long talked of, but now likely to be accomplished.—The Dutch Reformed and the German Reformed, still braver, have agreed to unite and work together as one Church.—But space does not allow us here to speak in detail of all the good things which the old year brought into our world. We can, therefore, only refer to the triumphs and practical results flowing from the science of electricity and to Koch's great discovery for the cure of tuberculosis, and, in some cases at least, of consumption. The latter has made a sensation throughout the world and very likely it will lead to other discoveries of a similar character, which will tend to arrest the ravages of disease and save many useful lives. For these and many other blessings we may well say:

Praise God from whom all blessings flow.

THE CIRCUMCISION OF CHRIST.

In the primitive Church the period before Christmas and Epiphany was observed as a festival of joy and rejoicing, when believers looked up and thanked God for the gift of His Son, or His advent into the world. The Incarnation was the theme of their contemplation and the source of their adoration. At the end of the first octave of days, they celebrated the Circumcision of Christ, which happening on New Year's Day, called forth another expression of gratitude and praise to God for His great goodness, mercy and love towards sinful men. Were these early Christians wise or unwise in adding a day like this to the Christian calendar? Many persons nowadays would answer this question promptly in the negative; but we are doubtful whether they are as wise, with all their advantages, as those who in the beginning planted the Christian Church. If the circumcision of Christ was of little or no account, as some wiseacres now imagine, why, we ask, was it put on record by the pen of inspiration? Without any doubt, we affirm, it was placed there for the benefit not only of the Jews but also of the Gentiles, for Christians generally in all ages. The more we think about it the more we will see how profitable it is for fit doctrine, for reproof, for correction, and for instruction in righteousness. Christ must become a man in all respects, just as you are, sin excepted. He must be a Jew, as well as an individual, be brought into the Church as it then existed, and be made subject from His earliest infancy to all its requirements. This required obedience on His part, and of the strictest kind, as an offset and a condemnation to the disobedience of Adam and of all his offspring. This, and this alone, enabled Him to accomplish His great work on earth. It made Him well-pleasing in the sight of His Father, of which we have the proof when He submitted to another ordinance, to baptism in the Jordan, in order to fulfill all righteousness. The baptism of children, as we know, has taken the place of circumcision, and is the substance or reality, which the Jewish rite prefigured. The fidelity, therefore, of Joseph and Mary in placing the infant Christ in right relation to the Church and the divine covenant is an expressive example for all Christian parents to go and do likewise. Moreover, it would be well for those who regard the festival of the Circumcision of Christ as an old dead relic of the past to look around in their congregations, or denominations, and inquire how many little innocents have not as yet been received into holy covenant with God. We know that there are many such in this country, who in their artless simplicity seem to look up into their parents' faces and ask for the baptismal blessing. For the benefit of all, we may add, that the Circumcision of Christ is suggestive of that circumcision of the heart, which, as St. Paul says, we all ought to strive after.

INFANT SALVATION.

For many ages, it was a doctrine held by theologians generally in the Christian Church that the heathen and all unbaptized children would be lost. This was the case both in the Roman Catholic and Lutheran Churches, and many Calvinistic divines in their own way taught the same thing. The latter laid less stress on the outward form of baptism, but very much on the doctrine of divine election. Adopting the dogma of reprobation, according to which a part of the human race are predestinated to eternal condemnation, thus adding a new feature to the old doctrine of St. Augustine, they were led by their mechanical logic to believe that a part at least of the infantile race were predestinated to be lost forever. The conclusion arrived at was not anything specially novel or startling at the time, as it was held by other branches of the Christian Church as well as by Reformed, although from different points of view. We have, therefore, always thought that Dr. Krauth was one-sided in his famous article in the January number of the Mercersburg Review, 1874, in which with a vast array of learning he tries to show, versus Dr. Hodge, that infant damnation was derived from Calvin's doctrine of predestination. It would have been better if he had acknowledged the corn and admitted that we were all in the same boat, Lutherans as well as Reformed and other Christians. Zwingli seemed to be the only Reformer who thought that all infants would be saved together with some good, pious heathen, for which he was marked out as a rationalist and soundly abused. Protestants, generally, no less than Arminians, have veered around to his standpoint at the present day.

At the time we read Dr. Krauth's article we noticed that his quotations from Calvin's writings were comparatively meagre, and not sufficient, as we thought, to show that Calvin himself taught the horrible tenet of infant damnation. Dr. Hodge did not, in his day, attempt to reply to such strictures on Calvinism, but now an exhaustive article appears in the last number of the Presbyterian and Reformed Review from the pen of Professor Shields of Princeton College, in which by numerous extracts from Calvin's works, he proceeds to show that Calvin himself did not hold the unfeeling doctrine referred to, however it may have been with some of his followers. The professor with much learning and ability proves, as it seems to us, that the few utterances of Calvin on the subject have been misunderstood or wrenched from their proper connections. Accordingly, if this be so, and there seems to be no room for doubt of it, it is all so much the better for theologians of the present day. It is just what might be expected of such a writer as Calvin, who always fearless, was nevertheless the most cautious and careful in the use of language among the Reformers—wonderfully bound to the clear teachings of the Bible.

GERMAN PHILOSOPHY.

A somewhat amusing incident took place some time ago in an Episcopal convention or Congress, in Philadelphia. It was a popular meeting, and on such occasions popular addreses are usually delivered; but, according to the paper, among the rest a somewhat different paper was read. A Mr. Sterret, as he was called, no doubt Dr. Sterret, the author and professor of theology,—had prepared a learned and philosophical essay on the ground of Certainty or Certitude in our opinions or doctrines over against the scepticism of the day. He was an admirer of Hegel and made free use of the Hegelian philosophy on what he had to say. We have no doubt his was an interesting and valuable paper; but the Philadelphia audience could not appreciate it, hung their heads, tried to be respectful, and wished he was through with it. He tried to relieve them in some degree by omitting portions of his dissertation and read it, as no doubt for the benefit of the few. The fact is of some interest as showing how impressible German philosophy is. It cannot be kept down not at home: and shows itself, as it here seems, even among the Episcopalians. It is bound, if we may judge from present appearance, to spread over the whole earth. Like all things earthly or human, it embodies much valuable truth, but it has taken up into it serious error, or at least it tends in that direction. Its great architects erected mighty structures, but they did not always build wisely. Hegel, it is said, adhered to to the orthodox Lutheran faith, and when he came to die, wished that he had spent his life in the Christian ministry; but many of his professed followers became open unbelievers, and did much harm to his school and memory. Others studied his works with much benefit in quickening their Christian faith. Dr. Sterret's address is to be published with the others delivered on the occasion that called it forth, and we would not be surprised if more than one thoughftul reader should regard it as the star paper of the series.

Synodical Editors.

(Elected by the Synods.)

Eastern,	REV. JONATHAN H. PANNEBECKER.
Pittsburgh,	" DAVID B. LADY.
Potomac,	" J. SPANGLER KIEFFER, D. D.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY BUILDING AT LANCASTER.

The Theological Seminary at Lancaster, Pa., is the oldest and best equipped theological school of our Church. This school of prophets always lay near the hearts of the people. It is here where their faithful and beloved pastors received that training as men of God, by which they are able to bring the light and comfort of the blessed Gospel into so many hearts. This institution has the sympathies and prayers of the devoted members of the Church, and it has always received the tangible support which it called for. The people will not permit the fountain of so much good to so many persons suffer for anything needful.

This Seminary has proven itself very efficient in training young men for the ministry. Its sons are the peers of those of any seminary. Their earnest devotion to the Master's work, they prove as from year to year its graduates accept calls to pastorates on the salaries of unskilled laborers while they work harder than the best paid workmen among skilled laborers.

The problem of life is becoming more complex each year. Every new invention and every new discovery places men into new relations to each other. The world advances with rapid strides, and as it speeds along new questions of life are born which call for prompt answers. Those to whom the people look for these answers must be ready to give them. They can do this only when their training as counsellors has been well up with the times. All our schools must meet these demands, and none more so than our theological schools. Christian theology has always been the lamp which shone deeper into the mysteries of life than any other knowledge. The Reformed Church, the world over, has never allowed herself to come behind in keeping this, her lamp burning brightly. In this country she early took her advanced position, and has maintained it well. The time has now come when she must take strides further forward. To meet this demand the three Synods, whose property the Lancaster Seminary is, resolved to create three new professorships. The Potomac Synod has outstripped her sisters in the race, and has secured its endowment and stands at the Seminary gates with its new professor, a most excellent man, ready to go to work. All went well to this point. The Seminary since its removal from Mercersburg has enjoyed (?) the hospitality of the colleges. The quarters assigned it were never comfortable, but it was the best that could be done. Of late years the number of students in the college has so increased and the college has branched out into so many directions of usefulness, that every nook and corner in the large building is occupied. Some rooms are doing double duty. There is no room for the new professor to meet his classes. What is the new professor to do? There is but one answer, and the Church will give it,—a new seminary building. The Church will not delay in providing this, because she knows that she cannot afford it. The good her membership has derived and is now deriving from the faithful band of men who have gone out from this school, and the great cry for ministers from hundreds of places, will speedily raise walls and towers which will be a fitting test of appreciation. The Reformed Church has always responded promptly when she was properly appealed to, and she will do it again.

Committees have been appointed by the Synods, to whom this matter has been referred. These brethren are in earnest and are actively arranging such preliminaries as are necessary before they will enter upon the work practically.

Here is the opportunity of a century for one or more of our wealthy families, not only to immortalize themselves, but to become a source for good from which will flow a perennial stream of blessing. Our Seminary must have a permanent home, worthy of the great Church to which it belongs, and worthy of itself as the theological school whose old Christological theology has become the new theology of every living, wide-awake theological seminary of the leading Protestant Churches in our country.

J. H. P.

For Reformea Church Messenger.

OUR ALMANAC.

I have just seen the excellent new almanac. The January page reminds me of a war story: During the war, when the army made a new advance, the Government officials wanted to see how it looked at the new front. Secretary Chase, on one such occasion, wanted a special service done by a "contraband," who agreed to do it for "good money."

"Here's a greenback," said Judge Chase, handing the darkey a new note, which had on it a picture of the Secretary. The surprised freedman took the money, looked it over very carefully, and then, eyeing the giver with wonder and pleasure, exclaimed:

"Why, my marster! You'se ole Greenbacks, hi'self!"

And so here: we have the "Messenger-man" himself twenty-eight years after Dr. Harbaugh first became "ole Almanacs."

Thereby hangs another very short tale. It was felt that we ought to have a Church almanac long before one was made. Just as a similar long-felt want had induced us to undertake the publication of the first Sunday-school paper, The Pastor's Helper," 1859, so, it was resolved, twenty-eight years ago, to issue an almanac. And we overtured to Dr. Harbaugh to join us in the enterprise. At first, he declined. Then we individually began the preparation for the first number. Shortly, however, he reconsidered, and before the work went much further, he undertook the publication. The Church at large is the better for twenty-eight annual almanacs. Who will not wish it success? It is a blessing to every family where it makes its yearly sojourn. Give it a greeting.

R.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

COLLEGE OF NORTHERN ILLINOIS.

Editor REFORMED MESSENGER: Permit me to write a few lines for your many readers concerning our College at Dakota, Illinois. After one year's rest, our school was re-opened, September 9, 1890, with nine students. December 18, 1890. A number of the members of the Board of Trustees and members of Illinois Classis visited the College and found that the number of students had increased to twenty-seven, with the promise of a few more after the holy days.

The members of the Board expressed themselves well-pleased with the increased number of students, the manner of hearing recitations and the management of the school. Professor H. L. Beam is well-spoken of by the students and the citizens of Dakota. The friends of the College have greatly encouraged the trustees, by their favorable remarks in the choice of Rev. Harry L. Beam, A.M., as Professor and President of the College. The friends say, the "selection was a good one." "The right man in the right place." We feel that confidence is being restored in the community by the zeal and tact of our newly-elected Professor and that the prospects are growing brighter for the success of our school at Dakota, Illinois.

About four hundred miles to Tiffin and seven hundred to Wichita, Kansas, is still quite a distance for parents to send their sons and daughters to College, and so we feel the need of just such a school in Northern Illinois, and we hope the members of the Reformed Church and the friends of education will send their sons and danghters and give such aid that will insure success to our educational interest at Dakota.

Our President is a worker and his work is telling; but that he may work more effectually and give practical illustrations, he has need of instruments and implements wherewith he may be able to make the needed experiments for the benefit of his students. His wants are not extravagant, and when he makes his wants known to the Church, I hope they may be complied with by some friend or friends of the College. Rev. Frank Wetzel, pastor of the Dakota charge, is aiding with his timely counsel and experience as a teacher, and so we hope the Church will rejoice with us in our success thus far, and give us timely aid in the future.

REV. H. BAIR, Pres. of the B. of T.

Mankind! It is a great thing when they aim to be divine, but it is a sad sight when they are satisfied with being men only: that is to say, in being all that is beyond expression—poor, wretched, intriguing and false—which is most painful to look at. Yet unfortunately so common.—Landriot.

Poetry.

WHEN DAYLIGHT DAWNS.

BY VIRGINIA B. HARRISON.

Now daylight dawns, and praises spring
From every song bird's throat!
While, veil-like, over mountain tops
The mists of morning float.

Dear God, all through the night thine eye
Hath watched the sick and sad;
In pity smile on them, and make
Thy suffering children glad.

Keep thou the pure still pure; and should
Some wayward wanderer stray
In dangerous paths, to save him, Lord,
Stretch forth Thy hand to-day.

Then, when this new triumphant sun
Sinks in the golden west—
When stars shine out, and every bird
Flies to its sheltered nest,

Draw nearer to us, God of Love,
Bend down Thy pitying face,
And in Thine everlasting arms
Fold us in close embrace.

—The Independent.

Selections.

When you pray to God, ask great things of Him.—St. Ambrose.

Love's secret is always to be doing things for God, and not to mind because they are very little ones.—F. W. Faber.

All-Gracious! grant to those who bear
A mother's charge, the strength and light
To guide the feet that own their care
In ways of Love and Truth and Right.

—William Cullen Bryant.

Man cannot reflect the Creator, unless he puts himself in with Him. Fools that we are! If we wish a mirror to reflect the sun do we turn it towards the earth?—J. de Maistre.

When we have learned to offer up every duty connected with our situation in life as a sacrifice to God, a settled employment becomes just a settled habit of prayer.—Thomas Erskine.

Above is God, come joy or ill,
Come life or death, come want and woe,
Changeless His love exists, and still
Boundless His great compassions flow.
O people, by His mercy crowned,
Through thy full lives His praises sound!

Every promise (of God) is built upon four pillars—God's justice or holiness which will not suffer Him to deceive; His grace or goodness, which will not suffer Him to forget; His truth, which will not suffer Him to change; and His power which make Him able to accomplish.—Salter.

Our eyes are on the future, so we fail
To heed the little stumbling-blocks along our way,
That fret our own and neighbor's feet; we say,
What do small deeds avail?
We dream of coming years that shall be fair
With fruitful harvests, though we sow no seed
Of toil and self-denial, prayer and kindly deed;
And time goes unaware.
O dreamer, wake and work! thy place is best
For thee; the passing hour alone is thine;
Do what thou canst do, and no more repine;
Work, and so earn thy rest!

Science and Art.

Every year a layer of the entire sea, fourteen feet thick, is taken up into the clouds. The winds bear their burden into the land, and the water comes down in rain upon the fields, to flow back through rivers.

Selenium is not a metal, but belongs to the sulphur group of elements. Its electrical conductivity varies according to the amount of light falling upon it, just as the chemical relations of silver are altered by the same means. By this power, Prof. Bell was enabled to construct an optical telephone, and actually transmitted words and sentences between two distant points which were not connected in any way except by a beam of light, which faithfully carried the vibrations of his voice to a selenium disk, by which they were transformed into electric energy, and reproduced in an ordinary telephone. Whether we shall ever be able to see our friends at a distance, as we now talk with them, is exceedingly problematical; but, if we ever do so, it will doubtless be through this mysterious connection between light, electricity, and the element selenium.——Popular Science News.

Items of Interest.

The humane Princess of Wales has given notice that no material for wearing apparel need be submitted for her or her daughters' inspection on which birds are used for ornamentation.

The Ocean Grove Association reports receipts the past year of $136,000 and a surplus of $59,100. Over a thousand religious services were held. A new auditory is to be built to seat 10,000.

A negro of Pine Bluff, Ark., owns fourteen miles of street-car track, which, with its equipments, is valued at $250,000. He is the only colored man in the world who is the sole owner of a street railway.

Last Monday Sitting Bull's band of 150 warriors, led by Big Foot, surrendered to Colonel Sumner, who, with 200 soldiers, surrounded them, near Standing Rock, North Dakota. They were making for the Bad Lands.

John W. Young, son of the late Brigham Young, has purchased 3,000 000 acres of land in northern Mexico and 10,000 Mormons will colonize on it, their object being to find a place where they can practice polygamy unmolested.

According to the Living Church Almanac for 1891, the Protestant Episcopal Church has 4,163 clergy, 299 candidates for orders, 2,330 parishes and missions, and 508,292 communicants. The number of baptisms last year was 61,665, of which nearly 47,000 were of infants. The contributions for the year are $12,754,767.

A year from next March the railroad now building from Jaffa to Jerusalem will be completed, and tourists will then be whisked away from the coast to Jerusalem in two or three hours, a journey that is now made by camel or in diligences over a horrible road. The money required to build the line is in the hands of Paris bankers, who have just forwarded the second installment of the funds to the contractors.

The Pike's Peak railway will be completed to the summit late this autumn. The construction of this road has been difficult, as only the acclimatized can labor at an altitude of fourteen thousand feet, and the work of an ordinary laborer is said to be impossible until he has spent at least two months expanding his lungs so as to accustom them to the rarefied air. The roadway has to be made with the aid of burros, or small donkeys, as horses and carts were unavailable on the rugged and irregular lines of the snow-capped peak. Hundreds of feet above the timber line, immersed in clouds, rain, snow and sleet a good part of the time, the work was continued during last winter.

Hints and Recipes.

Salt should never be added to new milk when cooking, as it will cause it to curdle.

To prevent cake adhering to the pan when baked, scatter a little flour over the greased surface before pouring in the dough.

It is said that if the hands are rubbed on a stick of celery after peeling onions, the disagreeable smell will be entirely removed.

Wood ashes put in the water and poured in vessels retaining odors of onions, cabbages, or fish, will entirely destroy them.

Strong muriatic acid, applied with a cloth, and the spot washed thoroughly with water, is recommended to remove ink-stains from boards.

Farm and Garden.

A good way to utilize broken glass and crockery ware is to pound it up for the birds. It will cure indigestion sooner than any medicine that can be given, and the hen that is well supplied with such material will be less liable to disease. It is the sharp, cutting edges that enable the hen to grind her food. Round gravel is of no use. Don't be afraid of glass. Pound it to the size of wheat, and the gizzard will attend to the rest. Keep the hens supplied with all they desire.—F. A. Mortimer.

An excellent and clean fertilizer for all kinds of house plants is to add a teaspoonful of superphosphate to one quart of water. Stir well, and add one tablespoonful of saltpetre and a gill of soap-suds. Make fresh mixture every two or three days. Use it for moistening around the roots of plants in the pots. It is also an excellent wash for the leaves of plants if the superphosphate is omitted. It is plant food of the best kind, and the plants will grow and thrive fully as well as if supplied with liquid manure.

Books and Periodicals.

Any of the books here noticed can be had through our Publication House, 907 Arch Street.

BOSTON HOMILIES. Short Sermons on the International Sunday-school Lessons for 1891. By the members of the Alpha Chapter of the Convocation of Boston University. First Series. New York: Hunt & Eaton; Cincinnati: Cranston & Stowe. $1.25. Pp. 408.

This volume is designed to furnish Sunday-school teachers and older scholars with brief exegetical and illustrative studies of the Sunday-school lessons for the year 1891. A helpful volume and fully carries out its design.

INTRODUCTION TO PHILOSOPHY. An Inquiry after a Rational System of Scientific Principles in Relation to Ultimate Reality. By George Trumbull Ladd. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. 1890. Pp. ix. and 426. Price $3.

The reader will find this book all that it purports to be. It was written especially for advanced students in the higher institutions of learning with a view to introducing them to the whole domain of philosophy. It takes a comprehensive survey of the entire field; and while it embodies a definite philosophic system, it is no attempt to work out such a system in its details. The purpose is to ascertain the fundamental scientific principles which underlie all philosophic thought. Hence it discusses such questions as these: What is Philosophy? What are its sources, and its relation to the particular sciences, especially to Psychology? In what spirit and by what method should it be studied? What are the attitudes the mind assumes toward the problems of Philosophy? What are the divisions of Philosophy? After disposing of these preliminary questions, the book passes in review the Theory of Knowledge, Metaphysics, the Philosophy of Nature and Mind, Ethics, Æsthetics, and the Philosophy of Religion, and closes suitably with a chapter on Tendencies and Schools in Philosophy. The name of the author guarantees the excellence of his work. He is already well known for his labors in the sphere of philosophy. His Physiological Psychology, to mention nothing else, has won for him a wide reputation as a scholar and a thinker. Every page of the present book witnesses to his learning. His acute criticisms of the various theories he brings before his readers show that he is able to think independently for himself. And while we are constrained at many points to differ from his conclusions, we have no hesitation in saying that this work is one of the ablest in the department of Philosophy that has yet issued from the American press.

ALDEN'S MANIFOLD CYCLOPEDIA. Vols. XXIV. and XXV.

This work is now progressing at a rapid pace. Of the forty volumes promised, only fifteen remain to be issued, and these will make their appearance in the course of the next year. This Cyclopedia is one of the great literary undertakings of the time, and has deservedly met with extraordinary success. It supplies a popular need, not only because its price brings it within the reach of the masses, but more especially because it furnishes just such information as the general reader needs, and in a very convenient form. It is particularly well adapted for use in the family and the school, as it covers the whole field of knowledge—history, biography, geography, science, art, philosophy and religion. Hardly any topic can be mentioned that is not handled in this admirable work, and in such a way that the matter is brought down to date. It is, of course, not a work for specialists, like the Encyclopedia Britannica. It is intended for the people, and in this view it is deserving of the highest commendation.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE for January contains—The Light that Failed, In an old Garden, The New Spanish Inquisition, Christmas Gifts, "I Remember —," Perversity, The State of Washington, Anacreontic, The Road Movement, "Friend Olivia," With the Wits.

J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia. Price 25 cts.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE, January, 1891. Analysis of Contents. Frontispiece:—"War—war he 'quainted with enny of 'em?" The Outlook in Southern California, School-boys, London Music Halls, Dream-land, In the "Stranger People's" Country, At the Casa Napoleon, Impressions of Peru, The Awakening, Another Chapter of My Memoirs—How I became a Journalist, Sleep's Conquest, Atonement, A Modern Legend, Saint Anthony, Unlucky Speeches, Editorial Departments, Monthly Record of Current Events.

Harper Bros., New York.

POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY. Edited by W. J. Youmans. Contents for January New Chapters in the Warfare of Science,

XI. From Babel to Comparative Philology, The Peopling of America, The Development of American Industries since Columbus, II. Iron Mills and Puddling-Furnaces, Star Streams and Nebulæ, The Aryan Question and Prehistoric Man, The Storage of Electricity, Elementary Botany in General Education, The Intelligence of Cats, Predisposition, Immunity, and Disease, The Decline of Rural New England, The Principles of Decoration, Sketch of Elisha Mitchell, with Portrait; Correspondence; Editor's Table; Literary Notices; Popular Miscellany; and Notes.

Published by D. Appleton & Co., 1, 3 & 5 Bond street, New York.

The Atlantic Monthly for January contains—Noto: An Uenxplored Corner of Japan, I.-V., A New University Course, The House of Martha, XIV.—XVII., Compulsory Arbitration, Snowbirds, Two Philosophers of the Paradoxical, First Paper: Hegel; In Darkness, Felicia, XIII., A Plea for Trust, An Inherited Talent, Individualism in Education, Kismet and the King, Boulangism and the Republic, The Lesson of the Pennsylvania Electric, A Swiss Farming Village, A Novelist of the Jura, Holiday Books, Comments on New Books, and The Contributors' Club.

Houghton, Mifflin & Company, Boston, Mass.

The twenty-fifth volume of the Magazine of American History is opened with a most attractive January number. The varied contributions to this periodical are always timely and chosen with great taste and discretion. The leading illustrated paper for the month is "John Ericsson, the Builder of the Monitor." Then follows—The Bladensburg Duelling Ground, Dr. Lyman Hall, Governor of Georgia in 1783, and signer of the Declaration of Independence, Isaac Jogues, A. D. 1636, Original Treasury Accounting Office, Count de Fersen's Private Letters to his Father, 1780—1781, The United States Flag, and Capital Punishment in 1749. The several departments are quite up to the high standard of this magazine.

Subscription price $5.00 a year. Published at 743 Broadway, New York City.

Littell's Living Age. The number of The Living Age for January 3 contains—Lavoisier, Contemporary Review; Marcia, by W. E. Norris, conclusion, Murray's Magazine; Provincial France, Quarterly Review; George Eliot and her Neighborhood, Gentleman's Magazine; My Second Marriage, Temple Bar; Chateau Malbrouk, National Review; The Omnibus, Speaker. Poetry and Miscellany.

$8.00 per year. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

Marriages.

December 24th, 1890, by Rev. N. J. Miller, at the Reformed Parsonage, Manchester, Md., Mr. Andrew M. Miller, oi Lineboro, Md., to Miss Sarah E. Albaugh, of Alesia, Md.

Near State College, Centre county, Pa., December 23rd, 1890, by Rev. A. A. Black, Mr. M. J. D. Hubler to Miss Susannah B. Bloom.

At St. John's Reformed Parsonage, Lebanon, Pa., December 16th, 1890, by Rev. Geo. B. Resser, Mr. Robert L. Gerhart, of Lebanon, to Miss Mary Scholl, of Mount Aetna.

In Trinity Reformed church, Marysville, Pa., on Thursday evening, at 8.30, by Rev. J. David Miller, Mr. William M. Hess to Miss Katie F. Gettys, of Marysville.

On Christmas Day, 2 P.M., at the home of the bride's parents, Tyersport, by Rev. F. J. Mohr, assisted by Rev. J. Kehm, J. Lewis Fluck, A.B., a member of the Senior Class of the Theological Department of Ursinus College, to Miss Laura L. Ehl, Principal of the Schools at Trumbauersville, Pa.

In St. John's Reformed church, Williamsport, Pa., by Rev. Lewis Robb, pastor, assisted by Rev. A. L. Yundt, of the Lutheran church, Mr. W. A. Carl to Miss Magdaline Furman, eldest daughter of Elder J. W. Furman, on December 24th, 1890, both of Williamsport, Pa.

In their home, at Williamsport, Pa., on December 24th, 1890, by the same, Mr. Jacob Hornberger to Miss Hellena Wittenbach, both of Williamsport, Pa.

Deaths.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than two hundred and fifty words.

Died.—Saturday. November 15th, brought a large number of mourning and sympathizing friends, relatives and acquaintances to the residence of W. W. and Cochran Smith's, of Irwin, to pay the last tribute of respect to a noble and estimable young woman, Mrs. Maggie J. Smith.

Little did we think, when we laid to rest, her kind, amiable and affectionate niece, June 23rd, when she was present in all her vigor, health, youth, beauty and freshness, trying to comfort her weak, delicate and almost heart-broken sister, mourning for a dear, loving obedient daughter,—yes, little did we think that she would be the next to "cross the river," and join the host whom no man can number, there to meet her dear sister Annie, her tender niece Belle, and the happy myriads in the presence of Jesus, awaiting the resurrection morn, when all the redeemed shall come forth in the likeness of Christ's resurrection body "clothed in white robes, with palms in their hands," to join the heavenly host and ascrible all blessing and glory and honor and praise to whom it is due.

The writer, when ministering to her in spiritual things, found her patient in the midst of suffering, and in tones so soft, kind, sonorons and beautiful, said: "Couldn't you come to see me again?" She said to her kind, attentive sister: "There is a home across the river for us all as long as we live."

Can we measure the depth of meaning in such death-bed language? No. Her devoted, affectionate sister asked whether she was ready for that "home."—"Yes, at any moment," was the contented reply.

Oh, the value of such dying testimony to a dying world. Yes, are we ready to answer the summons when it comes, and like this dear sister, bid adieu to near and dear ones without a complaint, without a tear?

She bid her husband a loving good-bye, and kindly said, "Live a Christian life." When strength was failing she was heard to sing as best she could in her weakness:

"O for a thousand tongues to sing
My great Redeemer's praise!"

The accomplished orchestra of Irwin sang this beautiful hymn at the close of the impressive funeral service, as the last tribute of honor, love and respect to the departed sister before leaving the beautiful new sanctuary, in which she delighted to dwell.

The words of the text appropriate for the occasion were from Matt. 26: 45, "Sleep on now and take your rest;" also Prov. 3: 24, "When thou liest down thou shalt not be afraid; yea, thou shalt lie down, and thy sleep shall be sweet."

Maggie J. Muffly was born November 26, 1862; baptized in infancy, and March 29, 1883, by profession of faith in Christ became a member of Zion's Valley Reformed church.

She was married to Mr. W. W. Smith August 11, 1887, with whom she lived peaceably, devotedly and faithfully until she was called up higher. She always disapproved of evil in all its forms and was loved by all who knew her. Sleep on now, Maggie Smith, "Thy sleep shall be sweet." F. E. L.

Died—Worthville lost its oldest and one of its most respected citizens in the death of Daniel Geist, which occurred November 15th, 1890, he having attained to the great age of 81 years, 4 months and 29 days.

Fifty-six years ago Mr. Geist came from Northumberland county to the then wilds of Jefferson connty. He purchased a large tract of land in and around Worthville, including a mill-site. Having learned the trade of wheel-wright while yet a boy, he erected the mill which is still standing and in operation and in which he held an interest until his death. He built a number of other mills in several counties, a number of which he owned and operated. He also engaged in the lumber trade, contracted to put up buildings, and gave some attention to farming.

Many of his relatives and friends were induced by Mr. Geist to leave their homes in the thickly settled east, and seek their fortune among the pine and hemlock of Jefferson county. Thus there came to be a place known as Geist's settlement, and the village he laid out was called Geisttown until the year 1854, when it was changed to Worthville, the name of the post-office.

Mr. Geist was identified with all the pubiic interests of the community. He exerted a greater influence over the morals, and was perhaps more generally esteemed and beloved than any other man in the village. He commanded respect by reason of his gentle disposition and superior intelligence. Having had only the very meager school advantages of seventy-five years ago, he yet acquired a vast store of knowledge by reading books and papers. He was conversant with the main facts in history, the law of the country, and the discoveries in science.

But this good man is to be remembered especially for his faithful, earnest Christian life, and his labors in behalf of the church. He was not long in Jefferson county until he felt the need of the church of his fathers. Among his first works was the building of a house of worship. He was the contractor for the building of St. John's church, four miles from Worthville, to which he was also the principal contributor. In the course of time he saw the need of a church in Worthville, and again he was the builder and the chief support of the enterprise. These two congregations of the Reformed church owe much to the zeal and devotion of this one man. He filled the several offices of the church; for many years he served as an elder, frequently representing his charge at Classis and Synod.

His widow, four sons and two daughters survive him, all of which are members in the church he loved.

Few men in private life occupy a larger share in the affections of all acquaintances. Father Geist will be missed in many places among men, but we believe he was like those of whom it was said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."
S. T. W.

Died.—On the 7th of August, at her home, near Charlestown, Jefferson county, W. Va., Mrs. Catharine Middlekauff, widow of the late Samuel Middlekauff, aged 74 years, 1 month and 3 days.

The subject of the above notice was for many years a member of the Reformed church. She lived the life of faith and died in peace. Her children and friends have in her a precious example of Christian piety, and while they sorrow indeed, they "sorrow not as others who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him."
A Friend.

Died.—In Harris township, Centre county, Pa., December 4, 1890, Mr. Samuel Spare, aged 82 years, 10 months and 15 days.

THE ALMANAC

FOR THE

Reformed Church in the United States

—TWENTY-EIGHTH ISSUE—

FOR 1891.

We are ready now to receive orders for our Almanac for 1891, at the following rates:

100 Copies, per express,	$5.00
50 " "	2.75
12 " "	.75
1 Copy, Postpaid,	.12

When to be sent by mail 18 cents per dozen must be added for postage.

Also,

WESTERN ALMANAC

At the same prices as above.

GERMAN ALMANAC.

12 Copies, 90 cts.
Postage, 18 cts.
Single Copies, Postpaid, 12 cts.

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia.

Business Department.

TERMS:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage free. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.

No paper disc ontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrearages are paid.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made before the date transpires.

When the address of a paper is to be changed, the OLD and the NEW should be given.

☞Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

☞We do make mis takes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

☞Remittances snould be made payable by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, or Registered Letter to the order of The Reformed Church Publication House, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHAS. G. FISHER.

ADVERTISING RATE,

10 Cents Per Agate Line

Each insertion (fourteen lines to an inch).

Special Notices, set solid, double the price of display per counted line.

Reading Notices, leaded, three times the price of display per counted line.

Subject to the following Discounts:

FOR TIME.		FOR SPACE.
2 insertions......	5 per ct.	100 lines.........	5 per ct.
4 "	......10 "	250 "	.........10 "
8 "	......15 "	500 "	.........20 "
13 "	......20 "	750 "	.........30 "
20 "	......25 "	1,000 "	.........40 "
26 "	......30 "	1,500 "	.........45 "
39 "	......35 "	2,000 "	.........50 "
52 "	......40 "
No advertisement of less than 5 lines inserted at time rates on a contract for variable space.		To be used within one year.

Advertisements discontinued before completion of order, either by direction of advertiser or for non-payment, shall be paid for at regular rates for the advertising done.

An advertiser may use either scale or discounts, but cannot combine them. An advertiser is entitled to the highest discount which the entire amount of advertising done by him in any one year will secure.

Address all communications about advertising to

The Religious Press Association,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE NEW BOOK.

IN OLDEN DAYS BEYOND THE SEA.

Translated from the German, to which are added Introductory and Closing Parts,

BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

An interesting book, giving a thrilling account of the trials and persecutions of those who were true to their faith in "olden days beyond the sea." Pages 305. Illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of retail price, $1.25.

Address,

Reformed Church Publication House,
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK,

"In Olden Days Beyond the Sea,"

AND

THE MESSENGER.

To any one sending us two new subscribers for The Messenger and $4.00, we will send a copy of the above book postpaid.

To an old subscriber for The Messenger, remitting $2.75, we will give credit for a year's subscription and send a copy of the above book, postpaid.

Address

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch Street,
Philadelphia.

Miscellaneous.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

DEDICATION OF TRINITY CHURCH, ALTOONA, PA.

Sunday, December 21st, 1890, became a memorable day in the history of Trinity mission from the fact that it was their first Sunday's worship in their new church. For just two years, from the date of its organization, did this congregation worship in a Grand Army Hall on a third story. The dedication service was held in the morning. Rev. Lloyd E. Coblentz, the pastor, was assisted in this service by Revs. A. A. Black, of Boalsburg, Pa., D. S. Dieffenbacher, of Altoona, Pa., and J. W. Pontius, of Martinsburg, Pa. Rev. Black preached the sermon at the morning service. His text was Ps. 61 : 4.

In the afternoon at half-past two o'clock Children's Day services were held. Rather late in the year for this service, we know, but it was the best we could do when there was not sufficient room in our former place of worship. Superintendent George L. Freet and Rev. Pontius made appropriate addresses. The remainder of the service was almost entirely in the hands of the children. Their offering, which they had been saving especially for this service, amounted to eighty-one dollars and twenty three cents.

Rev. Pontius preached the sermon at the evening service. His text was Ps. 84: 7. Thus did Trinity mission spend its first Sunday in the comfortable lecture-room of its new church. The reader can have some idea of the relief that our present facilities for worship afford, especially to the aged, when he is reminded that forty-two is the number of steps which he could have counted before he reached our old place of worship in the G. A. R. hall. And then, that he can gain access to our present room by either one or six easy steps. Our recollections for our former place of worship shall ever be fondly cherished because of the great kindness and real spirit of helpfulness given us by the members of Post 468, G. A. R. And then, too, the first two years of the history of our mission are very closely associated with those decorated walls, which no longer stood far enough apart to accommodate our own number, to say nothing of inviting the mother congregation to be present and to join a service with us as she did on our dedication day.

A word about how we are trying to secure for ourselves a comfortable and neat church. Trinity Mission was organized December 21st, 1888, with sixty-five members. To-day it has one hundred and eighty-seven. In March, 1889, the congregation bought a site suitable for the contemplated church for thirty-seven hundred dollars, and in April, 1890, had thirty-eight hundred and sixty-two dollars paid and ready to pay—principal and interest in full. All of which, except a very few dollars, we raised among ourselves, in the mother congregation here, and among a number of friends. The inconvenience and especially the inadequacy of the G. A. R. hall kept plainly in view the pressing necessity for more room. And when we added these to our desire for a church home of our own it did not take long for us to decide, theoretically and practically, to build. Consequently on the 13th day of June, 1890, work was started for what you can see now as Trinity Reformed church. The structure is two stories high. It is built of brick and covered with slate. The extreme dimensions are 89 feet long and 47 feet wide. The height of the ceiling in the lecture-room is twelve feet and one inch. In the audience-room it is 18 feet to the square and 27 feet in the centre. The style of architecture is Gothic. The first floor is divided into three parts—vestibule, lecture room and infant-room. The partition between the infant room and the lecture-room can be easily removed, thus affording a room capable of accommodating 450 to 500 people. These rooms are finished in oak. The lecture-room is furnished with the regular Sunday School settee. The main audience-room will not be finished at present. We thought better to build in this way than build a chapel and then rebuild later, and hence undertook our present plan of finishing the lecture-room and merely protecting the audience-room until we become better able to undertake to finish it.

After making our very best effort in our own membership—worth between two and three thousand dollars in cash and easily ten times that much in experience, for none of us are wealthy—we still needed and still need some help from the church at large. We have made known our situation to a number of charges, some of which have invited us to come and tell their people of the work here and then have given us help. Others have times appointed for our pastor to come and receive their help, and we feel confident that still other charges are ready to invite us to come for help as soon as we apply for the same. Some individual persons in the church abroad have already sent us valuable help. In addition to this financial help we also ask for and are encouraged by prayers in behalf of the work entrusted to us. Could we be entirely wrapped up in our own immediate congregation and its particular interests alone here, there would not be so much cause for us to apply for help abroad. But the future interests of our Reformed Zion here demand close attention in this busy and rapidly growing railroad city. Trinity Mission is helping itself lo its utmost and only then does it ask for help in order to be ready to help to organize another congregation here in the vicinity of the large newly erected railroad shops. For that interest two lots of ground are already obtained.

The building of our church, as far as we have carried it, was accomplished under the management of the following building committee—George L. Freet, A. C. Hammaker, Michael Effinger, W. H. Herr, Peter L. Bricker, Herman Davis, Walter P. Martin, McClellan R. Diehl, Andrew F. Peters, Hiram W. Stouffer, Levi Snyder, Abram P. Kready, Fremont L. Long, and the pastor, chairman. The time and interest which this undertaking demanded were valuable, but yet cheerfully given. They have easily saved for us almost two thousand dollars under the lowest contract bid, to say nothing of the value of the experience and the interest and helpfulness which they aroused in all the members—for they did much of the work themselves, often working late at night after a hard day's work by the planer, at the anvil, beside the bench or even at the desk. The church is a neat and substantial structure. But one word yet and this account will be finished. At first the idea was to board the windows shut in the audience-room. But one Sunday morning after our building was slated our pastor suggested that we ascertain how many of the windows—twenty in all—might be secured as memorials or presents. And before very long every window was taken and are now filled with rolled cathedral glass in neat and beautiful designs. Whoever lends a helping hand to Trinity Mission at Altoona can rest assured that they are helping a prosperous interest that is laboring hard to help itself and still harder to discharge the work entrusted to it in the upbuilding of Christ's glorious kingdom here on earth.

Z.

IN MEMORIAM.

JOHN TRUXELL, ESQ.

John Truxell, Esq.. a prominent citizen of Ludwick, Westmoreland county, Pa., died at his home, at 8.30 A.M., Wednesday, December 10, 1890, at the ripe age of 80 years, 3 months and 16 days. His final illness was of brief duration. On Monday evening he conversed with some friends at his home until 9 o'clock, and was apparently in fair health and excellent spirits. After retiring, however, he was taken ill, and toward morning his family became alarmed. He suffered great pain in his stomach, side and back, but bore his lot with Christian fortitude and resignation. He was conscious to the last and when the hour of dissolution, came he closed his eyes and sank to rest as peacefully as an innocent child going to sleep. His bedside was surrounded by his two daughters and only children, Miss Lydia Truxell and Mrs. Kate Kiehl; Bennett Kiehl, the only grandson; Mrs. T. R. Winsheimer, a niece, to whom the deceased had been a father and in whose Christian household she was reared from infancy and educated as a daughter, David B. Weaver, his boyhood companion and life long friend and neighbor; and T. R. Winsheimer.

John Truxell was a self-made man, possessing a strong, energetic spirit, and a firm but kind disposition. He was married to Harriet Widaman, who preceded him to the land beyond nineteen years ago. His character was pure and his actions those of a sincere Christian. He was popular, beloved, revered. He was a life long member of the Second Reformed church and took great pleasure in church work. For 45 or 50 years he was an officer in the church and always recognized as a leader in its affairs and management. For an extended period he held the office of justice of the peace, and discharged his duties conscientiously and with satisfaction. His wise counselwas sought by his neighbors and his purse was always ready for Christian, benevolent and charitable purposes. He was a most liberal contributor to the church, and in the generosity of his heart was the benefactor of scores of persons in outside affairs. He was widely known as a good man, one who knew no guile, and his cheerful countenance, encouraging words, erect and dignified form will be sadly missed by all who knew him.

His remains were interred in St. Clair cemetery, Friday noon. The funeral services were conducted in the Second Reformed church by Rev. S. B. Mase, of Lake, Ohio, the former pastor, assisted by Revs. C. R. Dieffenbacher, A. E. Truxal, O. P. Hargrave and L. Cort. The ceremony was beautiful and impressive. The choir rendered an appropriate anthem, "Rest, spirit, rest," and the funeral march was played by Miss Luella Beaumont, organist. A large number of friends were present to pay their last tribute of respect and mingle their tears with those of the bereaved family.

The pall bearers were Messrs. R. S. Jamison, Eli Sell, Thomas Wible, Henry Wible, W. R. Barnhart and Mr. Perkins, composing the members of the consistory.

And thus is ended the life of an honorable man, a beloved and indulgent father, a true Christian and an exemplary citizen.

Tribute from Rev. J. W. Love.

Following is a tribute from Rev. J. W. Love, of Wichita, Kansas, who was for 16 years pastor of the Second Reformed church in Greensburg, and enjoyed Mr. Truxell's warm friendship during that period and by correspondence until his demise:

When a telegram brought the sad intelligence of the death of Elder John Truxell, of Groensburg, Pa., the writer said to his family, "I feel as though my father and dearest of earthly friends has been taken from us" Immediately Rev. 14:13, came to my mind, as applying with peculiar appropriateness and affording much comfort. It is no exaggeration to say, that though he was only human, a better Christian man, and one more devoted to his church, would be hard to find. During the 16 years I was pastor of the Second Reformed congregation of Greensburg, he was an active elder, a wise counsellor and always ready to cheerfully perform any duty the obligations of his office imposed upon him. Indeed, it always seemed to give him much pleasure to assist his pastor in every way possible to promote the welfare of the people and

Continued on Page 13.

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

Cuticura Soap
FOR BAD COMPLEXIONS RED ROUGH HANDS AND BABY HUMORS.

BAD COMPLEXIONS, WITH PIMPLY, blotchy, oily skin, Red, Rough Hands, with chaps, painful finger ends and shapeless nails, and simple Baby Humors prevented and cured by CUTICURA SOAP. A marvelous beautifier of world-wide celebrity, it is simply incomparable as a Skin Purifying Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and without a rival for the Nursery. Absolutely pure delicately medicated, exqusitely perfumed, CUTICURA SOAP produces the whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands and prevents inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, and most complexional disfigurations, while it admits of no comparison with the best of other skin soaps, and rivals in delicacy the most noted and expensive of toilet and nursery soaps Sale greater than the combined sales of all other skin soaps.

Sold throughout the world. Price, 25c.

Send for "How to Cure Skin and Blood Diseases."

Address POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Aching sides and back, weak kidneys, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

EVERY MOTHER

Should Have It in The House.

Dropped on Sugar, Children Love

to take JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT for Croup, Colds, Sore Throat, Tonsilitis, Colic, Cramps and Pains. Relieves all Summer Complaints, Cuts and Bruises like magic. Sold everywhere. Price 35c. by mail; 6 bottles Express paid, $2. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., BOSTON, MASS.

$3000 A YEAR! I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a Year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. No money for me unless successful as above. Easily and quickly learned. I desire but one worker from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number, who are making over $3000 a year each. It's NEW and SOLID. Full particulars FREE. Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 420, Augusta, Maine.

For a Disordered Liver
Try BEECHAM'S PILLS.
25cts. a Box.
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

VanHouten's Cocoa
"BEST & GOES FARTHEST."

The purest, most soluble—the original cocoa. Invented, patented and made in Holland. Delicate, stimulating, nutritious, much better for the nerves than tea and coffee. Ask for VAN HOUTEN'S, take no other. [61

If You Wish To Try Them,
SPENCERIAN STEEL PENS Are the Best

Samples of the leading numbers will be sent FREE on receipt of return postage, 2 cents. The Spencerian Pen Co., 810 Broadway, New York.

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE of 16,600f.
QUINA-LAROCHE'S
INVIGORATING TONIC,
CONTAINING
Peruvian Bark, and Pure Catalan Wine.
Endorsed by the Medical Faculty of Paris, as the Best Remedy for
LOSS of APPETITE, FEVER and AGUE, MALARIA, NEURALGIA and INDIGESTION.

KINA
QUINA LAROCHE

An experience of 25 years in experimental analysis, together with the valuable aid extended by the Academy of Medicine in Paris, has enabled M. Laroche to extract the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark (a result not before attained), and to concentrate them in an elixir, which possesses in the highest degree its restorative and invigorating qualities, free from the disagreeable bitterness of other remedies.

22 rue Drouot, Paris.

E. FOUGERA & CO., Agents for U. S., 30 North William street, N. Y.

LAROCHE

BLATCHLEY WOOD FORCE PUMP

Cheapest and most efficient. A Complete Fire Department on your premises. Write for descriptive circular. CHAS. G. BLATCHLEY, Philada.

advance the interests of the congregation. Many were the pastoral visits we made together to the poor and the rich, the sick and the well, the distressed and the bereft, as also to Classis and Synods. In raising funds for the building of the parsonage, for the present church edifice, and for every good work, he not only gave very liberally, oftentimes more than his proportion, but was the constant companion and helper of the pastor. Any and every good cause whetner at home or abroad, was certain to enlist his earnest sympathy and receive his encouragement and co operation. I can truly say I never met anyone who was more willing to give and labor for the benefit of others, and for the cause of Christ. There was less of selfisnness, less of desire of applause in what he did than in most of us. His spirit and practice in doing good was as near that of the Master's as it is perhaps possible for anyone to be. Most truly he was "an Israelite in whom there was no guile." He shrank from anything like hypocrisy; was frank and open hearted; not slow to discountenance all forms of evil and to approve the right. I never heard his piety called in question. He seemed to have the full confidence of all who knew him, and to be held in highest esteem by everyone. His life was a long and useful one. His generosity and confidence in others cost him thousands of dollars accumulated by industry and economy. If he seemed, at times, to lack in public enterprise, he more than made up in generous gifts for the public good, and in the help he gave those in financial straits. There was no narrowness or bigotry in his nature, though he was a man of strong convictions, and always had the courage of his convictions. Thus we might go on speaking of his virtues and high Christian character, but will only add that truly "a good man has fallen," one not only at a ripe old age, but whose life was of unsullied purity, strict integrity and inestimable worth. Years ago a brother elder said to me, "There is only on 'Squire Truxell." Such, we are sure, will be the unanimous agreement of all who came in contact with him. He sleeps well. In affectionate memory,

J. W. LOVE.

—Westmoreland Democrat.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

At a meeting of the Consistory of the Second Greensburg charge, held December 20th, A. D. 1890, the following action was passed:

WHEREAS, Our aged, faithful, and beloved church father, Elder John Truxell, Esq., has passed from his labors among us to the glory of the church triumphant, we, the consistory of the Second Reformed charge, Greensburg, Pa., with whom he has been associated, with some of us, for more than a quarter of a century,

Resolve, That we feel the loss of one whose calm judgment, wise counsel, liberal contributions, and deep interest in everything pertaining to the Church, distinguished him, and caused us to regard him with love and respect all these years.

Resolved, also, That our congregation has lost a valuable officer, and a most worthy representative at Classis and at Synod, where his influence was widened, and that young and old will remember him, who seemed always to have an interest in their spiritual welfare. May the Great Head of the Church sustain us in our affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be read to our congregation, a copy be published in our church papers, and a copy be sent to his family.

W. R. BARNHART, Pres.
R. S. JAMISON,
Sec. of Consistory.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

DEDICATION OF A CHURCH.

A new church erected near Cairo, Ohio, was dedicated to the service of the Triune God with appropriate ceremonies on the 21st of December. On Saturday evening previous Rev. J. J. Leberman, D. D., preached the first sermon in it. On Sunday morning Rev. H. Hoiliger preached in the German language, Rev. Leberman following with some remarks in English. The pastor, after the treasurer of the congregation had announced the building to be free of debt, proceeded to perform the act of dedication. The new church is a beautiful Gothic frame structure 36x55 feet —with a recess pulpit and a tower, with its interior tastefully decorated and neatly furnished.

CHRISTMAS TIDINGS.

(CONTINUED.)

PENNSYLVANIA.

Lewisburg.—Rev. Irwin W. Hendricks, pastor. The congregation joined with the Sunday school in a very enjoyable service on Christmas morning, using the "Order of Worship for Christmas. The church was profusely decorated with greens, with a representation of the manger in the recess. Offerings for Bethany Orphans' Home, $18.85.

Du Bois.—Rev. R. E. Crum, pastor. Services were held by St. Peter's Reformed Sunday-school of Du Bois on Christmas evening. The service entitled "The Son of God, the Son of Man," was used. A beautiful tree, laden with handsome and useful presents, added to the interest. The pastor and family were kindly remembered. The offerings, amounting to $5.90, were for the orphans at Butler.

Harmony.—Rev. E. H. Otting, pastor. Grace Reformed Sunday-school of Harmony, Pa., held its service on Christmas eve. The church was crowded; offerings, $8.73. A fine treat was given to every member of the school. Two trees loaded.

St. John's Sunday-school, at Evans City, Pa., held its exercises on Christmas night. Here the decorations by two fine trees, a beautiful arch, and laurel and spruce festoonery was grand. The service, "Immanuel, God with us," was used at both places, with changes, and additional anthems and songs. Offerings, $10.01; total offerings, $18.74, which were equally divided between St. Paul's Orphan Home at Butler, Pa., and Reformed Orphans' Home at Fort Wayne, Ind.

At Harmony, members of the choir presented Pastor Otting and wife with a lounge. At Evans City the pastor was presented witn $30 in gold, besides a $2 and a $1 in paper. Every member received a fine treat.

Pottsville.—Trinity church. Early service at 6 o'clock. The choir sang several beautiful anthems, besides the hymns and chants by the congregation. The pastor, Rev. A. R. Bartholomew, preached a short sermon based on "The Angelic Chorus."

In the evening the magnificent service, "Immanuel," was admirably rendered by the Sunday-school. A novel feature of the service was a mantel piece built of boxes, a fac simile of red bricks. All the children received presents and in turn brought their offerings for Bethany Orphans' Home, amounting to $59.20. The decorations were very pretty and neat.

Butler.—Rev. D. N. Harnish, pastor. The Christmas service was held in the new Reformed church on Wednesday evening, December 24th. The church was very tastefully decorated and the tree beautifully trimmed. The principal feature of the service was the singing. The carols were well rendered, and the processional and recessional were exceptionally fine. Mabel Gosser recited a pretty little poem. Dr. Prugh made the address of the evening in his usual happy style. Not the least enjoyable part to the little folks was the gifts they received. Collection for St. Paul's Orphan Home, $15.

Martinsburg.—Rev. J. W. Pontius, pastor. The St. John's Reformed Sunday-school, Martinsburg, held its celebration on Christmas evening. The service, 'The Prince of David," was much appreciated by the large audience present. A very appropriate address was delivered by Mr. Line, of Lancaster. The decorations were good. The most striking of them were panels, ornamented with evergreen, containing appropriate Scripture passages in gilt letters, and the festooning of a star against the ceiling above the alar. This celebration of Christmas was pronounced by some not members of the school nor of the congregation as "the best thing of the kind ever witnessed by them in this village."

Beavertown.—Rev. J. W. Pontius, pastor. Salem's Sunday-school of the Reformed church held its celebrations on Christmas eve. The service entitled, "Messias," was well rendered. Eight scholars of the primary department, each bearing a banner containing the letter of the verse to be recited, rendered the acrostic, "Emanuel."

The decorations consisted of a large Christmas tree and a cross on either side of the tree, decorated with evergreen. The service was opened with prayer by F. A. Rupley, Jr., and the addresses were made by Daniel G. Hetrick and F. M. Line, of Lancaster, Pa. A number of special gifts were given at the close, and one among them was a purse to the pastor.

Duncannon Charge.—Rev. J. David Miller, pastor. Christ Reformed Sunday-school of Duncannon, Pa., held its Christmas services on Wednesday evening, December 24th, 1890. The service used was entitled "The Festival of Joy." The children of the school rendered, very acceptably, a number of recitations, and Rev. O. B. McCurdy, of the Presbyterian church, and the pastor delivered short addresses. The collection was for Bethany Orphans' Home and amounted to $6.45, and the pastor was kindly remembered in the gift of a thousand mile book over the Pennsylvania Railroad—this kind act being a repetition of a similar action on the part of the Sunday-school and congregation last year, and which is very highly appreciated by him.

Trinity Reformed Sunday school at Murysville held their Christmas festival on Thursday evening, December 25th, and used the service published by the Reformed Church Publication House, entitled "Immanuel God with us." Although delayed by the putting in a new hard wood ceiling into the church building —the old plastered one having given way, and was in danger of falling down—somewhat hindered the preparations for the occasion, but when the time came for the commencement of the service all was in readiness and everybody happy. The superintendent, Elder Elias B. Leiby, interested himself specially in behalf of the orphans at Bethany—and in a neat little address asked the audience to assist in raising $15 for this worthy object—which was done. The pastor was remembered here, too, which he found out, when he opened an envelope handed him by the superintendent, and contained $15.

Continued on Page 14

Cleveland's Baking Powder
Is Absolutely the Best,
Because—Food keeps moist and fresh: "Food made with Cleveland's Baking Powder keeps moist and fresh, and in this respect it is superior to any powder I know."—Mrs. S. T. Rorer, Principal Philadelphia Cooking School.

Some Children Growing Too Fast become listless, fretful, without energy, thin and weak. But you can fortify them and build them up, by the use of
SCOTT'S EMULSION
OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND HYPOPHOSPHITES
Of Lime and Soda.
They will take it readily, for it is almost as palatable as milk. And it should be remembered that AS A PREVENTIVE OR CURE OF COUGHS OR COLDS, IN BOTH THE OLD AND YOUNG, IT IS UNEQUALLED. Avoid substitutions offered

FLORENCE Knitting Silk.
Soft Finish. If you wish to secure beauty, durability and economy, you will buy this Silk for Knitting, for Crochet, for Tatting, for Netting, or for Embroidery.

Florence Home Needlework for 1890 teaches you how to make from this Silk those Washable Crocheted Four-in-Hand Scarfs—which are the new thing for gentlemen, and are also worn by ladies. This book will be mailed on receipt of six cents.
NONOTUCK SILK CO., Florence, Mass.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

For Gas
BAILEY'S
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass
REFLECTORS,
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free.
A. J. WEIDENER, 36 South 2d St. Philada.
For Oil
ALSO CHANDELIERS for OIL and ELECTRICITY

CHOICE CARPETINGS
IN ALL GRADES,
AT POPULAR PRICES.
A full line of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and Standard Domestic and Imported Carpets.
☞ We request only an OPPORTUNITY to show you our stock.
IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE.
NEW STORE,
1217 Market Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

CARPET buyers had better purchase of J. & J. DOBSON, 809 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, in order to receive full value for their money. They retail Carpets of their own make, which are reliable in every way.

Over 350,000 acres of Choice Farm Lands. Failure of crops never known. Best all-the-year climate in the world. Soil adapted to all kinds of farming. Plenty of water. Low prices, and unusually liberal terms. C. E. SIMMONS, Land Com., C. & N.-W. R'y, Chicago, Ill.

☞ Send stamp for Catalogue. (Name goods desired.)
BABY CARRIAGES 100 styles. Automatic Brake on all, Free. Adjustable, Reclining and Invalid Wheel Chairs. Factory Prices.
LUBURG MFG. CO. 145 N. 8th St. Philada.

AMERICAN
Fire Insurance Company,
Nos. 308 and 310 WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA

At Dellville David's congregation is located, and here a union service, consisting of Scripture reading, singing, prayer and recitations, was held on Friday evening, December 26th. Both pastors, Lutheran and Reformed, made addresses to the children, and all received presents.

All the churches were neatly decorated for the occasion, and reflect skill on the part of those who helped to make these Christmas celebrations occasions of profit and benefit.

Hanover.—Rev. Joseph D. Peters, pastor. Trinity Reformed Sunday-school held its service on Christmas evening. The service used was styled "The Son of God, the Son of Man." The doxology and benediction closed the services, which were highly praised by those present. The decorations showed great taste. The sides of the church were tastefully festooned with evergreens. Two Christmas trees, to the delight of the little ones, stood giantlike in the corners of the platform, erected in the altar space, and overhead, on three gilt rods, suspended from the ceiling by evergreen pendants, were the words in silver and gilt, "A Merry Christmas." The rear part of the platform, covered with moss, bore a fine Christmas scene—a representation of Trinity church in miniature, a house and barn, etc.

Greenfield Charge.—Rev. C. W. Summey, pastor. Services were held in all the congregations, beginning Wednesday, December 24th, the Mt. Hope congregation used the service, "Christmas Voices." Thursday evening, December 25th, Mt. Zion congregation used the service, "Jesus, our King." Friday evening, December 26th, services were held in the Greenfield congregation, and Saturday evening, December 27th, in the Claysburg congregation. The last two congregations used the "Order of Worship for Christmas." The services in all of the congregations were well rendered and the deepest interest was manifested throughout. All the churches were neatly and appropriately decorated, and the members of the Sunday-school received the customary gifts.

Stone Church.—Rev. S. P. Mauger, pastor. Christ Reformed Sunday school held two special Christmas services—one on Christmas eve and the other on Christmas morning. In the evening the service consisted of anthems, duet, solos and addresses. In the morning the school used the service, "Christmas Voices." The offering, $16, was for Bethany Orphans' Home. The pastor received a beautiful hunting-case gold watch, and the pastor's wife a purse of gold, as gifts from the congregation.

Aaronsburg.—Rev. G. E. Addams, pastor. Services were held by the Sunday-school at Aaronsburg on Christmas evening. The services were opened with singing and prayer, Scripture reading and responses. The exercises consisted of recitations and music. The attendance was large. At Salem, on Christmas eve, the Christmas service issued by our Publication House, was used entire except some of the music. The church was handsomely decorated. The music was under the direction of Prof. J. Meyer, and the school is under the excellent supervision of Prof. D. M. Wolf. Collections were lifted for the orphans at both places. The cantata of Queen Esther was rendered in the Town Hall at Millhelm on the 20th of December. The proceeds of this concert were for the benefit of the Reformed church at that place and amounted to $97.

Fairview Charge.—Rev. H. S. Garner, pastor. Services were held on Christmas eve by the Sunday-school and congregation at Millerstown, and on Christmas evening by the Sunday-school and congregation at Fairview. Attendance good. A lighthouse at the former place and a tree at the latter. The usual treat was given to the respective schools. Alms for the Orphans' Home at Butler, Pa. On both occasions pastor and family were kindly remembered with presents, particularly with purses, for all which they are thankful to donors.

MARYLAND.

Frederick. — Evangelical Reformed church, Rev. E. R. Eschbach, D.D., pastor. On Christmas eve the children's festival was held at 6.30 P.M. The altar and chaneel were tastefully decorated with laurel and pine, and with banners of white bearing appropriate texts in letters of gold. The recess back of the pulpit contained a large panel of white frosted cloth, with an open scroll on each side, and in the centre a golden cross encircled with the inscription, "Hosanna to the Son of David."

The children sang sweet carols and were happy in the reception of the gifts provided for them by devoted teachers. A graceful and acceptable address was made by Mr. Lewis T. Lampe, once a member of the infant school, but now of the Theological Seminary at Lancaster, Pa. The pastor followed in a few well-chosen words, the offerings for the orphans were gathered and the large congregation dispersed, well pleased with the services.

At 6 A. M. Christmas morning the church was again well filled with young and old to take part in the special service for the day, which was introduced by a processional hymn, rendered by a large company of Sunday-school scholars. The singing was supplemented by the Sunday-school orchestra consisting of five pieces.

The service was familiar and all took part in it with heart and soul. It was therefore not an entertainment. A short but pertinent and suggestive sermon was delivered by the pastor. It was thus we observed Christmas.

Hagerstown.—Zion church. The services for Christmas Day, at Zion Reformed church, were unusually interesting and attractive. As usual, the church had been beautifully arrayed in evergreens of pine and laurel for the occasion. Specially noticeable among the decorations were the red pepper-berries sent from San Diego, Cal., by Mrs. Stern, formerly Miss Ida Heyser, of this city; the holly and mistletoe brought by Miss Myrtle Garver from Washington, and the beautiful camellias that were brought by the Misses Fiery. A large congregation was present at the early service at 5.30 A.M., at which, in addition to the Lessons and Prayers for Christmas Day, the history of the Nativity was read from St. Luke's Gospel, and a number of Christmas hymns were sung by the congregation. The Te Deum was also said.

The service for the Sunday-school took place in the church at 10 o'clock, A. M. This Sunday school, under the superintendence of Mr. W. H. McCardell, is in a flourishing condition. The infant department is under the care of Misses Jennie Hammond, Emma Hurley and Nannie Rowland. The service was one entitled "Immanuel." Brief addresses were made by Rev. G. A. Snyder, Rev. J. S. Shade, and the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Kieffer.

The usual distribution of gifts was made, the number of recipients being in this case 351, though the Sunday-school is by no means so large as this would indicate. The pastor took occasion at this service to make mention of the presentation to the Sunday school by the class of Miss Emma Garver, of a beautiful copy of Hoffman's celebrated painting of Christ in the Temple. He also made mention, and expressed his grateful appreciation of the kindness of the congregation to himself and his family, shown in a manner so modest and unostentatious. Before he reached home, after the early service, there had been left at the parsonage by two of the officers of the church, a package with this simple inscription: "To Dr. J. S. Kieffer, from his congregation; a tribute of respect and love." This package was found to contain a sum of money amounting to $158, for which Christmas gift, so valuable in itself and so valuable as expressing the respect and love of a kind, affectionate and generous people, Dr. Kieffer on this occasion sought to express his thanks.—The Mail.

Keedysville.—Rev. B. R. Carnahan, pastor. Service was held on Christmas eve, at which time the beautiful service, "Immanuel, God with us," was well rendered to an overflowing house. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion. Amount of collection for Orphans' Home, $18.08.

Mt. Moriah. Here the same service was well rendered on Christmas night. The church was neatly decorated. The collection for Orphans' Home amounted to $3.88.

No service was held at Sharpsburg. The cause for this omission is that the church is undergoing repairs. It will be ready for occupancy as soon as the windows are received.

Ridgely.—A festival was held by St. Paul's Reformed church, at Ridgely, Md., on Christmas eve. The church was handsomely decorated with evergreens, and there were representations of the shepherds keeping watch over their flocks, of the Christ-child in the manger, the wise men from the east, etc. The services consisted of prayer, singing, responsive reading of Scripture, recitation and reading by members of the school, an address by the pastor, etc. The whole service was well received by all present. The congregation had public worship on Christmas Day also, when a sermon was delivered by the pastor, Rev. D. P. Lefevre, from Luke ii. 11.

Church News.

☞Stated Clerks of Classes and Pastors will oblige us by sending such Items of News as will be of interest to the Church.

OUR OWN CHURCH.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Ashland.—Rev. R. Duenger, D.D., who has been in the ministry for fifty-six years, has resigned as pastor of the Ashland Zion church, in which he has labored for thirty-four years.

OHIO.

Cleveland.—The Ninth (German) Reformed church was dedicated on the 14th of December. Rev. Fuenfstueck, of the Second church, preached in the morning. Revs. Roentgen, Fribolin, J. F. Winter, J. H. Stepler, and a Presbyterian minister, spoke in the afternoon. The congregation is a child of the Third church (Rev. Fribolin). The building is 62x38. The tower is 82 feet high. The beautiful fresco painting was done by the pastor (Rev. Forwick) himself. The property has a value of $5,500; debts, $3,100.

INDIANA.

Evansville.—After many years of fruitless work in the western part of this city, a new congregation was organized under the name of Evangelical Reformed St. Peter's church, Rev. J. Wernly, pastor.

WISCONSIN.

Elmore.—On the 14th of December Licentiate W. Rech, a student of the Mission House, was ordained to the holy ministry by a committee of Sheboygan Classis, consisting of Rev. Bollenbacher and Elder W. Reinhard. He was afterwards installed in the Van Dyne, Wis., charge.

OREGON.

Astoria.—Rev. J. G. Schmidt, our newly appointed missionary, reports favorably of his work. The average attendance at Sunday services amounts to 25. There are prospects of building a church and parsonage.

Change of Address.

Rev. D. N. Dittmar from Littlestown to Greensburg, Pa.

"No chronic tortures racked his aged limbs.
For luxury and sloth had nourished none for him."

In our land there is much luxury, and but little sloth. So we must find other causes for the "chronic tortures." It has been said that to have gout one must have ancestors, or, as they say in Philadelphia, "grandfathers." This disease, says Dr. Da Costa, in his great work on "Diagonsis," "is rare in this country," but not so Rheumatic Gout. He adds: "Nor will it yield to the remedies usually administered in acute Rheumatism, nor to colchicum and the alkalies, so beneficial in gout." However, remarkable cures have been effected by the Compound Oxygen Treatment of Drs. STARKEY & PALEN. If you wish to convince yourself of this, send for our Treatise on Compound Oxygen, a book of 200 carefully written pages, or write us, giving your symptoms, and we will give our opinion, free of charge. No other genuine than that of Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

BRONCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the consoler of the afflicted.'"—Jaime Rufus Vidal, San Cristobel, San Domingo.

Young Children,

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

DO NOT STAMMER.

Mr. E. Waterman, Lebanon, Conn., writes: "It seems to me almost a miracle that, after years of stammering, I can now talk and read with ease." Refer also to J. D Wattles, Publisher of The Sunday School Times, who saw him before and after cure.

Send for 54-page pamphlet to E. S. JOHNSTON'S Institute, N. E. Cor. 11th and Spring Garden Sts. Phila., Pa.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE
Relieves Indigestion, Dyspepsia, etc

For Reformed Church Messenger.

IN MEMORIAM.

MRS. MARY JANE GANTENBEIN.

A mother in Israel has been called home. Our pioneer worker among the women of the Pacific coast has laid down her staff. Her name deserves a place in our history. She belonged to those few extraordinary characters who seem to be chosen to reflect the boundless wealth, power and glory of the Redeemer's life. It can only be profitable to review such a career. Mary Jane Gantenbein was born on the 29th of May, 1829, in Philadelphia, Penna., being the youngest daughter of Frederick and Christina Schwaebie. Her parents were decided Christians, and the influences exerted upon the child at home, prepared her for her later usefulness. It was here, in an atmosphere of firm Christian faith, under the guidance of a circle of staunch disciples of our Lord and within the boundaries of true churchliness that the departed sister found her "only comfort in life and death," and gave herself wholly to the Redeemer. Her constant prayer was to become the handmaid of her Lord and to learn how to do His will. Her prayer was answered and the preparation for her future life-work began.

She took charge of two orphan grandchildren of her parents, to whose education she devoted her maiden years; one of these children, afterwards a graduate of Franklin & Marshall College, is now a prominent member of the Board of Publication. In 1853 she was married to the Rev. John Gantenbein, in the Reformed Zion's Church, of Philadelphia, the Rev. Karl Bonekemper officiating. The congregations at Pottsville, Baltimore, Kridersville and Philadelphia bear testimony to the influence which the departed mother exerted among them. But more especially is she remembered in the history of our Eastern Orphans' Home, of which she became matron, in those early days when theological controversies warped the practical benevolent work of the Church. Fifty children were in the Home, with but little help to take care of them. The zealous matron, although having a large family of her own, showed a self-denial which is unparalleled in the history of any mercenary institution. God alone knows how it was possible for her to take care of these fifty children and of the household single-handed. The Church never recognized it, but her name is written with golden letters In the Book of Life. In 1874 the deceased mother followed, after a loving service at the sick and death-bed of her parents, her husband to the Pacific coast. The family consisted of nine children; two had been called home, but her boundless faith in her Divine Master strengthened her during the trials of a long journey and the difficulties of the first pioneer work. It was here especially that she became a power for good among a wicked generation. The scorn and blasphemy which she encountered often saddened her heart, but never discouraged her. She took off her own clothing and gave it to the poor in spite of all their blasphemy; she visited the bitterest enemies of the Cross of Christ in their sickness, prepared strengthening food for them and spoke to them of the one thing needful. They would become enraged at her words and forbid her to enter their houses, but she never faltered, came again and again, until her enemies succumbed. They all speak of her in the highest terms; one rich man, very indifferent towards religion, said to his wife on the morning of Mrs. Gantenbein's funeral: "I shall not go to the store to-day, out of respect to Mrs. Gantenbein." The students of the City High School who had been under the instruction of three of the deceased mother's children, sent a beautiful offering of flowers, and the Superintendent of Public Instruction ordered the flag to be raised at half-mast. The pastor's wife was an exemplary mother. To bring up so large a family on so small a salary, to give them all the best European education and to bring them out of many years of foreign influence unspotted, shows, indeed, a Christian mother's far reaching influence. Not her words, however, but her living example, inspired her children to obedience, to reverence, to unbounded love for her. To see her in the midst of her family after the day's work was over, conversing on Church and congregational matters, advising and counseling her children, was, indeed, a picture rarely met with.

Her hospitality knew no limits. The parsonage was the stopping-place for every one who called himself a member of the Reformed Church, so that the house was always filled with guests from the East, the South and the North. Nothing was too much for her; her motto was: "I must work the works of Him that sent me while it is day."

The source of her love and strength was her decided, firm faith. She lived in constant communication with her Master. She was not satisfied with the daily family services; before every important work of the day she withdrew to her closet and asked her Lord for advice; the consultation of devotional books constituted a part of her daily reading. We learn how highly she treasured these books from the special request which she made shortly before her death, as to their distribution among her children. The deepest trait of her character, however, was her great modesty. She shrank from all publicity, and disliked nothing so much as hypocritical assumption. Truthfulness and uprightness constituted her very life.

For the last two years she suffered from a disease which the physicians called "intestinal obstruction." Of late her condition became alarming; it was decided that she should come East and consult the specialists at the University of Pennsylvania. It had long been her desire to visit her daughters and relatives in the East, whom she had not seen for many years. This prospect made her forget her pains, and up to the day appointed for the departure, the 14th of November, she felt strong. Then, almost in the very last moment, a violent attack of her disease occurred and threw her on her last sick-bed. It was during these days of intense suffering that the genuineness of her faith showed itself. She never complained, though her pains must have been excruciating. When the undersigned expressed his deepfelt sympathy, she answered, "And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work and will preserve me unto His heavenly kingdom: to whom be glory forever and ever, amen," which word was afterwards chosen as the text to the funeral sermon. When the doctors decided that an operation of the intestines alone would alleviate her pains, she consented by saying: "We are in God's hands; His will be done! He has strengthened me wonderfully." After this operation she suffered indescribable pains; every now and then she would exclaim, "O Lord, how long! my Saviour come and take me! Lord Jesus have mercy upon me!" The last wish for her children who were gathered around her, with whom she had taken communion and to whom she had spoken separately, was, "that they might live nearer to God." On the morning of the 18th of November, her last prayer was fulfilled—she was at home! The great multitude that attended her funeral and the kindness which was shown to the bereaved family were signs of the high esteem in which the departed mother was held. The Reformed Church loses in her a zealous worker, a model missionary, but among men the influence will forever be felt which was exerted by her marvellous Christian character.—From the German of Pastor J. Lange.

NOTICE.

The Quarterly Meeting of the Executive Committee of the Women's Missionary Society of Schuylkill Classis will be held Saturday, January 10th, at Leesport, in the Reformed Church, Rev. S. A. Leinbach, pastor. All the members of the Committee are reqeested to be present.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

At the request of the Committees of the Eastern and Potomac Synods, the Board of Trustees of the Theological Seminary will hold a special meeting in the College Building at Lancaster, on Thursday, the 22d of January next, at 2 o'clock, P.M., ,, to consider the location and such other matters as may be necessary in regard to a Seminary building." These committees were appointed at the last meeting of the Synods and are earnestly moving in the matter. They ask and will, no doubt, receive the hearty co-operation of this Board.

D. W. GROSS, President.

Dec. 27th, 1890.

Beecham's Pills cure bilious and nervous ills.

A fine fall growth of grass in fields and meadows does not justify its pasturage. The grass furnishes a needed mulch to the soil for winter, while the tread of the herd on the rain-soaked soil does not promote fertility.

• Man is often deceived in the age of a woman by her gray hair. Ladies, you can appear young and prevent this grayness by using Hall's Hair Renewer.

For the first time in history ice formed across the Schuylkill dam at Norristown on Monday night, and the millrace overflowed, ruining $400 worth of property stored in basements.

Mediocrity always copies superiority. Dobbins' Electric Soap, first made in 1865, has been imitated more than any soap made. Ask your grocer for Dobbins' Electric Soap, all other Electrics, Electricity, Magnetics, etc., are imitations.

Says a correspondent: I see in one of my papers that some butter makers receive a dollar a pound for their butter. Will you tell me how to do that? Well, in the first place the butter must be the very best that can be made. Then hunt up a lot of people who have more money than brains, and the thing is done.

For Old and Young.

Tutt's Liver Pills act as kindly on the child, the delicate female or infirm old age, as upon the vigorous man.

Tutt's Pills

give tone to the weak stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder. To these organs their strengthening qualities are wonderful, causing them to perform their functions as in youth.

Sold Everywhere.

Office, 39 & 41 Park Place, N. Y.

Good Sense CORSET WAISTS

have been growing in favor for the past 10 years. Please examine them and you will be convinced of their merit.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES

Contain ingredients which act specially on the organs of the voice. They have an extraordinary efficacy on all affections of the Throat, caused by cold or over exertion of the voice. They are recommended to Singers and Public Speakers, and all who, at any time, have a cough or trouble with the throat or lungs. "I recommend their use to public speakers."—Rev. E. H. Chapin. "Pre-eminently the best."—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.

"UNLIKE ANY OTHER."

This is the title of a vest-pocket edition of a daily memorandum calendar issued by Messrs. I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House Street, Boston, Mass. They will be glad to send a copy to any one who will send name and address on postal card. On the principle that nonsense is sometimes good for everybody, they have filled the little book with rhymes and outline drawings to advertise Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. The illustrations are very good, and so is the Liniment, if it can cure the lame feet of some of the rhymes. Readers should send for the little calendar, as they will find it entertaining and convenient.

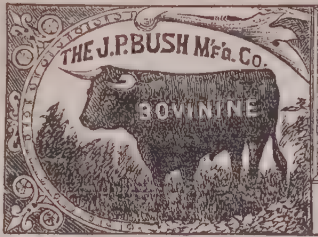
SIR PHILIP MILLER, the great English horticulturist, writing in 1740, says; "The best method to have cabbages good is to procure fresh seed from abroad every year, for it is apt to degenerate in England in a few years."

The above is a simple illustration of the fact that the best seeds will rapidly degenerate under unfavorable conditions. The wise will take heed, therefore, and buy their seeds of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Michigan, whose world wide reputation as the best and most reliable as well as the most extensive seed growers and dealers, is due to the fact that they take advantage of the every circumstance of climate, soil, methods of culture, selection of seed-plants, etc., to procure the best possible seeds and keep them up to that high standard.

Send your name to the firm's address, and you will receive a copy of their Seed Annual for 1891 free.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. Sold by druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.



THE J.P. BUSH MFG. CO.
BOVININE

BOVININE

A CONDENSED FOOD

THE Late Hon. John Roach, America's Great Shipbuilder, Lived Wholly on BOVININE for two Months. His Son, Stephen W. Roach, in a Letter, said:

"For more than two months past the nature of the disease from which my father was suffering has totally precluded the use of solid food, and it was at first feared that, from inability to administer proper nourishment, his strength would fail rapidly. To my great surprise and delight, however, BOVININE has been able to supply that need of the system, being in a palatable, highly condensed form, easily assimilated under all conditions."

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S ROSES AND SEEDS | FOR SPRING PLANTING.

If you plant Roses, Hardy Plants, Bulbs or Seeds, we would like to send you our NEW GUIDE, 124 pages, beautifully illustrated, FREE on application. You will find it interesting and useful. We offer all the Choicest Novelties and best things in NEW ROSES, HARDY PLANTS, BULBS and SEEDS, postpaid to your door, satisfaction guaranteed. Our business is one of the largest in the Country and we will be pleased to serve you no difference whether your orders are large or small. Write to-day for our New Guide, FREE. THE DINGEE & CONARD CO WEST GROVE, PA

Books New Issues every week. Catalogue, 96 pages, free on request.

Not sold by Dealers; prices too low. Buy of the Publisher, JOHN B. ALDEN, 393 Pearl Street, New York. Please mention this paper.

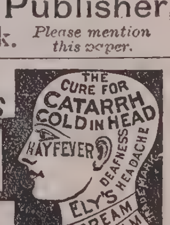
Ely's Cream Balm For CATARRH

THE POSITIVE CURE.

ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.



THE PENN MUTUAL LIFE
Insurance Company issues all approved forms of contracts adapted to every legitimate need, for protection, for investment, and for both; for long or short periods, at the lowest, sure rates
Its policies are squarely reciprocal, free from ambiguity and objectionable features, absolutely NON-FORFEITABLE and INCONTESTABLE. Send for rates, etc. Home Office, 921 Chestnut St., Phila

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.
W. BAKER & CO.'S
Breakfast Cocoa
Is absolutely pure and it is soluble.
No Chemicals
are used in its preparation. It has more than three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, EASILY DIGESTED, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as persons in health.
Sold by Grocers everywhere.
W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.
BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:
JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

USE FERRY'S SEEDS
BECAUSE THEY ARE
THE BEST.
D. M. FERRY & Co's
Illustrated, Descriptive and Priced
SEED ANNUAL
For 1891 will be mailed FREE to all applicants, and to last season's customers. It is better than ever. Every person using Garden, Flower or Field Seeds, should send for it. Address
D. M. FERRY & CO.
DETROIT, MICH.
Largest Seedsmen in the world

CLINTON H. MENEELY BELL COMPANY,
TROY, N. Y. Manufacture a Superior Grade of
CHURCH CHIME PEAL AND SCHOOL BELLS

Best quality Bells for Churches, Chimes, Schools, etc. Fully warranted. Write for Prices. BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY. VAN DUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY,
BALTIMORE, MD.
Best quality Copper and Tin BELLS for Churches, Schools, &c.
Also CHIMES AND BELLS.
Price and terms free. Name this paper.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N.Y., Bells
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others.

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO.
CINCINNATI, O., sole makers of the "Blymyer" Church, School and Fire Alarm Bells.
Catalogue with over 2200 testimonials.

BULBOUS ROOTS for FALL PLANTING. Send for illustrated priced Catalogue. D. Landreth & Sons. 21 and 23 South Sixth Street, Phila. Branch Store, Delaware Ave. and Arch St.

DO YOU WANT
MONEY?
WORK?
HEALTH?
A FARM?
A HOME?
BUSINESS?

WRITE to F. I. WHITNEY, St. Paul, Minn., and say just what you desire, and answer will be sent free, together with maps & publications.

RIGGS & BROTHER,
Branch Store, 1005 Walnut St., Phila
Ladies' 14-Carat Gold Watches, $25
" 14-Carat filled case " 1
Boys' Silver Watches, $7.00.
Watches and Clocks repaired

VIRGINIA FARMS
FREE CATALOGUE
R B CHAFFIN & CO RICHMOND, VA.

400,000 The largest circulation of any periodical in the world. "The Phila. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies free. CURTIS PUB. CO., Phila., Pa.

WE MAIL FREE to any address a sample vial of RUBIFOAM for the Teeth. Deliciously flavored.
E. W. HOYT & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE

On Friday, January 2, 1891,
we inaugurated our usual
JANUARY CLOSING SALE
—Prior to Stock Taking—

which sale will, it is believed, exceed in interest and importance any we have ever made. Every department in the house will share in it, and will offer very unusual advantages to buyers. We wish it distinctly understood, however, that we do not claim to have reduced everything; this would be impossible on a market firm and advancing in many lines of goods, but in a great retail stock, such as ours, perhaps the largest well-regulated Retail Dry Goods stock in the country, there are many goods, each lot moderate in quantity and perhaps somewhat broken in assortment which it pays us to turn into cash, besides the large indirect advantage—which we greatly value—of distributing say Half a Million Dollars of real bargains in Dry Goods among our customers, far and near. There are also holders of goods, who, recognizing the great outlet here afforded, come to us, and, in order to realize immediate cash, offer us bargain lots which we avail ourselves of in the interest of our patrons. In the recent condition of the money market these offerings have been unusually abundant.

We hope to see our patrons at our counters during this extraordinary Sale, but to those who cannot come, we will cheerfully forward samples on request, whenever practicable; but as the sale will undoubtedly be large, it may be impossible in all cases to forward the exact styles or shades of goods ordered. It would, therefore, be well to make a second selection in each instance.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER
MARKET AND EIGHTH STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

No more Baggy-Kneed Trousers if you use "the United Service Trousers Stretcher." Price, $1 50.
E. O. THOMPSON, TAILOR, CLOTHIER, IMPORTER, (Sole Agent),
1338 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dr A.H Strickler

BAXTER C. SWAN
MANUFACTURER OF
CHURCH, HALL AND LODGE FURNITURE
IN GREAT VARIETY.
Pews and Chapel Seatings, Pulpits, Pulpit Chairs, Communion and Altar Tables, S. S. Teachers' Desks, &c.
Write for information to
244 & 246 South Second St.
PHILADELPHIA, PA., U.S.A.

SOWING & REAPING
By the Author of Gates Ajar, Song Treasury, etc.
Hymns, Tunes and Carols for the Sunday school, Prayer, Praise and Gospel Service. Over 15,000 copies sold in advance of publication. 176 pages; beautiful lithograph title, superior in typography, press work, paper, binding and contents. Single copies, 35 cts, post paid. By express, $3.60 per doz., $30 per 100.
Address,
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

BLAIRSVILLE (Pa.) SEMINARY, Rev. T. R. Ewing, D.D., Principal.

THE
SHEPHERD BOY AND HIS DOG.
From the German of Gustav Nieritz.
BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

It is an interesting story with scenes laid both in Gemany and Russia.

It should be in every Sunday-school Library. Price, $1.00, postpaid.

Address,
Reformed Church Publication House
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

Most Worthy Books for Purchase

CHOICE AND POPULAR ALTO SONGS.
33 songs—each one a Gem. Price, $1 in heavy paper, $1.25 in bds, and $2 in gilt binding.

THE SONGS OF IRELAND.
A new and carefully revised collection of the best and most celebrated Irish songs. Some of the best melodies in existence, and bright, spirited words. 66 songs. Price, $1 in heavy paper, $1.25 in bds., and $2 in gilt binding.

Choice Song Collections.

SONG CLASSICS. Vol. 1,	50	songs.
SONG CLASSICS. Vol 2,	33	"
SONG CLASSICS. Low Voices,	47	"
CHOICE SACRED SOLOS,	34	"
CHOICE SACRED SOLOS, Low Voices,	40	"
CLASSIC, BARITONE AND BASS,	33	"
CLASSIC TENOR SONGS,	36	"
GOOD OLD SONGS WE USED TO SING,	115	"

Choice Piano Collections

PIANO CLASSICS. Vol. 1,	44	pieces.
PIANO CLASSICS. Vol. 2,	31	"
CLASSICAL PIANIST,	42	"
POPULAR DANCE COLLECTION,	66	"
POPULAR PIANO COLLECTION,	66	"
OPERATIC PIANO COLLECTION,	19	operas.

Price of Each Book, $1.00. Cloth Gilt, $2.00. All are Valuable Collections of the Best Music.

Churchill's BIRTHDAY BOOK of EMINENT COMPOSERS. A handsome and useful gift, $1.00.

Any Book mailed, post-paid, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY, Boston
J. E. DITSON & Co., 1228 Chestnut St., Phila.

KNABE
PIANOS.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
BALTIMORE, 22 and 24 East Baltimore Street,
New York, 148 Fifth ave. Washington 817 Market Space
F. A. NORTH & Co., Sole Agents,
1308 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS
Over 200,000 ESTEY ORGANS are singing their own praises the world over, as the most reliable organ made for tone, durability and fine finish. The ESTEY PIANO is as thoroughly and carefully made and guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has. If you want a first-class Piano that is sure to please you buy an ESTEY. Lowest prices for cash, or on easy monthly payments.
ESTEY, BRUCE & CO. 18 N. Seventh St. Philadelphia, Pa.

THE VOCALION
A complete church organ in miniature, of equal power and quality of tone, at one third the price, of pipe organs. Requires no tuning. Portable; can be shipped anywhere. It is destined to replace small pipe organs and large reed organs everywhere. Recommended by all the greatest organists, including:

Clarence Eddy,	Frederic Archer,
A. H. Messiter,	Eben Tourjee,
S. B. Whitney	Chas. J. Too',
Walter Damrosch,	D. Austin Pearce,

and hundreds of others.
Send for catalogue, postpaid.
WM. D. DUTTON & CO.,
GENERAL AGENTS,
1115 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ARCHITECTURE
CHAS. W. BOLTON, 1510 Chestnut St., Phila
Sketches of Churches, Public Buildings, Dwellings, etc., furnished gratis. Then, if desired, drawings and specifications will be prepared for a reasonable consideration.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum. M. C. 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE TRUST CO.
Capital paid up $1,500,000 Surplus over $100,000
DENVER, COLORADO.
First Mortgage Loans and Gold Debentures.
Loans fully guaranteed. Safe as Government Bonds.
Philadelphia Office, Room 302 Bullitt Building,
ROBT. FORESMAN, Manager.

Reformed Church Messenger.

"AS THE TRUTH IS IN JESUS."

VOL. LIX.—NO. 3. PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 15, 1891. WHOLE NO. 2923.

Entered at the Post-Office, Philadelphia, as second-class matter.

The Reformed Church Messenger.
ISSUED WEEKLY
IN THE INTERESTS OF THE
REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES
BY THE
REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE,
CHAS. G. FISHER, Proprietor,
Office: 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(For Terms, see page 11.)

Editorial Notes.

—As we go to press we learn of the death of Rev. D C. Tobias, which occurred on the 12th inst. Further particulars will be given in our next issue.

—The Acts and Proceedings of the three Synods: Pittsburgh, Potomac and Eastern, have made their appearance. They make interesting reading matter. The Stated Clerks have done faithful work. They are from the press of the Reformed Publication House.

—The Missionary Guardian has received a hearty welcome all over the Church. Pastors, it would seem, are almost vieing with each other in efforts to secure for it large subscription lists. We are sure their efforts will be greatly rewarded in the good their people will derive from reading it. Let the good work of interesting the membership in it go on, and the clerical force of the publisher will be kept busy for some time to come in enrolling names and subscriptions. Specimen copies will be cheerfully sent upon application.

—The Bi-synodic Board of Missions through its Executive Committee has taken a very wise step in commissioning Rev. Lewis Reiter as missionary at Basic City, Roanoke, and Buena Vista, in Virginia. The prospects for laying good foundations for our Church in these enterprising towns are very bright, and we lose nothing but gain much by taking possession of the ground at once. Rev. Reiter is well fitted for the work and good reports will come from that section in due course of time. Rev. Reiter's address from this date will be Roanoke, Va., instead of Waynesboro. Pastors having members residing in the places mentioned should inform Rev. Reiter at the earliest moment.

—As already announced, the Franklin and Marshall Alumni Association of Philadelphia will hold its fifth annual meeting and dinner at Hotel Bellevue, this city, on February 6th, at 5 P. M. It is the wish of the Executive Committee that the coming meeting shall surpass those of other years. And this can be so, if the Alumni will manifest proper interest in the matter. It is to be hoped that a prompt and favorable response will be given by every one to the notice of the secretary.

—The first triennial report of the Woman's Missionary Society of the General Synod and the addresses delivered at the meeting at Lebanon, Pa., during the meeting of the General Synod in June last have been published by the Publication Committee of the Society, of which Mrs. J. F. Unger is chairman. The whole makes a neat, readable and interesting pamphlet. Its circulation will no doubt awaken a great interest in the work undertaken by the women of the Church. The addresses give evidence of much zeal and earnestness. They also show that the difficulties and hinderances in the way are well known, but these seem not to deter them in the faithful prosecution of the work they have undertaken for the Master and the Church. We bespeak a favorable reception and a careful reading of the pages of this first publication issued by the Woman's Society.

—The publisher will be grateful to our subscribers if they would examine the little tag on their paper, and if their subscriptions are in arrears, to at once remit the amount due for the past and one year in advance. This will aid him greatly in meeting his obligations, which are by no means light from month to month. Let there be a general "paying up" all along the line! No one knows what a happy and pleasing effect it will have at our Publication House. It is an injunction—"Owe no man anything." Is not the Publisher sometimes slighted in doing obedience to it?

—Dr. M. D. Hoge has this to say in reference to the Church paper:

> "No intelligent church-member can now afford to dispense with the paper which keeps him posted in regard to the proceedings of our ecclesiasticul courts, the condition of our colleges and theological seminaries, the organization of new churches and the erection of new houses of worship, the settlement of new pastors, the work of our church committees, the new books best worth reading, the progress of Home and Foreign Missions, the actual condition of religion in all parts of the world, the new phases of unbelief by which it is assailed, the hindrances to its progress, whether from internal or external foes, and the methods by which it may be extended to the ends of the earth."

—In response to our appeal for contributions towards a fund which could be used to send the MESSENGER to such as are not able to pay for it themselves, some contributions have been sent in, which will enable us to make a start by sending it to one or more. We hope other donations will be sent us so as to enable us to send it to many more. We asked for a small sum. Such we have received, with thanks to the contributors. May many others follow their example! A small sum from every one of our subscribers will amount to a large sum and many will be made the happy readers of their church paper.

—A new edition of "WON BY PRAYER, or the Life and Work of Rev. M. Oshikawa," by Rev. A. R. Bartholomew, A.M., late Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, has just been published. This interesting little book should have a large sale. The edition that has been sold no doubt has done much good for the cause it was designed to aid. The circulation of it should therefore continue. Those interested in the cause of foreign missions should make every effort to get it into the hands of the members of the Church. Besides having its place in every family, it should be in every Sunday-school library of the Church. A portion of the proceeds from its sale goes into the treasury of the Board of Foreign Missions. This fact should be an incentive to help increase the amount of sales. The rates at which it can be obtained will be found in the Publisher's Department. A copy of it will be given for a new subscriber for THE MESSENGER. An old subscriber sending two dollars and a half will receive THE MESSENGER one year and a copy of it post-paid.

—We must again appeal to pastors to write short obituaries. This they must do if they wish them to appear at an early date in the paper. It is because of the unnecessary length of many that causes delay in their insertion, as a few of great length soon fill the space allotted to such. We receive a number of complaints from both writers and friends of deceased persons, because of the late appearance of obituaries. If writers will disregard the rule which stands at the head of the Obituary Column, they are to blame and not we, for any delay. We publish them just as soon as we can, and at the same time reserve the right to give preference to those of ministers and prominent laymen in the Church. If our request will not be complied with, we will be compelled to do as many Church papers do—charge so much a line for all over a certain number of lines. If such a rule is ever adopted by us, it will not be our fault.

—There are churches in every denomination, prominent ones too, when they are vacant, who spend months and some a year or more in looking for pastors When they do so, some one has well said:

> "It indicates that these churches find it difficult to secure men with whom they could expect success. But the difficulty may not be altogether with the pastors. It may be true, not of these churches in particular, but of churches in general which experience such disappointment, that they are looking for men who can succeed in spite of the hindrances which they themselves interpose. If a church refuses to support the second service, if it is cold and stiffly aristocratic towards strangers, if it is selfish and prejudiced against the introduction of popular forms of music and other attractions out of the straight-laced order of things, if it is worldly and more under the law of fashion than the law of Christ, if it has no eagerness to save souls and is cooly determined to evade or ignore all the demands for spiritual consecration, the man who can make it success will certainly be hard to find. But a church full of the zeal, the motive, the spirit and the purpose of the Christian religion ought not to find it very difficult to secure a pastor who would lead it to spiritual prosperity."

—An exchange has the following to say of a too common practice that is fruitful of nothing good, but the reverse:

> "He who is trying the door of other churches to find a more favorable opening for his sublime gifts, can be of no real service to any church to which he may chance to belong, for his purpose is not so much to serve the church as to make the church serve his personal ambitions, aims, and purposes."

Poetry.

ON THE HILLS OF JUDEA.

BY CLINTON SCOLLARD.

Where is the morning brighter,
  Where is the air more bland,
Where do the stars grow whiter,
  Than over this lonely land?
Slopes that are brown and barren
  Scarce show a spear green sod,
But wait for another Aaron,
  And the blow of his quickening rod.

Never a wild voice quavers,
  Never a song bird trills;
Only the warm light wavers
  Over the desolate hills.
Plodding, the pilgrim passes,
  Patient, the shepherds go,
Seeking the tender grasses
  Far in the vales below.

Shade there is nowhere growing
  Wide as the eye can sweep;
Founts there are nowhere flowing
  Down from the rocky steep.
Only the vulture veering
  High like a wind-blown weft,
Only the poppy peering
  Out from the ragged cleft.

Once there were orchards teeming,
  Once there were pastures fair,
Once there were vineyards gleaming
  Green in the golden air.
Now there is desolation:
  Then there was bounty: then
Flourished a haughty nation
  Strong with its million men.

How is its prowess shattered!
  Dust are its priests and kings:
The sons of its sons are scattered
  Like seeds on the swift wind's wings,
Their doom is a whole world's scorning,
  Yet where is the soul but thrills
Beholding the light of morning,
  On the broad Judean hills!

—Congregationalist.

Communications.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

REV. JOSEPH B. GROSS.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

"DIED: In Wilkesbarre, Pa., January 4, 1891, Rev. Joseph B. Gross, aged 88 years."

From a local obituary notice we copy the following paragraphs:

"Joseph B. Gross was born near Easton, Northampton county, Pa., in 1802, and remained in the family circle during his youth, engaging in the necessary and ordinary employments of home, while in the meantime he laid the basis of a solid education by a diligent application to general reading and study, and the pursuits of literature. It is rare to find a family whose membership filled so many distinguished stations in professional life. His brother, Samuel D. Gross, was the author of valuable and popular works on Surgery and Pathological Anatomy; he was professor of surgery in the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, and died recently in that city. The early lives of both were spent under the paternal roof, where home education was well grounded on the principles of sound literature, and opened up a way to a more extensive knowledge of classical learning than is usually obtained under similar circumstances.

"In those early years were imbibed those simple yet fundamental maxims and principles which are the enduring foundation of all wise conduct in life, all good institutions in human society. The love of truth, the sentiment of honor, fidelity and obedience are practical lessons which may be beneficially applied in every phase of life."

It was our good fortune to have made the acquaintance of Father Gross in 1878, and to have stood in close friendly relations with him until his death. We found in him a sympathetic neighbor, a kind adviser, a man of sterling character, a patriarch who had not lost his interest in the present generation.

During the year 1882, after a long and interesting conversation with him, he being the principal spokesman, we suggested to him that he should put in writing or publish what he deemed the more important of his personal recollections, as they were of historic value to his own, the Lutheran, and indirectly to the Reformed Church. A few days later, he brought us the following sketch, and added the remark that we might publish it after his death:

"Rev. Franklin Klein Levan, pastor of Zion's Reformed church, Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sir: In compliance with your wishes, I present to you the following concise sketch of my Christian ministry: My parents, who owned a large and valuable farm in 'The Forks of the Delaware,' about three miles north of Easton, were Philip and Joanna Julia Gross, both Pennsylvanians by birth. My father took an active and honorable part in the Revolutionary war and the acquisition of our national independence, as well as of our free institutions. My academic curriculum terminated at Wilkesbarre, Pa., under the supervision of Joel Jones, Esq., a graduate of Yale College, and finally Mayor of the City of Philadelphia.

"Though I have been in ecclesiastical relations more than fifty years, my pastoral labors embrace a period of only about thirty-five years, and have been performed chiefly and in nearly equal periods of time, in Eastern Pennsylvania and Western New York.

"My auditory was usually such as to make the use of the German and English languages absolutely necessary in the conduct of divine service, and it was not long, by the observance of a careful diligence and a proper appreciation of my duty as a pastor, before I could discourse in them not only with ease but even with fluency. Wer anhaelt der gewinnt, says the German adage.

"In the discharge of my arduous ministerial functions, I made it a sacred duty to be rigidly punctual in meeting my appointments. No matter how inclement the weather, or unfavorable the state of my health might be, unless the adverseness of either too much exceeded my sense of duty or strength of body, a promise—especially a clerical promise—I considered as positively inviolable; and, therefore, my people could ever confidently rely upon any it might be deemed desirable for me to make.

"My fellow-laborers in the ministry, pastorates being composed—as was often then the case—of members both of the German Reformed and Lutheran faith, were Hoffeditz, Decker and Willers. The first has long since ended his earthly career, and if an honest minister is happy hereafter, I presume to say that he is, without a doubt, very happy; the second, if he is still alive, resides in one of our Western States, whence his summons to the 'long home' cannot be long delayed; the third enjoys a green old age in the fertile and beautiful 'Lake Country,' and is blessed in the reminiscences of a long and useful life."

It must be borne in mind that Father Gross is here speaking of his Reformed colleagues, and that it was in the year 1882 when he wrote.

"Two of my pastoral relations, each of which lasted thirteen years, were maintained uninterruptedly in a spirit of amity, and finally dissolved with feelings of mutual regret and good-will; a circumstance which, besides the peaceful, indulgent character of the parishioners, may be ascribed to the exercise of a little prudence and fidelity to duty on my part.

"The synthetical method of teaching has chiefly characterized my pulpit instructions, the analytical discourse being deemed especially appropriate only to more abstruse investigations, which are better adapted to the cathedra and the rostrum, than to the Christian sanctuary.

"Without any knowledge, at the time, of the fact, that the distinguished theologian, Schleiermacher, never spoke in public, without a thorough familiarization with his subject, I rigidly pursued the same laborious but useful practice, as soon as I had entered the ministry. Already on Monday the preparation for the following Sabbath was begun; the texts selected, the heads and minor divisions, etc., laid down. A diligent and accurate study of the sermon now began, and was continued at intervals, till the close of the week. What I had thus acquired with suitable painstaking, I could now impart with appropriate animation and effect; an end, amply justifying the means.

"A chief means of success in the ministry, as far as the social relations of the pastor and his parishioners are concerned, is a sedate, pious and sensible wife, fitted to win the esteem and enlist the affections of the spiritual household of her husband. Such a wife I proudly claim and thankfully acknowledge to have had.

"At present it is but seldom that I officiate in any of the pastoral duties, and while I think it but just to nurse advancing years a little, I still endeavor to give useful employment to my pen, and thus my mind, which, in the eightieth year of life, thank God, continues buoyant and full of energy."

The wife, of whom Father Gross speaks in such manly terms, years after her departure, was Sophia Cornelia Pomp, daughter of Rev. Thomas Pomp, pastor of the Reformed (Third Street) Church in Easton, Pa. The charges which Mr. Gross served longest, and to which he refers above, were at Hamilton, Monroe County, Pa., and at Bearytown, Seneca County, New York. Many persons in these places will readily recall his giant figure, his open counsel and his serviceable life.

Father Gross was the author of a number of books, more or less well known. It was a passion with him to write books, and pay for having them published. They were not always financially profitable. That did not concern him very much, however.

He believed in righteousness, and never failed to stand up for it in every sphere of life. He was slow in forming convictions, but he held to those once formed most vigorously.

He was a majestic remnant of a former-day ecclesiastical life, bred and nourished in Eastern Pennsylvania; honest to the core, frank, brotherly. He was a child of the days when Lutherans and Reformed stood close to each other, and he remained that to the last. Requiescat in pace.

WYOMING.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

KEEPING THE SABBATH DAY.

REV. I. E. GRAEFF, D.D.

One day in seven, as a weekly day of rest, is firmly fixed in popular opinion and habit. The necessity of such release from physical toil and care is generally felt and acknowledged. Man needs it for body and mind; the intellectual and moral culture of the people depends largely upon it. And our domestic animals, which are joined with us in physical toil, should have the full benefit of it. There is no trouble, then, about having the day, but to have it in its proper character is not so easy a matter. It is intended to be a holy day of rest, but the tendency is all along to convert it into a merely secular holiday. Such was the tendency in previous ages, and it is perhaps more so now since the surging pressure of commercial and social interest is constantly encroaching upon the quiet religious habits and usages of the people.

The question of the proper observance of our Christian holy day is an intensely practical one. On account of the complicated condition of modern social and civil life, it is not always easy to mark the point at which desecration begins. Popular opinion will no longer sustain the enforcement of Puritanical rigidness, and much less would it submit to the legal rigor of ancient Pharisaic narrowness. Physical comfort and social recreation demand full sway, and the broad reign of industrial activity puts in a large claim for necessary physical toil. And, as may be supposed, there goes along with this rolling, surging stream of popular life the unholy greed for gain and the carnal love for pleasure. This makes the task of maintaining the sanctity of the Lord's day in proper Christian spirit and character a very difficult one. This very difficulty, however, proves it to be a vital problem of modern civilization and shows the necessity of solving this problem with a firm and intelligent grasp. The spirit of public and individual freedom is in the air and it is there to stay. No arbitrary influence with it would be wise, yet there is no lawful normal freedom without limit and beneficent control. Hence, they that will be free must learn to control themselves, and in order to do this they must be obedient to the laws of the country. This Republic rests on the moral and Christian convictions of the people, and all government in Christendom rests ultimately on the same foundation. It is simply superficial folly to deal with the great qesution of keeping the Lord's day holy as a matter of private interest and concern only. The religious influence of the day has been, and is, and will necessarily be, a vital factor in the civil and social condition of the people, and it therefore claims attention as of common and universal public concern.

As in all other questions of public interest, there is a difference of opinion, so in this Lord's day issue, good Christian people will not always be of the same mind. And some will hold extremely liberal views and will yield readily to the growing secular demands, while others will cling even more than is meet to the orthodox usages of by-gone days. But the Christian common sense, which ultimately rules all popular issues, will likely come in between the blind radicalism of the extremists and sustain the holy day, in its real and evangelical sanctity, with open and largely-frequented sanctuaries, as the only guarantee of a broadly-cultured, strong, and wisely self-reliant Christian manhood.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

MINISTERIAL SUPPORT.

CAN MINISTERS ENTERAIN AS THEY OUGHT?

An excellent report on ministerial support was made by a committee to the Synod at its last meeting held in Reading. That report has a history. The subject was brought up in the Lancaster Classis several years ago, and a committee was appointed, of which Elder George W. Hensel, of Quarryville, was chairman. He presented an able report on the subject, which was adopted, and then referred to the Synod for final action. After mature deliberation, therefore, the report above referred to was offered to the Synod at Reading and adopted, and an edition of the report was ordered to be printed for circulation throughout the Church. Will this able report accomplish the purpose designed? Or, will it fall, still-born, like so many other reports and resolutions of our classes and synods? That depends on whether our pastors and consistories make earnest with the matter, and see to having the action of Synod carried out.

In order to start the ball and keep it rolling, I propose to call attention to one phase of the subject, viz.: "Can ministers entertain as they ought on their present salaries?" Why not, it may be asked. I reply, they cannot, simply because they cannot afford it; and this is certainly a humiliating reply.

Ministers are expected, and they ought, to entertain. They are expected to entertain their ministerial brethren. A minister visits a brother minister, or he visits the town where a Reformed minister resides. Shall he be sent to a hotel? Others visit ministers, elders, deacons, members. They wish to consult on Church matters. They must see the pastor. But to entertain to any considerable extent involves an expense beyond the ordinary expense of living. The minister requires a respectable house, respectably furnished. The good housewife wishes some spare rooms for visitors. She knows what extra marketing is required when visitors are in the house. Almost weekly such visitations may be expected, sometimes several times in one week. There is an extra demand each time for market money, for the wife dare not be niggardly in her entertainment. Yet, where is the money to come from? The pastor's purse is soon empty, and he must go into debt for the mere necessaries of his table,—this, or else turn his visitors away, and get the reputation of being stingy, inhospitable, etc.

Now, but few think what a difference this makes in the cost of a pastor's living. It seems a small item, scarcely worth noticing, and yet, all housekeepers know that it becomes a large item in the course of a year. A few dollars a week or several times a week, is not much, but multiply this sum, a few dollars, by 52, or by twice 52, and you get, say $150 or $300 just for one item, and where is it to come from? Perhaps he must keep a horse, at a cost of $100 or $150 a year. Put this to the other item, and you have, at the smallest calculation, $250, and the largest, $450. But this is not much less than the whole salary some pastors get.

Now add to this an item for books, a few of which a pastor needs every year, if he is to keep up with the times. He must travel at times, for if others visit him on Church business, he must do the same. He has sickness in his family. Fortunately, doctors usually attend his family gratuitously, but we know cases where a partial charge is made. And in any case, the custom, whilst it shows the generosity of the medical profession, yet places the minister under obligation by a favor which he cannot return, because doctors do not, as a rule, get their pews free of rent. Why should ministers be required to depend on such charity? The very fact is an acknowledgement that ministers are not supported as they should be. We remember an aged teacher in our Church who refused this kindnesss. He required his physician to charge as usual for attendance on his family, and we thought, how much better to pay the doctor, as all other classes do!

But we did not intend to branch out to other expenses of the minister. The reader can do that. We wish merely to refer to the one item of entertaining the visitors, and we select this because ministers, as a class, are expected to do this more than other classes of the community, and also, because it is so generally overlooked. People do not estimate what a difference it makes in the expense of a family whether they entertain visitors or not.

Let the subject now be kept before the people until it begins to take hold of their consciences. Perhaps we should say, until it takes hold of the consciences of ministers, for they, as well as the members, have a responsibility. They should act on the principle laid down by the Apostle, "the laborer is worthy of his hire." The Aaronic priesthood tithed the people. God ordained it for their support.

Let pastors begin to ask a better salary, and let congregations begin to raise the amount they place in the call. Our Reformed Church is behind other churches in this matter of salaries. In looking over the minutes of the General Synod of the Dutch Reformed Church we noticed that the salaries of their professors in the seminary at New Brunswick is $2500 and a house free. Ours is, we believe, $1500. We inferred that they are ahead of us in about the same proportion in regard to pastors' salaries. Why should our Church pay its ministers so much less than other churches; An answer to this question might be a reflection on a Church we all honor and love. How and when shall we begin an improvement in this important matter?

X.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

SERVICE OR ENTERTAINMENET.

In reading the column of Church news giving the account of Christmas festivals, the reader is considerably perplexed by the question, What was the end or object of the festival held? Judging from many of the accounts of these festivals they were held for the purpose of entertaining or pleasing the assembled audience. The non-Sunday-school members seem to be the ones whom the Sunday-school at its Christmas celebration endeavored to please. On this plane of reasoning we may conclude that, to the extent that the audience was pleased was the festival successfully observed.

To call a Christmas service an entertainment is no doubt correct in many instances, where the service does not rise beyond the level of an entertainment. When the entertainment consists of all sorts of novel methods put into play for the delight of the audience without reference to the true aim of a Christmas festival, the name entertainment should be employed. But we doubt whether a Sunday-school has a right to make use of the solemn Christmas festival as an occasion for holding an entertainment.

If the Christmas festival is to be observed, it ought to be celebrated not with an entertainment but by holding a service. There is a vast difference between the two. The one looks into the realm of our finite life for its end; the other soars above the finite and seeks its objects in the domain of the Infinite. The one is to please man; the other to glorify God. The one is intended for man to whom we owe nothing for the true joy of Christmas; the other aims to adore God and to acknowledge His goodness.

Viewed from the standpoint of a service the Christmas festival is incalculably superior to an entertainment. When the carols are sung and the prayers are offerred, when the address is delivered and the alms collected, when the gifts and greetings are exchanged, in every part of the service the audience realize that every one is a worshipper and God the object of that worship. The intoning power of the service is the note of joy expressive of man's appreciation of God's great love in the gift of His Son. In the service Immanuel we have in concrete form what is a correct conception of a form for the observance of the Christmas festival.. May others follow.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

REV. SIMON WOLF.

Simon Wolf, the subject of this obituary notice, was born at Lewisburg, Union County, Pa., February 22, 1815. The writer of this tribute to his memory has not been furnished with any data whatever as to his childhood and youth, nor of his education and early life, and therefore must, of necessity, pass them by without special notice.

When about twenty-nine years of age he became a preacher of the Evangelical Association or Albright denomination, and remained in that connection for some thirty-one or thirty-two years, until the spring of 1876, when he was between sixty-one and sixty-two years of age. During those years his ministry among the Albrights, he preached often and in many places, and, we have been informed, filled the office of presiding elder for some time.

Gradually, however, he became more and more dissatisfied with their method of preaching and Church life. Accordingly and without any inducements being held out to him, he appeared before the West Susquehanna Classis, at its annual meeting held at Jacksonville, Centre County, Pa., May 18, 1876, and formally made application for licensure and reception into the Reformed Church. After careful examination as to his qualifications and motives, which were found satisfactory to the Classis, he was regularly licensed to preach the Gospel in the Reformed Church, and received into the ranks of our ministry as a licentiate. He continued to reside at Lewisburg, and preached in the way of supply to some neighboring vacant congregations as opportunity presented.

In the autumn of 1879, he received and accepted a call to the pastorate of the Hickory Bottom charge in Blair County, Pa., then still in connection with the Mercersburg Classis. At a special meeting of the Classis, held at Everett, Bedford County, October 31, 1879, he was received as a licentiate from the West Susquehanna Classis, his call to said pastoral charge duly confirmed, and on the evening of the same day he was regularly ordained to the work of the Christian ministry in the Reformed Church, by a committee consisting of Revs. J. D. Miller, D. N. Dittmar and D. M. Whitmore, who at the same time and place ordained the licentiate, Daniel H. Leader, and installed him as pastor of the Everett charge. The installation of Pastor Wolf took place in the Reformed Church at Millerstown or Henrietta, November 13, 1879, by Revs. C. J. Reiter and I. N. Peightel. Father Wolf continued pastor of the Hickory Bottom charge until the early part of 1884, and as such stood in connection with the Juniata Classis, after its formation in the summer of 1883. He labored faithfully and earnestly, and added upwards of sixty members to this charge during his pastorate, by confirmation and certificate—mostly by confirmation.

In the beginning of 1884, he received and accepted a call to the McConnellsburg charge in Fulton County, Pa., and at a special meeting of the Mercersburg Classis, held at Mercersburg, March 28, 1884, he was received a second time as a member of said Classis, his call confirmed, and he was duly installed April 20, 1884, by Rev. J. Hassler and the writer, as a committee of the Classis, the services taking place in the McConnellsburg Church. In this relation Pastor Wolf continued up to the time of his death, which occurred December 23, 1890, at the advanced age of 75 years 10 months and 1 day. The additions by confirmation and certificate, during his pastorate at McConnellsburg Church, number upwards of seventy. As Mr. Wolf kept no regular records of his ministerial labors, the foregoing statistics are gathered from the minutes of Synod. It is to be regretted that they cannot be made fuller and more complete.

Rev. Wolf naturally of a strong and robust constitution commenced to suffer more or less for a couple of years prior to his death from kidney troubles, which ultimately proved fatal. He continued to preach and discharge his duties as best he could, until about nine weeks before his death, his last public service being to administer the holy communion to the Church at McConnellsburg.

The services in connection with his funeral were held on Christmas afternoon, and were conducted by the Revs. Z. A. Yearick, Dr. G. W. Aughinbaugh, J. W. Knappenberger, and the writer of this obituary, all participating and taking part therein. The interment was made in the cemetery some four or five miles south of McConnellsburg, Revs. Yearick and Deatrick officiating at the grave. Rev. Wolf's family consists of his bereaved widow and two grown-up children, a daughter who is married, and a son, who have the sympathy of a large number of friends and acquaintances. W. M. D.

For the Reformed Church Messenger.

ORPHANS' HOME COLUMN.

BY REV. T. M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

Seventeen nice, fat ducks furnished the most substantial feast of the New Year dinner. Just enough to satisfy all and none to spare.

Our girls are now all provided with nice red dresses for winter Sunday use. The goods, a good woolen material, was a present from Miss Sybilla Heitshu, of Lancaster, and the dresses were made here at the Home by the seamstress and our girls. Thirty-one red dresses, what an amount of work! But the effect is very pleasing. If one lady can and does provide goods for uniform dresses for the girls, could not and will not some man with a large heart present goods that we may have uniforms for the boys? The brown suits which were bought four years ago did excellent service, but many of them are now worn for everyday use. We ought to have uniforms by the time of our next anniversary. If we had the goods now, the suits could be made to advantage during the winter. A mixed grey color would be very suitable and serviceable. If there is no one man who will do this, will not perhaps a congregation or Sunday-school supply the goods or the money to buy it?

What a blessed thing it is to have worldly possessions, but only blessed if those possessions are properly used. Many good people, rich in the eyes of their neighbors, use their possessions for the support of charities in a quiet way, unknown to their fellow men. Some business men have a rule to give a certain per cent. of their profits to good works; others give a regular sum every year, not dependent upon their income. Many friends of the Home annually contribute a regular sum, and it is always an especial pleasure to hear from them. A few years ago several members of a certain congregation began the custom of annually giving $100 each on Thanksgiving day for the support of Bethany's Orphans' Home. This they have kept up ever since and as regularly as Thanksgiving day comes we receive $300, contributed by three persons, besides the regular congregational collection. Could not many others do likewise? Surely there are others in the Church blesed with means who could easily do it and, as one of these contributors writes, "they would not feel it at the end of the year." This is spoken out of experience. May the Lord incline the hearts of many more to do likewise.

During the last few months the Superintendent, at the invitation of pastors, has visited quite a number of congregations and presented the claims of the Home to the people. He was everywhere most cordially received, and it could easily be seen that the people of Eastern Pennsylvania take a deep interest in the work carried on at Bethany Home. If we could only tell all the people, as friend talks with friend, of the work carried on here, in the name of the Lord, there would be no difficulty to secure the means to properly support our family and even a much larger family than we have at present. To go with the pastors and visit the members at their homes affords the people an opportunity to ask, and the Superintendent to answer just such questions as they want to know and which cannot always be presented through the paper or discussed from the pulpit. Shrewd business men, acquainted with the management of affairs can, by a few questions asked and freely answered, in this way gain more information concerning this work than by listening to a long discourse on the beauty of giving. Such we met, and conversed with them to our mutual benefit.

"Where there is a will there is a way." One of our friends, during the Christmas season, grew very enthusiastic over the envelope system of collecting money for the Home. He was largely instrumental in raising nearly $60 in a small congregation for the Home. Not satisfied with this, he put a number of envelopes into his pocket, and as he went about his business (he is a traveling salesman,) he handed the envelopes out to his friends and business acquaintances. The result was a second check, which helped to relieve the Home of its debt and to make further provision for the family. What a host, for the relief of widows and orphans, a hundred such men would be, and probably the traveling salesmen, members of the Reformed Church, could be counted by the thousands.

Some time ago, in company with three of our little girls, we visited the congregation at Macungie, Rev. T. N. Reber, pastor. The girls went prepared to entertain the people at the missionary meeting with music and also recite several pieces. They were most cordially received and entertained by the people. Their singing was very acceptable and several times so affecting that the whole congregation seemed to be in tears. At the evening service they were asked to repeat a number of the pieces which they sang during the day. This visit aroused new interest in the Home. Would it not be well to go out oftener and let the people see and hear some of our children? The Superintendent would be pleased to do so after a while, but he would prefer not to go on Sunday, rather during the week and hold an entertainment and speak about the Home, some week day evening. We have a congregation here at the Home, and it is not well for the pastor to be away too much on Sunday, even in such a good cause as speaking or preaching in the interest of the Home. Pastors who think it would be a matter of interest to their people to see and hear our children, can address the Superintendent in reference to the matter.

Missions.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

BY REV. A. C. WHITMER, SUPERINTENDENT OF MISSIONS.

MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

As is well known, the Board of Missions meets once a year, but the Executive Council meets quarterly.

The Council met in Steelton, Pa., January 5th and held four sessions. All the members were present, and Rev. Lewis Reiter as advisory.

The Council sent congratulations to the missions at Hazleton, Pa., and Boulder, Iowa, on their self-support.

The Board having appointed Rev. Lewis Reiter exploring missionary in the Valley of Virginia for three months, he presented an interesting detailed report of his work and the field, which convinced the Council that the work there should be taken up at once; and accordingly, Rev. Reiter was commissioned to take immediate charge of Roanoke, Buena Vista and Basic City, Va.

The question of transferring our Pacific coast missions having come down from the last General Synod, the Council resolved that while we lay no claim to the territory of California, having abandoned it, we do feel justified in transferring our missions in Oregon and Washington. Letters from several of our missionaries there confirmed this judgment.

The treasurer was instructed to pay the fourth and last payment of $500 to the Church of the Strangers, Philadelphia, as directed four years ago by the Eastern Synod, out of church-building money from the Classes of that Synod.

Both Rev. D. B. Shuey and Rev. D. S. Fouse, having urged our Board to begin work in St. Joseph, Mo., the Executive Council was obliged to answer that at present it is simply impossible, as the income of the Board does not allow us to enroll any new missions. Let pastors and people make careful note of this, and by larger giving enable the Board to enlarge its work.

A missionary service was held on Monday evening, President Miller presiding, with several addresses by members of the Council and by Rev. Lewis Reiter.

The Missionary Guardian was brought to the attention of the mission; and the missionary and his people were congratulated on what they had already done.

The Council in a body visited the new church and were pleased with it. The plasterers are at work on it, and in a few weeks the Infant Class room will be occupied by that part of the Sunday-school, but the main room, a few months later.

The Executive Council adjourned on Tuesday afternoon to meet in Emmanuel's Reformed Church, Hanover, Pa., on Monday, April 6, 1891.

CHRISTMAS TIDINGS.

PENNSYLVANIA.

South Easton.—St. Peter's, Rev. Jonathan W. Miller, pastor. The first service was held at 6 A.M. The pulpit platform and auditorium were beautifully decorated with two large trees, festooning, etc. The music, under the leadership of Mr. G. Nelson Rice, was of a high order. Besides the regular quartette and organ, there was a cornet, a clarionet, a flute and a violin. While the pastor and his wife were at the church several of the men carried a beautiful new Eldredge "B" sewing machine into their parlor, which was a gift of the Ladies' Union of the congregation to Mrs. Miller.

During the day every member of the pastor's family received substantial tokens of the kindly feelings of this good people.

At 7 P.M. the Sunday-school entered the church. The programme, which was interesting and well rendered throughout, consisted of Scripture reading, prayer, hymns, anthems, duets and recitations. The usual distribution of gifts to scholars and teachers formed part of the programme. But perhaps the most interesting part of the entire service occurred when the superintendent of the Sunday-school, Mr. Uriah Palmer, arose and announced that they would now be favored with an address by their pastor. In response to this invitation the pastor stepped upon the platform. To his surprise and embarrassment the superintendent in a neat little speech presented him, in behalf of the congregation, with a beautiful mail pouch purse, in which were found five ten dollar gold pieces. These and other gifts to family were too much for a speech. He kindly thanked the Ladies' Union, members and friends for the tangible evidence of their appreciation of his and his family's labors among them.

The offerings, amounting to $13.79, were for Bethany Orphans' Home.

Waynesboro.—Rev. Sefellen E. Stofflet, pastor. St. Paul's. The Sunday-school held its services on Christmas night. An excellent programme was rendered. The music was pronounced fine. The children received the usual gifts. Offerings for Bethany Orphans' Home.

—Harbaugh's. The service entitled "Christmas Voices," with cornet accompaniment, was rendered on Christmas evening. A large concourse of people was present. The whole school received gifts.

The society of "King's Workers," connected with the church, held its monthly meeting on Saturday evening, January 3rd, 1891. It has a membership of 50, and is doing a good work.

Turbotville.—Rev. D. E. Schoedler, pastor. The service, "Immanuel," was rendered in effective style in the Paradise church on Christmas eve, and in the Turbotville church on Christmas evening. The offerings were devoted to local objects. The Turbotville Sunday-school presented the pastor with a Trenton lamp, for use in his study, and his daughter Lizzie, organist of the Sunday-school, with a toilet set.

Special offerings for Bethany Orphans' Home will be taken up in the Paradise and Delaware Run congregations during the month of January.

St. Clair.—Rev. T. J. Bower, pastor. St. John's Reformed church held its festival on Christmas at 6 P.M. These services consisted principally of reading, recitations, speaking and singlng, and in connection, the service, "Immanuel, God with us," was also used. The children received gifts. The pastor was remembered by presenting to him a well-filled purse.

The newly organized congregation at New Castle held its Christmas services on the evening previous, and was well attended. This congregation is full of zeal and enthusiasm. It has a Workers' Aid Society which has been in existence for three months, and has in its treasury over one hundred dollars, which they desire to be used to lay the foundation of a small chapel, if ground can be purchased soon upon which to erect it.

At Frackville services were held on Friday evening, December 26th. The service, "Immanuel, God with us," was used, and also many other recitations and singing, after which the children received gifts and the pastor was not forgotten.

On Saturday evening, 27th, preparatory services were held, at which time confirmation took place. On Sunday the Holy Communion was observed. This was the first communion that was held by this new congregation. About thirty-five persons communed, of whom sixteen were confirmed on the Saturday previous. This mission is very much in need of a church, as many do not feel like worshiping in a hall, so they do not attend. They say if the mission had a church they would connect with it at once. There are, no doubt, fifty members scattered through this beautiful town. Efforts will be made soon to purchase ground, for it will be a pity to let this well organized congregation go to nothing with its large Sunday-school numbering over one hundred scholars.

Harrold's.—Rev. M. H. Mill, pastor. The festivities of Harrold's charge were ushered in on Christmas eve at New Stanton. The exercises, both literary and musical, were a beautiful expression of sacred rejoicing over the Saviour's nativity. The decorations were elaborate and tasteful, the presents numerous and some very handsome. The offerings are to be devoted to the orphans. At a recent communion in this congregation twelve new members were added by confirmation.

The Harrold's congregation celebrated their Christmas service on Christmas morning and evening. The exercises were well rendered and highly appreciated by the large audiences. Addresses were delivered by two ex-superintendents, Wm. Bear, Greensburg, and Elmer Wible, a medical student in the Western Medical College, Pittsburgh, Mr. King, of Pittsburgh, and the pastor. The decorations were chaste and beautiful, also a large number of presents were distributed. Offerings for the orphans. At both places the pastor and his wife were kindly remembered.

Emlenton.—Rev. J. J. Wagoner, pastor. The service was held in Emlenton on Christmas eve, and at Salem on Christmas evening. The beautiful service, "Immanuel, God with us," was used. The singing was excellent, and highly appreciated by the large audience. The offering was for the Orphan Home which amounted to $15.10—Emlenton, $6.10; Salem, $9. Some friend on Christmas eve presented the church at Emlenton with two cushioned chairs for the altar. The two congregations presented their pastor with a purse containing $22.

Jonestown.—Rev. J. A. Wickert, pastor. The services of St. John's Reformed congregation were held on the evening of Christmas. The service, "Immanuel, God with us," was used by the school, and under the efficient leadership of the superintendent, Mr. Adam Yaegly, and able assistance of the organist, Miss Ellen Miller, the service proved to be both devotional and highly attractive. Nine girls of the school beautifully rendered the extra service with banners. The old-fashioned Christmas tree found a place in the midst of a simple but tasteful decoration. The school was presented with the usual gifts. Among the presents were a full purse for the pastor, a filled envelope for the organist, and two well filled baskets of envelopes, containing $15.97 for the orphans at Womelsdorf.

Services were also held on Christmas Day in the Union Schools of Walmer's and Zion's congregations, at which the pastor of the Reformed congregation made addresses, and others were made by a student from the Lutheran Theological Seminary. At Walmer's the offering, $8.06, was divided equally between the Reformed and Lutheran parts of the school.

Sunbury.—Rev. J. Calvin Leinbach, pastor. The Christmas festivities began with service at 6 o'clock, A.M. At 6 o'clock P.M., the children's service was held. The Evening News speaks of this festival as follows: "The chorus of augmented choir and Sunday-school children, with orchestral and organ accompaniment, was grand, and from the very first selection it was evident that a musical feast was in store for the large audience. The service, 'Immanuel, God with us,' written and composed by Rev. J. Calvin Leinbach, the pastor of the church, and F. K. Hill, the organist, was beautiful indeed, and by far the grandest service that has ever been gotten up for Sabbath schools on this occasion, and was rendered with a skill and precision that denoted thorough training by the director, F. K. Hill. The orchestra and chorus worked well together and the effect of the ensemble was grand. The duett by Mrs. H. B. Smith and Miss Christie Dietz was the most pretentious number in the service and the ladies rendered it most brilliantly. The solo by Mrs. Smith was given with more than her usual artistic excellence, and the violin obligato played by the composer added materially to the charming rendition of the selection. In its entirety the service was a beautiful one, and the children richly merited the gifts they received at its close. The Christmas offering amounted to $56, part of which was devoted to Bethany Orphans' Home. The congregation also remembered the poor among themselves.

Allentown.—Christ church, Rev. M. H. Diefenderfer, pastor. The Sunday-school held its services on Christmas eve. The service entitled "Immanuel," by Messrs. Leinbach and Hill, was used with an orchestral accompaniment. The chnrch was decorated tastefully. The offerings, $26.06, were for Bethany Orphans' Home.

New Freedom.—Bethany church, Rev. A. F. Driesbach, pastor. The Sunday-school observed Christmas in a most appropriate manner on Christmas night. The service, "Christmas Voices," was rendered in an effective manner. It was interspersed with beautiful recitations and other features bearing on the occasion. Elder M. W. Bahn, the superintendent, in connection with a body of able teachers, so succeeded in building up this school, that it bears the reputation of being one of the best conducted in the entire community.

—Shrewsbury. Christmas was appropriately observed in this congregation on Christmas eve. The service, "Immanuel, God with us," was used. The singing and recitations were grand. The church was beautifully decorated, and the general verdict of the large audience was that it was one of the most delightful services ever held in Shrewsbury on Christmas.

St. Clairsville Charge.—Rev. S. Z. Beam, D.D., pastor. Services were held at Imler Cross Roads on Christmas morning. The house was beautifully decorated. The performances by members of the Sunday-school were interesting. The children each received a gift. Addresses were made by both pastors. This is a union school. The collection was made for the Orphans' Home.

At St. Clairsville the service was in the afternoon. Here also the church was handsomely decorated, and the performances good. The service, "Immanuel, God with us," was used with good effect.

Addresses were delivered by the Rev. Blackwelder of the Lutheran church and the pastor. The pastor and family were remembered kindly with gifts, for which they feel grateful. Here also the contribution was for the Orphans' Home at Butler.

New Holland.—Rev. J. S. Hartman, pastor. Early service at 6 o'clock at Vogansville. The Sunday-school at New Holland rendered very successfully the new service, "Immanuel." Many regarded it as the best rendered for years. The orchestral arrangement merits special commendation.

Eddyville.—Rev. S. T. Wagner, pastor. The festival was observed by the Sunday-school of the Reformed church of Eddyville on Christmas eve. The service was for the children and by the children. It was much enjoyed by all.

Maytown.—Rev. M. M. Noacher, pastor. Christmas was appropriately observed in Maytown and Conestoga Centre. Both Sunday-schools held this service on Christmas evening. The churches were tastefully decorated, though not elaborately. Recitations and addresses were delivered by members of the schools. The pastor not being able to be present at Conestoga the address for the occasion was delivered by J. Philip Harner, a student of the Theological Seminary at Lancaster. The offerings at Maytown were devoted to missionary work among the Hungarians.

The pastor received of the Conestoga Centre congregation a gift of $20.

Saegerstown.—Rev. D. H. Leader, pastor. The celebration in the Saegerstown charge was of an unusually entertaining and edifying character. That remarkably fine service, "Immanuel," was used both at Saegerstown and Watson Run, and no pains were spared to make its rendering most impressive. Both schools had been repeatedly and thoroughly drilled. A feature of the service at Saegerstown was the superior manner in which the recitations were delivered. Mr. W. O. Kern, Frank Adams and Caroline Smith (the two latter not a dozen years old) spoke with singular and pleasing effect. They had been carefully trained by Miss Emma Mayer, late Teacher of Elocution in the State Normal School at Indiana, Pa., who, herself, rendered a fine and appropriate selection. At Watson Run the programme was varied considerably, and the whole entered into with hearty zeal, which made it a delightful treat. At both places offerings were received for the orphans.

The Family.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE YOUNG PROPHETESS:

A TALE OF THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE.

BY REV. R. LEIGHTON GERHART.

CHAPTER III.

A RUSH FOR THE ARMORY.

Whether the suppressed excitement of Harold convinced the young girl of the wisdom of obedience, or whether a touch of contrition made her more compliant than usual, it is impossible to say; but she no sooner received her cousin's warning than, wheeling her horse, she set off at a slow gallop for the castle, the falconer running by her side. The approach of the two was seen from a distance, and the evident haste displayed together with the absence of Otho at once noted, created a sense of misgiving in the minds of the servants and retainers. Silencing the questioners who thronged about him on his arrival, Harold, followed slowly by the Lady Serena, hastened to seek the Countess. She was in her chamber, surrounded by a group of women, busily engaged on an elaborate piece of needlework, destined for the great altar of the cathedral, then in process of erection in Heilbrun. On learning the news, the warden was at once summoned, and instructed to raise the drawbridge, should that be deemed necessary, and to take such steps as in his judgment seemed best for the protection of the castle. The Countess made careful and anxious inquiry about Otho, and seemed relieved on being informed that he only tarried behind to gain more exact information of the nature and import of the wonderful mass of people coming up the highway.

The warden, on leaving the presence of the Countess, gave immediate orders for the mustering of the garrison and the distribution of arms. The great alarm-bell of the castle was rung, to call in the laborers from the field, to signal the herdsmen to bring in their herds and flocks, and also to warn the people in the surrounding country of the approach of danger. The order for the mustering of the garrison followed by the ringing of the great bell, was quite sufficient to set the great castle in an uproar. Men came running from every quarter. The armory was thronged in a few moments, and corslets and helmets taken down from the wall and buckled on in a trice; cross-bows were bent and tested, halberds examined as to their keenness of edge and strength of staff, and arquebuses loaded and primed. Finally, the retainers and men-at-arms, about one hundred and fifty in number, were sent in small squads to their stations along the walls, in the court-yard and by the great entrance, ready to act at once. To provide as surely as possible for the safety of Otho, twelve stout and thoroughly-equipped men-at-arms, under command of a competent officer, were sent down the road to meet him. Having attended to this, the warden hastened to make sure the closing of the castle gates.

According to the method of defence observed at that time, the great fortress, though standing on an eminence commanding a wide view of the surrounding country, was enclosed on all sides by a deep moat or trench filled with water. Over this a heavy bridge, raised and lowered from within the walls by means of great chains, formed the main passage-way to the castle. This was the draw-bridge. Proceeding hastily forward, the warden passed under the ponderous stone arch-way out upon the bridge, and began a close scrutiny of the chains. They were corroded by rust, several links being so worn by generations of use (for the building was more than a century old), that a severe wrench, it was evident, might part them.

"It may be they will hold," remarked the warden to a man-at-arms by his side, "yet it were best to test them," and elevating his voice, he cried, "Up drawbridge," with the words stepping back under the shelter of the arch.

The harsh creaking of the windlass told immediately that the order was being obeyed. The bridge rose slowly, but had scarcely reached half its elevation, before a dull, bursting sound, succeeded by the crash of falling chains, showed that the fears of the warden had been only too well-founded. One of the chains had parted. The creaking of the windlass ceased; the bridge, supported only on one side, swagged heavily, so severely straining the remaining chain, that it, too, parted, and with a sounding thud, the massive bridge fell back into its former position.

"Now, by Our Lady, if my Lord were here, it would go badly with us," muttered the warden. "Haste, Louis!" addressing the man by his side; "call the smith, and bid him come quickly. It were bad, indeed, if these strangers should find us in this plight—though I fear them not very much—yet this mishap greatly weakens our defence."

"Would it not be well to hew the bridge off and let it fall into the moat?" volunteered a man at the windlass, whose pallid cheek betrayed his alarm; and without waiting the order, he shrieked, "Axes! axes! bring axes!"

"Who ventured that order?" cried the warden, sharply; and spying the culprit as he spoke, he raised his hand and would have dealt him a blow if the man had not quickly retreated beyond his reach.

"Nay, you are a coward by birth, and I pardon you," said the officer, recovering his temper. "Hew the bridge off, and shut ourselves in, like mice in a trap! Nay, nay, man; your fears have got the better of your senses,—if you ever had any. I trow, if you were as bold in assault as you are quick in retreat, your weight in gold would not purchase you."

At this juncture, the smith, a low-browed, swarthy man, came running to the spot, bearing his tools in his hands, and, following him, a lad, carrying a ponderous sledge.

"Ha! smith, you at least are no laggard," and the warden looked the approval he spoke.

"Thanks for your kind words, sir. How many links are needed?"

"You shall count them yourself."

"The chains must be removed to the forge," said the smith, after a brief examination. "Two links are parted, and,—one—two—three are worn to the breaking point."

"That would require an hour's work, and before that the gates must be closed," answered the warden, frowning.

"Then bring the anvil here; the work cannot be done without it."

Two men started at once, and were soon seen returning, bending beneath the weight of iron they bore. Though it was necessary to heat the pieces of iron required for the new links at the forge, yet so promptly and skillfully did the hero of the anvil labor that the needed repairs advanced to completion rapidly. They were not more than half made, however, before the cry came from the walls: "Look yonder! look yonder! they are coming!"

The crowd at the gate gazed down into the valley, and there beheld the long line of the advancing host, their banners of varied colors, crimson, purple, white and gold, shining in the red glory of the sun, now rapidly sinking to rest. But the smith, never even glancing up, the sweat, mingled with the grime of the forge, rolling in black beads down his cheeks, toiled on, striking swiftly and surely, and turning the chains with a deftness and skill that repeatedly evoked exclamations of praise from the crowd of lookers-on.

"One more link! one more link!" at length he shouted, straightening himself up, and rolling his eyes. "Where's that boy?"

"Here! here!" and holding before him, clasped in the tongs, a red and fretting piece of iron, the boy pushed through the crowd and handed the glowing metal to the smith. He seized the tongs, laid the iron on the anvil, with a few rapid strokes beat it into the required shape, then drawing the broken chains together, inserted the link, laid it once more on the anvil, and, after a few swift blows, lifted himself upright, with a smile on his swarthy features, growled: "It is done, sir;" gathered up his tools, and stepped off the bridge.

It was none too soon, for the strange army was already within a few rods of the castle. Every-one expected to hear the order given for the closing of the gates, but it did not come. The warden stood on the bridge keenly scrutinizing the vanguard of the hosts, an expression of anxiety on his stern countenance. Where was Otho and the men-at-arms sent to his aid? They could not be seen; not a helmet or halbert was in sight. At length, slowly retreating, he gave the command, and the draw-bridge was raised. Lining the walls and leaning over the parapet, peering from the narrow windows of the great towers,—from every vantage afforded to view the sight, retainers and servants, men and women gazed down in silent, blank astonishment at the wondrous spectacle; not an army of soldiers, which the larger number, from the scant information received, had expected, but an army of children, girls and boys, some youths of fourteen and sixteen but the larger number scarce more than twelve, while many were of the tender ages of eight and ten. They wore the attire of pilgrims, long gray coats, the breast ornamented with a cross of red cloth. Some wore broad-brimmed hats, others had the hoods of their cloaks drawn over the head, and each carried a long staff to aid him in walking. Dusty, and exhausted from hunger and fatigue as all appeared to be, a spirit of enthusiasm spread through their ranks as they approached, and suddenly, as at a given signal, those in front broke into song, chanting the profane ascription of praise to the Virgin,—the Marian te Deum:

> "We praise thee, O Mother; we acknowledge thee to be > the Virgin.

Copyrighted by Chas. G. Fisher, 1890.

Thee, star of the sea, the splendor of the Eternal Father illuminates ;
To thee all angels cry aloud, the heavens and all the Powers therein ;
Thee cherubim and seraphim, with us, with lowly voices proclaim—
Virgin, virgin, virgin of virgins, without peer ;
Before the birth (of Jesus), during the birth, and after the birth,
Thee, glorious Virgin, the ranks of apostles and prophets praise :
Thee, the martyrs testify to be the Mother of their Lord.
The holy Church throughout all the world doth acknowledge thee,
Mother of an Infinite Majesty."

From rank to rank the song spread, growing in volume, until in waves of sound, like the waves of the sea, it rose to heaven.

CHAPTER IV.

THE CASTLE SURRENDERS.

When the van reached the moat, it was of course brought to a stand, but the crowd pressing on from the rear spread itself out to right and left of the gate-way, until the entire front of the castle, with its long line of walls and towers, was covered. Yet there seemed to be no sign of pause in the advance ; crowding upon those in front, thousands upon thousands pressed forward until every available foot of ground was occupied ; and the inmates of the castle looked down upon such a sea of faces and such a multitude of fluttering banners, as they had never before beheld, and were destined never to see again. In an ecstacy of wild enthusiasm, the children continued the chant, beating the ground with staves and feet. The pressure from the rear was now becoming so great that, driven to the very verge of the moat, those in front were in peril of being forced over the bank into the water, and cries of distress began to be heard mingled with the chant of praise. Perceiving this, a youth of about fourteen, who seemed to be a leader, was, at his own command, lifted up on the shoulders of two of his comrades, and brought thus into view of those in the rear, was able to communicate with them. His orders, shouted at the top of his boyish voice, were repeated by others, and gradually the crowds in the rear came to a halt. The chant died away, and facing the castle the children stood in silent expectation. Elbowing his way to the very front, the youth referred to, now cried out: "We demand entrance in the name of the Virgin. Lower your draw-bridge." His voice and manner, no less than his words, werefull of authority.

"Who are you?" It was the Countess who asked, as, surrounded by her women, she stood on the battlements above the great entrance, in full view of all. There was a touch of haughtiness in her voice, for the imperious manner and speech of the youth had roused her pride. What right had he to demand entrance into her castle?

"We are the children of the Highest," was the exultant reply.

"Whither are you marching? and what is your purpose?"

"We go to get the Cross beyond the sea, and to baptize the Moslem infidel."

The words were no sooner spoken than thousands of children took them up, crying at the top of their shrill voices :

"We go to get the Cross beyond the sea, and to baptize the Moslem infidel !"

"What do you demand of us?" inquired the Countess more kindly, when at length the hubbub subsided.

"Food and shelter, noble lady."

"We are utterly unable to feed your host. What are your numbers?"

"Near unto thirty thousand."

"Thirty thousand children !" exclaimed the Countess. "Such a tale I never heard ! Such a sight I never beheld !" Then turning to those about her, she said : "Is it some mad delusion? or is God indeed in this? And where is Otho? Surely these children could not have harmed him ; and the men sent to his aid? they were well armed. I see no sign of conflict."

"I think there is no need of fear, noble lady," spoke the warden. "These children have no thought of battle. My young Master, with the men-at-arms, has doubtless allowed the procession, for such it is more than an army, to press before him, and is now held back by the throngs. See, the road from side to side is packed !"

(To be Continued.)

Youth's Department.

TOUCH IT NEVER.

Children, do you see the wine
In the crystal goblet shine?
Be not tempted by its charm.
Children, hate it !
Touch it never,
Fight it ever.

Do you know what causeth woe
Bitter as the heart can know?
'Tis that self-same ruby wine
Which would tempt that soul of thine.
Children, hate it !
Touch it never,
Fight it ever.

Never let it pass your lips,
Never even let the tips
Of your fingers touch the bowl ;
Hate it from your inmost soul.
Truly hate it !
Touch it never,
Fight it ever.

Fight it ! With God's help stand fast
Long as life or breath shall last,
Heart meet heart, and hand join hand,
Hurl the demon from our land.
O then hate it !
Touch it never,
Fight it ever.

Selected.

CAPTAIN ROBERT.

Robert was kept in the house by a cold, so he flattened his nose against the glass and watched a military procession pass by. They were in very gay uniform, with very bright buttons, and kept step beautifully.

Robert watched until the very last glimmer of their brightness disappeared around a corner, then turned with a sigh to watch his mother place pies in the oven, and said to her :

"I would like to be a soldier."

"Very well," said his mother, "then I would be."

Robert stared at her a few minutes, and then said :

"Would be what?"

"Why, a soldier. Wasn't that what you said you wanted to be?"

"Well, but how could I be?"

"Easy enough ; that is, if you put your mind to it. A soldier's life is never an easy one, of course. Clare may hand me that other pie ; I think I can make room for it."

"But, mother, I don't know what you mean," Robert said.

"Don't? You haven't forgotten the verse we talked about so long? 'Greater is he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.' It takes real soldier-like fighting to rule a spirit, I can tell you."

"Oh, said Robert, as he flattened his nose against the glass again and thought.

"But, mother," he said at last, "I didn't mean that kind. I would like to be a captain and have soldiers under me."

"Nothing easier," his mother said, shutting the door with a satistified air. "There are your ten fingers, and your eyes and your ears, and that troublesome tongue that hates to obey. I pity any captain who has as troublesome ones."

Robert laughed. He had so many talks with his mother that he understood her very well ; yet this was a new way of putting it. He stood there a good while thinking about it, deciding that he would be a captain forthwith, and that his soldiers would obey perfectly. Then he wondered what orders he should have to give them first.

Poor fellow ! In less than ten minutes from that he knew.

He went to the sitting-room to find that baby Carrie had been there before him. There lay his birthday books, his beautiful "Family Flight" on the floor, some of the loveliest pictures in it torn into bits. His photograph album was on the sofa ; but chubby fingers had tugged at mamma's picture until it lay loose and ruined, and papa's page was gone entirely.

Oh ! how angry was Captain Robert ! He wanted to run after Carrie and slap her naughty fingers ; she was almost two years old, and ought to know better. He wanted to run to his mother, and with red face and angry voice to tell his story of wrong, and demand that Carrie be whipped. He wanted to bury his head in the sofa cushions and cry just as loud as he could roar. Why did he do none of these things? Just because he remembered in time that he was captain, and had soldiers to obey.

"Halt !" he said to his feet as they were about to rush away, and they instantly obeyed. "Stop !" he said to the tears, as they began to rush in torrents up to his eyes, and back they all went, save one little straggler who rolled down his nose, and was instantly wiped out of existence. In short, the boy proved himself to be a good captain, for that time at least. He even sent his feet up stairs presently with a rosy-cheeked apple for Carrie, and bade his arms give her a very loving hug, which they immediately did.

Mamma found out it all about it, as mammas almost always do ; and when papa came home at night, what did he do but bow low and say : "Captain Robert, I am proud to salute you. I hear you have fought a battle and won a victory to-day."—Pansy.

COMING TO JESUS.

"Mamma, our teacher said to us to-day that we must come to Jesus, if we want to be saved ; but how can I come to Him when I cannot see Him?"

"Did you not ask me to get you a drink of water, last night?"

"Yes, mamma."

"Did you see me when you asked me?"

"No ; but I knew that you would hear me, and get it for me."

"Well that is just the way to come to Jesus. We cannot see Him, but we know that He is near us, and hears every word we say, and that He will get us what we need."

Pleasantries.

A dry-goods house advertising seal-sacques the other day, added to its advertisement, "Circular free." A lady, after reading the advertisement, sent a note to the house, asking for a circular—a fur-lined one.

Simpson : "Whatever induced your uncle to marry the widow of a man who was hung?" Jimpson : "He had been married to widows before, and says he was tired of having the virtues of a former husband constantly flung in his face."—Epoch.

NOTICE.

☞ Editorial Correspondence address to THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters pertaining to subscriptions and other business, address REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ No notice taken of anonymous communications.

For Terms, see page 11.

THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER,
907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 15, 1891.

JOHN, THE BAPTIST.

It is a significant fact that Jesus and John the Baptist, were brought up in regions of country so far remote from each other, the one in the northern and the other in the extreme southern part of the Holy Land. Their surroundings in nature were quite different, and vividly prefigured the particular character of the work to which they were respectively called of God. The rugged country and the bleak, precipitous mountains of Southern Judea were symbolical of Sinai and the Mosaic law : Galilee with its rounded hills, its fertile plains, flowery vales and smiling brooks point to the life and blessings of the Gospel dispensation. John lived in a Levitical city or village, probably Yutta, five miles south of Hebron, and enjoyed superior educational advantages from his earliest youth, in the society of Zacharias and Elizabeth at home, of the priests and Levites among his neighbors. He was one of the most learned men of his day in all the wisdom of the Scriptures. But being filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb, he transcended by far all the Jewish rabbis in his knowledge of their spiritual character and import. This enabled him to see how much his people had fallen from their high and holy calling. To an alarming extent their religion was a mere outward form, if not actual hypocrisy itself. Moved by the Spirit to enter upon his work as the forerunner of Christ, he sought a place of public resort along the banks of the Jordan, and there called upon the multitudes with much earnestness, and probably with a loud voice, to repent and flee from the wrath to come. Honored as a nation by having the Messiah born in their midst, they needed first to be washed and cleansed from the filthiness and naughtiness of their sins. Otherwise they would not be fit to enter the kingdom of heaven which was at hand. To impress this truth upon their minds, by divine appointment, he instituted the rite of baptism, and enjoined it upon all alike who desired the favor of the God of their fathers. The last, he was the greatest among all the prophets. In his day he turned many of the children of Israel to the Lord their God. He prepared the way for the work of Christ on earth, bore testimony to His divine character as the Son of God, and with profound humility was willing to decrease as He increased. He was the morning star of the new dispensation which was diminished by the rising sun of righteousness ; but in that greater light he greatly rejoiced. He finished his work and then received the crown of martyrdom. His work, however, remains to perfect the work, and his words calling on men to repentance, are just as appropriate and necessary now, as when they were the voice crying in the wilderness. Much of the religion of the present day is mere profession not possesion : spiritual arrogance and pride, selfishness and vain glory, lukewarmness and secret sins abound in many of the churches as they did at the time of the Baptist, and his cry, Repent, and of the prophet, Wash you, make you clean, are just as urgent now as they were in his day.

"THE ADVANCE TOWARDS CHURCH UNITY."

The above is the caption of an article in The Independent of the 12th inst., from the pen of Rev. Charles A. Briggs, D.D. To him the subject presents a very bright and hopeful outlook. It is refreshing to read it. And it inspires one with bright hopes for the future. Even the Historic Episcopate of the Lambeth Conference has for him no insuperable barriers. He would have the Presbyterians play their Historical Presbytery, and the Congregationalists, their Historical Congregation against the Historic Episcopate of the Church of England, and seems to think that a common basis could be reached. If this could be done, verily would a formidable hindrance be overcome. He accepts Baxter's view that "to select out of all three the best parts and leave the worst, was the most desirable [and ancient] form of government." Could this be done, then there ought to be a readiness for Church union of at least these three branches, which might reach a consummation within the present decade. That there are elements which relatively superabound in each, which the other two need, we have no hesitancy in affirming. To specify no further at this time, we conceive the Anglican Church has an excess of what we denominate the executive functions, in which the other two are correspondingly deficient, while it in turn is deficient in the principle of representation. We sincerely hope with Dr. Briggs, that the present negotiations may result in reaching common ground.

He speaks of three movements in the direction of Church Unity—that by Alliance, as illustrated by the Evangelical Alliance,—that by the Historical Institutions, as in the Lambeth propositions,—and that by Federation, as now in progress in the negotiations pending between the Dutch and German branches of the Reformed Church. In speaking of this last he says : "This is probably a nucleus about which will eventually gather all divisions of the Presbyterian Reformed family." It may be that the principle will rise higher and effect a union with the great divisions of Christ's Church.

Dr. Briggs is not the only person to whom this thought has occurred, and who has entertained this hope. And it ought to have grave weight upon the minds of any, in either of the Reformed Churches, who object to the proposed federation. The very fact that some of the leading minds in the Presbyterian Church are looking hopefully for this union as the beginning of a flow to which in the near future it may add its large volume, ought to obviate its objections, because of a preference for an immediate union with that Church. Do not all the probabilities favor the thought that this large union will be more speedily reached in this way, than by seeking to overcome the obstacles which confront an immediate union with either of the smaller Reformed Churches? Church Union, if ever consummated in this world, must come about through a historical growth—by a flowing together of the nearer kindred bodies, thus gaining in volume, and attracting with augmented power those more remote, and obviating at the same time the danger of absorption.

Synodical Editors.

(Elected by the Synods.)

Eastern, ...	REV. JONATHAN H. PANNEBECKER.
Pittsburgh, ...	" DAVID B. LADY.
Potomac, ...	" J. SPANGLER KIEFFER, D. D.

ANOTHER SEMINARY ENDOWMENT CONVENTION.

The question might first of all be raised as to the propriety of writing an article for the MESSENGER every time a Seminary Convention is held. If the purpose were to glorify the committee, to eulogize their energy, their eloquence or their success, such reports would be highly improper. But all such intentions are here and now once for all disclaimed. It would be far more in accordance with the feelings of the committee, if they could carry on this work and get it accomplished without parade or publicity. But it seems important to let at least the people and congregations of our own Synod know what we are doing, so that an interest may be awakened and maintained in the undertaking, and that they may in a measure get ready for the brethren who are visiting the charges in the interest of the Seminary ; and as the Synod has no paper circulating only within her own territory, it is necessary to use the organ of the three eastern English Synods for this purpose. We hope, also, to have the prayers and good wishes of those in other sections of the Church for the success of our cause.

Hence the committee are glad to see those beyond our bounds writing the subject up in the MESSENGER. It is true every sentiment uttered does not meet with our endorsement. We were somewhat startled to be told, for example, a few weeks ago, by one who represents the Synod which has recently completed its endowment of a chair in the Seminary, that the method by which the funds had been secured was all wrong, or at least not the best, that the rich alone should have been asked to contribute, and that the mass of the membership should not have been bothered with the subject, especially as we had just started out to do the work in the same way. But a full and sufficient answer to our brother of the quill appears from a member of his own Synod in the MESSENGER of Jan. 1st. And we will now let these brethren settle the question among themselves as to whether the few rich men in their Synod alone shall be asked to endow the next chair, or whether they will allow all classes and conditions of men to take part in the good work ; and we hope to be well on our way to a successful issue in our undertaking, on the plan which succeeded so well among them by the time they get through with it.

As to the convention which we started out to report, it was held in the Saegertown charge. The pastor is Rev. D. H. Leader. The writer went by rail to Meadville. At Franklin, the county seat of Venango county, the Teacher's Institute was in session, and dropping to while away several hours between trains, we were surprised and delighted to meet an old friend in the person of Dr. N. C. Schaeffer, who delivered a lecture in the afternoon on the "Mysteries of the Teacher's Art." After the lecture we had several hours of College and Seminary Reminiscences with our old friend, and then went on our way to Meadville much encouraged. The night was spent in the pleasant family of Rev. T. S. Land, and the next morning, after depositing with the treasurer of Synod the second installment of the contribution of the Curllsville charge for the professorship, Bro. Land and I rode out to Saegertown in a sleigh. The church was open, the people were gathering, and the pastor was ready, Revs. L. J. Mayer and J. D. Thomas put in an appearance, and the discussions began. To say that the pastor and people of Saegertown received us cordially and entertained us sumptuously is putting it mildly. It was good to be there. We enjoyed the visit very much, and came away confident that the response to our appeals would be a liberal one. Owing to the fact that two of the brethren had weddings on the afternoon of the second day of the convention and that the writer was called home to attend a funeral, no canvass for contributions was made at the time. The pastor, however, undertook to attend at once or as soon as possible to this important feature of the business, and the committee are persuaded that it could not be left in better hands.

Among the subjects selected for discussion at this convention was the question as to whether Pittsburgh Synod is able to endow a professorship. This had been assigned to Rev. J. D. Thomas of Cochranton. He answered the question by instituting the following comparison :

"The Ohio Synod has 234 congregations, Pittsburgh Synod has 131. The Ohio Synod 103 more than we. The Ohio Synod has 6 Classes. We have 5. The Ohio Synod has 1 more than we. The Ohio Synod has a membership of 19,748. Pittsburgh Synod has 14,092. The Ohio Synod has 5,656 more members than we have. The Ohio Synod raised during the year 1889 for congregational purposes, $80,914. Pittsburgh Synod raised in that year, $66,064. The Ohio Synod raised $14,850 more than we did. The Ohio Synod raised in the same year $12,713 for benevolence. Pittsburgh Synod $10,711. The Ohio Synod exceeded us $2002. From this it appears that in proportion to the number of congregations and membership we can raise fully as much money as the Ohio Synod.

"But what more has the Ohio Synod done? During the last five or six years she has put up and paid for a college building at a cost of $55,000. And the Ohio Synod is now engaged in an effort to endow her Theological Seminary. The Ohio Synod supports a College and Seminary, pays the teaching force in both, and is now about to endow a whole Seminary or a large part of it. What are we doing? What have we undertaken? Cannot we do half as much as our sister Synod to the west, only a little stronger than we? If she could raise $55,000 for the erection of a college building, can we not raise a sum $20,000 less than that? If she is able, in addition to a College, to support a whole Seminary, we ought to be able to endow a single chair. God forbid that we as a Synod should for a moment entertain the notion that we cannot raise this $30,000 when the Synod next west of us is doing so much in this direction. It can be done and it ought to be done." L.

THE VACANT CHARGE ONCE MORE.

Some one, writing to us with reference to an article which appeared in the MESSENGER of Dec. 18th, entitled "The Vacant Charge," "joins issue," as he says, with the writer, in regard to the statement therein made, that the condition of being vacant is "not a desirable condition for a charge to be in." This is what our correspondent writes: "The great question at issue is, Why is the charge alluded to vacant? Whose fault is it? The writer appears to lay the blame upon the charge, and says that a charge is like a field ; it will not improve without cultivation. We have some knowledge of farming, and will risk the assertion that, in many instances, land will get in better condition simply by letting it alone and getting rest ; certainly it will do as well, or better than to have it tenanted by a poor farmer, one that will plow and sow out of season. We have been driven to such thoughts by reading the article alluded to ; and would like the writer to give us another and longer article upon the reason why we have so many vacant charges and so many idle pastors."

In reply to these strictures we would say that the article in question dealt simply and exclusively with the fact of vacancy and not at all with the reason of it. We had no thought of blaming any one for the circumstance, by no means uncommon, of a charge's being without a pastor ; the only blame implied was a measure of censure upon the charge that should be indifferent or unduly slow in the matter of getting itself out of this condition. Further, we were writing, in general terms, of the average charge, the average pastor, and the average vacancy ; and, regarding the matter in this light, we are still of the opinion that the condition of being vacant is not a desirable one for any charge. It is no doubt true, as our correspondent says, that, under particular circumstances, land will be benefited by being allowed to rest, but he will probably agree with us that, on the whole, in the long run, on the "year-in-and-year-out" principle, it is not to the advantage of a farm to be without a tenant and without cultivation.

Evidently, our friend is disposed to be a little severe upon the ministers. We do not complain of this ; it is good to submit ourselves to wholesome reproof. We are indeed "unprofitable servants," we are "poor farmers." Considering the many blunders we make, it is a wonder that the work of the Lord prospers at all in our hands. "Let the righteous smite me ; it shall be a kindness ; and let him reprove me ; it shall be an excellent oil." We thank our brother for his somewhat severe, but salutary, hints, not all of which have been quoted by us. We hope, however, that he will forgive our involuntary smile at his idea of a congregation's having a "rest" from its pastor ! No doubt there are such cases as he has in mind ; but they must be exceedingly rare ; and we cheerfully admit that, if things ever do come to that extreme pass in which a pastor is an affliction or a terror to his congregation, and the people with good reason desire to "rest" from him, then the rules which are applicable in ordinary cases, are no longer applicable in a case so extraordinary and rare.

As regards our friend's request that we would write "another and longer article" on the reason why there are so many vacant congregations and unemployed ministers, much as we would like to do so, we can hardly venture to comply with this. Our last article probably went to the utmost permissible limits as regards length. We must study brevity ; space is very valuable. Moreover, feeling it to be our duty to respond in some manner to so reasonable a request, we will here mention, as briefly as possible, two or three of the principal causes, or classes of causes, to which, in our judgment, the state of affairs in question is to be attributed.

1. We mention, first, the needless multiplication of congregations. It is no uncommon thing to find four or five churches where one would supply all the existing need. The result is, instead of one strong, vigorous and imposing church, four or five weak and struggling organizations ; a state of affairs which naturally breeds frequent vacancies. There has not been good economy, but much waste rather, in the planting of churches. The idea that, wherever a denomination has no church, there it ought to have one (irrespective of whether the religious wants of the community are already sufficiently provided for or not) has wrought much harm. This is an evil of which, within the past few years, the leading religious denominations have been rapidly becoming more and more conscious; and it is now, we believe, in a fair way to be, in some considerable measure, remedied.

2. The ministers themselves are no doubt often to blame for the vacancies that occur. The work, like all work of a great and high order, is necessarily slow, toilsome, attended by many discouragements. We are all eager for "quick returns ;" and, in the vital processes with which a pastor's work has chiefly to do, the returns are often discouragingly slow to come in. The pastor has need of much patience ; and patience is not one of the easiest and most accessible virtues. It is easy to believe that things would be better elsewhere ; that the advantages would be greater, and the difficulties fewer. "Heaven is where we are not." So, among the pastors, contending with difficulties and beset by discouragements, there springs up a painful and distressing spirit of restlessness, as is indicated by the overwhelming number of applications made for many a vacant charge. This feverish restlessness is not a good sign. It is responsible for many vacancies that ought not to occur. Brother, be not in haste to resign thy charge. Resignation passive is far better than resignation active. Consider that it may be wiser to bear the ills you know than to fly to others that you know not of. It is cloudy to-day, but the sun will shine to-morrow. You see no fruits of your labor ; but, behold, the harvest is almost at hand ; stay, and reap it yourself. The difficulties encompassing you now will presently disappear like a cloud. Time heals much. Work on in that spirit of patience, hopefulness and kindness, which conquers all things, against which nothing can stand. Put aside that "resignation you have written ; at least, consider the matter yet once more ; if possible, do not make another vacancy.

3. Nor, to be entirely just, do we think that we can altogether acquit the people of blame in regard to this matter. Evidently, the minister's support is in many cases needlessly scanty and altogether insufficient, making his life a painful and embarrassed one in many ways. We dwell not upon this particular cause ; it has recently been discussed at length in the columns of this paper. There are other ways in which the pastor's position may be made exceedingly painful and distressing. From what the writer hears, there must be somewhere, in some congregations, persons very difficult to get on with. He knows not this except by hearsay ; it has been his favored lot to dwell for years in the midst of a people peaceful, kind and generous in an extraordinary degree. But from what he has been told, and from what he reads, he is compelled to believe that there are such cases. He does not believe that any congregation, as a congregation, is bad or troublesome. As a rule, we believe the people to be well-disposed, docile, willing to be led, ready to repay confidence with confidence and kindness with kindness. But a single ill-disposed person in a congregation may cause much sorrow and trouble. Some one has said that a single active and vigorous hornet is sufficient to disturb the peace of a whole camp-meeting. In like manner, a single and vigorous hornet of a man (or woman !—begging pardon) may be sufficient to disturb the peace of an entire congregation. Reader, we do not believe there are many such. But if there should be any such person or persons in your congregation, be very slow to confide in them or to act with them. If your pastor is doing well—reasonably well—stand by him, and be his friend and supporter. He may not be an eloquent preacher,—but then he is a faithful pastor. It may be that, as a pastor, he is not all you could desire,—but, then, of his preaching all must acknowledge the power. It is seldom that special excellence as a preacher and special excellence as a pastor are found in one and the same person. Be content and thankful, reader, if your own pastor possesses either the one or the other.

J. S. K.

—There is much truth in the following :

"The end of church music is not to attract an audience and fill the house, but to praise God. If the leaders of the singing remembered this, they would in many cases make a different selection of music; if the choir remembered this, they would not regard their part in worship with so much levity ; if the congregation remembered this, they would sing 'with the spirit and understanding.'"

Poetry.

NOT REWARD, BUT GRACE.

Translated from the German by H. L. L.

No crown, no palms for me!
These are for victors in the fight; but I
Have been the vanquished one in every field.
O Saviour! who hast hope for such revealed,
Low at Thy mercy-seat behold me lie.

Turn not Thy face away!
Deal not in wrath with Thine unworthy child!
Yes, I have sinned, yet there is grace with Thee.
Thou givest mercy, pardon full and free,
To fallen wanderers on the desert wild.

No thought of triumph now!
That dream is o'er. Rest is all I crave;
A little peace, after such deadly strife,
Some leaves of healing from the Tree of Life,—
A glimpse of hope and heaven beyond the grave!

And for what yet remains
Of my sad pilgrimage, grant, O my God!
Meek, humble faith, to suffer and be still;
Meekly to watch Thy hand, to do Thy will;
Humbly to bow beneath Thy chastening rod!

Dark stream of life, rush on
To the eternal ocean full and fast,
If only o'er the waves may fly the dove
Of heavenly peace, and beckon from above,
To where a pardoned soul shall rest at last.

Selections.

Whatever makes men good Christians makes them good citizens.—Daniel Webster.

The great fact is that life is a service; the only question is, "Whom will we serve?"—Faber.

"There is no way or place where God leads but preparation has been made before for our coming."

The serene, silent beauty of a holy life is the most powerful in the world for good next to the might of God.—Pascal.

All common things, each day's events,
That with the hour begin and end,
Our pleasures and our discontents,
Are rounds by which we may ascend.
—Henry W. Longfellow.

Remember, in Christian life every moment and every act is an opportunity for doing the one thing—of becoming Christlike.

When sometimes God gives tardily, He commends His gifts; He does not deny them. God withholds for a time, that thou mayest learn to desire great things greatly.—Augustine.

The crowd of cares, the weightiest cross,
Seem trifles less than light;
Earth looks so little and so low,
When faith shines full and bright.
—Frederick Wm. Faber.

Divine grace, even in the heart of weak and sinful man, is invincible. Drown it in the waters of adversity, it rises more beautiful, as not being drowned indeed, but only washed; throw it into the furnace of fiery trials, it comes out purer, and loses nothing but the dross.—Archbishop Leighton.

Science and Art.

A luminous crayon has been invented for the purpose of enabling lecturers to draw on the blackboard when the room is darkened for the use of the lantern. The invention is likely to prove of value not only to the lecturers who use a lantern, but also (in another form) to those students who wish to take notes.

One of the companies in Paris that deal in compressed air motive power has been awarded the contract for street lighting on a novel plan. The company distributes power through its condensed air system to an immense number of small dynamos, each of which furnishes a current for a small number of lamps.

"It is not intellectual work that injures the brain," says the London Hospital, "but emotional excitement. Most men can stand the severest thought and study of which their brains are capable, and be none the worse for it, for neither thought nor study interferes with the recuperative influence of sleep. It is ambition, anxiety, and disappointment, the hopes and fears, the loves and hates of our lives, that wear out our nervous system and endanger the balance of the brain."

Items of Interest.

It is estimated that the great smoke cloud that overhangs London is 300 tons in weight.

During the last year 68 persons had their names changed in New York in the manner prescribed by law.

In polygamy case from Utah, the United States Supreme Court on Monday decided that a wife is not a competent witness against a husband.

A mountain in active eruption is an unusual thing in the United States, but now, it is said, Mt. Wrangel in Alaska is belching forth fire and smoke.

In 1888 the number of women registered to vote in Boston was 20,000. In 1889 the registration lists showed only 10,000, and last year only 8,000 women have qualified to exercise the right of suffrage.

"The widest plank on earth" is on exhibition at the railroad depot in Humboldt, Cal. It was cut at the Elk river mill, and is 16 feet in width. It will be among the Humboldt exhibits at the World's Fair in Chicago.

The vote of the Methodist churches throughout the country on the eligibility of women as delegates to the General Conference stands as follows: For women, 13,532; against, 11,020. The German churches are still almost unanimous against the proposition.

An artesian well in North City, a suburb of St. Augustine, Florida, is said to have the largest flow of any artesian well in the world. It is an eight inch well, and its flow exceeds the highest expectations. The flow exceeds 8,000 gallons per minute, or over 11,500,000 every twenty-four hours.

The death of Dr. Heinrich Schliemann, the archæologist, is announced from Berlin. He was born at Ankershagen, in Mecklenburg, in 1822. The son of a poor clergyman, he amassed a fortune, and then began his archæological investigations in the East, and recorded the results in a work published in 1869.

The severe weather which has prevailed throughout England for some time past is causing the deepest distress among the poor classes of people of London. This is especially true of the inhabitants of the East End. All out door trades have now been suspended for seven weeks, and from present indications, there is no prospect of the weather moderating enough to allow of their resumption for some time to come.

Hints and Recipes.

One of the very best applications for the bites of mosquitoes and fleas, also for other eruptions attended with intense itchings, is: Menthol in alcohol, one part to ten. This is very cooling and immediately effectual. It is also an excellent lotion for application to the forehead and temples in headache, often at once subduing the same.—Weekly Medical Review.

A warm salt bath is very refreshing to any one suffering from exhaustion of travel or of a long shopping expedition, which is as trying to the mind and body as anything which can be undertaken by a woman. Away from the seashore a very simple substitute for sea water is a cup of rock salt dissolved in warm water and added to the bath. When the salt is irritating to the skin, take a warm bath and sponge off with a mixture of violet or lavender water and alcohol, about half and half, and rub briskly with a warm friction towel. Such a method prevents the exhaustion and danger of cold which follows a warm bath.

Farm and Garden.

Fine cranberries are being raised in the State of Washington, and parties who are informed state that there are numerous bogs in that State which can be utilized for this crop. The berries produced so far are said to be as good as those which are raised in the Eastern States.

The Japan chestnut has a bright future in America. The only fault that can be found with the trees at present is their price (eighty cents to $1 each). They grow as well on the same land as native chestnut trees and produce earlier. The nuts are very large and good. Sample trees at the Connecticut State Fair were only three years from the scion, and yet showed as high as thirty-four buds to the tree.

Books and Periodicals.

Any of the books here noticed can be had through our Publication House, 907 Arch Street.

CHRIST IN THE NEW TESTAMENT. By Thos. A. Tidball, D.D., Rector of St. Paul's church, Camden, N. J. Pub., Thomas Whittaker, 2 & 3 Bible House, New York. Pp. 357. $1.25.

This book is a summary of the results reached in the many arguments recently elaborated in vindication of the authenticity and inspiration of the New Testament. As such it is a valuable hand book for those who may not have the time or opportunity to study the controversy with sceptics, more at large. As such also it will be of great service to ministers of the Gospel, as presenting the whole matter in a nutshell, and furnishing conclusions without the labor of examining a wide literature. It is well and clearly written, free from technicalities, and well adapted to the reading of inquiring church members.

THE SIBYLLINE ORACLES. Translated from the Greek into English blank verse by Milton S. Terry, Professor in Garrett Biblical Institute. New York: Hunt & Eaton.

Professor Terry has rendered students of the beginnings of Christian history a valuable service in furnishing them with an English translation of the Greek books of Sibylline Oracles in an accessible form. For although these "Oracles" are spurious and only in a remote and conjectural way to be connected with the predictions of the Cumæan, or of any other of the ancient sibyls, the mere fact that Justin Martyr, Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, Eusebius, Augustine, Jerome, Lactantius, and other church fathers, appeal to them as an inspired authority makes them an interesting study. But they are much more than what they have been called in recent times—"the tattered remnants of an ignorant, bigoted, superstitious, and often fraudulent phase of declining civilization." They are a lasting proof that the Hellenistic Jews had produced a literature of their own, into which they had incorporated a vast number of Hellenic conceptions; that they had given it a Greek form, and had thus fitted it to attract the attention of the Greek world. They are one among the many evidences of that essential kinship between the leading ideas of Greek philosophy and the leading ideas of Christianity by reason of which Christianity was so readily adopted by many of the men of thought and power among the Greeks. To the student of ecclesiastical history during the period when the Jewish and Greek currents of human life were coming into contact and being fixed together into a new life stronger and better than either, they have, accordingly, an abiding interest and a permanent value, in spite of the fact that they now are a "chaotic wilderness, to sift and arrange which will ever baffle the most acute criticism." The introduction is a very interesting and succinct statement of the probable origin of the "Oracles," their purpose and history, and of the present state of the text; and the footnotes, so far as we were able to examine them, seem to be well adapted to the wants of the general reader.

THE GENESIS OF NATURE, Considered in the Light of Mr. Spencer's Philosophy, as Based upon the Persistence of Energy. By Thomas H. Musick. New York: John B. Alden, Publisher. 1890.

The author of this work has undertaken a large task. It is nothing less than to disprove the doctrine of the Conservation of Energy, which, as he says in his preface, is "everywhere received as of universal application." Great courage is needed to enter the lists against such scientists as Mayer and Grove, Helmholtz and Joule, Tyndall and Stewart; yet it is not lacking in our author. He deserves great credit for his wide reading, and especially for his good intentions. His desire is to save us from a materialistic philosophy which endangers our spiritualistic faiths. Very well; but perhaps he has jumbled heterogeneous things together. Still his book is worthy of serious consideration. Materialistic principles may creep into our thought before we are aware.

THE ANDOVER REVIEW. January, 1891. During the seven years of its existence this Review has proved itself a power for good. It has reflected the best Christian thought of the living questions of the day. Its practical character has been a marked feature from the start. It is a journal for life as well as thought. Dead issues are allowed to slumber, and, for the most part, only those problems that are pressing for a solution now find treatment in its pages. The ability of its contributors is well known and is best proved by the popularity of the Review. The January number gives fair promise for the present year. A searching inquiry into "Dr. Martineau's Criticism of the Gospels" is followed by a clear discussion of "The Question of Disestablishment in Scotland from the American Point of View," an interesting account of "Some Paraphrasers of Milton," an historical sketch of

READING ROOM
Theol minary,

"John Brown, Guerrilla," and a valuable paper treating of the relation of "Ethics and Economics." The editorial notes handle present day questions, viz., "The Public Schools and Religious Education," "The Relief of the Submerged Tenth," and "Do the Country Churches want an Educated Ministry?"

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. Yearly subscription, $4.00; single numbers, 35 cents.

The first instalment of the selections from Talleyrand's long-expected Memoirs is the feature of the January CENTURY. Then we have—Pioneer Spanish Families in California, Missions of Alta California, A Californian Lion and a Pirate, A Carnival Ball at Monterey, A Journey from Monterey to Los Angeles, Domestic Life in 1827, A Romance of Morgan's Rough Riders, An Irish Gentlewoman in the Famine Time of 1847—48, Chinese Music, Colonel Carter of Cartersville, Sister Dolorosa, In Maiden Meditation, Nannie's Career, At the Town Farm, Topics of the Time and Open Letters. The frontispiece of the January Century is a portrait of the sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens, engraved by Whitney from a painting by Kenyon Cox.

In the January ST. NICHOLAS we have A Talk about Reading, Brooklyn's Great Industrial School, Elfie's Visit to Cloudland, Story of the Golden Fleece, Lady Jane, a Christmas story by Roswell Smith, a poem by Celia Thaxter, and a short but complete article on Michael Angelo.

The following are the contents of the January WIDE AWAKE—Nonsense Animals, Lambkin, Prig or Hero, Prize Anagram, The Drawing of the Child Figure, Problems in Horology, and stories and articles by Susan Coolidge, Mrs. Burton Harrison, Margaret Sidney, Elbridge S. Brooks, Ernest Ingersoll, Kirk Monroe, etc.

Wide Awake is $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Boston, Mass.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE. The number of The Living Age for January 10 contains—The Origins of the Common Law, by Sir Frederick Pollock, Contemporary Review; Born on Hallow E'en, Blackwood's Magazine; Constantinople Revisited, Nineteenth Century; The Druses of the Holy Land, Blackwood's Magazine; Stafford Northcote, Temple Bar; My Professor of History, Macmillan's Magazine; The Depravation of Words, Gentleman's Magazine; Poetry and Miscellany.

$8.00 per year. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

Marriages.

At the residence of the bride's parents, in Mercer county, on December 25, 1889, by Rev. J. M. Schick, Mr. M. C. Pence of North Warren, Pa., to Miss Emma Furgeson of Pymnatuning, Mercer county, Pa.

On November 12th, 1890, at Glade parsonage, Walkersville, Md., by Rev. S. M. Hench, Mr. Morris L. Smith to Miss Olive Blanche Hull, both of Woodsboro, Frederick county, Md.

At the same place, by the same, on November 18th, 1890, Mr. Wm. J. Snook to Miss Laura Dougherty, both of Frederick county, Md.

At the Reformed parsonage, Conyngham, Pa., December 25, 1890, by Rev. J. B. Kerschner, Mr. George Cook, Sandy Run, Pa., to Miss Addie Hemerly, St. John's, Pa.

On the same day, by the same, at the residence of the bride's parents, in presence of a large company, in Butler township, Luzerne county, Mr. George E. Hofsomer to Miss Catharine J. Schreiner, both of the same place.

On December 14, at the residence of the bride, by Rev. O. F. Schaeffer, Mr. King William Rickrode of Round Hill, to Miss Clara Miller of Hampton, Pa.

On Tuesday, December 23d, by the same, Mr. Jno. W. Slothower of Harrisburg, Pa., to Miss Catharine Smith of Mulberry, York county, Pa.

At East Berlin, Pa., in the afternoon of December 25th, by the same, at the residence of the bride, Mr. Edwin Kerchner to Miss Bertha Wolf.

Deaths.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than two hundred and fifty words.

DIED.—On November 8th, 1890, at Fairmount City, Clarion county, Pa., Mr. John Adolphus Meffert, aged 54 years, 10 months and 26 days.

On November 13th, 1890, at the same place, Mrs. Elizabeth Meffert, wife of Mr. John Adolphus Meffert, deceased, aged 53 years and 8 months.

Mr. and Mrs. Meffert were born in Germany, the former December 12th, 1835, and the latter March 13th, 1837. They were baptized in their infancy, and at the age of about 14 years were, by confirmation, received into full communion with the German Reformed church of that country. Some years since they emigrated to America, and though leaving their friends and loved ones in that far off land, they did not leave their church nor did they show indifference in the work of their Master. The trials and adversities of life they endured patiently, believing that Almighty God would turn all to their good as they proved faithful to Him.

To lay to rest a father and mother in so short an interval of time seemed very sad. Thus in less than one week their six children were left without parents. To realize such a loss one must experience it. The large concourse of mourners on each occasion bore testimony to their many friends. R. F. GASS.

DIED.—In Philadelphia, November 15, 1890, George Conrad Goess, aged 70 yrs., 6 months and 7 days.

An honored father in Israel has laid down his staff. Death has removed from earth a saint ripe for heaven. The deceased was born in Bavaria, Germany, on the 8th day of May, 1820, of Christian parents. At the age of 26 he emigrated to this country, locating in Philadelphia, which city was destined to be for him the scene of busy activity both in business and church. His genial and kind manner soon won for him a host of friends.

At the age of 28 he was married to Anna Mary Von-der-Lindt, the faithful companion of his busy life, who survives him. This union was blessed with seven children, of whom five still live to mourn the loss of a loving father. Many are the ministers of the Word who spent pleasant hours and days within the circle of this family. Theirs was truly a "Pfahre's house."

When Zion's Reformed church, Philadelphia, was founded, the deceased was one of the most active founders, and for 35 years—until the time of his death—was treasurer of the congregation. To him his church was dear, and by his liberality, his devotion, his regularity in attendance upon divine services he seemed to declare each day,

"For her my tears shall fall,
To her my prayers ascend,
For her my cares and toils be given
Till toils and cares shall end."

His life bears a noble testimony to the comfort and happiness of a Christian life. His faith was unwavering. His love for Christ found practical expression in the liberality with which he ministered to the poor, and contributed to the missionary and benevolent actions of the Church. When such men leave this world they leave a void. But though now dead, the Church is stronger because they have lived.

Their influence will live on. For all such we look for the fulfilment of the promise, "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God."

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ;
. . . . .
And while eternal ages run,
Rest in thy Saviour's joy."

DIED.—At St. Thomas, Pa., Mrs. Elizabeth Unger, aged 75 years, 4 months and 22 days.

DIED.—At St. Thomas, Pa., Mr. John Houser, in the 79th year of his age.

DIED.—In Delaware township, Mercer county, Pa., on November 18th, 1890, Reuben Albert, son of Edwin and Susanna Wasser, aged 1 year and 24 days.

A NEW EDITION.

WON BY PRAYER.

Or The Life and Work of Rev. Masayoshi Oshikawa, Native Missionary in Sendai, Japan.

BY REV. A. R. BARTHOLOMEW,
Late Secretary Board of Commissioners for For. Missions, Reformed Church in United States.

An interesting story, well told, and an evidence of what has been and is being done for the salvation of the heathen in Japan. Well illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound.

Pp. 120. Price, 75 cts. Postpaid.

☞Percentage on sales given to Foreign Missions. Should have a large sale.

REFORMED CHURCH PUB. HOUSE,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE ALMANAC
FOR THE
Reformed Church in the United States
—TWENTY-EIGHTH ISSUE—
FOR 1891.

We are ready now to receive orders for our Almanac for 1891, at the following rates:

100 Copies, per express, $5.00
50 " " 2.75
12 " " .75
1 Copy, Postpaid, .12

When to be sent by mail 18 cents per dozen must be added for postage.

Also,
WESTERN ALMANAC
At the same prices as above.

GERMAN ALMANAC.
12 Copies, 90 cts.
Postage, 18 cts.
Single Copies, Postpaid, 12 cts.

Address,
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

N. B. Be sure to get only

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT ESTABLISHED 1810.

UNLIKE ANY OTHER.
As much
For INTERNAL as EXTERNAL use.
Originated by an Old Family Physician in 1810
Could a Remedy
WITHOUT REAL MERIT
Have Survived for Eighty Years?
Dropped on Sugar, Children Love It.
Every Traveler should have a bottle of it in his satchel
THINK OF IT.

In use over 40 YEARS in one family.
Dr. I. S. JOHNSON & Co.—It is sixty years since I first learned of your JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT; for more than forty years I have used it in my family. O. H. INGALLS, Dea. 2d Baptist Church, Bangor, Me.

Every Mother Should have JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT in the house for Croup, Colds, Sore Throat, Catarrh, Tonsilitis, Colic, Nervous Headache, Cuts, Bruises, Cramps, Pains, Soreness in Body or Limbs. Delays may cost a life. Relieves Summer Complaints like magic. Sold everywhere. Price, 35 cts., 6 bottles $2. Express paid. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

Business Department.

TERMS:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage free. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.

No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrearages are paid.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made before the date transpires.

When the address of a paper is to be changed, the OLD and the NEW should be given.

☞Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

☞We do make mistakes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

☞Remittances should be made payable by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, or Registered Letter to the order of THE REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHAS. G. FISHER.

ADVERTISING RATE,
10 Cents Per Agate Line

Each insertion (fourteen lines to an inch).

Special Notices, set solid, double the price of display per counted line.

Reading Notices, leaded, three times the price of display per counted line.

Subject to the following Discounts:

FOR TIME.	FOR SPACE.
2 insertions...... 5 per ct.	100 lines......... 5 per ct.
4 " ......10 "	250 " ....10 "
8 " ......15 "	500 " ....20 "
13 " ......20 "	750 " ....30 "
26 " ......30 "	1,000 " ....40 "
52 " ......40 "	1,500 " ....50 "
No advertisement of less than 5 lines inserted at time rates on a contract for variable space.	To be used within one year.

Advertisements discontinued before completion of order, either by direction of advertiser or for non-payment, shall be paid for at regular rates for the advertising done.

An advertiser may use either scale of discounts, but cannot combine them. An advertiser is entitled to the highest discount which the entire amount of advertising done by him in any one year will secure.

Address all communications about advertising to

The Religious Press Association,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE NEW BOOK.

IN OLDEN DAYS BEYOND THE SEA.

Translated from the German, to which are added Introductory and Closing Parts,
BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

An interesting book, giving a thrilling account of the trials and persecutions of those who were true to their faith in "olden days beyond the sea." Pages 305. Illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of retail price, $1.25.

Address,
Reformed Church Publication House,
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK,
"In Olden Days Beyond the Sea,"
AND
THE MESSENGER.

To any one sending us two new subscribers for THE MESSENGER and $4.00, we will send a copy of the above book postpaid.

To an old subscriber for THE MESSENGER, remitting $2.75, we will give credit for a year's subscription and send a copy of the above book, postpaid.

Address
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

Miscellaneous.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

HOW TO COLLECT PEW-RENTS.

THIRD STREET, EASTON, PA.

The usual Christmas services were held in this church—early service at 6 o'clock Christmas morning, the festival of the Sunday-schools at 10.30 o'clock, with Christmas tree and evergreen decorations, and gifts to the children. The Sunday school services were this year especially gratifying, and very largely attended.

The Missionary Society of "Old Third Street" lately sent a box valued at somewhat more than $100, together with a check for $25 to one of our missionaries in Iowa.

The Thanksgiving collection of the congregation amounted to $371. This was given to our Orphans' Home at Womelsdorf.

"The Annual Congregational Meeting" is always held on the evening of New Year's Day. At this meeting the report of the treasurer is read. The treasurer's report is always good, but this year it was unusually good, showing a total expenditure of nearly $6,000, with a respectable balance in the treasury. Of this amount a very praiseworthy proportion was devoted to benevolence.

The manner in which the finances of Third Street church are managed is somewhat peculiar and out of the ordinary. In the first place, the office of treasurer is filled not by a man, but by two ladies, Mrs. Matilda Chidsey and Miss Mary A. Huber. These ladies have, for the last ten or twelve years, filled this position with the greatest possible success, and to the most grateful appreciation of the entire congregation. Previously to their taking the finances of the congregation in hand there was no little confusion—now all is order and good management, as is shown by the fact that at the close of this year only $22 "back pew rent is outstanding."

May we be pardoned for adding a few words by way of explaining the manner in which the pew rents are collected? It is altogether peculiar to Third Street church, so far as we know, nothing of the kind being customary in any of the other churches of Easton, nor elsewhere in our denomination.

The pew rents are collected monthly. The first Wednesday and Thursday afternoons of every month, these two excellent ladies are present in the chapel adjoining the church, with their books and pens and ink, "to receive the pew rent." The sexton rings the bell—and the people come. Think of it: the people actually come! And if the ladies think they don't come as fast as they should, they have the sexton ring the big church-bell again! What an admirable arrangement this is! It is a monthly gathering of the people; a pleasant sociable, with church-dues presented on the one hand and correct receipts given on the other, pleasant words and everybody happy.

When this system was first introduced, we are told that it created quite a commotion in the town. People heard "Old Third Street" bell ringing at an unusual time, and wondered what it meant. Some said it meant "fire;" others surmised that it indicated the death of some prominent person, perhaps the President, or at least the Governor; but all smiled when they learned that all the old bell said was, "Come and pay your pew rent!"

Other churches in the town, and in other towns, learning of the success of this system, have endeavored to introduce it, but with indifferent success. But why should it succeed with us and fail with them? Ah, good friend, it is all owing to the personal influence of the two good ladies who have it in charge, their kind and gentle and pleasant demeanor, the grace and charm of their manner with the people, as well as their consecrated purpose to do this good work for the church as a work done unto the Master Himself. It is a system of personal power—the system is of no use without the personality. Ulysses' bow is of little value without Ulysses' arm to bend it.

The work which these two ladies are doing in this way is of far wider influence than we have space to express, extending beyond the limits of Third Street church to all the benevolent enterprises of the denomination; their management of the finances comprising not only the moneys devoted to the congregation but including also all benevolent work and contributions. Third Street church—and its pastor—believes in woman's work in the church, there being few congregations in the denomination in which larger scope is so cheerfully granted to the exercise of woman's power for good.

At the annual meeting, it is also worthy of being recorded that Elder Jacob Rader most cordially commended to the people THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER and The Missionary Guardian, urging the introduction of these into every family of the congregation, in which good step he was promptly seconded by H. M. K.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

JOHNSTOWN AID.

I would again make kind and thankful acknowledgments of money sent for the building fund. There are yet many congregations that are not enrolled among the contributors to this fund. Upon our heart we carry the many congregations, and the many individuals who have sent us aid. Some has come from beds, whereon the kind donors were suffering. Some has come from those who have gone home to the mansions of glory. We could name some.

All thankfully and prayerfully received.

W. H. BATES, Pastor.

Oct. 27.	Trinity ch, Phila, Rev Coon, per W L Graver,	$75 00
" 29.	Zion's ch, Reading, Rev S K Derr,	5 00
Nov. 3.	Trinity ch, Phila, Rev Coon, per W L Graver,	129 04
" 11.	1st Ref ch S S, per W H Ebright,	50 00
Dec. 8.	Catawissa, Rev G B Dechant,	25 00
		$284 04

Reformed papers to copy.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A QUERY.

EDITOR THE MESSENGER:

In the Philadelphia Times of January 3, 1891, I find an account of a funeral service, in which it is said:

"—— sung in a very touching manner the hymn, "Flee as a bird to the mountain," after which Dr. —— (a prominent Presbyterian clergyman) made an eloquent prayer for the deceased."

The italics are mine.

Has the Presbyterian church come to prayers for the dead?

Yours, T. A. F.

Philadelphia, Jan. 5, 1891.

IN MEMORIAM.

MRS. REBECCA R. SCHNECK.

On Wednesday morning, December 31st, 1890, Mrs. Rebecca Riddle Schneck fell asleep in Jesus. She was the widow of Rev. Benjamin S. Schneck, D.D., who died seventeen years ago. Mrs. Schneck has long been in failing health, but her life was extended to the ripe period of 85 years. Quietly, with unwavering faith and clear spiritual and mental vision, she awaited the call of her Lord.

Mrs. Schneck was the daughter of Judge James Riddle, whose family was well known in the earlier history of Franklin county. She thus enjoyed the advantages of a society remarkable for intellect and culture. She was the center of a circle of ladies who, sixty years ago, were leading spirits in the religious movement which is now bearing fruit in the form of Sunday-school work. It must have been in or about the year 1828 that she was the superintendent of a Sunday-school which was held in the Chambersburg Academy. Into that school she gathered several gentlemen who were prominent in organizing Sunday-schools in some of the churches. There are a few still living who remember her as engaged in the Academy school. Easy and graceful in her movements, dignified, but ever cordial and kindly in her intercourse with all classes of society, possessed of great personal magnetism joined to a cultured intellect, she was pre-eminently the first lady of her age in Chambersburg.

She was married June 30th, 1836, to Rev. Benjamin S. Schneck, of the Reformed church, and connected herself with Zion's Reformed congregation at Chambersburg. Into her new spiritual home she brought her zeal and exemplified in her true Christian life the spirit of her Master.

One brother, H. R. Riddle, Esq., of Charlestown, W. Va., her niece, Mrs. Thomas B. Kennedy, and a nephew, survive her. Her adopted daughter, Miss Kate Hayman, has been for years her constant companion, and has watched over her with the tenderness and solicitude of a daughter whose whole life was bound up in that of her mother.

For many of the older ministers and elders of the Church the departure of Mrs. Schneck will revive many a cherished memory of hours spent amid the hospitality of her home, and in the enjoyment of her society and that of her husband.

H.

CHRISTMAS TIDINGS.

(CONTINUED.)

PENNSYLVANIA.

Norristown.—Trinity, Rev. J. B. Henry, pastor. The school of this church rendered a very enjoyable Christmas service. Rev. H. A. Bomberger, of York, Pa., addressed the school. The scholars received their usual treat, and many of the teachers were kindly remembered by their classes. The offerings, $17 30, were for Bethany Orphans' Home.

Orangeville.—Rev. A. Houtz, pastor. On Christmas eve a beautiful and instructive service was rendered in this place The church was, as usual, decorated with laurel. All the exercises moved off well At a point the anxious thought intruded itself into the mind of many, "What next." There was no tree or gifts visible. Just then the bells of Santa Claus were heard in the vestibule. The door was cautiously opened and Santa Claus, dressed in true arctic costume, made his appearance, rolling before him what seemed to be a huge snow-ball as white as cotton. With apparent laborious effort he rolled the ball to the front of the audience. Some laughed, some smiled, and not a few looked on with wonderment. Having made his speech, Santa Claus drew from his side pocket an ungainly knife and plunged it into this mysterious ball. After considerable perseverance, he made a hole large enough to admit his two hands. He then with a smile extracted its contents, which was soon delivered to the gratified children.

On Christmas evening suitable services were held in the Zion church, which is in the country. Here three ladders, covered with evergreen, were erected in the form of a large A. From their rounds eight

Continued on Page 13.

IF YOU HAVE
MALARIA OR PILES,
SICK HEADACHE, DUMB AGUE, COSTIVE BOWELS, SOUR STOMACH and BELCHING; if your food does not assimilate and you have no appetite,
Tutt's Pills
will cure these troubles. Try them; you have nothing to lose, but will gain a vigorous body. Price, 25c. per box.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

MELLIN'S
FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS.
TRADE ORA ET LABORA MARK.
FOOD
THE ONLY
Perfect Substitute for Mother's Milk.
INVALUABLE
IN CHOLERA INFANTUM AND TEETHING.
A quickly assimilated Food for DYSPEPTICS, CONSUMPTIVES, CONVALESCENTS.
A PERFECT NUTRIENT in all wasting diseases.
REQUIRES NO COOKING. KEEPS IN ALL CLIMATES.
SEND for our book, "The Care and Feeding of Infants," mailed free to any address.
DOLIBER-GOODALE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
"Largest Sale in the World"
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [62

Rubifoam
FOR THE TEETH
Deliciously Flavored
25¢
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS

SPENCERIAN STEEL PENS
Are the Best
If You Wish To Try Them,
Samples of the leading numbers will be sent FREE on receipt of return postage, 2 cents. The Spencerian Pen Co., 810 Broadway, New York.

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE of 16,600f.
QUINA-
LAROCHE'S
INVIGORATING TONIC,
CONTAINING

QUINA LAROCHE

Peruvian Bark, and Pure Catalan Wine.
Endorsed by the Medical Faculty of Paris, as the Best Remedy for
LOSS of APPETITE, FEVER and AGUE, MALARIA, NEURALGIA and INDIGESTION.
An experience of 25 years in experimental analysis, together with the valuable aid extended by the Academy of Medicine in Paris, has enabled M. Laroche to extract the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark (a result not before attained), and to concentrate them in an elixir, which possesses in the highest degree its restorative and invigorating qualities, free from the disagreeable bitterness of other remedies.
22 rue Drouot, Paris.
E. FOUGERA & CO., Agents for U. S.,
30 North William street, N. Y.
LAROCHE

THE WONDERFUL LUBURG CHAIR
COMBINING 5 ARTICLES OF FURNITURE.
50 CHANGES
100 STYLES.
BABY COACHES
INVALID SUPPLIES AND WHEEL CHAIRS
We retail at the lowest wholesale factory prices, and ship goods to be paid for on delivery. Send stamp for Catalogue. Name goods desired.
Automatic Brake on all Coaches
FREE WHEEL CHAIRS TO HIRE.
SPECIAL FREE DELIVERY.
LUBURG MFG. CO., 145 N. 8th St., Philada., Pa.

ASTHMA CURED DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

BLATCHLEY WOOD FORCE PUMP
Cheapest and most efficient. A Complete Fire Department on your premises. Write for descriptive circular. CHAS. G. BLATCHLEY, Philada.

hundred gifts were suspended. At the close of the exercises, the pastor, in the name of the Zion Sabbath school, presented Messrs. E. M. Laubach and Jacob Gcisinger, the superintendents, each with a handsome chair. Nor was the parson and his wife overlooked on Christmas Day. From friends in the charge there were consigned to the parsonage a beautiful lap robe for the pastor, and a full dinner and tea set finished in gold for his wife. A. H.

Harrisburg.—Second Church, Rev. Geo. W. Snyder, pastor. Interesting services were held by the Sunday-school on the evening of Christmas Day. An orchestral accompaniment, as part of the choir, added to the enjoyment of the occasion. The pastor and several teachers received gifts from their classes. The children were treated as usual. The church was decorated for the occasion: A Christmas tree occupied the space in the rear of the pulpit. The superintendent, C. W. Myers, had charge of the choir and of the exercises. The pastor made a short address. The infant department, under Wm. H. Seibert, also participated. Collection for the Orphans' Home at Womelsdorf.

Hegins.—Deep Creek Charge, Rev. Geo. J. Lisberger, pastor. September 1st to Christmas was spent in celebrating Harvest Home and the Lord's Supper in the six congregations of the charge. Collections for classical apportionment during this time were $65; for Japan, $15. Nearly all the members communed. Christmas was also celebrated in the various churches with the usual children's services and trees. Catechetical instruction in the Heidelberg Catechism has been commenced.

Bellefonte.—Rev. M O. Noll, pastor. The season was made joyous in St. John's church, Bellefonte, by the full and complete rendering of the service entitled, "Immanuel, God with us," to a large and appreciative audience. The choir, orchestra, and Sunday-school performed their respective parts to the delight of all present. One of the most touching features of the programme was a solo by a member of the infant class, whose voice, though faint, yet sweet and clear, reminded all present of the Infant Jesus. Gifts were distributed to all the members of the school. The organist, Prof. Wm. Meyer, was presented with a purse of fifty dollars by the congregation as a mark of appreciation for his very valuable service in the training and drilling of choir and orchestra. The pastor was the recipient of a handsome gift from the "Ladies' Aid Society," and a number of valuable gifts from individual members of ths congregation. The orphans were not forgotten. The offering amounted to $20.

Hummelstown.—Rev. J. F. Moyer, pastor. Festivities were held by the various Sunday-schools of the charge. The cantata rendered by the Hummelstown school was one of the finest ever witnessed. The music, costumes and scenery were of a high order. In the distribution of gifts the pastor was very kindly remembered. Among others, on Sunday last, the Shoop's congregation presented him with a purse of gold containing fifty dollars. Extensive repairs are being contemplated by the Hummelstown and Wenrich's congregations in their churches.

Meyersdale.—Rev. W. Rupp, D.D., pastor. The Christmas festival was duly celebrated by the Reformed congregation of this place. The church was tastefully decorated, three services were held during the day, and the collections amounting to $40 were devoted to St. Paul's Orphan Home.

Delmont.—Rev. J. N. Bauman, pastor. Appropriate services were held in Trinity church, Delmont, Pa., on Christmas eve. The service, "Immanuel, God with us," was used and much enjoyed. St. Paul's Orphan Home, the children of the school, and the pastor were all kindly remembered in the gifts of the people.

Lebanon.—St. John's. The first Christmas festival services held in St. John's reconstructed church were of a very interesting character. On Christmas eve the whole school rendered "The Christ Child," at the proper point in which they were very admirably addressed by Prof. A. V. Hiester, of Palatinate College, upon the great benefits which we derive from the birth of the Christ Child, and the obligations which it imposes upon us.

The church was very tastefully decorated with ground pine and holly, by a committee of ladies from the Sunday-school, assisted by the assistant superintendent of the senior department. A large tree, beautifully decorated and illuminated, was placed to the right of the chancel.

A joint service was also held on Christmas morning, conducted by the pastor. The offering of the children, amounting to about $45, will be given to Bethany Orphans' Home. The pastor, his wife and baby were the recipients of many handsome presents from members of the congregation, and from the "young people" a beautiful colored engraving.

Bethlehem.—Rev. G. A. Schwedes, pastor. The Christmas season brought pleasant services to Christ church. The day was opened with early service for the congregation, but celebrated especially as a day of rejoicing for the children. Two programmes were effectively carried out —one for the little ones in the afternoon, the other for the whole school in the evening. Besides the conventional evergreen trees, large arches and reredos decked with laurel ornamented the front and recess of the church. The Holy Eucharist was celebrated by a goodly number of communicants, and the best of the year's seasons gave much joy to all and genuine happiness to the little ones. Two young men of the Brotherhood erected an artistic "Christmas Putz," which attracted many visitors to their rooms.

Few weeks before Christmas we had the pleasure of a visit from the Rev. Dr G. C. Seibert, who as a former pastor of the Reformed church, and at present editor of several German weeklies, published in New York, and Professor in the German Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian church, is well known among the Reformed brethren. The Doctor is vigorous and hard-working; he preached with great force and eloquence. In the introductory remarks to his sermon he said, "I came to find my old Mercersburg friend, whom I have not seen for so many years; I came to see the father, but found the son." Then adding that he felt himself growing old, he dwelt beautifully upon the flight of time in his characteristic flow of thought and words. It was a privilege to hear him, and we felt sure that in his heart still dwells a strong love ior the church in which he once served his Master.

York.—Grace church, Rev. I. N. Peightel, pastor. Very interesting and impressive services were held by the congregation and Sunday-school of this church. The church was handsomely decorated. At 6 o'clock A.M. an interesting service was held, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, responsive reading, prayer and a short sermon by the pastor.

At 6 P.M. the Sunday-school beautifully rendered the "Immanuel" service of the Reformed Church Publication House, Philadelphia. This was decidedly the finest and best rendered service in the history of the school. Every member of the school, to the number of 225, received the usual gift. The orphans of the church were remembered to the amouut of $9 88.

Greenville.—Rev. A M. Keifer, pastor. Christmas was appropriately observed by the Greenville congregation. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion. A large congregation was present at the early 6 o'clock services. Another service was held in the evening by the Sunday school which was largely attended by the congregation. Collection in both congregations for St. Paul's Orphan Home amounted to $30.

Mercersburg.—Rev. Z. A. Yearick, pastor. The Mercersburg and Upton Sunday-schools duly observed the Christmas festival. The services were characterized by more than usual interest. The collections, amounting to $6.91, were given to Bethany Orphans' Home. The pastor received a number of valuable gifts.

MARYLAND.

Hagerstown.—Christ charge, Rev. G A. Snyder, pastor. The festival was observed in the two congregations of this charge. In the country on Christmas eve, and in town on Christmas evening. The services consisted in the main of song which were well rendered. The usual treat was given the scholars and teachers. The pastor was kindly remembered by his parishioners and by his Sunday-school scholars. The trimming of the church in the country consisting of plain festoon work, while that in town was considerably more elaborate, being designated by different ones as beautiful. Total offering amounted to $30.50, for the Orphans' Homes.

Baltimore.—Third Churh, Rev. C. Clever, D. D., pastor. This church had a pleasant and profitable service. Offerings for Orphan's Home amounted to $109 10.

St. Paul's, Rev. Warren J. Johnson, pastor. The Christmas service, "Immanuel," was rendered by this school to the great delight of a crowded congregation. The chancel and pulpit recess were adorned by a large temple of evergreens. Superintendent J. L. Fryer presided, assisted by Elder D. C. Hammett. the pastor delivering the address. The Sunday school brought an offering of $25 for Bethany Orphans' Home.

Christ church, Rev. Ambrose M Schmidt, pastor. Early service of praise 6 A.M. A good attendance Sunday-school-service at 7.30 P.M. Usual distribution of gifts to the children. The offerings, amounting to $7.50, were for the orphans at Womelsdorf. The pastor was made the recipient of a mysterious envelope. Contents, $20; a generous gift.

Manchester.—The service of Trinity Reformed church was held on Christmas evening. The service, "Immanuel," was used, and all were highly pleased with it.

Continued on Page 14

Cleveland's Baking Powder
Is Absolutely the Best,
Because—It does not contain Alum: "Baking powder that contains alum is not a fit article of consumption. Parties selling or manufacturing such baking powders will be liable to arrest for selling an article that is considered deleterious to health."
Ohio Official Report, page 17.

SCOTT'S
EMULSION
DOES CURE
CONSUMPTION
In its First Stages.
Be sure you get the genuine.

HAIR
—ON—
Ladies' Faces
Destroyed forever. No pain, scar, shock, or injury by the Electric Needle by
DR J. VAN DYCK,
Electro Surgeon,
1106 WALNUT ST, Phila.,
and 502 PENN AVE.,
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Never fails. Book free. Call or write.

A NEW
Twilled Lace Thread
FOR CROCHETING.
BEST in the world!
Crocheting Book No. 2
50 Illustrated Patterns.
TEN CENTS.
Series of 12 Beautiful Illus. Tidies from London and Paris. Inquire for them of your dealer, or send 10 cents for spool—500 yards. 5 cents for Single Tidy or 60 cts. for 12 Tidy patterns, including copy of Crocheting Book No. 2.
GLASGO LACE THREAD CO., Glasgo, Conn.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

For Gas BAILEY'S For Oil
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass
REFLECTORS,
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free.
A. J. WEIDENER,
36 South 2d St. Philada.
ALSO CHANDELIERS for OIL and ELECTRICITY

Established 1857.
THE GREAT CHURCH LIGHT
FRINK'S PATENT REFLECTORS
for Gas, Oil or Electric, give the most powerful, softest, cheapest and BEST light known for Churches, Stores, Banks, Theatres, Depots, etc. New and Elegant Designs. Send size of room. Get circular and estimate. A liberal discount to Churches and the trade.
Don't be deceived by cheap imitations.
I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl St., N. Y.

CHOICE CARPETINGS
IN ALL GRADES,
AT POPULAR PRICES.
A full line of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and Standard Domestic and Imported Carpets.
☞ We request only an OPPORTUNITY to show you our stock.
IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE.
NEW STORE,
1217 Market Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

CARPET buyers had better purchase of J. & J. DOBSON, 809 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, in order to receive full value for their money. They retail Carpets of their own make, which are reliable in every way.

Over 350,000 acres of Choice Farm Lands. Failure of crops never known. Best all-the-year climate in the world. Soil adapted to all kinds of farming. Plenty of water. Low prices, and unusually liberal terms. C. E. SIMMONS, Land Com., C. & N.-W. R'y, Chicago, Ill.

The offerings were devoted to the cause ot the fatherless. The pastor was made the recipient of several tokens of appreciation and good will. This school possesses no little degree of taste and willingness to work in getting up a Christmas festival. Rev. N. J. Miller, pastor.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Washington.—Rev. A. T. G. Apple, pastor. Early morning services were inaugurated in Grace Chapel this Christmas, by a congregation that far exceeded expectations. The people entered into the service with spirit and all went away feeling it was good to have been there. The children of the Sunday-school were bountifully remembered on Friday evening. The decorations, an advance on last year, were very much admired. The Holy Family, the Wise Men, the shepherds, with a choir of angels descending in a cloud, which formed the central design, was flanked by two trees and surrounded by other evergreens. The congregation and Sunday-school contributed $20 to our orphan homes in the East; $5 of this was an offering from Miss Belle Ronger's class of young ladies in the Sunday-school. The congregation "passed sentence" upon the pastor and wife and "condemned them to undergo another year of happiness and prosperity: and also to receive the contents" of a certain large envelope.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Martinsburg.—Six o'clock Christmas morning found a large audience in the Reformed Church at Martinsburg. The services throughout were heartily entered into and enjoyed by all present. At six o'clock the same evening the church was again filled. This time the bright, cheery faces of the children were the more conspicuous. Again were there hearty responses by those present and a blending of joyous voices in cheerful song. A tangible expression of praise and thanksgiving was made at both services by making an offering to the Lord of nearly $50. It was good to be there was the thought of a VISITOR.

Ayer's
Sarsaparilla
The Best
Blood Medicine

So say Leading Physicians and Druggists, and their opinion is indorsed by thousands cured by it of Scrofula, Eczema, Erysipelas, and other diseases of the blood.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla has won its reputation by years of valuable service to the community. It is the best."—R. S. Lang, Druggist, 212 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass.

Dr. W. P. Wright, Paw Paw Ford, Tenn., says: "In my practice, I invariably prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla for chronic diseases of the blood."

Dr. R. R. Boyle, Third and Oxford sts., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "For two years I have prescribed Ayer's Sarsaparilla in numerous instances, and I find it highly efficacious in the treatment of all disorders of the blood."

L. M. Robinson, Pharmacist, Sabina, O., certifies: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has always been a great seller. My customers think there is no blood-purifier equal to it."

"For many years I was afflicted with scrofulous running sores, which, at last became so bad the doctors advised amputating one of my legs to save my life. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon saw an improvement. After using about two dozen bottles the sores were healed. I continue to take a few bottles of this medicine each year, for my blood, and am no longer troubled with sores. I have tried other reputed blood-purifiers, but none does so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—D. A. Robinson, Neal, Kansas.

Don't fail to get

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by Druggists. $1, six $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

Church News.

☞Stated Clerks of Classes and Pastors will oblige us by sending such Items of News as will be of interest to the Church.

OUR OWN CHURCH.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Greensburg.—Second Church, Rev. D. N. Dittman was installed pastor of this church on Sunday the 4th instant, by a committee of Westmoreland Classis, of which Revs. C. R. Ferner and L. Cort were present and officiated.

Mechanicsburg.—Rev. W. I. Stewart, pastor. On Sunday morning, January 4th, the pastor was made the recipient of a beautiful silver private communion set from his Bible class.

The set consists of four pieces, a flagon, a chalice, a bread-box and a plate, which are ornamented with bunches of grapes, heads of wheat and Greek crosses. The box in which they are held is lined with blue satin and covered with alligator leather.

The gift is highly valued by the pastor for the good will which prompted the giving, and for the service it will be in taking the communion to the sick and aged members of the Church.

Philadelphia.—Christ Church, Rev. J. Crawford, D.D., pastor. At the communion service held January 1st, six members were added to the church.

Saegerstown.—Rev. D. H. Leader, pastor. On New Year's evening many of the members of the Saegertown, Pa. congregation gathered at the charming home of Mr. E. E. McGill, to indulge in one of those rare social and musical entertainments one sometimes meets with in life. Piano, violin, clarionet and sweet vocal music, and some well-rendered recitations filled up the hours to the delight of all. In the midst of all, a purse of $10 was given to pastor and wife—a New Year's gift by these kind people. This is only one of numerous acts of similar kindness many of the generous people of this congregation are continually showing the pastor and family. Bless their good hearts! happy as they no doubt are in doing so, they perhaps little know how deeply and truly such tokens of love are appreciated by the minister.

Eddyville.—Rev. S. T. Wagner resigned the pastorate of St. John's charge and will in a few weeks move to Monroe, Clarion County, having accepted a call from the Beaver charge lately vacated by Rev. J. F. Wiant.

Turbotville.—Several weeks ago, Rev. Wm. H. Bates, of Johnstown, Pa., delivered his lecture on the Johnstown flood in the following places: McEwensville, Milton, Paradise, Turbotville and Watsontown. Large audiences greeted the lecturer on each occasion, and the proceeds were very encouraging. Bro. Bates was very favorably impressed with this section of the Reformed church. He is a hard, self-denying worker; and certainly, in the great work he has undertaken of building a new church at Johnstown, he deserves the sympathy and aid of the entire church. He ought to receive invitations from all over the church to deliver his lecture. The object is a worthy one, and Brother Bates is withal a fluent and interesting speaker, and the stereopticon views which accompany the lecture are superb.

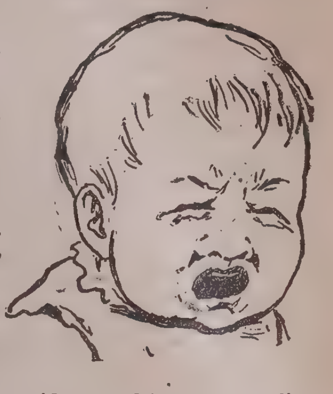
D. E. S.

VIRGINIA.

Winchester.—Services were held in the Reformed Church at Winchester on Sunday, 28th ult., by Rev. Lewis Reiter. This vacant field is anxiously waiting for a pastor to break to them the bread of life. Though there is much to discourage, yet there are elements of strength in this charge that a faithful pastor could develope.

HOW BABIES SUFFER

When their tender Skins are literally On Fire with Itching and Burning Eczemas and other Itching, Scaly, and Blotchy Skin and Scalp Diseases, none but mothers realize.



To know that a single application of the Cuticura Remedies will, in the great majority of cases, afford instant and complete relief, permit rest and sleep, and point to a permanent and economical (because so speedy) cure, and not to use them without a moment's delay, is to be guilty of positive inhumanity. No greater legacy can be bestowed upon a child than a skin without blemish and a body nourished with pure blood.

CUTICURA

Remedies are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies, are absolutely pure, and may be used from infancy to age, from pimples to scrofula, with the most gratifying and unfailing success.

Treatment.—Cuticura, the great skin cure, and Cuticura Soap, an exquisite skin purifier and beautifier, externally, instantly allay the most intense itching, burning, and inflammation, soothe and heal raw and irritated surfaces, clear the skin and scalp of crusts and scales, and speedily restore the hair, while Cuticura Resolvent, the new blood and skin purifier and greatest of humor remedies, cleanses the blood of all impurities and poisonous elements, and thus removes the cause.

"All about the Blood, Skin, Scalp, and Hair" mailed free to any address, 64 pages, 300 Diseases, 50 Illustrations, 100 Testimonials. A book of priceless value to mothers, affording information not obtainable elsewhere.

Cuticura Remedies are sold everywhere. Price, Cuticura, 50c.; Cuticura Soap, 25c.; Cuticura Resolvent, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston.

Facial Blemishes, pimples, blackheads, red, rough, and oily skin and hands, and simple humors and skin blemishes of infancy and childhood are prevented and cured by that most effective of all Skin Purifiers and Beautifiers, the celebrated Cuticura Soap. Incomparably superior to all other skin and complexion soaps, while rivalling in delicacy and purity the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only preventive of inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of most facial blemishes. Sale greater than the combined sale of all other skin soaps. Sold throughout the world. Price, 25c.

NORTH CAROLINA.

East Rowan Charge.—Rev. C. B. Heller, pastor. The congregations of the charge, Grace and Bethel, held their missionary anniversaries and sales, the former on Saturday, December 6th, and the latter on Saturday, December 13th.

The exercises consisted of recitations and readings by the members and an address by the pastor, after which, sale was made of cotton and various other plantation products, the proceeds to be devoted to foreign missions. The amount realized at Bethel was $75, which was far in excess of any previous year; at Grace, $60.50, making in all $135 50.

Thirty-two copies of the Missionary Guardian are taken in the charge. Missionary meetings are held monthly at the home church (Grace).

MICHIGAN.

Fulton.—Rev. S. A. Alt began on the first day of December a series of Gospel meetings at Brady, one of his preaching points, and continued them with increasing interest until Christmas. During the meetings the little band of consecrated workers avoided all unnecessary work in the home and on the farm, and united with heart and hand in the service of the Lord. The afternoon meeting of prayer, praise and Bible study was moved from house to house and was well attended. The evening service was held at the usual place of worship, and the interest increased. During the meetings twenty-two took up their cross to follow Christ, and on the 21st of December five adults were baptized and sixteen received into Christian fellowship by confirmation.

ILLINOIS.

Anna.—Rev. Joshua Wolbach has accepted a call to this place and will at an early date remove to his new field of labor.

KANSAS.

Circleville.—A Sunday-school was organized on January 4, 1861, and 45 were present the first Sunday. Elder Joseph C. Stauffer is the superintendent. Mr. Stauffer's name was omitted from the best contributors to Circleville Church, he having given $100 first and $25 on dedication day.

PERSONAL.

Rev. J. F. Moyer of Hummelstown, Pa., has been appointed Chaplain of the House of Representatives, Harrisburg, Pa., by Speaker Thompson. His friends in the Church will be pleased to hear of this mark of favor extended him.

Change of Address.

Rev. S. T. Wagner from Eddyville to Monroe, Clarlon Co., Pa.

THE AIR WE BREATHE.

"Whom fire spares, sea doth drown.
Whom sea, pestilent air doth send to clay.
Whom war escapes, sickness takes away."

Modern science, if it has not greatly mitigated the horrors of war, at least shortened its duration. The sea has lost some of its terrors, and many diseases formerly considered incurable, now yield to medical treatment. But the "pestilent air" (Malairia), seems to hold its own. Read the testimony of patients who have been cured of malarial diseases:

Ironton, Mo., Dec. 26th 1883.—Drs. Starkey & Palen: "I will write for another of your Compound Oxygen Treatments. The last treatment was of great benefit, not only to me and me son, but to my daughter, fourteen years of age. She lay dangerously ill with typhoid malaria, I got so disgusted with the strong medicines, that I quit all before she was able to sit up, and gave her the Compound Oxygen, and she improved slowly at first, but in a short time was the picture of health, looking better than before."

Send for our brochure of 200 pages. It will give you scores of testimonials, a history of Compound Oxygen, its nature, discovery and results. Besides, it is an interesting work, thoughtfully, carefully and conscientiously written. Address the sole manufacturers of Genuine Compoud Oxygen, Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

FOR DYSPEPSIA

Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. F. H. WELTY, Hamilton, Va., says: " I have tried it frequently and always with most satisfactory results. Nothing is equal to it for treatment of dyspepsia and various complications resulting from disorders originating in the stomach. I consider it invaluable."

RESOLUTIONS

of Respect and Condolence to our Pastor, Rev. E. W. Reinecke.

WHEREAS, The hand of Divine Providence has caused our beloved pastor to tender his resignation to his charge (namely, Forks, Union and Plainfield congregations), and the congregations who sat under his ministry and profited by his example, are desirous of testifying their respect, and expressing their earnest and affectionate sympathy to him during his affliction.

Resolved, That we accept the resignation which severs our relation as pastor and people with heartfelt sadness.

Resolved, That the 33 years of faithful service rendered by him to this society have been greatly blessed in upbuilding Church and Sunday-school, and increasing its membership, creating feelings of Christian fellowship and good will among other denominations.

Resolved, That for his ministering to the temporal wants of the poor and the spiritual needs of all; for the tender solicitude and earnest sympathy which have always brought him to the bedside of the sick and dying; for his efforts in behalf of the education of the masses, and for his exertions to ameliorate the condition of suffering humanity at all times and under all circumstance, the members of this owe him a debt of gratitude which they can never repay.

Resolved, That in parting, our kindest wishes will ever attend him, and share with him the hope of a reunion in that better world where there are no partings and bliss ineffable forbids a tear.

JONAS F. KINDT,
H. S. MOHN,
WM. H. BOWERS,
T. I. M., Sec. Committee.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

At the request of the Committees of the Eastern and Potomac Synods, the Board of Trustees of the Theological Seminary will hold a special meeting in the College Building at Lancaster, on Thursday, the 22d of January next, at 2 o'clock, P.M., ,, to consider the location and such other matters as may be necessary in regard to a Seminary building." These committees were appointed at the last meeting of the Synods and are earnestly moving in the matter. They ask and will, no doubt, receive the hearty co-operation of this Board.

D. W. GROSS, President.

Dec. 27th, 1890.

RESOLUTIONS.

At a meeting of a committee in behalf of the Laurelton Reformed congregation, Sunday-school and Missionary Society, the following paper was adopted, viz.:

WHEREAS, It hath pleased God in His wise Providence to remove from our midst, Elder John Knarr, whom we all had learned to love, honor and esteem for his piety, Christian conduct and example in all good works, therefore,

Resolved, That we deeply feel and deplore our loss, and humbly pray that we may accept this dispensation will full submission to His will, knowing that which He does is well done.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the afflicted family and pray that God may sustain them in this bereavement.

Resolved, That God may enable us, in His great mercy, to realize that the loss to his family and our loss is his gain.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, the Reformed Church MESSENGER and the Telegraph.

Sol. S. Miller, Minor Brown, K. L. Glover, Maria E. Mercer, Clara Glover, committee.

Acknowledgments.

Bethany Orphans' Home, Womelsdorf, Pa. Christmas Offerings received to January 6th, 1891.

St Paul's Ref ch, Lancaster, Pa, Rev J W Meminger, pastor, per Dan H Heitshu, treas,	$20 00
Bethlehem Ref S S, Phila, Rev J G Neuber, pastor,	100 00
Ladies' Miss Soc of Ref ch at Freeburg, Selinsgrove chge, per Rev W A Haas, treasurer W Susq Cl,	10 00
B F Boyer, MD, Springtown, Bucks Co, Pa,	2 00
Mrs Adaline F Gast, Lancaster, Pa, per Rev F A Gast, DD,	5 00
Trinity Ref S S, Collegeville, Pa, per Frank M Hobson,	21 10
From J K Hilbush, Mahanoy, Pa, 2.00, Mrs J R Hilbush, 1.50, Miss Mary do, 80 cts, Miss Lydia do, 70 cts,	5 00
Christ Ref cong, Phila, Rev Jas Crawford, DD, pastor, per Dr E I Santee, treas,	127 09
Ref S S, Lewisburg, Pa, per Rev Irwin W Hendrickson,	18 85
Iron Bridge S S, a mission of Trinity Ref ch, Collegeville, per Frank M Hobson,	7 09
S B Schantz, Bethlehem,	1 00
St John's Ref S S, Chambersburg, Pa, per G W Klee, sec,	12 00
Emanuel's Ref S S, West Phila, Rev A E Dahlman, pastor,	66 08
First Ref ch, S Bethlehem, Pa, per Rev N Z Snyder, pastor,	15 33
St John's Ref cong, Riegelsville, Pa, 186.41, S S do, 131.31, per Rev B B Ferer, pastor,	317 71
Abilene, Kansas, charge, per Rev C A Santee, treas Kansas Cl,	9 26
Brownback's ch, Hitner, Pa, per Ada Grubb,	11 68
Ref ch, McEwensville, Pa, per A Manser.	7 12
S S Miss Soc of Christ Ref ch, Phila, Pa, per Miss Annie E Wayne, treas,	10 00
S S of First Ref ch, Lancaster, Pa, per Rev J M Titzel, D D, pastor,	31 14
Sioux City Mission, per Rev T F Stauffer, treas Lincoln Cl,	1 50
St John's Ref ch, Freeland, Pa, 14 00, Wm Kerst, in memory of his little son, Freddie, 2.00, per Rev E D Miller, pastor,	16 00
Zion's Ref cong, York, Pa, Rev O P Shellhamer, pastor, 7.25, First Ref church, York, Pa, Rev J O Miller, DD, 14.00, per C A Shultz, treas Zion's Cl,	21 25
Per Rev Wm M Deatrick, DD, treas Mercersburg Cl, from Waynesboro chge, 17.00, Shippensburg ch, 5.51, Mercersburg S S, 5.10, Upton S S, 1.81, Ethel M Deatrick, Rimersburg, Pa, 1.00, Eugene Peyton Deatrick, do, 1.00,	31 42
St Paul's Ref ch, Waynesboro, Pa, per Rev Sefellen E Stoffler, pastor.	17 25
Cong and S S of Trinity Ref ch, Columbia, per Rev J H Pannebecker,	36 25
Grace Ref S S of York, Pa., per Rev I N Peightel,	9 86

To be continued.

Thankfully received,

C. G. GROSS, Treasurer.

3716 Haverford Ave., Phila., Pa.

For a Disordered Liver try Beecham's Pills.

Every dairy ought to be scientifically conducted or not conducted at all. This letting a dairy run itself would seem to indicate that farming was so profitable that we did not know what to do with our money.

Premature gray whiskers should be colored to prevent the appearance of age, and Buckingham's Dye is by far the best preparation to do it.

Creosoted wood has been found to have such excellent lasting qualities that its economical properties have suggested its use for permanent haulage, roads, shaftways, etc., in collieries.

If you have ever used Dobbins' Electric during the 24 years it has been sold, you know that it is the best and purest family soap made. If you haven't tried it, ask your grocer for it now. Don't take imitation. There are lots of them.

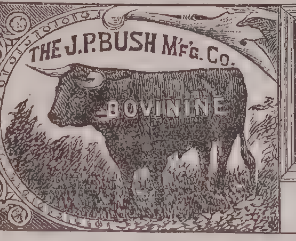
Mrs. Letitia Tyler Semple, a granddaughter of ex-President Tyler, has given a collection of old oil paintings, which belonged to the Tyler family, to William and Mary College.

A SUDDEN CHANGE OF WEATHER

Will often bring on a cough. The irritation which induces coughing is quickly subdued by BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES, a simple and effective cure for all throat troubles. Price, 25 cents per box.

Bricks boiled in coal-tar are rendered hard and durable, and machine-made bricks, if boiled for a long period—say twenty-four hours—become water-proof. Bricks thus treated are well adapted for sewers, cess-pools and the foundations of buildings.

BEECHAM'S
PAINLESS. PILLS EFFECTUAL.
WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.
For BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS
Such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Fullness and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness, and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c.
THE FIRST DOSE WILL GIVE RELIEF IN TWENTY MINUTES.
BEECHAM'S PILLS TAKEN AS DIRECTED RESTORE FEMALES TO COMPLETE HEALTH.
For Sick Headache, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Constipation, Disordered Liver, etc.,
they ACT LIKE MAGIC, Strengthening the muscular System, restoring long-lost Complexion, bringing back the keen edge of appetite, and arousing with the ROSEBUD OF HEALTH the whole physical energy of the human frame. One of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is that BEECHAM'S PILLS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE OF ANY PROPRIETARY MEDICINE IN THE WORLD.
Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England.
Sold by Druggists generally. B. F. ALLEN CO., 365 and 367 Canal St., New York, Sole Agents for the United States, who (if your druggist does not keep them) WILL MAIL BEECHAM'S PILLS on RECEIPT of PRICE, 25cts. A BOX. (MENTION THIS PAPER.)



THE J. P. BUSH M'F'G. Co.
BOVININE

BOVININE
A CONDENSED FOOD

COL. FRED. GRANT'S LETTER.- GEN. GRANT was sustained for months previous to his decease almost wholly by the use of BOVININE, as the following letter selected from many others will testify:

" THE J. P. BUSH MANUF'G CO.:—

" During the last four months of his sickness, the principal food of my " father, General Grant, was BOVININE and milk; and it was the use of " this incomparable food alone that enabled him to finish the second volume " of his personal memoirs.

" October 1st, 1885. " FRED D. GRANT."

Dr. J. H. DOUGLAS, General Grant's physician and faithful friend, cordially endorses the above statement regarding BOVININE.

Books New Issues every week. Catalogue, 96 pages, free on request.
Not sold by Dealers; prices too low. Buy of the Publisher,
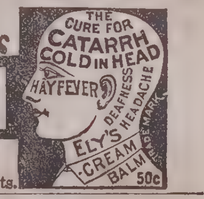
JOHN B. ALDEN, 393 Pearl Street, New York. Please mention this paper.

Ely's Cream Balm For
CATARRH
THE POSITIVE CURE.
ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren St., New York. Price 50 cts.



Hood's Calendar for 1891

Is now being distributed to the drug trade all over the country.

Said the head of one of the largest wholesale houses in the country: "For two weeks just before the first of the year, our whole place is turned into a Hood's Sarsaparilla Calendar establishment," so great is the demand throughout the whole retail trade for this popular Calendar.

To convey briefly an idea of the magnitude of this Calendar business, it is said that the edition for 1891 is 5,000,000. To make this enormous number requires the labor of fifty people, ten printing presses, and various other machinery for seventy days, manufacturing at the rate of 60,000 Calendars per day!

The subject represents three children playing musical instruments, and the positions, expressions, coloring, and general finish, make a most charming picture. But to be appreciated it must be seen. Ask your druggist for Hood's Sarsaparilla Calendar, or send six cents in stamps for one copy, or ten cents for two, to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Statistics show that ninety-five out of a hundred men fail in business sooner or later, and the cases in which a firm sees fifty years of business life are extremely rare. It is certainly then a noteworthy case when a house dates its existence back to the close of the Revolution, as do Walter Baker & Co., the famous chocolate and cocoa manufacturers of Dorchester, Mass., who began business there in 1780, and for a hundred and ten years have made their productions the standard of purity and excellence all over the world. The immense increase in the consumption of their Breakfast Cocoa is largely due to their sagacity in setting and maintaining the standard of absolute purity in its production, thereby insuring its perfect healthfulness and the highest degree of nutrition. No chemicals are ever used in its preparation, but only the action of the cleanest and most exact mechanical processes upon the best materials; and at the Paris Exposition the gold medal for absolute purity and excellence was awarded to W. Baker & Co.'s preparations by the most eminent scientific authorities of Europe.

Will You Join the Colony

Now organizing to locate in Maryland between the Cities of Baltimore and Washington. Here are fine farming lands; low in price; adapted to EVERY branch of agriculture; an abundance of pure, soft water; delightful and healthful climate; near to the best markets of the world; unsurpassed railroad facilities, with low freight and passenger rates, with quick time; educational advantages second to none; churches representing almost all denominations; refined and cultured society. Only a few more wanted to complete the Colony, and if you want to join in one of the best opportunities of a lifetime, NOW is the time. Farmers, business men, mechanics, and laborers, there is a chance for all. 100 per cent. profit easily assured in three years. Full information free of charge, furnished by M. V. Richards, Land and Immigration Agent, B. & O. R. R., Baltimore, Md.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. Sold by druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

AMERICAN FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

Office, Company's Building,

308 and 310 WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

A. D. 1810

CASH CAPITAL,	$500,000.00
Reserve for Reinsurance and all other claims,	1,733,053.18
Surplus over all Liabilities,	409,616.79

TOTAL ASSETS, JAN. 1, 1890.

$2,642,669 97.

THOS H. MONTGOMERY, President.
CHAS. P. PEROT, Vice-President.
RICHARD MARIS, Secretary,
JAMES B. YOUNG, Actuary

DIRECTORS.

Thos. H. Montgomery, Alexander Biddle,
John T. Lewis, Charles P. Perot,
Israel Morris, Joseph E. Gillingham,
Pemberton S. Hutchinson, Samuel Welsh, Jr.
Chas. S. Whelen.

The PENN MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO. Issues all approved forms of contracts adapted to every legitimate need, at the lowest, sure rates. Send for rates, etc. Home Office, 921 Chestnut Street, Philada.

DO NOT STAMMER.

Mr. E. Waterman, Lebanon, Conn., writes: "It seems to me almost a miracle that, after years of stammering, I can now talk and read with ease." Refer also to J. D. Wattles, Publisher of The Sunday School Times, who saw him before and after cure.

Send for 54-page pamphlet to E. S. JOHNSTON'S Institute, N. E. Cor. 11th and Spring Garden Sts Phila., Pa.

CLINTON H. MENEELY BELL COMPANY,
TROY, N. Y. Manufacture a Superior Grade of
CHURCH CHIME PEAL AND SCHOOL BELLS

Best quality Bells for Churches, Chimes, Schools, etc. Fully warranted. Write for Prices. BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY. VAN DUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY,
BALTIMORE, MD.
Best quality Copper and Tin BELLS for Churches, Schools, &c.
Also CHIMES AND BELLS.
Price and terms free. Name this paper.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N.Y., Bells
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others.

BULBOUS ROOTS for FALL PLANTING. Send for illustrated priced Catalogue. D. Landreth & Sons. 21 and 23 South Sixth Street, Phila. Branch Store, Delaware Ave. and Arch St.

DO YOU WANT MONEY? WORK? HEALTH? A FARM? A HOME? BUSINESS?

WRITE to F. I. WHITNEY, St. Paul, Minn and say just what you desire, and answer will be sent free, together with maps & publications.

RIGGS & BROTHER,
Branch Store, 1005 Walnut St., Phila.
Ladies' 14-Carat Gold Watches, $25.
" 14-Carat filled case " 18.
Boys' Silver Watches, $7.00.
Watches and Clocks repaired.

400,000 The largest circulation of any periodical in the world "The Phila. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies free. CURTIS PUB. CO., Phila., Pa.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.
Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and indorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your Grocers ought to have it on Sale Ask him for it. D. S WILTBERGER, Prop., 232 N. 2d St. Phila., Pa.

BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA!
Delicious, nourishing, absoluely pure. Costing less than one cent a cup.

CHURCH, HALL AND LODGE
Furniture. Pulpits, Chairs, Pews, etc.
BAXTER C. SWAN, 244 & 246 S. 2d St., Phila, Pa.

SOWING & REAPING
By the Author of Gates Ajar, Song Treasury, etc.
Hymns, Tunes and Carols for the Sunday school, Prayer, Praise and Gospel Service. Over 15,000 copies sold in advance of publication. 176 pages; beautiful lithograph title, superior in typography, press work, paper, binding and contents Single copies, 35 cts, post paid. By express, $3.60 per doz., $30 per 100.

Address,
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa

GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS have tape-fastened buttons—won't pull off; cord-edge button holes—won't wear out; ring buckle at hip—secures hose supporter.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER ABSOLUTELY PURE

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER

SOME OF THE DRESS GOODS BARGAINS

that are now attracting the greatest crowds we have ever had at our counters during any of the Great January Reduction Sales:

French Printed Cashmeres,
50 Cents. Reduced from 75.
46 inch Wool Henrietta,
75 Cents. Reduced from $1.00.
French Embroidered Robes,
$7 50. Reduced from $15.00.
Paris Dress Patterns,
$7.50. Reduced from $15.00.
Fancy Wool Cheviots,
31 Cents. Reduced from 50c.
Wool Novelty Stripes,
60 Cents. Reduced from $1.00.
French Broadcloth,
70 Cents. Reduced from $1.00.

All-Wool Cheviots,
75 Cents. Reduced from $1.25.
Fine Wool Serge,
62½ Cents. Reduced from 87½c.
Black Brilliantines,
56 Cents. Reduced from 87½c.
Black Diagonal Cloth,
37½ Cents. Reduced from 50c.
Black Stripe Surah,
75 Cents. Reduced from $1.00.
French Printed Challies,
37½ Cents. Reduced from 60c.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER
EIGHTH AND MARKET STS.,
PHILADELPHIA.

No more Baggy-Kneed Trousers if you use "the United Service Trousers Stretcher." Price, $1.50.
E. O. THOMPSON, TAILOR, CLOTHIER, IMPORTER, (Sole Agent),
1338 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

$700 IN PRIZE[illegible]

FIRST PRIZE, Cash, $200
SECOND PRIZE, Cash 100
5 PRIZES, Ea. $10 Cash, 50
[illegible]0 PRIZES, Ea. $5 Cash, 100
[illegible]d 250 Pound Boxes [illegible]UNTHER'S BEST CANDY 250
Total, 277 Prizes, $700

Will be given [illegible] hose forming the MOST WORDS FROM "TAD[illegible]A ALLOYED ZINK PEN" The name of the L[illegible] Invention in Writing Pens. No words co[illegible] defined in Webster's or Worcester's Dictionaries. Use e[illegible]ter no oftener in one word than it occurs in "TADELLA A[illegible]D ZINK PEN." Arrange words alphabetically and at end o[illegible] write your name, P. O. address and number of words in lis[illegible]ords must be written in ink with a Tadella Pen and the P[illegible]ed must be enclosed with the list. (We give these pri[illegible] induce you to try the pens.) A Tadella Pen may be b[illegible]t of YOUR STATIONER for a penny, or we will send sample dozen, to suit all hands, and full information regarding method of awarding prizes, for 10 cents. CASH PRIZES will be paid through the NATIONAL SHOE AND LEATHER BANK, New York. Answers must be received BEFORE MARCH 15TH, and committee will award prizes within 20 days. For further information address (with 2c. stamp) ST. PAUL BOOK & STATIONERY CO. ST. PAUL, MINN.
☞ CUT THIS OUT! IT WILL NOT APPEAR AGAIN. ☜

In answering this mention the MESSENGER.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S SEEDS

Yes our Seeds are THE BEST there is, that's all—none can be better, and if you plant them once, you will want them again, no fear of that. OUR SEEDS, ROSES, especially Roses, Bulbs, Hardy Plants, etc., are known everywhere and sent everywhere postpaid. If you don't know a better place, send your orders to us, but first write for our NEW GUIDE—a valuable Book 124 pp. FREE, and see how much a little money will do. THE DINGEE & CONARD CO. WEST GROVE, PA.

Most Worthy Books for Purchase

CHOICE AND POPULAR ALTO SONGS.
33 songs—each one a Gem. Price, $1 in heavy paper, $1.25 in bds., and $2 in gilt binding.

THE SONGS OF IRELAND.
A new and carefully revised collection of the best and most celebrated Irish songs. Some of the best melodies in existence, and bright, spirited words. 66 songs. Price, $1 in heavy paper, $1.25 in bds., and $2 in gilt binding.

Choice Song Collections.

SONG CLASSICS. Vol. 1,	50	songs.
SONG CLASSICS. Vol 2,	39	"
SONG CLASSICS. Low Voices,	47	"
CHOICE SACRED SOLOS,	34	"
CHOICE SACRED SOLOS, Low Voices,	40	"
CLASSIC, BARITONE AND BASS,	33	"
CLASSIC TENOR SONGS,	36	"
GOOD OLD SONGS WE USED TO SING,	115	"

Choice Piano Collections.

PIANO CLASSICS. Vol. 1,	44	pieces.
PIANO CLASSICS. Vol. 2,	31	"
CLASSICAL PIANIST,	42	"
POPULAR DANCE COLLECTION,	66	"
POPULAR PIANO COLLECTION,	66	"
OPERATIC PIANO COLLECTION,	19	operas.

Price of Each Book, $1.00. Cloth Gilt, $2.00.
All are Valuable Collections of the Best Music.

Churchill's BIRTHDAY BOOK of EMINENT COMPOSERS. A handsome and useful gift, $1.00.

Any Book mailed, post-paid, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY, Boston
J. E. DITSON & Co., 1228 Chestnut St., Phila.

KNABE PIANOS.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
BALTIMORE, 22 and 24 East Baltimore Street,
New York, 148 Fifth ave. Washington 817 Market Space
F. A. NORTH & Co., Sole Agents,
1308 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS

Over 200,000 ESTEY ORGANS are singing their own praises the world over, as the most reliable organ made for tone, durability and fine finish. The ESTEY PIANO is as thoroughly and carefully made and guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has. If you want a first-class Piano that is sure to please you buy an ESTEY. Lowest prices for cash, or on easy monthly payments.
ESTEY, BRUCE & CO. 18 N. Seventh St. Philadelphia, Pa.

THE VOCALION

A complete church organ in miniature, of equal power and quality of tone, at one third the price, of pipe organs. Requires no tuning. Portable; can be shipped anywhere. It is destined to replace small pipe organs and large reed organs everywhere. Recommended by all the greatest organists, including:
Clarence Eddy, Frederic Archer,
A. H. Messiter, Eben [illegible]rjée,
S B. Whitney Chas. J. Toof,
Walter Damrosch, D. Austin Pearce,
and hundreds of others.

Send for catalogue, postpaid.

WM. D. DUTTON & CO., GENERAL AGENTS,
1115 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ARCHITECTURE
CHAS. W. BOLTON, 1510 Chestnut St., Phila
Sketches of Churches, Public Buildings, Dwellings, etc., furnished gratis. Then, if desired, drawings and specifications will be prepared for a reasonable consideration.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum. M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE TRUST CO.
Capital paid up $1,500,000 Surplus over $100,000
DENVER, COLORADO.
First Mortgage Loans and Gold Debentures.
Loans fully guaranteed. Safe as Government Bonds.
Philadelphia Office, Room 302 Bullitt Building,
ROBT. FORESMAN, Manager.

Reformed Church Messenger.

"AS THE TRUTH IS IN JESUS."

VOL. LIX.—No. 4. PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 22, 1891. WHOLE No. 2924.

Entered at the Post-Office, Philadelphia, as second-class matter.

The Reformed Church Messenger.
ISSUED WEEKLY
IN THE INTERESTS OF THE
REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES
BY THE
REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE,
CHAS. G. FISHER, Proprietor,
Office: 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(For Terms, see page 11.)

Editorial Notes.

—The letter from missionary Moore, of Japan, brings good news to the Church. Let it be carefully read and let a generous giving to the cause of Foreign Missions be the result!

—The Church will sympathize with Rev. C. B. Heller and wife, of Heilig's Mills, N. C., in the death of their beloved daughter, Susan Elsie, in the fourth year her age. An obituary will appear later.

—Some of the pastors have kindly given heed to our circular and sent us some new subscribers. Will not others do the same? The Church, their congregations and themselves will be all the better by so doing.

—The first report of the first missionary among the Hungarians, located by the Board of Missions of the General Synod at Cleveland, O., will be found elsewhere. It is an important paper and will be read with great interest. The Board of Missions has arranged to call another missionary for the Hungarian work, to be located at Pittsburgh, Pa.

—Dr. Gerhart's "Institutes of the Christian Religion" will soon be ready for distribution. The publishers, A. C. Armstrong & Son, announce that Vol. I, will be sent postpaid for $2.50 if order for it is received before February 1st. They reserve the right after that date to increase the price to non-subscribers to $3.00 per copy.

—We are informed by the editor of the proposed volume of sermons by Dr. John W. Nevin, that the enterprise has been received with very general favor and words of encouragement from all sections of the Church, but that not quite (though nearly) a sufficient number of subscribers have been so far received to enable the publication to go to press. Some of the brethren have doubtless forgotten and some have mislaid the circular on the subject. As it is desired that the volume should appear as soon as possible, let all who have not already done so, send in their names at once to Rev. Dr. H. M. Kieffer, Easton, Pa.

—The discussion of the Woman question as it has been going on in our columns between W. R. and H. M. K., has excited not a little interest, and no one will say that the brethren have not been calm and dignified in their demeanor towards each other. This is as it should be. No harm can come out of it, and no one will object to it, since a spirited discussion upon some live subject upon which there is a difference of opinion helps to make the paper itself attractive, and at the same time draws attention to an important subject, and is the means of giving valuable information to the reader. A reply to W. R's last from H. M. K. will be found in our next. It is promised that it will close the discussion as far as these two brethren are concerned. Whilst these two brethren are trying to settle the position of their "sisters" in the church, it will be noted that the latter are going on in their work, and expect to produce results that may put the "brethren" to shame.

—The explanation which Brother Love gives of the present condition of things and the outlook for the future of Wichita University is candid, and, at the same time, timely. The picture he draws is gloomy, it is true, but it might be far worse. The unfavorable position the University is in at this time is by no means the fault of its friends and of those who see the grand opening for such an institution in that section of the Church. It was expected that the building would be given unencumbered and all that these brethren would be required to do would be to provide the teaching force. But things have gone adverse. Embarrassament is upon them and their spirits flag. Still they are hopeful, though it would seem they might one day be homeless should justice not be done them. President Kemp and his fellow-professors labor faithfully and have every confidence in the future of the Institution as to the supply of students. The attendance is remarkably good for so young an institution. What is needed now, most of all, is substantial aid from the Church to bridge over the difficulties that now surround it. If the brethren are thus aided by those who have it to give unto the Lord and His cause, there is every assurance that there will be found in it a good investment for the Church. To let it go down now and lose all would be a disaster. This could be averted by the further investment of a few thousand dollars. Shall the appeal be in vain? Shall the brethren in the West be encouraged in the great work they have undertaken? The answer must come soon, or it will be too late. "Strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die."

—At the last meeting of the Reformed Ministerial Association of this city, Rev. James Crawford, D.D., pastor of Christ Church, read a paper advocating organization by the Reformed Churches (German and Dutch) for aggressive work in the extension of the Reformed Church in this city. The paper clearly set forth the reasons for such a step. The Association after discussing the subject postponed any definite action. Whether anything definite will come out of it remains to be seen. There is no doubt something should be done in this direction. The great pity is that it was not started long ago. We would now, as a Church, have many more churches in this rapidly growing city. Other denominations have been at work, whilst we have been inactive. As is too often the case, we wake up to our duty after others have come in and occupied the ground. It is time things change. In the past there have been reasons why nothing was done. Our divided state may have had something to do with it, for even now no two Churches are exactly alike in cultus and custom among those that are here. This should not be. Organized for aggressive work, having only the growth of our Church in view, would very naturally cause a sinking of differences to the good of that, which all profess to love and labor for. It is, therefore, to be hoped that the Ministerial Association will not let the matter rest but adopt active measures to bring the Churches together, so as to engage unitedly in a work that will prove of immense benefit to the Church of our choice in this locality.

—It was our sorrowful duty to announce in our last issue the death of Rev. D. C. Tobias, which occurred on the evening of the 12th inst., at his residence, Lititz, Pa. We gather particulars of his life and death from the papers of Lancaster city. He had officiated on Christmas Day and contracted a cold which developed into pneumonia. He had apparently recovered, but had a relapse on the day of his death. He again rallied, but died suddenly in the evening. Rev. Tobias was about forty-nine years of age, and was a native of Berks county, this State. In early life he pursued the occupation of a farmer, but felt called to the ministry, and prepared himself for that work. He was a graduate of the Theological Seminary then located at Mercersburg, Pa., and was licensed in the year 1870 by Lebanon Classis. In 1871 he took charge of the five congregations constituting the Bethany charge, located around Lititz, which was his only charge. He was a faithful minister and quite a student. He was much beloved by his people and his death is greatly lamented by them and in the community. His labors may be summed up in the following statistics: sermons preached, regular, 2228, funeral, 408; baptisms, 608; confirmations, 318; received by certificate, 108, and marriages, 160. His wife, a daughter of the late Rev. W. T. Gerhard, and sister of Revs. C. S. and D. W. Gerhard, and two sons and a daughter survive him. They have the sympathy of the community in which they reside and of the Church. His funeral took place at Lititz on the 15th inst., at 1.30 P. M., in the Moravian church, the congregation having kindly granted the use of it for that purpose. The services were in charge of Rev. Dr. J. S. Stahr, assisted by Rev. I. W. Bobst of the Lutheran Church, Rev. Dr. Thos. G. Apple and Rev. A. C. Whitmer. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Dr. J. M. Titzel, in English and C. L. Moench of the Moravian Church, in German, and Dr. E. V. Gerhart. Six ministers of the Lancaster Classis acted as pall bearers. The interment took place in the new part of the Moravian Cemetery, the congregation having donated the ground for burial. Thus another brother, fully equipped and active in the Master's work has been called up higher. He has left a good record behind him. The incentive is to his brethren that remain behind, to continue on in the work, and be faithful and watchful so as to be ready when they shall be called hence to receive their reward.

Poetry.

THE WATCHER.

BY J. T. VALENTINE.

"Jesus! lover of my soul"—
The singer's voice was soft and sweet;
Sweet as Mary's voice of old
Kneeling at the Saviour's feet.

"Let me to Thy bosom hie:"—
Rose the strain in accents clear:
As a bird's about to fly
From some threatened danger near.

"While the nearer waters roll:—
Then was heard the low refrain,
Like the struggling of a soul,
Burdened with a hidden pain.

"And the tempest still is high:"—
Now the music seemed to be
Voices from an angry sky,
Mingled with the moaning sea.

"Hide me, oh! my Saviour, hide!—
Answered still the maiden's song;
"If thy faith and hope abide,
And thy courage still is strong."

"Till the storm of life is past:—
Yes the storm is nearly o'er:
The sky no longer is o'ercast;
Light is breaking on the shore.

"Safe into the haven guide:"—
Fainting heart, fresh courage take!
Till thy bark at anchor ride,
Safe at last for His dear sake.

"Oh! receive my soul at last:"
The music ceased—The song is done—
Every fear and doubt is passed;
The haven gained—The vict'ry won!

—Reading Times.

Communications.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

CONCERNING AGED MINISTERS.

NO. I.

Should aged, but able and efficient pastors retire or be retired from active service on account of their age? This is a question which is forcing itself slowly but steadily into the foreground in our American churches. Only a few weeks ago a pastor, who has done loyal and valuable work mostly in laborious charges, had the statement made in the MESSENGER that though anxious to be employed and able to meet the requisite obligations, he had been for two years past, without a regular pastorate, simply on account of advancing years. We have heard others say the same thing. There are pastors all over the Church who have anxious forebodings in regard to this matter. Other churches are confronted with the same difficulty, especially those in which the ministry bears a larger proportion to the membership than in ours. What is the right thing to do?

It were well to look this question straight into the face, and seek an answer that will stand every proper test. In doing this we should look not to the ministry alone, but also to other corresponding relations in life. The merchant, for example, keeps his name and interest to the business which he has established, and gives it the benefit of his wisdom and experience, as long as his health and strength permit, and his withdrawal is commonly looked upon as a risk to the house. The aged physician or attorney is rated high for his wisdom and experience, and an opinion from him is held to be of greater weight than if it had been given by him in his younger years. In other words, he ranks higher as he grows older. The Senate of the United State consists, as to its great majority, of men advanced in years, who, as a rule, control either immense fortunes, vast corporate interests, or a richly-remunerative law practice, while as legislators their course has been eminently creditable to the nation. Who would want the Senate composed almost entirely of young men? Or take a yet stronger case, if possible. It has been well said that our Government is mainly what the Supreme Court of the United States has made it. We have had bad laws passed under partisan excitement or in the cool interest of party, which, if they had stood, would have made our national Constitution of little account. But the Supreme Court set them aside and saved the nation from its peril. So all great questions and interests—the greatest in the land—come before it sooner or later, and receive their determination from it. And who are the members of this high Court? Men from fifty to eighty years of age. At seventy they may retire on liberal pay if they so choose. But very few of them do, and the people do not desire that they should.

Now, by parity of reasoning, the same principle, which is so manifest in the cases we have cited, should hold good if applied to the Christian ministry. It consists of a conscientious, intelligent, highly educated body of men, whose lives have been spent in close relations with the people. They know what their office involves and what the welfare of their flocks demands; and the older they get the better they know it. Exceptions there doubtless are as in all other spheres of life; but we speak now of the many, not the few; of the men who have been able and efficient in the years back of them, and who are still able and efficient. We repeat, therefore, the argument, that if, by common consent, merchants, physicians, attorneys, legislators, judges, retain their usefulness to a green old age, the same should hold good of ministers or pastors likewise. Why not?

Ministers live long. Their average age is of the very highest, as compared with any other profession or occupation. That speaks of bodily vigor, and as a sound mind should have a sound body, a sound body is strong guarantee of a sound mind. Ministers hold their own, in this respect, beyond the average of busy men. And this fact, practically undisputed, is additional evidence of their fitness for long service, and the likelihood of that service's being valuable.

The habits of ministers have much to do with their general good health and average great age. They are frugal, often from necessity, more frequently from principle. Their manner of life is regular, guided by intelligence and experience. At times their parishioners do feast them well, and there is some truth in the good stories, mirthfully told by the people ever so often, of the parson's fondness for fowl and pastry; yet it is equally true that, nevertheless, pastors are examples to their flocks in the avoidance of whatsoever is excessive and in the following of whatever tends to make life contented, equal and happy. They are a people, as a class, of good report in all communities, not simply morally, but also as to their ways and habits of life. And the sure result of this? Whatever else that is valuable comes of it, there must come reserved power, capacity for filling one's position, and that beyond the ordinary limit of years.

WYOMING.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

WHY NOT?

Why did the German Reformed Congregations in Cleveland take no steps long ago to establish an English Congregation?

This question has been asked on several occasions in such a way as to make a public answer desirable for the sake of peace and harmony.

In the first place, these German congregations were too young for such a step. The Reformed congregations in Pennsylvania never thought of providing English preaching before they were at least one hundred years old. Country congregations then waited much longer, but in Philadelphia and Reading, and in other large cities where more progressive spirit was at work, it took about one hundred years before the usefulness of this step was appreciated. But the first Reformed congregation in Cleveland was organized in the year 1860, the others following at intervals of a few years each; the ninth in 1890.

These young congregations at first built small and unpretending church edifices, for reasons easily understood; and when they had grown sufficiently, large and expensive ones were needed, on the erection of which all their energies had to be concentrated.

In the second place, these Germans were too poor. The great majority of German immigrants are unskilled laborers. Men of mechanical skill, or of a good education, and of good judgment and character can generally make a good living in Germany, and need not think of emigrating. The average German immigrant in Cleveland earns from one to two dollars a day during nine months of the year. In winter he is generally without work. On these earnings he manages to feed, clothe and shelter his numerous family, and to save enough to buy a cheap building lot and to put up a little house. When these are paid for, he buys another lot, and on it erects a house for rent. All this time he continues trudging to his "shop," with his dinner-pail, day after day, his face fresh and clean, and cheeful in the morning, but looking weary and begrimed on his return in the evening. He cannot speak the language of his new country, nor learn it. If he is a church member, he pays ten dollars a year, per family, towards his pastor's salary, and five dollars for general church work, missions, etc. When a new church is built he contributes twenty-five dollars.

His children, of course, can do much better. They speak English, they learn a trade, or are introduced into business, first as office-boys, or the like; sometimes ending as partners. Some of these prefer English preaching, but it cannot be possibly expected that their hard working and poorly paid parents should provide missionaries for them, or churches, nor would English pastors be content with what modest salaries and plain buildings the Germans would make provision for. Such work must be initiated by English boards.

In this connection the question might be raised, why the Germans in Cleveland did not give more encouragement to those English brethren, who were sent here in former years to open the way for an English mission? It cannot be said, nor is it said, that these men received no encouragement at all. On the contrary, they were told, that they might have the use of German churches for English services in the afternoon, and that their work would be cordially recommended; but there was one circumstance against them, which we will introduce:

Thirdly, viz.: These men could not preach in German. They could not go into our churches to preach a German sermon, they could not attend the monthly conferences of the Cleveland pastors to deliberate and take counsel with them, nor could they form the acquaintance of the old people, whose children they wished to invite to their meetings.

Three months ago the writer of these lines had occasion to visit Grand Rapids, in Michigan, where our Dutch brethren of the "Church of North America" have seven Dutch congregations, and where there are as many more Dutch congregations of the "Christian Reformed Church." The Hollanders began to come here in 1850, and many of their young people are now being gathered into an English congregation by Dr. P. Moordyke, who is just now building a magnificent church. We found, upon inquiry, that this brother frequently preaches in Dutch to the old congregations, and that he is in constant communion and fellowship with his Dutch brethren. No wonder, then, that he has been so eminently successful in his English work.

In the fourth place, our German people formerly were often made aware, that all the leading American Churches,—the Methodists, the Baptists, the Presbyterians and the like,—were in the habit of assisting liberally their German missions; but that in the Reformed Church the Germans had to help themselves. They were sometimes told that this was so, because in the Reformed Church the Germans had their own Classes and Synods and institutions of learning. But it was found, that the Baptists and the Methodists had their German conferences just as well as the Reformed, and the Presbyterians their German seminaries, and that this fact was by no means considered by their American brethren as a reason why they should be left to themselves. Under these circumstances, it was but natural for the Reformed people in Cleveland, as well as in other places, to leave the English work to the English brethren.

But all these things are now things of the past. The Reformed Church of the United States has stepped into line with the other American Churches as one of the glorious array of workers and givers for Christ's cause. Let the past be forgotten! If any brother complain of the Germans in Cleveland not having established an English mission, let this be the answer;

O, dear brother, have charity, have patience! They were not ripe for this then, just as you were not ripe for some things a few years ago. Forget past wrongs. Now the breeze is blowing, the flags and banners are fluttering, there is a shout as of many men, and there a is deep; sonorous voice as of one who rings out the command: Tell the children of Israel to go forward.

H. J. RUETENIK.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE TWO PRINCIPLES OF PROTESTANTISM.

The one is subjective, Justification by Faith, the other objective, The Scriptures the Only Rule of Faith and Practice. Are they both essential? Can they be united? Or will one assert its supremacy over the other?

These questions have been suggested by a notice in the Andover Review for January, 1890, of a course of lectures delivered before the Andover students by Jacob Gould Schurman, Sage Professor of Philosophy in Cornell University, on Belief in God: Its Origin, Nature and Basis.

Schurman makes Experience the chief argument for the truth of revelation. If it be the object of Christianity to produce a certain kind of life in men, to deliver them from the bondage of sin and introduce them into the kingdom of God, as we hold, then the best evidence of its truth and reality must be found in the experience of those whom it has thus benefited, just as the best proof of the virtue of Koch's discovery must be found in the actual cure of the patients on whom it is tried, a proof which the whole world is now waiting anxiously to see and believe. The Scriptures present the theory or method with which we must be acquainted, but the proof of its truth rests upon the result it produces in the life and experience of its subjects. The comparison, or analogy, is the writer's own, not Prof. Schurman's, and it does not fully illustrate his argument; for in the physical cure there is the application of the lymph, and its effect does not depend upon the faith of the patient in its virtue, whereas in the case of Christianity faith in what it reveals is the medium by which its virtue is transmitted. A person must first believe in Christianity before he can be benefited by what it reveals, and therefore there must be some evidence of its truth before men will embrace it by faith and before they can receive its benefit in a spiritual healing. Hence, by at least one school of theology the first and chief evidence of Christianity has been sought in the inspiration of the Scriptures; establish this first, and then men are bound to accept as true all they reveal. And the old system of Apologetics rested its argument just here: take the miracles attested in the New Testament and the fulfillment of the prophecies recorded there, and you have proof that those Scriptures must be inspired, and this at once settles the whole question. Individual experience of the virtue of the Christian religion comes in to confirm this proof, but as subjective experience it can be of use only for the individual, and cannot be used as proof for others who do not have this experience. Moreover, how can this evidence be used in introducing the Gospel into heathen lands where there is as yet no subjective experience of its virtue? Prof. Schurman would reply, as we gather from the notice of his lectures, that the Gospel Record, viewed merely as credible history, is sufficient to lead men to accept it, and from the testimony of those who preach it as to their own experience, as well as that testified to by the millions of those who have believed it, the hearers have sufficient evidence to embrace it, even if the special inspiration of the record is not yet clear to their minds.

Where and how, then, do we bring in the doctrine of the inspiration of the Scriptures, upon which the Reformers laid so great stress as to distinguish them from all other writings, from the traditions of the Church, for instance, which the Roman Church places on an equality with Scripture?

But we must remember here that these two principles are not put forward by the Reformers as the principles of Christianity, but only of Protestantism, and therefore they are equally essential for the proof of the Reformation faith in distinction from the faith of the Roman Church; but when we come to the evidence of Christianity we have a broader problem to deal with, and this is the problem in Prof. Schurman's lectures. It would seem from this that the inspiration of the Scriptures becomes essential only when we are dealing with the difference between orthodoxy and heresy, where the true doctrine is in danger of being perverted. There must then be an appeal, and the Scriptures, in such case, are the only infallible umpire. This umpire, in the first instance, and for a time, was the Apostolic tradition, but as this oral tradition gradually became vague and uncertain, the Church realized the necessity of turning to the inspired writings of the New Testament, and so the canon of the New Testament became authoritatively settled and declared.

Can the Church, then, give up the question of the inspiration of the Scriptures in dealing with the unbelief of the world, and fall back entirely upon the evidence from experience? We think not, because, as has before been stated, this latter evidence alone cannot be used with full effect in preaching to the heathen, who are without such experience. They have experience, too, in their heathen religions, Mohammedan, Buddhist, Confucian and others, and they wish some other distinction between their Scriptures and the Scriptures of Christians, before they will give credence to the teaching of the Gospel of Christ. Because, also, the Gospel must have it in its power to defend its true doctrines from heretical doctrines for a heretical doctrine is not another Gospel, as St. Paul said to the Galatians, it is no Gospel at all, for it leads into error and destruction, instead of salvation. How could the Gospel save itself from Arianism, a denial of the divinity of Christ, and from such perversions of its faith as become virtually downright infidelity, if the Scriptnres do not furnish an umpire of infallible truth?

We pass by the question of different theories of inspiration, whether it is verbal, or as to the substance only, and also the question as to the use that is to be made of the doctrine of inspiration, as of secondary importance. There may be differences of opinion on these points. Unquestionably the extreme view held in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, as set forth in the Helvetic Consensus Formula (1675), cannot be maintained, but still the inspiration of the Scriptures must be held, otherwise Protestantism loses one of the two main pillars upon which it rests. So, also, in preaching the Gospel to the heathen, and in meeting the attacks of unbelief in Christian countries, there may be a question how far the doctrine of inspiration should be made prominent at the beginning, at least, for such as are earnestly seeking the truth. And in any case it should never be separated from the internal evidence from experience. And in treating the evidence for the inspiration of Scripture the internal evidence drawn from the ethical character of its teaching should be emphasized. There are a number of questions that may arise here, but all these do not touch or disturb the main question as to inspiration itself. This certainly must enter essentially into any sound Christian Apology.

Just how these two Protestant principles are to be organically united and harmonized may present a difficult problem. Luther, we know, so emphasized the material principle as to make it sit in judgment on the formal principle; he was ready to expunge from the canon the Epistle of James, and to question the right of the Epistle to the Hebrews and the Revelation to occupy a place in it. And the Lutheran theology ever since has given the first locus in its system to Faith, whilst the Reformed theology usually has given that position to the Scriptures. Evidently both must be maintained and each retain its equal rights.

Nearly related to this question is the part to be performed by "Christian consciousness" in the interpretation of Scripture. We cannot fully endorse the view entertained on this subject at Andover. It falls in, perhaps, with Dorner, but we cannot help thinking that Dorner on this point was influenced unduly by the Lutheran theology. At Andover it came, perhaps, as a reaction from the extreme view taken by the Reformed theory already referred to, but the one extreme is quite as dangerous as the other. The Christian consciousness is undoubtedly a condition in the interpretation of Scripture, but this consciousness, as we know, is subject to change. In what, after all, does it differ from formal dogmatic tradition, which must be taken account of in such interpretation. The creeds and confessions are landmarks to show the progressive interpretation of Scripture, but they should not be placed on equality with Scripture. Christian consciousness is an index to the views entertained by the Church of the teaching of Scripture at any given time, but as the Church itself varies in its views in different sections, we have conflicting consciousnesses, and then the question arises as to which we are to follow. Evidently the unchanging Scripture here must be the criterion to which appeal must be made. At times, some individual mind, specially endowed in spiritual experience, intuition and prepared by scholarship, may lead the way in interpreting Scripture for the general consciousness, and some new truth is evolved, just as in the Reformation the doctrine of Justification by Faith was brought forth from such Epistles as the Romans and Galatians, although it was contained there all the same through the ages. The Scriptures should not be subordinated to the prevailing consciousness of the Church. The Word of God is the infallible guide, and the Christian experience, or consciousness, is a necessary condition in its interpretation. X.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

JESUS, THE JEW.

BY REV. GEO. B. RUSSELL, D.D.

Dr. Krauskopf, a distinguished Jewish Rabbi, recently delivered a discourse on Jesus. According to a headlined report of it in the daily "Times," the best newspaper we know, there was "some thoughtful reasoning" in its treatment. The Rabbi first deplores "the ignorance of the real life and deeds and teachings of Jesus," and intimates that even what we do know of Him must be set down only as "historic guesses;" while he "can find but little indisputable historic truth to substantiate all that is claimed for Jesus of Nazareth." But with all this he does not give us much additional historical knowledge.

He discredits the New Testament records, as do all unbelieving Jews; and he even denies the genuineness of the reference to Jesus by Josephus. He makes main account, that no other writers of that age speak or write of Jesus. By this, he would wipe out all testimony relating to our divine Lord and only Saviour; and claims that no writer for the Jews or other nations records reference to His birth, temptations, miracles, death, resurrection and ascension.

By a strange inconsistency for a learned Rabbi, whose logical order in such thoughtful reasoning ought not to have played him false and deceived his hearers, this Jewish doctor takes what he admits to be certain settled truths out of the very same authorities which he has just magisterially repudiated, and from whom alone he, or or any one else, can know anything authentic or historical of the "real life and deeds and teachings of Jesus." And now the critical Rabbi teaches: That without doubt Jesus really was born of a Jewish mother in Palestine; that He became a public teacher; that He was proclaimed King of the Jews; that He was crucified by the Romans; that He sacrificed a noble life for the cause of Israel; that His followers increased and spread with great zeal their martyred Master's teachings; that these doctrines and precepts were deduced from Moses and the prophets; and in fine, that He was a Jew, one of the noblest, most fervent, most patriotic and most loyal of them all. What is that but to say that: This is Jesus of Nazareth the King of the Jews?

These historical statements are of record. Then the man Jesus is the Lord Jesus, the Christ of God. For He and His historians claim that much, along with what the Rabbi admits; and there is no power in Dr. Krauskopf's "thoughtful reasoning" to reject the full force of the divine truth. If His person and His teachings and His witnesses are competent to establish with "not a doubt" what this Jewish doctor above concludes, he is bound, as a scholar and critic, to admit the validity of their record as fully authenticating the life of Jesus. But if the Rabbi, then, instead, kicks away the scaffolding on which he climbed and attempts to stand, he must find some other foothold, or down he goes, with his whole case.

The same writers from whose records our rabbinical teacher would deduce facts to dispel the ignorance which he seriously deplores, as relating to the life and deeds and teachings of Jesus, are the only sources known as originally treating of the question at issue. They were cotemporaneous persons and they did write of Jesus and His miracles. They personally, with fearlesss conviction appealed to hundreds of living witnesses; not only to Christian disciples, but also to unbelieving Jewish rulers, and to unconverted Roman officers. And where are the records that their testimony was ever at any point broken? They confessed that no man spake as Jesus taught; and no one could do the works that He did—except God be with him; and, doing them in His own name, He is divine.

But this conclusion, the Rabbi is bold to deny. His whole treatment is disingenuous. He first implies more than he is able to show. Assuming superior wisdom enough to remove the deplored "ignorance of the real life and deeds and teaching of Jesus," he yet fails to bring a single ray of new light to bear on his subject. He produces no contemporaneous writer to gainsay what the apostles witness. His whole discussion is exceedingly shallow. What truth he sets forth is culled without credit from the Christian records, which he rejects as unsupported by other writers. Is this show of wisdom superior to our ignorance?

I am not arguing now for any particular Christian dogma. Only I do not want my fellow-readers of "The Times" to be blinded with mock historic dust thrown into their faces by the popular Rabbi. The main point is this: He ignores the only authentic records extant, because the Christian writers are not broadly corroborated by Jewish and Gentile records of the same age. These last he cannot find; certainly none which contradict the Christian Scriptures, from which alone he gets what he gives as true with "not a doubt" about Jesus. If he uses these witnesses for what suits his case, what right has he to discredit their whole unshaken record, on the simple ground that no one else has written the same? I have a deed over a hundred years old, describing a piece of ground; it stands securing the title in unbroken succession; even if my neighbors may not have kept theirs, describing the same contiguous properties touching my lines—the records lost or burned do not invalidate mine, preserved. So, five hundred other writers referring to Jesns, would not likely help carnal unbelief, which rejects all in the only authentic records—except what for its use it may choose to call historical.

When the culprit persisted in denying that he had stolen a pig, the judge reminded him that three good witnesses testified they saw him take it. Then he told the court he could find three hundred men who could swear that they did not see him steal the pig. That is Dr. Krauskopf's argument against the Scripture testimony for Jesus.

For Reformed Church Messenge.

ORPHANS' HOME COLUMN.

BY REV. T. M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

The quarterly meetings of our Board of Managers and Ladies' Committee always mark a red letter day in our Home life. What an encouragement and inspiration these men and women bring with them! Full of ripe experience and loving sympathy they infuse new life into the Home. With what eagerness do we all, officers and children, look for their coming! And it is a personal disappointment when any of the members of either Board are not enabled to attend the meeting. May the Lord abundantly bless these, His servants, for in His name they care for the orphans.

The friends of the Home have cause to rejoice with us. The Christmas offerings received up to January 9th, amounted to $2,781.69. The Treasurer reported a balance of $922.55 in hand. A very unusual report; generally he has to report a deficit. The Christmas contributions are not all in yet. A full report will be given about the end of January.

Four children were admitted. Several pressing applications had to be refused for want of proper room to care for the children.

Feeling the great need of more room to meet the demand of the churches upon us to take care of their dependent orphans, it was resolved to enlarge the Home next summer. The details of the enlargement have not yet been decided upon but a committee was appointed, which, with the assistance of an architect, shall prepare a plan and submit the same to the Board as early as possible. May the Lord be with us and guide us by His unerring counsel, so that in this work we may do His will.

The details of the plan will be given as soon as perfected. Meanwhile let the friends of the Home prepare themselves to help us in this much needed step forward.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

IN MEMORIAM.

The Board of Managers of Bethany Orphans' Home, at Womelsdorf, Pa., has learned with sorrow of the death of Elder Henry Wirt, of Hanover, Pa. For a period of thirteen years he has been an active and helpful member of this Board. His loving sympathetic heart responded promptly to the claims of the fatherless. His enlarged experience in practical affairs and his ripe judgment were of great help to us in the management of the institution. And when by reason of his growing infirmities he could no longer meet with us in person, his contributions assured us of his helpful co-operation. Very pleasing was his parting blessing bestowed upon the Home in a bequest of $1000 for its support.

Resolved—That this Board with grateful esteem cherishes the memory of its late co-laborer, Henry Wirt, as a man of great purity of character, abundant in acts of well-doing and a true-hearted Christian brother.

Resolved—That we hereby tender our cordial condolence to his bereaved widow and relatives, and commend them to the God of all consolation and hope. B. BAUSMAN,
President Board of Managers.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

MRS. MARY J. GANTENBEIN.

On the 18th of November, 1890, this estimable lady entered into rest in Portland, Oregon, in the 62d year of her age. Mrs. Gantenbein was the second matron of Bethany Orphans' Home. Her husband belonged to the small group which founded the institution in 1863. The death of Rev. J. Boehringer, the first Superintendent, left the institution in a helpless and forlorn contition. In a double sense the orphans were like lambs without a shepherd. Dr. Gantenbein and wife promptly came to their rescue. He resigned his pastoral charge in Northampton Co. Pa., brought his family to Bridesburg, Philadelphia, where the Home was then located, and undertook its management. It was no small matter for the mother of a group of small children to bring her family into such an institution. The Home was little more than a year old. It was poorly organized, had a scanty support, was burdened with as many debts as the property was worth, and was located in a very unhealthy district of country. Besides the immediate duties of her own family, she undertook to serve as matron of the Home.

In those inchoate beginnings of our Home, things could not be thoroughly organized as they are now. We had very insufficient help to do the house-work. What a care she had on hand and heart by day and by night! Besides seeing after the clothing, boarding and sleeping arrangements of from 60 to 70 children, she had to nurse the sick, at a time when more than half of our orphans had different forms of malarial fever. That this over-taxing of her strength did not ruin her health was a merciful Providence.

This now sainted lady laid a costly sacrifice on the altar of our Home. Her self-devoting service for a period of nearly two years has embalmed her memory in the hearts and characters of many of the inmates of the Institution of that time, to whom she tenderly supplied the place of their departed natural mothers.

Resolved—That we hereby record our grateful appreciation of the services of Mrs. Mary J. Gantenbein, as the second Matron of Bethany Orphans' Home.

Resolved—That we tender our cordial condolence to her bereaved husband and children, commending them to Him who is the consolation of the sorrowful and the suport of the weary.

B. BAUSMAN, President Board of Managers.

Missions.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

GOOD NEWS FROM JAPAN.

It is with heart felt satisfaction and joy that I hasten to lay before the readers of our Church papers the following inspiring letter, just received from Brother Moore. The Christian world has been rejoicing over the fact that there are thirteen avowed Christians in the first Parliament in Japan; thus indicating the favor with which Christianity is regarded by the voters. But it remains to us to rejoice and give thanks, that it was one of our own missionaries who, under God's Spirit, was the instrument of winning to the Church of Christ one so prominent and influential among his people. Let us give thanks and redouble our labors and prayers.

S. N. CALLENDER, Sec.

On the 18th of July, 1886, in connection with four others, there were paptized, in the parlor of our private house, at Bancho, Tokio, two persons, husband and wife, by the name of Nakajima.

In the previous spring Mrs. Moore had formed a class of ladies, belonging rather to a higher class for the study of English, and for reading of the Bible in the same tongue, with explanations, that were interpreted into Japanese by an assistant. Mrs. Nakajima was a member of this class, and seon gave proof that she cared more for the study of God's word than for the English as such. Her being a member of this class, and having also become a warm personal friend of her teacher, led to a request on her part to bring her husband to the house for an introduction to myself and Mrs. Moore.

This request being willingly granted, we met one pleasant spring evening at Bancho. I had previously learned that the two were in the habit of reading their Bible at home, so I felt free to extend an invitation to him, Mr. Nakajima, to become a member of my Wednesday evening Bible class; conducted in English and interpreted by my personal teacher. From that time on, both these persons were regular attendants upon the Bible Class, and they also came to our Sunday afternoon service, held in the dining-room of our house, until the time above mentioned, when they were baptized and received into our Church.

This Mr. Nakajima, who previous to that time. had been a man of considerable prominence in Japan affairs, having served as a member of the Senate and Governor of the Province in which Yokohama is located, and sent to Europe and America on Government business, was on the 25th of November, 1890, elected as the first President of the first National Assembly of the first Constitutional Monarchy in the history of the Orient.

On the 11th of February, 1889, the Constitution was duly and solemnly proclaimed by his majesty the Emperor, in the presence of his chiefs and certain representatives of the people, and the representatives of the Foreign Powers, who had assembled at the palace to witness the ceremony. Then it was promised that the new government should be fully inaugurated by the meeting of the Diet, or Parliament, on the 25th of November, of this year, 1890.

This greatest of events in the history of new Japan, was looked forward to with solicitude, and hailed with the greatest rejoicing.

The President of the Upper House (House of Peers), was appointed by the Emperor, and the choice fell upon Count Ite, former Minister President of State, and perhaps the ablest and most progressive statesman of Japan in modern times. The President of the Lower House receives his office by three members being elected by the House; from among the these three the Emperor selects one to be the President.

Mr. Nakajima, a Christian and member of our Branch Church, was one of the three, having received the highest number of votes. And when the Emperor made his choice, it pleased his Majesty to appoint this Christian gentleman and statesman to this responsible and influential position. That a man who is known to be a Christian should, nevertheless, be appointed to such a high office by the will of his fellow members and the choice of his sovereign, is an event over which the whole body of Christian believers in Japan should rejoice. That your missionary and his wife who had some humble part in leading this dignitary and his wife to the foot of the Cross of Christ; and that it was my privilege to receive him into the Church by the rite of holy baptism, are matters of great encouragement and satisfaction, as well as of profound gratitude to the Lord, unto whom we give all the glory and praise.

Mrs. Nakajima is a woman of prominence among her people. She was formerly a court lady. After she was married she espoused the cause of her husband, who was one of the leaders of the Liberal party (Lyuto), and for expressing advanced political views, she was thrown into prison for a short time. Since she became a Christian, she served for a time as teacher of Chinese in two of the girls' mission schools, both in Tokio and Yokohama. She is a poet, and the author of several popular novels written within the last three years.

Another interesting fact is that of Mr. Shimada Saburs, also a member of the Bancho Church, who was baptized about the same time, belonging to the other congregation which was united with ours, to form the present Bancho Union Church. He is the editor of one of the leading newspapers of the Capitol, and was elected a member of the Parliament. Prominent as a candidate for the Presidency, he has since been elected Chairman of the Committee for the whole House; a position, it is said, next to the President in point of honor and influence.

Out of a membership of three hundred of the Diet, thirteen are Christians. This is highly significant. It shows the direction towards which the sentiment of the nation is growing. It shows that this proscribed and hated religion, which to profess meant social ostracism, persecution and even death, not so many years ago, is gaining, not only in the number of its adherents, but also in influence. The history of the growing power and influence of our religion, when it conquered the Roman Empire and spread all over Europe, will, from present indications, be repeated in this "Island Empire." In the light of these facts here narrated, who will dare to say Foreign Missions do not pay? Here is matter for encouragement to the missionary on the field, and incentive to more earnest endeavor and greater liberality on the part of the Church at home.

J. P. MOORE.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

MISSIONS.

Below will be found the first report made by our Hungarian missionary to the Executive Committee of the Board at its annual meeting held in Pittsburgh, Pa., January 13 and 14, 1891. This report it was deemed, would be interesting to the Church at large and hence is published. Mr. Jurany after finishing his studies in Hungary, studied at Edinburg, Scotland, and is a good English, as well as German and Hungarian scholar. We give the report just as he wrote it—which, while it may contain some foreign expressions, is certainly a very good report. Action has been taken looking to the organization of the congregation over which he presides on thoroughly Reformed grounds given of the Hungarian Mission's first three months' results, October, 1890—

D. S. F.

REPORT

January, 1891:

It is with a heart thankful of the heavenly Father's blessings that I set about giving a report of my first missionary labors among my Hungarian countrymen. Indeed, the grace of the Lord has followed my steps far more abundantly than I could imagine at the outset of my work. I began this work with much anxiety about the final success, and now, after this short period of three months, I was given to reap a rich harvest and to render my work so steady that it will go on from this time without any apprehension of a relapse.

I presume that it is known to the Board how I came to this city, and how, after having given intelligence to my countrymen by print and oral communication, I could gather them to my first Hungarian service, October the 12th of the past year. There were about 120 persons present on this occasion and they were evidently filled with joy and emotion that they could hear again the word of God, after having been deprived of it for so many years. They thanked me heartily for my preaching and rejoiced to learn that henceforth divine service should be held every Sabbath at 3 o'clock in the Seventh Reformed Church, Willcutt Avenue. I chose this church, because it is nearest to that southeast quarter of the city, where most of these Hungarian working-men live. Then I proceeded to visit them—every single man—that I might know them personally and register their names and addresses. I found that most of these Protestant Hungarians are unmarried young men, who came to this country in order to make out more of their labor than they could at home; and indeed, I have found among the whole number only 19 who live here with their families, a good number being besides, of those, who, in fact, are married, but were obliged to leave their wives and children in their old country. All of this people are members of the Reformed Church of Hungary, and they were formerly inhabitants of the hill-country of Upper Hungary, especially of the countries Abaij and Zemplin. Now I experienced with great joy, that in spite of their long privation of the preaching of the Gospel, these men have not lost all religious feelings and fear of God—nay, with many there is a real thirst and hunger after the word of God. I have visited and won to be members of the congregation up to the present day, 78 men, and most of these have become regular visitors of my Sabbath service. However, there are at least still as much living in this city, which I was not yet able to call on, especially, they say, in the south of the city, in Newburgh, which it will be my next care to inquire after. In the month of December, seeing that our place of worship was still somewhat far from the Hungarians' chief colony, which is near the crossing of Woodland and Madison Avenues, I succeeded to get a better situated church, viz.: a chapel of the "Evangelical Alliance," situated corner Madison and Holton Street. The pastor and trustees of this church consented to let us their edifice on Sabbath afternoons for a rent of 8 dollars a month. And this was a very happy change; for whilst in the former building the attendance was, as a rule, only 30 to 40 men, the first service in the new church, December 21 witnessed an audience of more than a hundred, and the second service on Christmas day over a hundred and forty. This latter service has a peculiar importance from having been connected with the administration of the Lord's Supper among the Protestant Hungarians of Cleveland. I had given notice the Sabbath before from the pulpit, that the Lord's Supper would be administered on Christmas day and in the same time told it to the leading men of my flock. And so a great number of souls hungry and thirsty after righteousness came to the Lord's table. They were more than 120; for only a very few left the church after the sermon was finished, and these were not Protestants, I suppose, but Roman Catholics. The administration was in all like to that made in Hungary, that is, the communicants approached the table, receiving the holy tokens with their hands, and those waiting for their turn meanwhile sang a communion hymn. It may be mentioned that we were able to hold this communion, using a set of Church plate of our own. A special collection which I had undertaken to this purpose had given the total of $23.25, which allowed us to buy a very handsome set of strongly-silvered plate. Afterwards I was assured that many had longed for this opportunity to render themselves anew to the service of the Lord, and that they had been fully satisfied with this holy feast.

My plans for the future are:

1. To augment the number of church members by calling on such Protestant Hungarians, of Cleveland, as I had not yet the time to visit in their homes.

2. To constitute formally this Hungarian Reformed congregation. To this purpose I already elaborated a full constitution in the Hungarian language, which at a special convention held one Sabbath afternoon, in its general outlines, accepted, only a few special points remaining to be discussed. A second convention to be held still this month will result in the formal acceptance of this constitution, which will be printed and distributed among the members. After this we at once shall proceed to the election of deacons who at the same time shall be elders, the two offices being combined in the Church of Hungary. All the same a treasurer will be elected, whilst a secretary is not wanted, the pastor himself doing this work under an oath of fidelity. At the ordinary Sabbath collection (which, however, up to the end of 1890 resulted $20.99,) is insuffıcent to face our regular expenses. I shall propose, as minimum contribution, obligatory on every member the little sum of two dollars a year, and I am sure this will be granted unanimously. Those then who shall make a larger contribution shall be on record in the church-register. I think this mode of contributing the best for us, for thus no one will complain that his contribution share is too heavy, and yet a certain income will, at all events, be assured.

3. I meditate the plan of a young men's association among my Hungarian church members, and having communicated this plan to many younger men, I found them, to a great number, willing to realize this idea. It will cost only a few weeks more to gather and unite them for this undertaking. The meetings will be held, probably, every Saturday evening, and the main prosecutions will be: Singing of spiritual as well as national songs, illustrations of the Bible and Church history.

4. I think that it will become neccessary to open another place of worship on the south side or west side of the city, as the residents of these city quarters cannot be resumed to frequent the services held on the east end of the city. In this case, I will be to preach the morning on the west side, and the afternoon, as now, on the east side. Only it will be difficult to find a church to be opened for us on Sabbath morning, and probably we will have to get a hall for rent.

5. I shall gather next time the children who have reached the age required for the partaking of the Lord's table (though there are very few of such), to instruct them diligently in concordance with the Catechism of Heidelberg, which has been of late newly translated into the Hungarian language.

Along with this I must mention a few pastoral functions done in the time of these three months: One child was baptized, one child buried, and three pairs joined in marriage. Among the latter mentioned was one marriage very remarkable: A Roman Catholic man and a Lutheran girl were at their request married by me, wholly according to the rites and customs of the Reformed Church.

So, I have among my members several Lutherans, too, and one man belonging originally to the Greek Catholic Church; and I hope to win still more.

I have corresponded with a Protestant Hungarian, living at the town of Ashtabula, O., asking him to tell me to the nearest the number of Protestant Hungarians residing in this place. I was answered that to his knowledge there are 35 men and 4 women in Ashtabula belonging to the Reformed Church. After this it was agreed, that I should go there one Saturday of this month to preach there on Sunday morning, and immediately return to hold here my regular afternoon service.

I am praying daily to the Lord that He may give further blessings to the work begun under so favorable circumstances, and that He would make me a faithful laborer in His vineyard, to save souls of men and to glorify His name.

GUSTAVUS JURANY,
Missionary Preacher.

Cleveland, O., 13th of January, 1891.

The Family.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE YOUNG PROPHETESS:

A TALE OF THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE.

BY REV. R. LEIGHTON GERHART.

"Is that not the gleam of halberts, I see yonder in the distance?" inquired the Countess, shading her eyes from the glare of the setting sun, and gazing intently down the long slope of the road toward the foot of the hill, where a flash of light, as from burnished steel, caught her eye.

"Truly, it is, lady. The men-at-arms are edging slowly towards us. There is no cause for fear."

"And what do you advise, warden? Let me know your mind, for my woman's wit is sorely puzzled. These are strange and troubled times, and great events are stirring."

"I speak at your bidding, my lady. Let the leader and several of his companions be admitted for conference. Closer inquiry can then be made, and the course to be pursued determined."

"And what of food and shelter?" The tone was one of dismay.

"We cannot feed this entire host," returned the warden. "That were madness to dream of: but numbers of them, at most not more than two thousand, we can shelter. The quarters of the garrison were built to harbor a thousand or more."

"Then do as you advise. I have been told that a drove of cattle, with a herd or two of sheep and swine, have already been brought in. It might be well to order them slaughtered. To the extent of our power, and great as it is, it seems little, we will provide for these children. And do thou, Blessed Virgin, O Holy Mother," she concluded, raising her eyes in worship heavenward, "remember this my sacrifice. Intercede with thy Holy Child Jesus, that He may pardon my transgressions."

"Amen," responded the warden, solemnly.

An hour later, when the cold grey shadows of the night were slowly usurping the place of the golden day, the leader of the army, who had been in conference with the Countess, appeared on the walls, attended by several of his comrades. Otho was also with him; for he, with the men sent to his aid, had gradually wormed his way through the dense crowd, and gained entrance to the castle by a gate in the rear, known as the postern. Seeing the peaceful nature of the army, and overlooking the alarm that his delay might cause, he paused to talk with a friend whom he recognized in the ranks, and whose acquaintance he had made, a year or two previous, while on a visit to the distant city of Hamburg. He thus, without knowing it, allowed a large body of the children to get between him and the castle. Anticipating no difficulty, he discovered this without concern, only to learn later how completely he was cut off. The leader, known as John of Cologne,* addressing his followers, told them that two thousand would be allowed admittance. The others were to bivouac by the road-side, or to seek the requisite food and shelter in the cottages of the valley, and in the neighboring town of Heilbrun.

The crowd before this had greatly decreased, for thousands recognizing the futility of hoping to receive aid from the castle, had already moved on to the town, or scattered far and wide over the valley. Many sought shelter in the forests lining the highway, and their campfires, like stars in the gathering gloom, began to shine forth in the distance. Here, opening the pouches or bags with which they were provided, and taking out the small supply of food brought with them, they prepared to take their evening meal, and then lie down to sleep on beds of moss, or fern, or withered leaves, or whatever else could be found to rest upon.

The grinding and clanking of the iron portcullis, as it slowly rose, was soon heard, and then the draw-bridge fell. Guards were stationed on either side of the gate and on the bank, to prevent crowding as much as possible, and to tell off the numbers to be admitted, as well as this could be done under the circumstances. The pilgrims filed in, foot-sore, hungry,—weary,

---

Copyrighted by Chas. G. Fisher, 1890.

* John of Cologne is, with Otho, Serena, and nearly all the other dramatis personæ of our story, a fictitious character. The true name of the commander is not recorded, and this army is consequently spoken of in history as "The Army with the Unknown Leader."—See Dr. George Zabriski Gray's The Children's Crusade, Page 108.

fair-faced little girls and tender boys, stalwart youths and young maidens from every rank and class in the land: sons and daughters of lord and baron, of gentleman, merchant, tradesman, burgher and peasant were mingled in one common herd. Some were so small that they were led by the hands of others; many almost tottered as they walked, sick with the fevers their unaccustomed exposure had brought on. Yet on the countenances of all was seen the light of enthusiasm and hope,—of the wild enthusiasm and chimerical hope that had inspired them to their terrible journey. It was a sight to move the stoutest heart; and the Countess looked on them, as they passed her with tears rolling down her cheeks, while many a bronzed and hardened retainer brushed the dew from his eyes with his rough and hairy hand.

Into the great quarters of the men, unused for many a day, into the stables and out-houses, into the halls, corridors, entries and numerous rooms of the great fortress they were led. To provide food for the hungry little pilgrims, the vast kitchens were soon aflame; in every fire-place great piles of wood blazed under huge kettles, from which issued the fragrant steam of boiling meat. The ovens, quickly heated, were filled with hastily prepared loaves and cakes. And soon on the tables the warm bread and steaming meat being cut into slices and heaped into huge, deep trenchers, ready for distribution. Nearly all control of the children was soon lost; many more gained entrance than it was intended to admit; and rushing, running, crowding, they hurried on, each seeking a favorable spot. On the stairways, on the battlements, in the bedrooms and closets they crowded. Numbers had scarcely entered before they sank down heavy with sleep upon the hard, bare floors, and were soon lost in the profound slumber of utter weariness.

The grey light of the new day had already begun to turn the stars pale, before the hubbub and excitement died away. In that still hour the door of a room slowly opened, and clad in white from head to foot, the Countess appeared. Her unbound hair fell in heavy coils down her back, her delicate feet were bare, and in her hand she carried a waxen taper. Her face was pale, as if with grief; her eyes heavy, as from weeping. She walked slowly, even feebly, as though borne down by sorrow.

She had scarce opened the door of her chamber before the faint light of the candle revealed to her the out-stretched forms of scores of children lying side by side on the floor of the long corridor. They lay so closely packed together that progress could at times only be made by stepping over their prostrate bodies. The sight moved her deeply; her whole form shook, and the tears gushed from her eyes. Controlling herself, she came slowly forward. Repeatedly, she paused and stooped to examine more closely the tender face of some child whose extreme youth or beauty attracted her. Reaching the end of the corridor, she descended a flight of steps and came to a door closed and locked. Taking a key from her girdle, she sprung the bolt and entered.

It was the chapel, one of the few rooms kept closed against intrusion. An altar, heavily draped with crimson cloth overlaid with costly and delicate lace, stood at one end. It was surmounted by tall, waxen tapers, all alight and burning softly in the dark and deserted room. Behind the altar was a crucifix; on one side a statue of the Virgin, crowned with gold and robed in purple. The Mother held her Child to her bosom with one arm, but the other was uplifted as if to bless; opposite her was the statue of Joseph.

Noiselessly as a ghost the Countess glided along; the air was chill and damp, the floor cold, but to this she seemed oblivious. Gaining the chancel-railing, she sank upon her knees before the Virgin, and lifting her face to the image, began in broken and disjointed sentences to pour out her prayers and supplications. Otho had announced his desire to join the Children's Crusade, and pleaded so earnestly for permission, that the poor mother, distracted with grief at the thought of his loss, found herself unable to give a definite answer. With deep misgivings with regard to the wisdom of the undertaking, yet strangely moved by the enthusiastic and impassioned appeals of John of Cologne, who, in a long conference held that night, had almost won her to the belief that the movement was from God and would surely accomplish what the vast armies of iron-clad warriors had failed to do, she had come to the chapel for spiritual support and guidance.

Loving Otho, her only child, with intense affection, the thought of parting from him was like yielding up something dearer than life itself. In an agony of sorrow and doubt she prayed for guidance. The moments passed—more than an hour passed, and still she remained on her knees, altering her position only to raise her tear-stained face to the Virgin, as though supplicating her for help. At length the answer came.

As the suffering woman glanced upward at the motionless figure before her, her eyes became fastened on the dagger-pierced heart of the Virgin. As is the custom to-day, and was also the custom then, in the manufacture of these images, the heart, carved or painted, is exposed to view, so that the worshipper, seeing it, can more readily be roused to a sense of the suffering endured by the Mother of our Lord. As the eyes of the Countess rested on this sign of grief, like the voice of the Holy Mother speaking to her, came the thought in her own heart:

"If I have suffered such anguish for you, cannot you, for the sake of my Son and for my sake, endure a sorrow much less? If I have yielded up my Son to the horror of a terrible death for you, can you not consecrate your child to a purpose so sacred as the rescue of the Holy Sepulchre from the hands of the enemies of the Cross?"

This was the answer to her prayers, and as it came, the head of the Countess sank upon the chancel-railing, and motionless as the statue above her, she knelt, striving in anguish to bring her will into submission to what she imagined was a command from Heaven. A long time passed, and yet the poor woman did not move. Then she silently rose and glided from the chapel; the expression of anguish on her face had vanished, and one of peace had taken its place,—a peace that had in it a touch of the saintly. She had resolved to do what she now thought was her duty —allow Otho to go on this terrible Crusade.

To be Continued.

Youth's Department.

PUSSY'S EXPLANATION.

I have very often heard them say, "You fight like cats and dogs!"
When the children here are quarreling before the burning logs.
But I am sure they are mistaken, for the fire-dogs and I
Are the very best of friends and never "fight;" not even on the sly.

I watch the fire, play with them, and don't feel in the cold
Because I'm not included. And they never "snap" nor "scold."
So I'm sure they must be wrong. The children there should try
To be as kind and friendly as the fire-dogs and I.

—Youth's Companion.

NEDDY'S LONG WORD.

"Remember, Neddy," said mamma, one day, "always to accommodate every one that you can."

"Yes'm," answered Neddy, heartily. "I will." And mamma felt sure he would, and Neddy is one of the very best boys to remember things you ever saw.

The next day Mr. Camp called to him as he was running down the street with his sled flying along before him.

"Neddy, Neddy! come here a minute, won't you?"

Neddy heard her and stopped, though he didn't much want to. He was going over on the Wilson hill coasting, and was in a great hurry; but he went up to the door where Mrs. Camp was standing, and pulled of his fur cap with a polite little bow, which pleased the lady very much.

"Will you run down to the store for me, dear?" she asked. "I want a spool of twist, and I have no one to send."

Neddy's eyes closed up the least bit in the world, but Mrs. Camp was looking in her purse for the right change, and didn't notice: and before she found it, the bright sun of good nature was shining again in Neddy's eyes, and he answered, "Yes'm," as cheerfully as could be.

It didn't take long, after all. The store was not a great way off, and there were no other customers; and Neddy, in less than five minutes, was back again with the spool of twist.

"Thank you," said Mrs. Camp, smiling at him. Then she took a bright, new dime from her purse. "Here is something for you to buy peanuts with," said she, kindly, "and I'm very much obliged, besides."

But Neddy shook his head at the dime, though he liked peanuts as well as maple-sugar, which is saying a good deal.

"You're welcome as can be," said he, "but I can't take pay for going, Mrs. Camp, 'cause, you know, mamma tells me always to a-abominate every one I can!"

Didn't Mrs. Camp laugh! She couldn't help it, though she tried so hard that she choked, and frightened Neddy, who could not think what the trouble was.

"Bless your dear heart!" said she, as soon as she could speak. And then she went to the corner-closet and took out a little pyramid of maple-sugar—more than Neddy could have bought at the store with two dimes. "There," said she, "I know you like sap sugar, don't you? And this isn't pay—it's a present."

"O, thank you," cried Neddy, eagerly. "I'll go right home and show it to mamma!"

So he did; and Mrs. Camp sat down by her window and laughed and laughed.

"Bless his dear little manly heart!" said she.

—Youth's Companion.

Pleasantries.

"Portrait of Doge," read Mrs. Symple, in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. "Well," she added, "he seems to have been a pretty good painter; but he didn't know how to spell 'dog.'"

Grocer: "Well, my little boy, what will you have?" "Fifteen cents' worth of molasses." Grocer (as he hands the pitcher over the counter): "Where is your money?" "In the pitcher. I put it there, so as to be sure not to lose it."—Fliegende Blatter.

NOTICE.

☞ Editorial Correspondence address to The Reformed Church Messenger, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters pertaining to subscriptions and other business, address Reformed Church Publication House, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ No notice taken of anonymous communications.

For Terms, see page 11.

THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER,
907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 22, 1891.

MORE PRAYER.

One word more in regard to the New Year upon which we have already entered. Many of our Christian brethren set apart the first week of it to prayer for themselves and others. Some of us, in the churchly line, expect to devote the next Holy Week, now not far off, to the same good purposes. But we would suggest that it would be well for us as individuals, to consecrate all the weeks of the year before us to prayer in some special sense or degree, more so than in other years. It would be a liberal act of devotion, and the present month would be a very suitable time to form such resolution, and to begin such a good work. We take it for granted that all professors of religion are accustomed to pray, but it is a question whether they all pray as they ought. Here, as in other things that are lovely and of good report, there is room for progress and improvement. Generally Christians lack in earnestness when they pray, and this destroys all vitality in their prayers. According to the Scripture we are told that whatever we ask, we shall receive, if we do not ask amiss, believing that we shall receive what we pray for. We need more faith in Christ and more faith in the efficacy of prayer. We once knew a mother in Israel whose life was a life of prayer, and she was accustomed to receive what she prayed for, at least she believed that she did; and, if any time she thought that God no longer heard her, it plunged her into deep distress. It was quite natural that it should. And such will be the case with all others, in proportion as they enter into the spirit of true, effective prayer. Comparatively few Christians perhaps can form any estimate of what they are constantly losing by restraining prayer, or by not asking as they should. One thing is certain we do not get what we might, if in humble supplication, we would lay our hand, so to speak, on the arm that moves the universe. Another year is before us with its labors, toils, conflicts, temptations and trials; let every true believer, therefore, rise to the dignity of his profession and seek to make a new departure in his life of prayer and faith.

LOSS AND GAIN.

If we look over the past, or over a single year such as the last which is past and gone, we are astounded not only at the progress which the world, and our own country in particular, have been making, but at the losses sustained in various ways during the same period. The destruction of property has been immense. The losses by fire on land and by disasters at sea can only be counted by hundreds or even thousands of millions of dollars. But over against all this waste, for much of it was the result of carelessness, the wealth of the country, as the census shows, has increased prodigiously. The mere rise in the value of land in the West out to the Pacific, and in the vicinity of our large cities, has probably been greater than all the losses that went up in smoke or down to the bottom of the sea.—In the political arena the losses and the gains have been phenomenal, but which are the greater the future must decide. On that question the country is at present about equally divided.—The loss of human lives has as usual been very great, some of them very valuable and apparently indispensable. All alike, whether among the old or the young, have left an aching void in the hearts of their friends. Very few have not been called to pass through such an experience. But men and women are still given in marriage, and the births of little children exceed in number the usual deaths—at least in some parts of the country. Among the candidates for immortality born during the last year, some, it is to be supposed, will be as great and good as their distinguished predecessors. Fifty years hence there will therefore be heroes in the State and the Church, in the arts and sciences, fully equal to those that have passed away or to those still on the stage. We may hope that they will go far in advance of them. Another Milton, a Newton, a Florence Nightingale, a Webster, a Bismarck, a Stanley or a Koch, may now be lying in his cradle for the present, concerned only about his usual nourishment.

In the same way, if space allowed, we might pass through all the records of the year 1890, and in every chapter find good and evil mingled together, the latter boastful and apparently triumphing, but in fact only in appearance, as truth comes in and brushes away one foul error after another. A portion of our literature is becoming worse and worse, more and more sensuous, but a portion of it, and a large part too, has reached a higher grade of purity and refinement. So it has been with the sciences, the fine arts, the philosophy of the day, with our newspapers, religious and secular, and as we may hope, with our theology and religious literature generally.

HIGHER EDUCATION.

The theory so widely held both in this country and in Europe, that secular education—and the higher the better—is pretty much all that is necessary for the uplifting of the people, and the advancement of civilization, is being sharply challenged by the experience of some of the European States. We too, as a nation, are not free from the pressure of the questions which are arising. Europe abounds in institutions of learning of the higher order, and the halls of her Gymnasia and Universities are crowded with tens of thousands of students. The desire for a liberal education seems to have amounted to almost a mania. Young men from all ranks of life have rushed into the institutions, imagining that once educationally equipped, the avenues to the higher walks and employments in life, would open wide before them. It seems not to have occurred to them that the professions and avocations calling for a thorough education, have their limits, and that it is possible to educate to such a degree, as to, not disqualify, but to unfit men for the humbler pursuits of life. The result is that hundreds and thousands of highly educated persons, are leaving the institutions, who are unable to find employment in positions for which they feel themselves to be qualified. Compelled as many of them are, to enter the humbler and laborious pursuits, they imagine they are wronged, and look upon their more fortunate fellow-men—many of them with much less thorough educational equipment—with an envious and jealous eye and bitter spirit. Conscious of abilities, and a breadth of intellectual culture, for the free exercise of which they find no room, they hold the social and political order responsible for a deprivation of their rights. And in the assertion of these supposed rights, they array themselves against these orders, aiming, if needs be, at their overthrow.

It is a mistake to suppose that the Nihilists, Anarchists and Socialists are recruited from the lower strata of society—the proleteriat. Their leaders and active agents are disappointed men of education. In Russia, the Nihilists are largely made up of university trained men. The anarchists and socialists of Germany, have in their ranks, men of large and commanding education. It is well known here in our own country, that our anarchists and social agitators, are for the most part foreigners, who sunken, many of them, to the lower ranks of our city life, are nevertheless men of superior secular education. So keenly is this evil coming to be felt in some of the European States, that large limitations are being laid upon admission into their universities, and a marked decrease in students, is in some cases visible.

Secular education is a good thing—to be largely provided for, and sought after, but in the absence of the religious element, it is not far to go, that it may prove a positive evil. The higher the education of a bad man, the worse for himself, and for society too. We believe in common school education. We believe in higher education, but in degree it should be adapted to a man's natural powers, his calling and position in life. Let every boy and girl in the land be given a liberal elementary outfit in this regard, and wherever the mental calibre and push may be found, with this equipment the way will be open, in this country at least, for advancement and attainment to the higher ranks.

Synodical Editors.

(Elected by the Synods.)

Eastern, ...	Rev.	Jonathan H. Pannebecker.
Pittsburgh, ...	"	David B. Lady.
Potomac, ...	"	J. Spangler Kieffer, D. D.

SEMINARY BUILDING OR PROFESSOR—WHICH?

We would at once say by all means both, but as was said last week, there is at present no place where the recently elected professor can meet his classes.

The noble work and grand success of the Potomac Synod has not been without its effect upon the other Synods. The Synod of Pittsburgh has taken hold on the endowment of its professorship in a manner which means another member of our theological faculty before very long. This Synod is young and vigorons, and in these days when the young are so prominent in all activities, this fact means much. The Synod occupies a territory in which many men have made large fortunes in a few years. Such men are always found to be the most liberal. Youth and willingness then will not let us wait long on the Pittsburgh Synod.

Our own, the Eastern Synod, has also heard that all has not been quiet along the Potomac, and not without effect to quicken our sense of ability to do great things for the Lord. In this Synod is the financial strength of the Church. This strength has come somewhat slowly and perhaps by harder effort, but we all know that it is none the less God's gift to us to "barter till He come," hence there are large sums held ready for Him whenever He may come in the person of such servants whom He chooses to gather His portion. Our Eastern people understand this very well, and they do not withhold when it is made plain to them that the Lord comes for His own now in their hands.

In our Synod not much has been done towards our professorship, not because such a professorship is not believed to be necessary, but because a sense of the fitness of things is underlying the feeling of the people. The Seminary is in our territory. Its buildings will be ornaments among the ecclesiastical structures of this Synod, hence it would seem that we who live nearer to them and see them oftener than those of the remoter Synods should do very largely in their erection. When this was suggested to representatives of the other Synods, they said, "Yes, but we will do our full share for the building, in addition to what we have done, and are doing for the professorships." This is nobly said, and it will do much to arouse the mother Synod. Let the mother, as is becoming to her, show her children an example in coming to the front for the Lord.

Our professorship can wait until we have a building in which he can meet his students.

That the building is in the bounds of our Synod, and that therefore we should lead off in erecting it, suggests another fact, namely, that the building will be erected in the county and city of Lancaster. That it will be an ornament, especially to the city, and will be one of the notable buildings of the county. This and many other more substantial reasons appeal to the local pride of the men of wealth in and about Lancaster. They are ready to offer inducements to manufacturing and mercantile establishments, and are gradually drawing a goodly number into their midst. Some of their products are famous far and wide. But they have nothing which has given the name of Lancaster, Pa., the fame throughout the entire learned world as the philosophy and theology of Franklin and Marshall College and the Theological Seminary, and the men who have been and are now prominent in the faculties.

Lancaster is honest and willing to pay for what she gets. The Church at large, and the immediate locality of our Seminary must have mutual confidence, and then they will meet in generous rivalry to do what is needful for our Seminary.

J. H. P.

IN PRAISE OF DRUDGERY.

It is very common to complain of drudgery. And there is a great deal of it to complain of! It is, for the most part, because of that part of it which seems to be simple drudgery that we are disposed to find fault with the work of our calling. We fancy that we should like our vocation sufficiently well, if it were not composed, to so large an extent, of mere slave-like plodding and fagging, of dull, unrelieved and uninspiring toil. Yet from drudgery there would seem to be absolutely no escape; it is an inseparable and inevitable element in all genuine activity and exertion; he who chooses work at all must choose drudgery along with it. It is not that some vocations are subject to it, while others are not; it is the lot of all, from the lowest to the very highest. The servant, the day-laborer, the factory "hand" are not the only victims of drudgery. The artist knows it no less than the farmer's hireling, the musician no less than the mechanic, the statesman as well as the servant. The waiter, the housekeeper, the scholar, the prime minister, are all of them companions and equals in this one respect. No one can do any honest, genuine work, no one can render any valuable service, no one can live a high and noble, accomplishing and achieving life, without performing a great deal of what may justly be regarded as plain and simple drudgery. Hamerton, in his "Intellectual Life," quotes the Bishop of Exeter as saying that "of all the work that produces results, nine-tenths must be drudgery." It is a perfectly true saying. There is, as it were, a Law of Drudgery, pervading the entire universe; and into subjection to this law every man immediately comes, who sets himself in earnest to the doing of that work, whatever it may be, which God has given him to do.

Brother, companion in labor, whatsoever thy work may be, we give thee this counsel,—quarrel not with the drudgery of it. Thou knowest not what thou doest, when thou doest this thing. Thou mightest as well quarrel with the Law of Gravitation! Consider that this is the inevitable lot of every one who will do any work at all. What is wiser than to accept the inevitable, without wasting time in making foolish and ineffectual complaints of it? Let us not be foolish; let us not batter ourselves to pieces against the laws of the universe. Let us consider, moreover, that this thing of which we complain is in reality the very essence, the very kernel and soul of the whole matter. It is the drudgery that tells; it is just this that constitutes the achieving and conquering force; it is the daily, slave-like plodding and fagging that is slowly bringing to pass the desired result. Let us not commit the folly of finding fault with that which is bringing to us, and which alone can bring to us, the beautiful object of our desires and our hopes.

We owe more to the unavoidable drudgery of our lives than we are aware. It is not without a powerful influence on the development of character. To him who makes friends with it it brings a peculiar blessing of its own. It puts steadiness into us; it begets patience; it breeds power; it brings peace. There is a sort of saving virtue in this homely thing; in a certain sense, we are saved by drudgery; it saves us from ourselves and from the futility and folly of mere wishing and whining. It tends to keep a man from being "carried away" by any hysterical excitement, and to make him sturdy, composed, self-reliant. We can understand what Longfellow meant when he wrote in his Journal: "After all, I pray a benediction on drudgery. It occupies my thoughts and takes the fever out of my blood and keeps me from moping too much." "'Tis work that makes the soul to shine," writes Lowell. And let us not forget that a large part of this work is and of necessity must be of the nature of mere drudgery.

Lowly and homely as it is, complained of and found fault with, despised and rejected, there is nothing that has higher connections and relations than drudgery. Slave-like though it be, it has kings and emperors for relatives. It is of closest kin to beautiful Ease and Rest, to glorious Power and Dominion. "At the root of all ease," writes George MacDonald truly, "lies slow and, for long, profitless-seeming labor. Ease is the result of forgotten toil." It were well that this direct relationship between Ease and Toil should not be forgetten. Let it not be forgotten that the master artist's glorious swiftness and facility of touch were born of years of "slow, and, for long, profitless-seeming labor." Let it be remembered that, back of the heavenly ease and grace of the master musician there lie long years of the drudgery of "practice." Let it be remembered that the scholar who has such easy access to the literatures of other lands and past ages, and who converses so readily, in their own respective tongues, with the mighty sages of the past, toiled for many weary months and years at the drudgery of dictionary and grammar that he might obtain that readiness of access and that facility of communication. If these things were always remembered, we should probably be less disposed to quarrel with a thing apparently so low, in reality so high.

Again we say, quarrel not with drudgery. Come to terms with it; make friends with it. What God has cleansed call not thou common. If any man reject drudgery, by that token nothing great or high shall ever come out of that man's life.

J. S. K.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

CRUMBS.

The "Missionary Guardian," as a successor to the old-time "Guardian" and "Missiouary Herald," is, as we expected a splendid Monthly, worthy of the strongest support on the part of the Church. Its price must make it popular; it is cheaper than any periodical of its size and contents we know of, and promises to become one of the best publications of our Church. The advent of this paper should be hailed in the Church as a good omen, and many hands should be set a-going to enlarge the subscription list. We heard the question, why destroy the "Guardian" to bring to light a Missionary Magazine? Yes, the "Guardian" had a proper place among our papers as a literary periodical, and as such we are sorry to part with it; though as a Sunday-school teacher it had become obsolete. In its brightest days, however, we imagine it was never called upon to meet a want as extensive and pressing as that which called forth the missionary paper. Hence the latter deserves a much larger circulation. But now, will not in those families, in which our best readers are to be found, and the new monthly is expected to find a first welcome, will not the objection be raised,—"we have a Church paper, we don't want two." I reckon that will be one of the difficulties, which pastors will be confronted with. It can be most readily overcome and the best introduction at the same time be given to the new Magazine, if the Woman's Missionary Societies in our congregations make it their object to extend the circulation. This they can do either by direct subscription, or by having each family add 50 cents, per year, to the contributions for missions, receiving the "Guardian," as it were, free of charge. This latter plan will make the Monthly a direct organ for each congregation; and the writer hopes to make it work like a charm. The ladies in a congregation can be depended upon for the best activity in this direction, and if they be well directed there is no telling how much good can be accomplished, which would otherwise appear impracticable.

We hail the "Missionary Guardian" as an organ that will help the Church to begin the New Year as a period of new missionary zeal and success. The editors will promise to keep the Magazine bright and replete with interesting articles; not to make it a dumping ground for long reports, which people never read. Now is the time for pastors and members to pledge their sympathy in the movement and their best support. We hope that the last number of the first volume will reach greater success than our dearest hopes at present warrant.

The brightest congregational meeting I ever attended,—the best meetings are always held in one's own church,—it was the first evening of the year, a good time for new beginnings in a congregation. The streets were ice-bound, walking a dangereus occupation, a penetrating cold kept up our idea of what winter should be, and made our ears ring with merry sleigh-bells and the sport of youth. Nevertheless, a large congregation had gathered in the lecture-room, ready for the program. In past years, they say, the custom had been, that a handful of the most active would come to such a meeting to transact all the business, while they signified their tacit consent by their absence. For this occasion a carefully prepared program had been published, announcing a short series of prayers and praise, the subjects of some half-dozen five-minute speeches, special chats with coffee and cake, in addition to the annual reports and elections. The effect was more than pleasing, best results still to come. Everybody thought the hours had passed very rapidly. The good, old Moravians in this town had strong faith in coffee and cake. When their love-feasts are announced many visitors worship with them. Do not condemn their custom; I am sure that not a few who attend simply for the meat and drink, take a pointed lesson here and there with them. To be sure, it reminds one of the Galilean "loaves and fishes." But the social feature added to a business meeting harmonizes throughout. Yes, some came just for the coffee, some for the speeches, some for the Reformed cake, some to take part in the business transactions; but they came; they saw and heard. What they promised in their own hearts we cannot tell. Results are, however, apparent, and we are more willing than ever to recommend social additions to some of the people's gatherings.

G. A S.

Bethlehem, Pa.

Poetry.

"WE DIED WITH CHRIST."

Rom. vi. 8; Col. ii. 20; iii. 3.

CHARLOTTE MURRAY.

"Dead with Christ;" ay, think of it, believers;
Ye, the poor, guilty ones, condemned of yore,
Died the death God's holy law demanded:
Justice was satisfied, and asked no more.

Needs no more; you died when Jesus suffered;
Yes, so entirely are you one with Him.
Did He die, the Head? Then all the members
Must of necessity have died with Him.

Wondrous thought! But listen yet still further:
So soon as vengeance had withdrawn the sword,
Peace was made, and you, in Jesus' person,
Thenceforth became, with Him, "alive to God."

Swift with you He passed into the heavens,
Bearing you faultless to His Father's throne;
God received you all as pardoned children,
Opened His yearning heart, and loved His own.

Loves you now, though oftentimes you stumble,
Clad in the garment of corruption here.
Oh, the joy to cast that off for ever!
Perfectly holy you will then appear.

Walk by faith, still "looking unto Jesus."
"No condemnation!" He has made you free.
No more death! With Him you reign for ever:
When will the glory of His kingdom be?

Soon, ah soon; but meanwhile work for Jesus,
Do what you can the happy news to spread!
Tell the Church to watch with eager watching;
Soon shall she now behold her glorious Head.

Selections.

Faith in to morrow, instead of Christ, is Satan's muse for man's perdition.—Cheever.

Persevering unbelief is the only sin that will prove the ruin of a soul.—Dr. Coldstream.

The day will come when God will judge over again all those things that are judged amiss.—Bernard.

We should have all our communications with men as in the presence of God, and with God as in the presence of men.—Colton.

If thou wishest to be wise,
Keep these words before thine eyes;
What thou speak'st, and how, beware;
Of whom, to whom, when and where.

It is worth remembering that no newspaper is printed especially for one person. People who become greatly displeased with something they find in a newspaper, should remember that the very thing that displeases them is exactly the thing that will most please somebody that has just as much interest in the paper as they have. It takes all kinds of people to make a world, we are told, and the patrons of a newspaper are made up of the elements of the world.—The Pacific Clipper.

Science and Art.

An instrument has recently been exhibited in London by which a photograph can be taken of drops of water in the course of their formation. It consists of a lantern and lenses, by which a water trough, the source of the drops, can be strongly illuminated, together with a lightning camera having a revolving disk with one perforation.

In relation to the derivation of the word straw in connection with strawberry to which attention was recently called in this column, a correspondent tells us that the common name for this fruit in Japan is snake-berry, evidently from its creeping, sneak or snake-like character of traveling by its runners. If this character so impressed the original Japanese observers of this plant as to suggest this name for the plant, it is not unlikely that the same or a similar thought would strike the untutored natives of the north of Europe. It is quite likely, therefore, that the suggestion of a recent writer that straw in this sense is from the same root as strew and strewn, and comes from its strewing or scattering itself in every direction so rapidly by its runners, would seem to have some corroboration by the Japanese name.

Items of Interest.

It is calculated that it will require 3,780 cars to move the orange crop of Southern California this season. The value of the crop is estimated at $2,608,000.

Castle Garden, in New York City, the old landing place for immigrants, has become the property of the city, and will be turned over to the Park Commissioners for park purposes.

A pet cat surreptitiously crossed the ocean in a box of her mistress, a steerage passenger on the Nevada, being seventeen days without food, but turned up alive and well in the end.

Swan Gustafson, a Swede of Cherokee, Ia., 20 years old, has just fallen heir to $5,000,000 by the death of a relative in Pennsylvania. The young man has been at work some time in a railroad gravel pit, and does not seem to be much puffed up over his good luck.

The Czar, replying to the New Year's address of the Governor of Moscow, delivered on January 13 (or January 1, according to the Russian calendar), said: "I pray God that this year will again vouchsafe us peace and prosperity."

Sergius Stepniak, the famous Russian revolutionist, exile and writer, accompanied by his wife, arrived in New York last week. He expects to deliver about fifty lectures, in different places in this country, on Russia and Russian affairs. According to him a great revolution is imminent there, and the life of the Czar is in danger.

The Jewish Messenger, commenting on the holiday season, says the Jew "blesses the impulses and deeds of the men and women and children who contribute their share to carry out the motto of Christmas. And he devoutly thanks the Almighty that he lives in a civilized land where Christianity is not a caricature but a vital force in shaping the character and elevating the condition of men."

Rev. Robert Dick, who died recently in Buffalo, N. Y., was the inventor of the newspaper mailing machine used in all large publishing establishments in this country. Mr. Dick was a native of Scotland. Both his parents having died when he was yet a child, he struggled with many difficulties in youth, was graduated at Hamilton College in 1841, and entered the ministry in the Free-will Baptist church. He died at the age of 76.

Hints and Recipes.

Never put potatoes on the table in a covered dish. They will reabsorb their own moisture and become sodden.

What to do in Case of Fire.—If your own dress catches fire, throw yourself at once on the ground, so that the rising flames may not catch the upper part of your clothes, nor burn your head and chest; roll about (so putting the flames out by pressure), and at the same time, if possible, wrap yourself up closely in a rug, hearth rug, blanket, table-cloth, overcoat or carpet, so as to smother the fire. Do not get up to call for assistance, but for that purpose crawl to the bell-rope or door. If another person's dress, throw the person on fire down at once, wrap him or her up in a rug or something similar, or, if there is nothing at hand suitable, use your own coat, rolling the patient about in it, for the purpose of smothering the flames.—Ambulance Work.

Hot Drinks for Thirst.—It is a mistake to suppose that cold drinks are necessary to relieve thirst. Very cold drinks, as a rule, increase the feverish condition of the mouth and stomach and so create thirst. Experience shows it to be a fact that hot drinks relieve the thirst and "cool off" the body when it is in an abnormally heated condition better than ice-cold drinks. It is far better and safer to avoid the use of drinks below 60 degrees; in fact a higher temperature is to be preferred; and those who are much troubled with thirst will do well to try the advantages to be derived from hot drinks, instead of cold fluids to which they have been accustomed. Hot drinks also have the advantage of aiding digestion, instead of causing debility of the stomach and bowels.—Bakers' Helper.

Farm and Garden.

Spring Plowing and the Spreading of Manure.—The sooner the ground can be plowed in the spring the better, especially on heavy soils. During the warm days that sometimes occur in the winter plowing may be done, provided the ground is not too wet for work. It will not interfere with later plowing, for the later plowing will only serve to reduce the soil to a finer condition. No doubt an objection may be urged against plowing at a time when the ground may be wet, but the frost will pulverize the lumps and make the soil mellow. To plow early, leave the ground in the rough, and cross-plow later, then harrow down fine for the crop, will be of great advantage to the crop, allowing more plant food, lessening the damage from drought and warming the soil, as well as preventing the baking of the top soil to a certain extent.

Spreading the Manure.—When the manure is not decomposed in the heap it must decompose in the soil before the plants can utilize it as food, and the sooner the manure is spread the better it will be for the crop. As it is difficult to spread manure on plowed ground, owing to the labor of hauling over the rough, soft ground, the method practiced by those who plow twice is to spread the manure on the unplowed ground, plow it under and leave the ground in the rough (not harrowing), and when the land is cross plowed later on the manure is more intimately mixed with the soil. The early plowing also destroys cutworms and grubs, and allows the frost to go down deeper into the ground. It may be mentioned that the frost will pulverize the soil much better than can be done by any mechanical process, and it will save labor if allowed to work on the clods and lumps, which are reduced by the expansion and contraction of cold and heat.

Books and Periodicals.

Any of the books here noticed can be had through our Publication House, 907 Arch Street.

A Dream of a Modest Prophet. By M. D. Leggett. J. B. Lippincott Co. Price $1.00.

The title of this book does not make known its purpose. The author imagines himself upon the planet Mars, the nearest planet to our globe. He attempts to give things as they are there. In doing so he brings in those questions that challenge us here. He treats of the social, political and religious questions, and would describe how these are solved on that planet. It affords interesting reading.

The Impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture. By the Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M. P. John D. Wattles, Philadelphia.

This volume is composed in part of articles written by Mr. Gladstone for The Sunday School Times. They have been revised and enlarged, the conclusion being added. A fine portrait of Mr. Gladstone and a fac simile letter of his are to be found in it also. It has interest in it to the Bible student as well as the general reader.

Jew and Gentile. Fleming H. Revell, New York and Chicago. Paper 50 cts., cloth 75 cts.

This is the name of a new volume. It is the journal of the proceedings of that remarkable conference between Israelites and Christians recently held in Chicago. It is worth noting in this connection that Rabbi Hirsh is delivering a lecture on the striking topic, "The Crucifixion from the Jewish Standpoint." Out of all this interchange of thought on such a theme there ought to come important issues.

The Medical Bulletin: A Monthly Journal of Medicine and Surgery. Edited by John V. Shoemaker, A. M., M.D. Contents for January—Clinical Lecture; Original Communications; Selection; Abstracts; Therapeutic Notes; Editorials; Correspondence; Medical News and Miscellany; Book Reviews; and Commercial News.

Terms—$1 a year in advance. F. A. Davis, Publisher, Philadelphia, Pa., U. S. A.

Littell's Living Age. The number of The Living Age for January 17 contains—Prosper Merimee, by Walter Pater, Fortnightly Review; My Tutorship, Cornhill Magazine; Switzerland as a School of Politics, Time; The Streets of London, Murray's Magazine; The Wisdom Tooth, English Illustrated Magazine; The Journal of Sir Walter Scott, Temple Bar; Round about the Bahamas, Chambers' Journal; Poetry and Miscellany.

$8.00 per year. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

A very business-like Calendar comes to us from N. W. Ayer & Son, Newspaper Advertising Agents, Philadelphia, and bears their "Keeping everlastingly at it" imprint. It is so large and clear that its dates can be easily distinguished across an office, and is printed in a manner to reconcile the most fastidious to its company for a year. It is sent to any address, postpaid, on receipt of 25 cents.

Another most valuable business Calendar for 1891 is the Columbia Cycle Calendar and Stand, issued by the Pope Mfg. Co., of Boston, Mass. It is in the form of a pad containing 366 leaves, each leaf having on it date, day of week, day of year, and number of days to come, a paragraph pertaining to cycling or some kindred subject. The leaves are fastened only on the end, so that each leaf can be exposed. The stand is made of stained wood, brass mounted, with pencil holder and pen rack. Although this is the sixth year of the Calendar, the matter is fresh and new, the larger number of paragraphs having been specially written for this purpose.

LITERARY NOTE.

THE STANDARD DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. This is the title of a new dictionary now in course of preparation by Funk & Wagnalls, Publishers, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York. The price will be $10, with a special discount to advance subscribers—the price to them being $6, upon condition that they send $1 now and $5 when the book is ready for delivery.

An examination of the sample pages sent out by the publishers shows that the "Standard" will be far in advance of the other single volume dictionaries now published. It has a number of peculiar features which will make it desirable for all classes of scholars. The scientific alphabet is used in the pronounciation of words and the illustrations used are helpful and unsurpassed. It has a distinguished corps of editors to whom particular parts are assigned, insuring a most complete work of the kind. It will be the same size in page as the other dictionaries, and will contain over 2100 pages and 4000 illustrations.

Marriages.

At the residence of the bride's father, Carlton Keller, of Jefferson, on December 24th, by Rev. H. F. Dittmar, Mr. Andrew J. Culler to Miss Alice G. Keller.

At Saegertown, Pa., December 10, 1890, by Rev. D. H. Leader, Mr. James A. Rodgers to Miss Almira Fox, both of Hayfield Twp., Crawford Co., Pa.

At the Reformed Parsonage, Claysburg, Pa., December 25th, 1890, by Rev. C. W. Summey, Mr. Harry E. Dively to Miss Minnie M. Smith, both of Claysburg, Pa.

In the Glade Reformed church, Walkersville, Md., on December 17th, 1890, by Rev. S. M. Hench, assisted by Rev. Dr. E. R. Eschbach, Edward D. Shriner to Miss Nannie M. Getzendanner, both of Frederick county, Md.

At the Glade Parsonage, Walkersville, Md., on December 17th, 1890, by Rev. S. M. Hench, Eli D. Cramer of Utica Mills, to Miss Julian Groshon, of Creagerstown, both of Frederick conuty, Md.

At the same place, by the same, on December 24th, 1890, Mr. Abraham P. Strine to Miss Sarah L. Crum, both of Woodsboro, Frederick Co., Md.

Deaths.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than two hundred and fifty words.

DIED.—Near Ridgely, Caroline county, Md., on December 6th, Mr. Thos. Bower, in the 85th year of his age.

Long was thy journey, but now it is o'er;
Rest with thy Saviour, on heaven's bright shore.

D. P. L.

DIED.—At her home, near St. Luke's church, Rockingham county, Va., November 16th, 1890, Mrs. Elizabeth Will, wife of Jacob Will, aged 47 years, 4 mos. and 10 days.

She had not enjoyed good health for several years, but was not considered dangerously ill until about two months before her death. Then she began to fail rapidly. Her death was unexpected to the members of her family, but she understood her condition fully. She was resigned however, and gave herself entirely into the care of her Saviour.

Mother Will was a model Christian wife and mother. On the day of her death the Holy Communion was celebrated in St. Luke's church, of which she was a member. She desired to partake of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. She sent for her pastor early in the morning to come to the house, and there with the family, and also with the family of her father's folks, she communed for the last time on earth. About three hours afterward she passed away quietly and peacefully from pain and sickness to joys eternal and the companionship of the saints in light.

She was baptized in infancy and became a member of the Reformed church by confirmation in 1865. She was universally esteemed in the community and especially in the church, where she is greatly missed. On the following Tuesday forenoen her mortal remains were borne from her late residence to the church, followed by a large concourse of people, when the body was laid to rest until the morning of the resurrection. A sermon suitable to the occasion was preached by the pastor.

She leaves a husband and three sons to mourn her loss. May the consolations of the Gospel of Christ comfort and sustain the husband and children.

HER PASTOR, J. T. B.

DIED.—Near Waynesboro, Pa., on the evening of the 24th of December, Abraham Mickley, son of Daniel Mickley, aged 56 years.

The deceased was a worthy member of the Reformed congregation at Harbaugh's, regular in his attendance on the means of grace and faithful in all the trusts entrusted to him. He served the congregation in the capacity of deacon and elder, and represented the charge on the floor of Classis, and was by that body sent as delegate to Synod. An upright, conscientious citizen, beloved by all who knew him. It can be truly said, "He was a good man." He leaves a sorrowing wife and four children, two daughters and two sons, one of whom is doing good service in the Lord's vineyard at Scottdale, Pa. An aged father, now 95 years old, also survives him.

His remains were laid to rest in Green Mount Cemetery, near Waynesboro, in the hope of a blessed resurrection. "I believe in the resurrection of the body and the Life Everlasting." (Creed.) S.

DIED.—November 14, 1890, at the home of her father, H. J. Stahle, editor of the Gettysburg Compiler, Miss Mary L. Stahle, aged 41 years, 1 month and 23 days.

The death of this estimable lady was sudden and entirely unexpected. The whole community was shocked when the report of it spread through the town. Only the evening before she was seen on the streets accompanied by her sister, from whom she separated apparently in her usual good health. The next day before 11 o'clock she was a corpse. Having lost her mother, years ago, the care of the family devolved mainly upon her. She devoted herself to the work which lay so plainly before her, and to the duty of caring for the comfort and welfare of her father, and of the children who, like herself, were left without the care and counsel of their mother. She was a faithful member of the church. Her place in the sanctuary was seldom vacant, and she was never, of her own choice, absent from the Holy Communion. She is greatly missed in the home where her influence contributed so much to the happiness and peace of its members, and in the church where she adorned her profession by walking quietly in the path of duty. Her life-work is ended, and we can comfort one another with the words, "She hath done what she could."

DIED.—In Johnstown, September 26th, 1890, Mrs. Catharine Hall Bowers, born April 28th, 1864, at Martinsburg, Blair county, Pa.

Mrs. Bowers was the daughter of Uriah and Rebecca Sipes, of Martinsburg, Pa., and on March 29th, 1888, was united in matrimony to Mr. Charles V. Bowers, of Johnstown, Pa.

Mrs. Bowers possessed natural qualities of heart and mind which endeared her to her friends. Seemingly shy and back ward yet ready to engage in a good work whenever there was no one else displaced. Though brought up in the M. E. church, of which she had been a member twelve years, and for six years presided at the organ and led the congregation in the hymns of praise, she felt at home in the Reformed church in Johnstown, and when the congregation had lost its organist in death she, for two years, presided at the organ. Three that once sat at the organ in this mission have now entered the "portal gates within the vail," and sing a new song.

Mrs. Bowers was a great sufferer, especially so during her married life. She with her husband made a narrow escape when the great flood came upon Johnstown. They were about getting ready to leave the house, for the Kernville hills, when suddenly they were obliged to flee to the attic, where she, husband and child (now about two years old) spent an awful night. They lost the greatsr part of their property. From the time of the flood Mrs. Bowers saw no well day. Her sufferings were great, yet she endured all without a murmuring word, and when told she could not get well, she was resigned to the will of God, and when the hour of her departure came she fell peacefully asleep in the arms of her husband, who kept a vigilant watch for weeks over her.

Her funeral was largely attended. Many were the tears shed by her friends and acquaintances. Her mortal remains were conveyed to Grand View Cemetery, now made memorable by the interment of the many "unknown dead" of the great flood (nearly 800), where her remains await the resurrection's call.

A faithful and kind husband and a dear daughter mourn her early departure, and the mission has lost what- would have proved an efficient worker in the cause of the church. The Lord's will be done. For her there are no more pains—she has entered into rest. PASTOR.

DIED.—On Sunday, December 28th, 1890, Mrs. Catharine Moyer, near Tusseyville, Centre county, Pa.

Mrs. Moyer was a daughter of Jacob Keller, and was baptized, confirmed and married by Rev. Peter Fisher. Her life was quiet and consistent, and at the age of 57 years, 9 months and 12 days, she passed away beloved by a large circle of friends. *

DIED.—In Jefferson, Md., January 2d, 1891, Mrs. Anna Maria Culler, aged 75 years, 4 months and 14 days.

H. F. D.

DIED.—December 18th, 1890, in York county, near Bowmansdale, Pa., Mr. Jacob Cocklin, in his 94th year.

A NEW EDITION.

WON BY PRAYER.

Or The Life and Work of Rev. Masayoshi Oshikawa, Native Missionary in Sendai, Japan.

BY REV. A. R. BARTHOLOMEW,
Late Secretary Board of Commissioners for
For. Missions, Reformed Church
in United States.

An interesting story, well told, and an evidence of what has been and is being done for the salvation of the heathen in Japan. Well illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound.

Pp. 120. Price, 75 cts. Postpaid.

☞Percentage on sales given to Foreign Missions. Should have a large sale.

REFORMED CHURCH PUB. HOUSE,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE ALMANAC
FOR THE
Reformed Church in the United States
—TWENTY-EIGHTH ISSUE—
FOR 1891.

We are ready now to receive orders for our Almanac for 1891, at the following rates:

100 Copies, per express,		$5.00
50 "	"	2.75
12 "	"	.75
1 Copy, Postpaid,		.12

When to be sent by mail 18 cents per dozen must be added for postage.

Also,
WESTERN ALMANAC
At the same prices as above.

GERMAN ALMANAC.
12 Copies, 90 cts.
Postage, 18 cts.
Single Copies, Postpaid, 12 cts.

Address,
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA.

Business Department.

TERMS:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage free. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.

No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrearages are paid.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made before the date transpires.

When the address of a paper is to be changed, the OLD and the NEW should be given.

☞Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

☞We do make mistakes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

☞Remittances should be made payable by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, or Registered Letter to the order of THE REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHAS. G. FISHER.

ADVERTISING RATE,
10 Cents Per Agate Line

Each insertion (fourteen lines to an inch).

Special Notices, set solid, double the price of display per counted line.

Reading Notices, leaded, three times the price of display per counted line.

Subject to the following Discounts:

FOR TIME.		FOR SPACE.
2 insertions......	5 per ct.	100 lines.........	5 per ct.
4 "	......10 "	250 "	.........10 "
8 "	......15 "	500 "	.........20 "
13 "	......20 "	750 "	.........30 "
26 "	......30 "	1,000 "	.........40 "
52 "	......40 "	1,500 "	.........50 "
No advertisement of less than 5 lines inserted at time rates on a contract for variable space.		To be used within one year.

Advertisements discontinued before completion of order, either by direction of advertiser or for non-payment, shall be paid for at regular rates for the advertising done.

An advertiser may use either scale of discounts, but cannot combine them. An advertiser is entitled to the highest discount which the entire amount of advertising done by him in any one year will secure.

Address all communications about advertising to

The Religious Press Association,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE NEW BOOK.

IN OLDEN DAYS
BEYOND THE SEA.

Translated from the German, to which are added Introductory and Closing Parts,
BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

An interesting book, giving a thrilling account of the trials and persecutions of those who were true to their faith in "olden days beyond the sea." Pages 305. Illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of retail price, $1 25.

Address,
Reformed Church Publication House,
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK,
"In Olden Days Beyond the Sea,"
AND
THE MESSENGER.

To any one sending us two new subscribers for THE MESSENGER and $4.00, we will send a copy of the above book postpaid.

To an old subscriber for THE MESSENGER, remitting $2.75, we will give credit for a year's subscription and send a copy of the above book, postpaid.

Address
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

Miscellaneous.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

WICHITA UNIVERSITY.

A STATEMENT IN REFERENCE THERETO.

I think it is proper that the Church at large should know more about the present condition and future prospects of our university in Wichita, and I will try to make a plain statement of the facts.

The school is doing well. The attendance of students is all, and even more than we could expect. There are nearly seventy on the list—thirty-four in the higher departments, and about as many in the lower and primary departments. The professors and teachers are giving good satisfaction. They are required to practice great self-denial to remain in their places, as salaries are inadequate to meet expenses of comfortable living, and even then, for want of sufficient income, the Board is unable to meet its promises to them.

Owing to the stringency of money matters in the West generally, it is impossible to collect more than about the half of the interest due us on invested endowment funds. What we can collect, together with income from tuition, leaves us about $1000 short this year of being able to meet all expenses. It is impossible to curtail expenses more than we have done. We are only paying three salaried teachers (or rather have promised to pay them)—the president and his two chief assistants—the meager sum of $1650, all told. Fuel, interest on loan, etc., are $1000 more—just about the amount we are running behind. What then are we to do? We are expecting to win a lawsuit against the men who gave us a bond to pay for the building, but left us stick to the amount of over $4,000—which we had to settle with creditors, or lose the property. This was paid with 70 cents on the dollar, by making a loan for $10,000, on which we must pay $600 interest per annum. A few friends East paid it for us this year, or rather loaned us the amount to pay it. The Courts are slow and uncertain. While we know we will win, if justice is done us, yet experience, especially in the West, proves that courts are not to be relied on for right or justice. If we win, we will be in fair financial situation; if we do not, it will bankrupt us, unless the church East comes up to our help. The men who subscribed the $25,000 to put up our university building expected to make money by selling lands around it. They could have done so, but held for still higher prices until the opportunity passed. They made nothing, and are out about $13,000 in cash, paid on building and grounds, besides the portion of the grounds donated. They justified their refusal to pay more at first by saying it would be a wrong to their families to fulfil their promises, and asked us to appeal to the church to meet the balance of contract price of building. This we refused to do, and brought suit on the bond. They then put in the plea that, with the land they had given over $25,000, which they alleged cancels their bond. This is the question upon which the court is to pass. We know they did not so understand the bond at first, and hope to establish our view; but until the court finally decides what are we to do? It costs money to carry on a suit in court. Shall we let all go by default to make defense? Shall we close the school, with the fine prospect of doing a grand work before us for the world and the church? For one, I am unwilling to increase our liabilities, as a Board, without the reasonable assurance that the church will help us meet them, if it comes to the worst. But it would be a positive calamity to the cause of Christian education and to our church work in the the West, to close the school. Are there not some wealthy friends who will come to our help with large contributions from $1000 up? Who will be the first? Brethren, I have only to add the West will get over her financial stringency in a year or two. This country has immense possibilities. Some church will reap the fruits of pioneer enterprise and self-sacrifice. Those of us on the ground will hold aloft the Reformed flag as long as possible. If we are compelled to surrender the interest so dear to some of our hearts, we will die in the last ditch, with colors flying. We are not conscious of having made any mistakes, even in finances thus far; we are the victims of unfavorable circumstances, but have done precisely as you or any other of our best financiers would most likely have done. Will you help us save Wichita University to the Reformed church?

Yours in the faith,
J. W. LOVE.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF SCHUYLKILL CLASSIS.

Saturday, January 10th, was the day appointed for the meeting of the executive committee of the Women's Missionary Society of Schuylkill Classis. The day was beautiful and the morning trains brought all the ladies of the committee together with several friends, except two or three who were unavoidably detained from being amongst the happy number.

The meeting was held in the Reformed church of Leesport, of which Rev. S. A. Leinbach is pastor. The morning session was devoted to business. Much business of importance was transacted.

The society at its last annual meeting, had resolved to endeavor with God's help to raise $500 during the present classical year: of which amount $200 was to be devoted to St. Clair mission, and $300 to home and foreign missions.

The corresponding secretary reported having sent out appeals to all the pastors within the bounds of Classis, asking them kindly to aid in the work undertaken; and that quite a number of replies were already received, all favorable.

The society desires to take this public opportunity of thanking all those who have signified their willingness to aid them in their work; and also to kindly ask those pastors who have not yet replied, to do so as soon as they are able.

It was further resolved that inasmuch as Frackville, New Castle and St. Clair constitute St. Clair mission, the $200 pledged for that mission shall be devoted to the Frackville congregation to assist them in building a chapel, as they have no home of their own in which to worship.

The only sad feature of the morning was the letter of resignation of Mrs. Rufus W. Miller of Reading, in the acceptance of which the following action was taken:

Resolved, That in accepting the resignation of Mrs. Miller, we do so with regret, and bear testimony to her great usefulness among us.

Miss Sara Lenhart, of Trinity church, Leesport, was elected to fill her place.

In the afternoon a public meeting of a literary character was held, interspersed with fine music by members of the Leesport choir and friends of the society.

The ladies of the Classis were welcomed by Mrs. Binkley of Leesport, and responded to by Miss Hattie Walters of Hamburg.

"The value of doing little things" was the subject of an essay prepared and spoken by Emma E. Zerby of Pottsville.

A select reading, "Who will go," was given by Miss S. Lenhart of Leesport.

"The duties of a minister's wife" was recited by Miss K. Stamback of Hamburg.

A very impressive talk on "Missions" was given by Mrs. S. E. Mosser, President of the Society.

A poem entitled "Your mission," was recited by Miss Emily Lenhart of Leesport.

Rev. S. A. Leinbach bade the ladies farewell in a few well chosen and encouraging remarks, which will urge the members on and unite them to still greater activity in the future.

Rev. Albright bade the ladies "Go Forward. If there is a red sea to cross, cross it; the promised land lies beyond."

After thanking the kind people of Leesport for their entertainment and all who had in any way contributed to the success of the meeting, the members separated for their respective homes, more than pleased with the day's labor and hoping to meet next as an unbroken band at Tremont in connection with Classis.

EMMA E. ZERBEY, Cor. Sec.
Pottsville, Pa.

CHRISTMAS TIDINGS.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Hyndman.—Rev. E. E. Weller, pastor. The Christmas season was a joyous one for the Reformed Sunday-school at this place. On Christmas evening the service entitled "The Christ Child," was rendered in a very pleasing manner. The singing of the children was a special feature, and many were the words of praise given them by all present.

The church was tastefully decorated. Three evergreen trees were used, and were called the tree of gifts, the tree of light, and the tree of blessing. The latter was trimmed with mottoes setting forth the fruits of the Spirit. These mottoes were used in connection with a very impressive service that was rendered by the ladies of the school. The offerings were devoted to the cause of foreign missions. The pastor received a purse containing $15.15 from the tree of gifts. The school is in a very flourishing condition, which is due to the zeal and energy of its worthy superintendent and his devoted teachers.

Sharon.—Rev. L. J. Mayer, pastor. Christmas services in St. Paul's Reformed church were, as they usually are, delightful ones. The Lord's Supper was administered during the morning service, and an encouraging number surrounded the communion table. Children's services in the evening were more than ordinarily interesting. The service, "Immanuel," was thoroughly prepared and rendered to the admiration of all present. The usual Christmas tree adorned one corner of the church, which the children admired most of all. The accustomed gifts were presented to one hundred and twenty-five children and teachers. At the conclusion of the service one of the older members, with gray hairs, came strolling through one of the aisles and taking his position in front of the pastor, delivered a neat and well-prepared little address and presented him with a beautiful gold-headed cane. It was unexpected, but received gladly and with many thanks, and was the gift of a kind and generous congregation.

Williamsport.—St. John's, Rev. Lewis Robb, pastor. Services were held on Christmas evening. The Sunday-school used "Immanuel." Every pupil received a present and the pastor was not forgotten by any means. Services were also held on Christmas morning. This service partook of the nature of a song service. The choir under the leadership of Prof. A. M. Balliet sang with wonderful effect the Te Deum Laudamus.

Beginning with January 6th a series of four evening services were held closing with the celebration of the Holy Eucharist

Continued on Page 13.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

EVERY SKIN, SCALP, & BLOOD DISEASE Cured by Cuticura

EVERY SKIN AND SCALP DISEASE, WHETHER torturing, disfiguring, humiliating, itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, with loss of hair, from pimples to the most distressing eczemas, and every humor of the blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, is speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. This is strong language, but true. Thousands of grateful testimonials from infancy to age attest their wonderful, unfailing and incomparable efficacy.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50 c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston, Mass.

Send for "How to Cure Skin and Blood Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Rheumatism, Kidney Pains, and Muscular Weakness relieved in one minute by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, 25c.

EVERY MOTHER

Should Have It in The House.

Dropped on Sugar, Children Love to take JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT for Croup, Colds, Sore Throat, Tonsilitis, Colic, Cramps and Pains. Relieves all Summer Complaints, Cuts and Bruises like magic. Sold everywhere. Price 35c. by mail; 6 bottles Express paid, $2. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., BOSTON, MASS.

MONEY can be earned at our NEW line of work, rapidly and honorably, by those of either sex, young or old, and in their own localities, wherever they live. Any one can do the work. Easy to learn. We furnish everything. We start you. No risk. You can devote your spare moments, or all your time to the work. This is an entirely new lead, and brings wonderful success to every worker. Beginners are earning from $25 to $50 per week and upwards, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you the employment and teach you FREE. No space to explain here. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
"Best & Goes Farthest."
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [63

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY,
BEECHAM'S PILLS
For Bilious and Nervous Disorders.
"Worth a Guinea a Box" but sold for 25 Cents,
BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

SPENCERIAN STEEL PENS Are the Best
If You Wish To Try Them,
Samples of the leading numbers will be sent FREE on receipt of return postage, 2 cents. The Spencerian Pen Co., 810 Broadway, New York.

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE of 16,600f.
QUINA-
LAROCHE'S
INVIGORATING TONIC,
CONTAINING
Peruvian Bark, and Pure Catalan Wine.
Endorsed by the Medical Faculty of Paris, as the Best Remedy for
LOSS of APPETITE, FEVER and AGUE; MALARIA, NEURALGIA and INDIGESTION.

An experience of 25 years in experimental analysis, together with the valuable aid extended by the Academy of Medicine in Paris, has enabled M. Laroche to extract the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark (a result not before attained), and to concentrate them in an elixir, which possesses in the highest degree its restorative and invigorating qualities, free from the disagreeable bitterness of other remedies.
22 rue Drouot, Paris.
E. FOUGERA & CO., Agents for U. S.,
30 North William street, N. Y.
LAROCHE

BLATCHLEY WOOD FORCE PUMP
Cheapest and most efficient. A Complete Fire Department on your premises. Write for descriptive circular. CHAS. G. BLATCHLEY, Philada.

Sunday, January 11, 1891. Much interest was awakened by these services. The pastor was assisted by Revs. Sorber of Watsontown, and Ebert of Milton. Offerings on Christmas Day for the orphans and at communion for church extension.

Elk Lick.—Paradise Charge, Rev. J. M. Evans, pastor. The usual Sunday-school Christmas service was held in two congregations—St. John's and St. Paul's—the former at 6 o'clock and the latter at 7 o'clock Christmas eve. The "Order of Worship for Christmas," accompanied with organ and cornets, was very satisfactorily rendered in both congregations. The usual Christmas tree, with ornaments and light, lent beauty and grace to each service. All the members of the schools received a generous treat. The alms as usual were given to St. Paul's Orphan Home. Purses containing silver coin were presented to the cornetists at St. John's.

At Salisbury (St. John's) the church was beautifully adorned with arch and festoons of evergreen. Appropriate Scriptural texts and designs in evergreen were placed on the walls and arch.

The first early service for this congregation was held 6 o'clock Christmas morning. The pastor preached an appropriate sermon, and the well-trained choir, under the efficient leadership of Dr. Lichty, accompanied with organ and two cornets, rendered most excellent music.

A little over two months ago the pastor's horse died of lock jaw. The members in the charge were very prompt to show their sympathy in a real substantial way. A purse was raised to replace the loss in part. The pastor, accompanied by a member who had much to do with the gift, went into West Virginia where a well bred and valuable driving and saddle horse was purchased. This present, which is one hundred and fourteen dollars in cash, along with other kindnesses, made indeed a "merry" Christmas for the inmates of the parsonage, who will ever cherish gifts and givers among the most precious memories of the present pastorate. They sincerely hope by earnestness and faithfulness in their calling to bring no discredit upon those who have so kindly remembered and encouraged them. But they can do no more than return to the kind donors their heartfelt thanks for this token of affection and esteem, and pray their reward may be higher and nobler than they or the world can give.

Cochranton.—Rev. J. D. Thomas, pastor. Christmas services were observed at the three following congregations of Zion's charge—St. Mark's, Trinity and St. John's. A collection was taken for Butler Orphans' Home amounting to $10.33, also a box of clothing and bedding was sent to Butler.

Altoona.—Christ's church, Rev. D. S. Dieffenbacher, pastor. The festival was appropriately observed on Christmas Day, beginning at 4 o'clock, P.M., in Christ church, Altoona. A large and attentive audience was present. The service, "Immanuel, God with us," was used with profit to every worshiper. The church was handsomely festooned, and a large Christmas tree occupied a prominent place. The school received their usual gifts. A Bible was presented to each member of the orchestra, and the organist, Mrs. L. B. Reifsneider, was also remembered. The offering amounted to $17.29, for St. Paul's Orphan Home at Butler.

—Trinity Mission, Rev. Lloyd E. Coblentz, pastor. Trinity Sunday-school and congregation held their service in the new lecture room early Christmas evening. Quite a large audience assembled to take part in and enjoy the expressive service prepared for the occasion. The entire school received a gift, and the infant department received beautiful cards in addition. The offering has been sent to Bethany Orphans' Home. The Ladies' Mite Society sent a box of canned fruit to Butler Orphans' Home.

On New Year's eve quite a number of the members and friends of the congregation hastened to the residence of the pastor at the close of the evening service and were awaiting his arrival home. When he came he found out why the attendance at that particular Wednesday evening service was so unusually large. Elder George L. Freet gave expression to the sentiments of the welcome visitors and their purpose. The pastor returned the hearty thanks of his family and himself in an appropriate reply. After a social chat and the exchange of cheerful New Year's greetings the thoughtful callers started for home. Mrs. C. then found a handsome supply left for almost every department of the larder.

Blue Bell.—Boehm's church, Rev. Chas. E. Wehler, pastor. The Sunday-school of Boehm's Reformed church, Blue Bell, Montgomery county, Pa., held its festival in the church on Christmas eve. The church was tastefully decorated. A large evergreen tree was in the recess back of the pulpit, which was trimmed nicely with things that were pleasing to the eye. When the candles upon it were lighted it presented a beautiful appearance. The exercises were opened with an organ voluntary by the organist, Miss Fannie Miller. "Christmas Pictures" was used. There were several recitations given by the scholars, which bore principally upon the event.

After short addresses by superintendent and pastor, the choir sang a Christmas anthem, while the collection was being taken up, after which the distribution of gifts took place, which was the most interesting part to the children. These were Bibles to those who collected money in jugs given out previous to Thanksgiving evening, the total amount being eighty-three dollars, and to the rest were given the usual gifts. One class of girls remembered their teacher, Miss Bertha P. Wertmer, by giving her a beautiful book. The pastor was also remembered with an envelope containing some bank notes. The school, during the season, contributed forty-three dollars and thirteen cents, which was sent to Bethany Orphans' Home, Womelsdorf, Pa.

Wilkinsburg.—Rev. Jas. S. Freeman, pastor. The Sunday-school observed the joyful festival on Christmas eve. The service "Immanuel," was used, interspersed with recitations. The church was nicely decorated and in harmony with the character of the festival. All hearts were glad, not because of the gifts received in the school, but because of the greater Gift given for all men. When the services were nearly concluded one of the young men who was not on the regular programme, was called on to make a speech, and before he concluded he placed into the hands of the pastor a beautiful black marble clock, a gift from the Ladies' Aid Society of the congregation. The offerings of the school, $11.32, were for St. Paul's Orphan Home at Butler, Pa.

Friends Cove.—Christmas services were held in this congregation on Christmas eve. The "Order of Worship for Christmas" was used. A large Christmas tree was laden with presents for the Sunday-school scholars. Miss Bessie Apple presided at the organ. The address was delivered by Prof. J. H. Apple, of Clarion Normal School. The pastor also delivered an address. The services were interesting, and we hope profitable to all present. Rev. J. H. Apple, D.D., is pastor.

OHIO.

Louisville.—Rev. J. J. Leberman, pastor. The members of the Louisville charge enjoyed a merry Christmas. Great preparations were made for several weeks in rehearsals and in decorating the churches. Both at Osnaburg and Louisville the buildings were not large enough to hold the people. The service, "Immanuel, God with us," gave universal satisfaction and left a lasting impression of good on all hearts and minds. While the children received gifts, they also brought an offering for the orphans at our several homes.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Lexington.—Rev. J. C. Leonard, pastor. Christmas was a joyous season in the Upper Davidson charge. At Buelah, on Christmas eve, a beautiful Christmas tree was given. At Pilgrim, on Christmas day, there was a ladder and concert, surpassing, it is said, anything else in the community. This congregation presented to the pastor a fine watch chain. At Hebron, on the day after Christmas, the children delighted in fine and substantial presents from an arch. This school made a Christmas offering of $11.04, which is good considering that the school is so small. The finest of music was rendered at all of these places.

Hickory.—Rev. Joseph L. Murphy, pastor. Christmas services were held in Corinth Reformed church at 6 o'clock Christmas morning, and at Bethel at one o'clock, P.M. Offerings, $19.04.

ILLINOIS.

Forreston.—Services were held in Zion Reformed church on Christmas eve and at West Grove on Christmas day. The exercises consisted in singing, Scriptural reading and recitations, and short address by the pastor. Three beautiful evergreen trees graced the churches—two in Forreston and one at West Grove. The trees were loaded with nice presents for scholars, teachers, officers and parents. Pastor and wife were remembered with valuable gifts, and some in silver and greenbacks. Both Sunday-schools received the usual gifts.

KANSAS.

Abilene.—Rev. Abner S. Dechant, pastor. Festivals were held both in Enterprise and in Abilene. At the former Rev. D. B. Shuey was present and addressed the congregation. We should enjoy describing these festivals in detail. Contributions—Enterprise, $2.61; Abilene, $6.65. Total, $9 26. It has been sent to Bethany Orphans' Home. The pastor was kindly remembered at both places both in money and material. Among the gifis were a dictionary-stand and a student lamp.

Wichita.—Rev. J. W. Love, pastor. The Wichita Mission Sunday-school and congregation had a delightful Christmas

Continued on Page 14

Cleveland's Baking Powder

Is Absolutely the Best,

Because—Always "good luck" with it: Cleveland's Baking Powder is so sure that I can use it in the dark or with my eyes shut and be sure of the same happy results."—Mrs. M. H. B.

Tutt's Pills

stimulates the torpid liver, strengthens the digestive organs, regulates the bowels, and are unequaled as an

ANTI-BILIOUS MEDICINE.

In malarial districts their virtues are widely recognized, as they possess peculiar properties in freeing the system from that poison. Elegantly sugar coated. Dose small. Price, 25cts.

Sold Everywhere.

Office, 39 & 41 Park Place, N. Y.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Applied into the Nostrils is Quickly Absorbed, Cleanses the Head, Heals the Sores and Cures

CATARRH

Restores Taste and Smell, Quickly Relieves Cold in Head and Headache. 50 cents at Druggists or by mail. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAY FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE ELY'S CREAM BALM 50C

OUR NEW CROCHET BOOK No. 2. 50 PATTERNS SENT FOR 10 CENTS.

Send 5 cents for new TIDY PATTERN

or 60c. for full set of 12 Tidies from London and Paris, including Crochet Book No. 2. A spool of our Twilled Lace Thread, Best in the World, for 10c. GLASGO LACE THREAD CO., Glasgo, Conn.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.

W. BAKER & CO.'S

Breakfast Cocoa

Is absolutely pure and it is soluble.

No Chemicals

are used in its preparation. It has more than three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, EASILY DIGESTED, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as persons in health.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.

W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

For Gas BAILEY'S For Oil

COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass REFLECTORS, A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. A. J. WEIDENER, 36 South 2d St. Philada.

ALSO CHANDELIERS for OIL and ELECTRICITY

BAXTER C. SWAN

MANUFACTURER OF

CHURCH, HALL AND LODGE FURNITURE

IN GREAT VARIETY.

Pews and Chapel Seatings, Pulpits, Pulpit Chairs, Communion and Altar Tables, S. S. Teachers' Desks, &c. Write for information to 244 & 246 South Second St. PHILADELPHIA, PA., U.S.A.

VIRGINIA FARMS FREE CATALOGUE R. B. CHAFFIN & CO. RICHMOND, VA.

CHOICE CARPETINGS

IN ALL GRADES,

AT POPULAR PRICES.

A full line of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and Standard Domestic and Imported Carpets.

☞ We request only an OPPORTUNITY to show you our stock.

IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE.

NEW STORE,

1217 Market Street,

PHILADELPHIA.

CARPET buyers had better purchase of J. & J. DOBSON, 809 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, in order to receive full value for their money. They retail Carpets of their own make, which are reliable in every way.

WHY DO MOTHERS put stiff Corsets on growing girls? We beg of you. Don't do it. Try the "GOOD SENSE" Corset Waist—fit all ages.

festival. The service, "Immanuel," was entered into with spirited enthusiasm; the pulpit end of the church and chancel was beautifully decorated; a fine evergreen Christmas tree loaded with gifts for the children stood on pulpit platform; the children also received presents from their teachers; the choir sang several anthems magnificently. Little Edna Rauch, daughter of Mr. Amos L., called out a spontaneous burst of applause by her recitations, composed by her father. Freddie Shollian and Miss Kate English also delivered very pleasing recitations.

Iola.—Rev. W. E. Shaley, pastor. On the evening of December 25th a large audience assembled in the Christ Reformed church of Iola, Kansas, to attend the Christmas entertainment. The services used were "Christmas Voices." While the tree was being lighted a collection was raised for the orphans. The children were remembered as usual. As this was the first tree had in this church all were greatly delighted with its success.

MISSOURI.

Kansas City.—Rev. C. A. Santee, pastor. Christmas services by the Sunday-school on Thursday evening. Used the service, "The Christ Child." Collection, $3.45, for the orphans.

IOWA.

Lisbon.—Rev. F. M. Shults, pastor. Grace Reformed Sunday-school held its Christmas exercises December 24th. The programme was well rendered. All the members of the Sunday school and church were remembered. The pastor was especially kindly remembered. After the distribution of gifts, Rev. Fouse stepped forward and spoke about the propriety of giving presents, among other things referred to the climate east and west, that after all Iowa was preferable to the east, and that a minister should be well protected against the wintry weather. He then presented the pastor with a good Chinchilla overcoat. He was completely surprised, and in a few words tried to respond, but could scarcely give utterance to his feelings.

Preparatory and communion services were held at Lisbon January 3rd and 4th. The sermon on Saturday was preached by the pastor, and on Sunday by Rev. D. S. Fouse, who preached a profound sermon, partaking of the nature of a Zwingli memorial sermon, thus combining the two services, which were highly enjoyed. At this communion season there were three additions to the church.

MICHIGAN.

Fulton.—Rev. S. A. Alt, pastor. The Reformed people at this place enjoyed a rare entertainment on Christmas eve. The children rendered their several parts well. The collection for the orphans was nearly $4.

Church News.

☞Stated Clerks of Classes and Pastors will oblige us by sending such Items of News as will be of interest to the Church.

OUR OWN CHURCH.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia.—Reformation Day was celebrated by several of the churches of this city. We had the pleasure of hearing a sermon by the pastor of Christ church, Rev. James Crawford, D.D., on "Tne Characteristics of the Reformed Church." His closed his sermon by saying: "In this Church I was baptized, trained by parents who were members of its communion; taught in its Sunday-school; confirmed by one of its godly ministers; educated in its chief College and Seminary; ordained to its ministry; had spent the best and happiest years of my life in its service. In it I have lived; in it I hope to die, and it is my desire that my children should abide in it and be molded by the teachings of the Heidelberg Catechism."

—Trinity, Rev. C. H. Coon, pastor. At the communion services held on the 18th inst. two additions were made to the membership, making eighty-four since the present pastorate.

Pottsville.—The annual congregational meeting of Trinity church was held on the evening of January 5th. Many members were present. The pastor, Rev. A. R. Bartholomew, in a short address, gave a review of the spiritual condition of the congregation, after which Elder George F. Morgan, secretary, read the financial report. The receipts for all purposes, including the church debt fund, amount to over six thousand dollars. By a unanimous vote the pastor's salary was increased two hundred dollars. A debt of $3,800 has been wiped out. Eight new members were added at the late communion season. The congregation is in a very prosperous condition.

Arendtsville.—Rev. B. F. Bausman, pastor. At the January communions in the Arendtsville charge ten new members were received—three by confirmation, four by certificate of dismission and three by reprofession.

At the Bender's church a Reformed Missionary Society is about to be organized, where before there was a union society. It will begin with a membership of fifty or more members with good prospects for increase.

There will be an Educational Convention at Bender's church on January 23rd, which will inaugurate the movement in Gettysburg Classis for the liquidation of the debt of five thousand dollars on Mercersburg College.

Mt. Pleasant.—First church, Rev. C. R. Ferner, pastor. The winter communion was held on Sunday, the 11th inst. Additions—one by confirmation, five by certificate, two of those were from the Lutheran church. Owing to the inclemency of the weather the attendance was not so large as at former times. Services were held every evening during the week except Saturday, when the services were held in the afternoon. The pastor was assisted on Wednesday evening by Rev. Warden, of the U. P. church.

Anselma.—St. Paul's. The St. Paul's congregation was organized in 1838 by the late Rev. Father Knipe, who served it for a long period, until old age and feeble health compelled him to resign, when he was succeeded by Rev. A. R. Thompson, who served it about two years. Rev. E. D. Wettach, now of Akron, O., served it for about six years. About eight years ago it was in connection with the St. Matthew's congregation, constituting a pastoral charge. A very fine parsonage was built during the pastorate of Rev. Wettach, about midway between the two congregations, making it a very desirable charge. The charge has recently extended a call to Mr. Flook, a member of the senior class in Ursinus Seminary, so that it will soon have a pastor to serve it regularly. The communion services were not largely attended on the 11th inst., in consequence of the heavy rain that fell, making it unpleasant to man and beast to be out in it. The congregation has a neat pleasant church in which to worship. The people are looking forward with pleasure to the time when the new pastor will move in their midst. The communion services were conducted by Rev. George W. Williard, D.D., of Ursinus College and Theological Seminary. G. W. W.

Altoona.—Christ church, Rev. D. S. Dieffenbacher, pastor. The Holy Communion was administered in Christ church, Altoona, on Sunday, January 11. The rain descended all day, yet a large number of the membership were present and communed. Services began on Wednesday evening and continued every evening during the week. On Saturday evening the regular preparatory services were held. Thirteen persons were added to the church—ten by certificate and three by reprofession. The alms amounted to $29.00.

MARYLAND.

Manchester.—The Week of Prayer was observed in Trinity Reformed Church. As a beneficial result, renewed consecration to the great work of the Church is already traceable.

OHIO.

Cleveland.—The first of a series of winter lectures, arranged by Cleveland Chapter 29, Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, of Grace Reformed Church, occurred at the Sherman Club Wigwam, on Wilson Avenue, Thursday evening. The lecturer was John I. Swander, D.D., pastor of the Reformed Church at Fremont, O. Dr. Swander is a man of commanding presence, powerful voice, and an able and eloquent speaker. He held the closest attention of his audience throughout his lecture. The audience was amused with pleasantries, instructed by good advice and ennobling sentiments, and moved by the beautiful tributes Dr. Swander paid the marital relation and the sanctity of the divine institution—home. Marriage and the home were pictured as the true fountain which supplies truth, virtue, honor, nobility, and strength to the Church and to the State. At times Dr. Swander was very eloquent, especially in his summing up of life's conflict and the hope for a home in eternity. The next lecture of the series will be delivered by H. A. Griffin, of the Leader, next Thursday evening on the subject, "Practical Reform in Practical Politics."

KANSAS.

Abilene.—Rev. Abner S. Dechant, pastor. The holy communion was celebrated at Enterprise, December 28th, and in Abilene, January 4th. At the former place twenty-eight members communed and two were received by reprofession. At the latter, forty-five members communed and two were received by confirmation. The offerings for missions at both places amounted to $9.11.

PERSONAL.

It was announced a few weeks ago that the Rev. S. C. Stover would take charge of the mission at Hamilton, Washington. Since then he has decided not to accept the appointment. He will remain in his present charge at Cessna, Pa.

Will You Join the Colony

Now organizing to locate in Maryland between the Cities of Baltimore and Washington. Here are fine farming lands; low in price; adapted to EVERY branch of agriculture; an abundance of pure, soft water; delightful and healthful climate; near to the best markets of the world; unsurpassed railroad facilities, with low freight and passenger rates, with quick time; educational advantages second to none; churches representing almost all denominations; refined and cultured society. Only a few more wanted to complete the Colony, and if you want to join in one of the best opportunities of a lifetime, NOW is the time. Farmers, business men, mechanics, and laborers, there is a chance for all. 100 per cent. profit easily assured in three years. Full information free of charge, furnished by M. V. Richards, Land and Immigration Agent, B. & O. R. R., Baltimore, Md.

PUBLIC SPEAKERS AND SINGERS

Can use "BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" freely, without fear of injury, as they contain nothing injurious. They are invaluable for allaying the hoarseness and irritation incident to vocal exertion, effectually clearing and strengthening the voice. "They greatly relieve any uneasiness in the throat."—S. S. Curry, Teacher of Oratory, Boston. Ask for and obtain only "BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES." 25 cents a box.

The Voice

Is easily injured—the slightest irritation of the throat or larynx at once affecting its tone, flexibility, or power. All efforts to sing or speak in public, under such conditions, become not only painful but dangerous, and should be strictly avoided until every symptom is removed. To effect a speedy cure no other medicine is equal to

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

The best of anodynes, this preparation rapidly soothes irritation, strengthens the delicate organs of speech, and restores the voice to its tone and power. No singer or public speaker should be without it. Lydia Thompson, the famous actress, certifies: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been of very great service to me. It improves and strengthens the voice, and is always effective for the cure of colds and coughs."

"Upon several occasions I have suffered from colds, causing hoarseness and entire loss of voice. In my profession of an auctioneer any affection of the voice or throat is a serious matter, but at each attack, I have been relieved by a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy, with ordinary care, has worked such a that I have suffered very little inconvenience. I have also used it in my family, with excellent results, in coughs, colds, &c."—Wm. H. Quartly, Minlaton, Australia.

Magical Effect

"In the spring of 1853, at Portsmouth, Va., I was prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia. My physicians exhausted their remedies, and for one year I was not able to even articulate a word. By the advice of Dr. Shaw I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and to my surprise and great joy, in less than one month I could converse easily, in a natural tone of voice. I continued to improve and have become since a well man. I have often recommended the Pectoral, and have never known it to fail."—George R. Lawrence, Valparaiso, Ind.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER.

Blanket Department.

The January Reduction Sale is offering exceptional opportunities to purchasers of Blankets.

In addition to those recently advertised we name several numbers, which, in point of value, are the most attractive of our bargain offerings:

10-4 White Wool Blaukets,
Very desirable goods, at $1.85 per pair; reduced from $2 75.

11-4 White Wool Blankets,
Excellent quality, at $2.90 per pair; reduced from $3.75.

11-4 White Wool Blankets,
Superb quality, at $3.50 per pair; reduced from $4 50.

11-4 White Wool Blankets,
Extra heavy, highly desirable, at $4.35 per pair; reduced from $6.00.

11-4 White Wool Blankets,
Fine quality, at $5.00 per pair; reduced from $6 50.

11-4 California Wool White Blankets,
New and beautiful goods, at $6.50 per pair; reduced from $8.50.

Strawbridge
& Clothier,
EIGHTH & MARKET STS.,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE
For Night Sweats
of consumption, gives speedy benefit.

NOTICE.

Harbor Missions at New York: 30 State Street.

All those who may expect relatives or friends from Europe to arrive at the port of New York, and those departing from here to Europe should communicate with our Harbor Misionary, Mr. Paul Sommerlatte, No. 30 State Street, New York City, and he will gladly give them all the advice and assistance possible without any charge. The names of the parties expected from Europe and the name of the ship they will arrive in, should be given to the missionary in time, and steerage passengers should be advised to carry the name of the missionary in sight while landing at New York, because the missionary is always present upon the arrival of steerage passengers in the Barge Office, and will take care of those directed to him.

Convenient lodging, good transportation, railroad and steamship tickets, passes, etc., can also be secured through the aid of our missionary. Address,

PAUL SOMMERLATTE,
30 State Street,
New York City, N. Y.

Beecham's Pills act like magic on a weak stomach.

Acknowledgments.

Beneficiary Education.

Receipts during October and November.

Per Elder C A Shultz, treas of Zion's Cl, First ch of York, 50.00, Paradise chge, 40.00, Kreutz Creek chge, 39 98, Zion's ch of York, 30 49, Shrewsbury charge, 18.25, Grace ch of York, 11.48, Heidelberg ch of York, 10.00, and Dillsburg chge, 8.22,	$208 42
Per Rev J D Miller, treas of Carlisle Cl, Carlisle ch, 49.13, Zion's chge, 44.08, Duncannon chge, 35.32, New Bloomfield chge, 34.00, Mechanicsburg chge, 17.07, Sulphur Springs charge, 12.85, and St Peter's ch of the Landisburg chge, 11.56,	204 01
Per treasurer of Mercersburg Cl, Waynesboro chge, 55.00, St Paul's chge of Waynesboro, 17.00, Shippensburg ch, 11.71, Upton ch, 10 68, Little Cove ch, 5.13, McConnellsburg chge, 5.00, Mont Alto ch, 4.89, and Mercersburg church, 2.80,	112 18
Per Rev Dr F A Rupley, treas of Juniata Cl, First ch of Altoona, 56.93, Martinsburg chge, 24.45, Sulphur Springs chge, 11.00, 2d ch of Altoona, 9 00, and Greenfield chge, 7.00,	108 38
Per Rev Dr J A Hoffheins, treas of Virginia Cl,	100 00
Per Rev J C Bowman, for Gettysburg Classis,	77 00
Per Rev U H Heilman, treasurer of Maryland Cl, Mechanicstown chge, 28.18, 1st ch of Baltimore, 17.10, Grace Mission of Washington, D.C., 11.00, Fairview church, 4.15,	60 43

WM. M. DEATRICK,
Treas. Board of Education.
Mercersburg, Pa., Dec. 1, 1890.

Receipts for Foreign Missions for December.

1890.
Dec. 1—Pennsylvania, Rev John P Stein, Millersville, Advent offerings from Swiegert's Missionary Soc, Rohrerstown,	10 00
Rev J P Stein, personal,	1 00
		$11 00
Rev D C Tobias, Lititz, Pa,		3 00
" 2—Rev P Wienand, Philada, German St Luke's Ref ch,	5 00
Do, do, S S,	6 00
		11 00
Ohio, F Z W Quickherrn, New Knoxville, O, from the estate of Widow Meier, per Wid Habenkantz,		36 00
Rev Jos A Keller, Hartville, O, from Peter Reidinger, Jr,		5 00
" 4—Pennsylvania, Rev Philip Vollmer, Phila German St Paul's Ref ch,		10 00
Rev D W Gerhard, Lancaster, from Miss Soc, Heller's ch,		11 20
Ohio, Rev L Seltzer, Shanesville, O, part of communion col, Shanesville cong,		5 00
Rev P Vitz, Delphos, O, from Children's Mission of congregation in Delphos,		5 00
" 5—Rev P Ruhl, Kenton, O, from Kenton chge,		7 00
" 8—Pennsylvania, Rev D H Leader, Thanksgiving Day col, from Saegerstown cong,		4 50
Rev Jno W Steinmetz, treas Schuylkill Cl, from
St Paul's Memorial ch, Reading, Rev B Bausman, D D, pastor,	300 00
Union Thanksgiving services, Ref churches, Reading,	17 83
St John's Ref ch, Reading, Rev J W Steinmetz, pastor,	16 00
		333 83
" 9—Rev M H Diefenderfer, treas Lehigh Cl, contributed by Mahoning charge, 7.00, Slatington chge, 30.00, Egypt chge, from Miss Eliza Everhart, 1.00,		38 00
Rev C Z Weiser, D D, contributed by a friend,		6 00
Virginia, Rev S R Callender, DD, from Ref cong, Woodstock, Va, paid to defray expenses of a visit to them,		2 00
Do, contributed by a friend in Woodstock,		10 00
Pennsylvania, Rev Jas B Stonesifer, Shellsburg, per Rev S R Callender, D D,		2 27
Rev C Z Weiser, D D, a refund of travelling expenses, Ex Com meeting,		5 00
Rev S G Wagner, D D, St John's Ref cong, Allentown, thanksgiving offering, per Rev M H Diefenderfer, treas Lehigh Cl,		89 52
New York, Rev Jno F Busche, D D, N Y, contributed by Mission and Stuuden,	5 00
Mrs Sophia Graeber,	25 00
		30 00
" 10—Pennsylvania, Rev Wilson F Moore, Catasauqua, contrib by Salem Ref cong,		9 00
" 11—Wisconsin, Rev J F Vergens, Pipersville, Jefferson county, from Ref cong, Pipersville,		5 00
Pennsylvania, Mrs Wm Adolph, from Miss Soc, 1st Ref ch, S S, Phila, for second annual payment for support of "Niimya Takashi, Theo Seminary, Sendai,		30 00
Ohio, Rev C Baum, Lima, from St Paul's Ref ch, Swanton, O, Rev L C Edmonds, pastor,		5 00
Oregon, Rev Elias Bauman, East Portland, Thanksgiving offering,		2 00
Pennsylvania, Elder C A Shultz, treas Zion's Cl, Hameton Union S School, Shrewsbury charge, Rev A F Driesbach,		5 75
" 12—Indiana, Rev F R Schwedes, Terre Haute, from F W Schroer,		1 00
" 13—Pennsylvania, Mrs C T Barnhart, treas W M Soc, Pittsburgh Synod, St Paul's Miss and Aid Soc, Paradise chge, Rev J M Evans,	5 00
Pleasant Unity Miss Soc, J C Shearer, treas,	5 00
Miss Soc, Frieden's, A J Heller, treas, Rev W Lefevre's chge,	8 38
Women's Miss Soc, Amity Ref ch, Myersdale, Mrs Nettie Anthony, treas,	7 50
First Ref ch, Mt Pleasant, Miss Soc, Miss Cora Lowe, sec, for use of lady teacher, Sendai,	10 00
Soc of Christian Workers, 1st ch, Greensburg, Miss Bertie Diefenbacher, treas,	14 12
		50 00
Rev M H Diefenderfer, treas Lehigh Classis,
Egypt chge, per South Whitehall Miss Soc, W R Hofford, DD,	25 00
Jordan chge, Rev E J Fogel, pastor,	100 00
		125 00
Ohio, Rev C Hassell, Ashland, O, from L Scherf,		5 00
Pennsylvania, Rev C Z Weiser, DD, contr by a friend,		5 00
E I Santee, MD, treas Christ Ref ch, Phila,		100 00
Rev Robert C Bowling, treas Clarion Cl, Pa,
Beaver chge, Rev J F Wiant,	6 62
Do, contr by Peter Johnson,	5 00
		11 62
" 16—Jacob K Funck, treas Lebanon Cl, from Rev J Wickert, Shell's cong, 14 00, Jonestown S S, Children's day, 11.00,		25 00
Indiana, Rev J G Steinert, Indianapolis, Women's Miss Soc, 1st ch,		10 00
Nebraska, Rev H B Robrock, Harbine, Neb, from members of Hoffming's cong, viz,
F W Steffen, 5.00, F C Achtmeier, 5 00, W H Lohman, 2.50, A Arpke, 1.00,	13 50
H Stahl, 2 50, A Schnuella, 3.00, A Engelman, 1.00, W Schnuella, 1.00,	7 50
J C Herwig, 1.00, H Walters, 1.00, A J Steffen, 1.00, W Steffen, 1.00, A G Arpke, 50 cts,	4 50
D Lewis, 2.00, P Wolters, 50 cts, J G Weise, 50 cts, F Sandman, 1.00, J Gretzinger, 1.00,	5 00
F Wesenberg, 50 cts, E Stahl, 2.00, W Geike, 25 cts, Paul Wilhelm, 1.00, Rob Arpke, 50 cts,	4 25
		34 75
" 17—New Jersey, Rev Nic Wiers, Milltown, N J, coll by Women's Soc of German Ref ch, St Paul's,		27 00
Pennsylvania, Rev F W Berlemann, Phila, from S S, Salem Ref ch,		15 00
Ohio, John F Rice, from Ref Miss Band of Mineral Point, for Girls' School, Sendai, Japan,		16 50
Frederick Glauser, Esq, New Philadelphia, executor of will of Christina Wenger.		100 00
" 18—Pennsylvania, Rev W A Haas, treas West Susq Cl, Selinsgrove,
Laureltown Ref Miss Society, Mifflinburg charge, Rev L D Steckel,	5 00
Samuel's S S, Beaver Springs chge, Rev Wm Landis,	2 07
Infant class, Christ Ref ch S S, Adamsburg, do,	3 93
		11 00
Ohio, Miss Mary Whiting, supt, Hessville, O, contr by Ref S S,		3 28
Pennsylvania, Rev H Dieckman, Titusville, contr by Women's Soc of St Paul's Ref ch,		14 10
Rev D W Ebbert, Milton, from Women's Miss Soc St John's Ref ch,		10 00
Rev John W Steinmetz, treas Schuylkill Classis,
Olivet Mission, Rev Hy Stoner, pastor,	3 56
2d Ref ch S S, Reading, Rev C F McCauley, DD,	92 00
		95 56
Mrs R Mosier, treas Saegerstown S S, per Rev D H Leader,		5 00
" 20—New York, Rev J F H Dieckmann, Buffalo, Zion's Evang Ref ch, 2.00, Mrs Wiehler, 5.00, a friend, 3.00,		10 00
" 23—Pennsylvania, Jacob K Funck, treas Lebanon Classis, from Mrs Fannie S Brunner, treas of W C Miss Society, Leb Cl,		10 00
From a Lady member 1st Ref ch, Lebanon, Dr. Klopp, for Girls' School,		5 00
New Holland Ref S S, per Mrs M A Wiest, treas,		6 60
Mrs Adaline F Gast, per Rev F A Gast, DD, Lancaster, "Christmas offering,"		5 00
Ohio, Mrs D Baker, treas, from the ladies of Ref Miss Society, Greenville, O,		5 00
" 26—Pennsylvania, Rev C Z Weiser, D D, contr by "D H B," a member,		10 00
" 27—Hon R F Kelker, Harrisburg, contrib of Salem Bible class for the support of "Hiodayu Shimanuki," for the year 1891 Sendai Theol Sem,		60 00
" 29—A Pfromm, sec, Philadelphia Zion's Ref ch,		15 00
Indiana, Rev F R Schwedes, from F W Schroer, Terre Haute,		4 00
" 30—Maryland, Wid Gertrude Oberle, German Immanuel's cong, Baltimore, per Paul C Hauser,		3 00
" 31—New Jersey, H Bange, Egg Harbor City, N J, per Rev H Wiemer,		2 00
Pennsylvania, John Heberlig, Newbury chge, Women's Miss Soc,		7 70
Maryland, Rev E E Weller, Cumberland, Md, a Christmass offering, Hyndman S S,		4 27

JOS L. LEMBERGER, Treasurer.
Lebanon, Pa., Jan. 1, 1891.

MAN'S WEAKNESS.

"Man is but a reed, the weakest reed in nature, but he is a thinking reed. It is not necessary that the entire universe arm itself to crush him. A breath of air, a drop of water suffices to kill him." But, being a "thinking reed," he has been able not only to protect himself from his enemies, but to resist and recover from the attacks of disease and, by combining different elements, to make the forces of nature subservient to his will. Among the most beneficent of these combinations is the remarkable vitalizing agent, Compound Oxygen, which enables the system to resist disease, and also to repair its ravages.

Here are a couple of samples of the hundreds of testimonials contained in our brochure and Quarterly. Send for them and convince yourself. Sent free.

Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"Your Compound Oxygen Treatment has been of incalculable benefit to me in hemorhages and severe lung troubles." J. A. HOLMES, Spring Ridge, La., Sept. 12, 1889. Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"I certainly have great faith in the power of your Compound Oxygen Treatment in lung diseases." JOHN K. CLARK, M.D., Russelville, Ala. Address, Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

DO NOT STAMMER.

Refer to John Wanamaker, Postmaster-General; and George W. Childs, proprietor Philadelphia Ledger. Send for 54-page pamphlet to E. S. JOHNSTON'S Institute, N. E. Cor. 11th and Spring Garden Sts. Phila., Pa.

1888
1889
1877
1883
1884
1880
1881
1890
1886
1885
1879
1882
1887
1878

See it grow!

You won't have to look back far. 1877 was the year when Pearline started in to take charge of washing and cleaning. It was a new idea; people didn't know about it; when they did find out, they were afraid of it.

But look at it now. Every year has been a big advance on the year before—and 1890 a bigger advance than ever. It's the biggest year, against the biggest opposition—smooth-tongued peddlers to fight against, cheap prices and poor quality, prize packages, imitations of all sorts. But Pearline started ahead and has kept there—and now it's farther ahead than ever. A poor thing can't grow like this. A dangerous thing can't. Find out for yourself why Pearline grows; ask some one who uses it. 303 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Beware of peddlers and imitations.

Mention this paper.

Books

New Books every week. Catalogue, 132 pages. free; not sold by Dealers; prices too low; buy of the Publisher, JOHN B. ALDEN, 393 Pearl St., New York.

THE J.P. BUSH M'F'G. Co.
BOVININE

BOVININE

A CONDENSED FOOD

DR. C. W. COMBS, Sup't City Dispensary Indianapolis, writes: "I have used BOVININE in severe cases of Typhoid Fever, and have observed that it sustains the patient's strength better than broths, beef tea, &c., and is better borne by the stomach, being less bulky. Also in cases of Pneumonia and Diphtheria, where its effects are equally well marked; it hastens convalescence, and enables the patient to better resist the disease. The improvement is very noticeable to the patient and relatives. BOVININE Is simply the vital principles of concentrated beef, a highly condensed raw food extract, palatable to the most delicate taste.

Falling of the hair is the result of inaction of the glands or roots of the hair, or a morbid state of the scalp, which may be cured by Hall's Hair Renewer.

Five hundred thousand arrobes of sugar cane, the property of the Benretiro estate, Havana, have just been destroyed by fire.

You wear out clothes on a wash board ten times as much as on the body. How foolish. Buy Dobbins' Electric Soap of your grocer and save this useless wear. Made ever since 1864. Don't take imitation. There are lots of them.

Spring is Coming—Planting Time is at Hand.

If you are thinking of planting Roses, Hardy Shrubbery, Climbing Vines, Bulbs or Seeds of any kind, write The Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., for their New Guide—124 pages beautifully illustrated—free on application. This house is well known as one of the most popular and reliable in the country. They make a specialty of all the Newest and Choicest Roses, New Hardy Plants, New Bulbs, New and Rare Flower and Vegetable Seeds of all best kinds–almost every thing you can need for home planting is offered post-paid to your door. Satisfaction guaranteed. Address The Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., and please mention this paper when you write.

Good for All Three.

The greatest good for the greatest number is the mark aimed at by all reformers, and to reach it secures the greatest acclaim of fame that can be had. It is a good thing for the consumer, for the manufacturer, for the newspapers, when an article of merit is put upon the market, is made known by newspaper advertising, and, through a series of years, proves its worth to lessen labor in millions of homes, enriches its makers, and profits the newspapers. Pearline, the great washing powder manufactured by James Pyle & Sons, New York, has done all this. If it is not making labor easier in your home it is your fault. Something of its history is made plain in an advertisement in another column.

CLINTON H. MENEELY BELL COMPANY,
TROY, N. Y. Manufacture a Superior Grade of
CHURCH CHIME PEAL AND SCHOOL BELLS

Best quality Bells for Churches, Chimes, Schools, etc. Fully warranted. Write for Prices. BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY, VAN DUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY,
BALTIMORE, MD.
Best quality Copper and Tin BELLS for Churches, Schools, &c.
Also CHIMES AND BELLS.
Price and terms free. Name this paper.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N.Y., Bells
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others.

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO.
CINCINNATI, O., sole makers of the "Blymyer" Church, School and Fire Alarm Bells.
Catalogue with over 2200 testimonials.

RIGGS & BROTHER,
Branch Store, 1005 Walnut St., Phila.
Ladies' 14-Carat Gold Watches, $25.
" 14-Carat filled case " 18.
Boys' Silver Watches, $7.00.
Watches and Clocks repaired.

400,000 The largest circulation of any periodical in the world. "The Phila. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies free. CURTIS PUB. CO., Phila., Pa.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS

Over 200,000 ESTEY ORGANS are singing their own praises the world over, as the most reliable organ made for tone, durability and fine finish. The ESTEY PIANO is as thoroughly and carefully made and guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has. If you want a first-class Piano that is sure to please you buy an ESTEY. Lowest prices for cash, or on easy monthly payments.

ESTEY, BRUCE & CO. 18 N. Seventh St. Philadelphia, Pa.

USE FERRY'S SEEDS
BECAUSE THEY ARE
THE BEST.
D. M. FERRY & Co's
Illustrated, Descriptive and Priced
SEED ANNUAL
For 1891 will be mailed FREE to all applicants, and to last season's customers. It is better than ever.
Every person using Garden, Flower or Field Seeds, should send for it. Address
D. M. FERRY & CO.
DETROIT, MICH.
Largest Seedsmen in the world

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE

No more Baggy-Kneed Trousers if you use "the United Service Trousers Stretcher." Price, $1.50.
E. O. THOMPSON, TAILOR, CLOTHIER, IMPORTER, (Sole Agent),
1338 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S SEEDS

Yes our Seeds are THE BEST there is, that's all—none can be better, and if you plant them once, you will want them again, no fear of that. OUR SEEDS, ROSES, especially Roses, Bulbs, Hardy Plants, etc., are known everywhere and sent everywhere postpaid. If you don't know a better place, send your orders to us, but first write for our NEW GUIDE—a valuable Book 124 pp. FREE, and see how much a little money will do. THE DINGEE & CONARD CO. WEST GROVE, PA.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address, T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE TRUST CO.
Capital paid up $1,500,000 Surplus over $100,000
DENVER, COLORADO.
First Mortgage Loans and Gold Debentures.
Loans fully guaranteed. Safe as Government Bonds.
Philadelphia Office, Room 302 Bullitt Building,
ROBT. FORESMAN, Manager.

THE PENN MUTUAL LIFE

Insurance Company issues all approved forms of contracts adapted to every legitimate need, for protection, for investment, and for both; for long or short periods, at the lowest, sure rates.

Its policies are squarely reciprocal, free from ambiguity and objectionable features, absolutely NON-FORFEITABLE and INCONTESTABLE. Send for rates, etc. Home Office, 921 Chestnut St., Phila

---

AMERICAN
Fire Insurance Company,
Nos. 308 and 310 WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA

☞ Send stamp for Catalogue. (Name goods desired.)
BABY CARRIAGES 100 styles. Automatic Brake on all, Free. Adjustable, Reclining and Invalid Wheel Chairs. Factory Prices.
LUBURG MFG. CO. 145 N. 8th St. Philada.

WE MAIL FREE to any address a sample vial of RUBIFOAM for the Teeth. Deliciously flavored.
E. W. HOYT & CO., Lowell, Mass.

SOWING & REAPING
By the Author of Gates Ajar, Song Treasury, etc.
Hymns, Tunes and Carols for the Sunday-school, Prayer, Praise and Gospel Service. Over 15,000 copies sold in advance of publication. 176 pages; beautiful lithograph title, superior in typography, press work, paper, binding and contents. Single copies, 35 cts, post paid. By express, $3.60 per doz., $30 per 100.

Address,
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Most Worthy Books for Purchase

CHOICE AND POPULAR ALTO SONGS.
33 songs—each one a Gem. Price, $1 in heavy paper, $1.25 in bds, and $2 in gilt binding.

THE SONGS OF IRELAND.
A new and carefully revised collection of the best and most celebrated Irish songs. Some of the best melodies in existence, and bright, spirited words. 66 songs. Price, $1 in heavy paper, $1.25 in bds., and $2 in gilt binding.

Choice Song Collections.

SONG CLASSICS. Vol. 1,	50	songs.
SONG CLASSICS. Vol 2,	39	"
SONG CLASSICS. Low Voices,	47	"
CHOICE SACRED SOLOS,	34	"
CHOICE SACRED SOLOS, Low Voices,	40	"
CLASSIC, BARITONE AND BASS,	33	"
CLASSIC TENOR SONGS,	36	"
GOOD OLD SONGS WE USED TO SING,	115	"

Choice Piano Collections.

PIANO CLASSICS. Vol. 1,	44	pieces.
PIANO CLASSICS. Vol. 2,	31	"
CLASSICAL PIANIST,	42	"
POPULAR DANCE COLLECTION,	66	"
POPULAR PIANO COLLECTION,	66	"
OPERATIC PIANO COLLECTION,	19	operas.

Price of Each Book, $1.00. Cloth Gilt, $2.00. All are Valuable Collections of the Best Music.

Churchill's BIRTHDAY BOOK of EMINENT COMPOSERS. A handsome and useful gift, $1.00.

Any Book mailed, post-paid, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY, Boston
J. E. DITSON & Co., 1228 Chestnut St., Phila.

KNABE PIANOS.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
BALTIMORE, 22 and 24 East Baltimore Street,
New York, 148 Fifth ave. Washington 817 Market Space
F. A. NORTH & Co., Sole Agents,
1308 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

ARCHITECTURE
CHAS. W. BOLTON, 1510 Chestnut St., Phila
Sketches of Churches, Public Buildings, Dwellings, etc., furnished gratis. Then, if desired, drawings and specifications will be prepared for a reasonable consideration.

Over 350,000 acres of Choice Farm Lands Failure of crops never known. Best all-the-year climate in the world. Soil adapted to all kinds of farming. Plenty of water. Low prices, and unusually liberal terms. C. E. SIMMONS, Land Com., C. & N.-W. R'y, Chicago, Ill.

Are You Fortified?

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Your health is a citadel. The winter's storms are the coming enemy. You know that this enemy will sit down for five long months outside [illegible] citadel, and do its best to break in and destroy. Is this citadel garrison[illegible]and provisioned? The garrison is your constitution. Is it vigorous or de[illegible]d? How long can it fight without help? Have you made provision for t[illegible]arrison by furnishing a supply of SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Nor[illegible]an Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda? It restores t[illegible]agging energies, increases the resisting powers against disease; cures Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases (especially in Children), keeps coughs and colds out, and so enables the constitution to hold the fort of health. Palatable as Milk.

Dr A H Strickler] 14Feby90

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. All Druggists.

Reformed Church Messenger.

"AS THE TRUTH IS IN JESUS."

VOL. LIX.—No. 5. PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 29, 1891. WHOLE No. 2925.

Entered at the Post-Office, Philadelphia, as second-class matter.

The Reformed Church Messenger.
ISSUED WEEKLY
IN THE INTERESTS OF THE
REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES
BY THE
REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE,
CHAS. G. FISHER, Proprietor,
Office: 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(For Terms, see page 11.)

Editorial Notes.

—Read what Dr. Dubbs has to say about the new book—"In Olden Days beyond the Sea."

—We are indebted to Hon. John Wanamaker, Postmaster General of the United States for the Annual Report of that Department.

—Although we gave a pretty full sketch of the life and work of the late Rev. D. C. Tobias in our last issue, we give place this week to a fuller one by Rev. Jno. P. Stein, who has our thanks for preparing it.

—Many of our subscribers owe for one or more years subscription. They need only look at the little tag on their paper and they will see just how they stand. They will confer a great favor upon the publisher by remitting amount at once.

—All the members of Franklin and Marshall Alumni Association of Philadelphia should not fail to be present at its fifth annual meeting and dinner on Friday, February 6th, 5 P.M., at Hotel Bellevue, this city. A pleasant and profitable occasion is assured. The Executive Committee should have an immediate response to the notices sent out, in order to know how many are to be provided for.

—On Thursday, the 22d inst., the first meeting of the Committee appointed by the late General Synod to prepare a new Constitution for the Church, was held in Lancaster, Pa. Arrangements were made for the prosecution of the work. The composition of the committee insures the preparation of a Constitution that will be acceptable to the whole Church.

—The Boehm's Review is the name of a small paper issued by Rev. Chas. E. Wehler, pastor, in the interests of the old historic church—Boehms. —Emanuel's Reformed Church Visitor is the title of a monthly issued by Rev. Aaron Noll, pastor of that church, Hazleton, Pa. Both of these papers are filled with interesting matter for members of the Reformed Church. It is to be hoped that the reading of them by the members will lead to a desire to read and take the regular church paper.

—The Hymnal compiled by a Committee of the General Synod which is now being stereotyped, will be ready by the latter part of February. The terms upon which it may be had will be announced in a week or two. Our Publication House will be able to fill all orders. We suggest that orders be sent in as early as possible, so that when a supply is on hand there may be no delay in filling them.

—Rev. Jno. A. Peters, D.D., has accepted the call to the Presidency of the Literary Department of Heidelberg University, Tiffin, O., and will enter upon his duties in the month of March, with the opening of the Spring Term. The acceptance of Dr. Peters gives great pleasure to the friends of the University, and at the same time great promise for the future of the institution. He will go to his new field of labor with the good wishes of his brethren in the Church.

—The Board of Trustees of the Theological Seminary, Lancaster, Pa., held a meeting at the College on the 22d inst., to consider the advisability of erecting a new Seminary building for the sole use of that institution. All that is needed is the funds necessary to erect it. Should these be in hand there would be no difficulty to decide where it should be located, either upon the six acres the College has given the Seminary upon its large campus, or upon a newly purchased site near the College grounds. The easiest solution of the whole matter is a response to our repeated call upon some one or ones to offer to erect a Memorial Theological Hall. More than one in the Church can well do this. Should this offer be made, the site would soon be settled upon. The Seminary is greatly in need of a home of its own. Who will give it one?

—The readers of the MESSENGER will with it extend hearty congratulations to William Uhler Hensel, Esq., of Lancaster, Pa., upon his appointment as Attorney General of this State. Attorney General Hensel is a son of Elder Geo. W. Hensel, Esq., of Quarryville. He is an alumnus of Franklin and Marshall College, graduating in 1870. His interest in the welfare of his alma mater is well known, and his remarkable success in whatever he has undertaken so far in life, insures him a bright career to the welfare of the commonwealth and to the advancement of his party, in the new and high office to which he has been called by Governor Pattison. The Governor has had, it seems, a fondness for the sons of Franklin and Marshall College, in that upon his first election he selected Hon. Wm. S. Stenger as his Secretary of State, a graduate of 1858. In both these selections, those who know the honored ones, will readily agree that no better appointments could have been made.

—We are having, no doubt to the edification of our readers, quite a symposium upon the subject of Ministerial Support. Two weeks ago we had an article from X upon the subject. This week we have another, presenting another phase of it. The Lutheran Observer of this city recently gave a number of articles, filling a whole page, upon the same subject. It is right that it should be thus brought before the Churches. No doubt plain words upon it will bring about an awakening to the importance and justness of better salaries being paid to those who minister in holy things and have no other source from which to receive means of support. The Eastern Synod at its late meeting in Reading, Pa., adopted a report prepared by a committee of elders appointed at a previous meeting, and ordered ten thousand copies of it to be printed in English and five thousand in German, which are to be distributed throughout the congregations within the bounds of the Synod. These are now being sent to the Stated Clerks of the Classes and soon will be circulated among the membership. It is to be hoped that so wide a circulation of it will result in a new order of things in reference to the salaries of our ministers.

—When the publication of The Missionary Guardian and the terms upon which it could be had was announced, it was distinctly stated that it would be sent only upon the receipt of the subscription price, 50 cents a year. Some of our friends in sending names which they have kindly secured, have not accompanied them with the cash. In such cases the copies cannot be sent or the names of subscribers entered on the lists. This is done, not that the publisher doubts that those who promise to send the cash later will not make good their promises, but because it would be against the rule adopted and would not be dealing with all alike. Pastors and others who secure subscribers will relieve the publisher of much embarrassment if they will, in sending names, always forward the subscription price with every name. This course will aid the publisher greatly in his efforts to establish the cash principle, at least as far as this new publication is concerned. This, indeed, may lead to all the publications of the Church being sent out only on this principle, i. e.,—to stop sending the paper when the time for which it is paid has expired unless it is renewed by the payment of the subscription for one or more years.

—Have our friends ever read over the terms of subscription for the MESSENGER as given in the Publisher's Department? If they have, have they noticed the offer of six copies being sent for $10.00 to one address. How easy it would be for some one interested in the church paper and those who should read it, to get five persons with him or herself, to join him or her in making up a club, and thus get the paper at a considerable reduction. Will our friends try it? We have often asked pastors and members of the consistory to interest themselves in behalf of the paper. Some kindly and successfully do so, but the great majority pay no heed to the appeals, offers or suggestions we make. Now will not some of our lady readers take the matter in hand? We are sure they will be successful and in this way do good to their fellow-men and to the Church. We know of one little girl that set about securing subscribers for the paper in order to secure the commission given for each new subscriber for the mission fund of her Sunday-school. She met with encouraging success and has a number of others considering the matter. One working thus in every congregation within the bounds of the three Synods at least, would accomplish great things in the way of an increased list of subscribers for the MESSENGER. Do we ask for the help of the "sisters" in this laudable work in vain? We will wait and see.

Poetry.

IF I COULD ONLY KNOW.

"Casting all your care upon Him: for He careth for you."
1 Peter v. 7.

If I could only surely know
That all these things that tire me so
Were noticed by my Lord—
The pang that cuts me like a knife,
The noise, the weariness, the strife—
What peace it would afford!

It seems to me, if sure of this,
Blent with each ill would come such bliss
That I might covet pain,
And deem whatever brought to me
The loving thought of Deity,
And sense of Christ's sweet sympathy,
Not loss, but richest gain.

Dear Lord, my heart shall no more doubt
That Thou didst compass me about
With sympathy Divine,
Thy love for me, O crucified,
Is not the love to leave my side,
But waiteth ever to divide
Each smallest care of mine.

—Selected.

Communications.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

CONCERNING AGED MINISTERS.

NO. II.

Numerically the proportion of ministers from, say, sixty years upward is probably one-sixth of the whole, rather more than less. In this sixth there are some who are entirely disabled for service and others who for various reasons do not render service in their official capacity; but both these classes are also found among those of younger years. From the licentiate on upward every Church has those on its ministerial roll, who are not engaged in direct pastoral work, and it has them of necessity. The list of older ministers is not exceptional in this respect.

There is no Christian denomination in the land which would not feel it as a shock if all its ministers, who are sixty years of age and upward, should retire from active pastoral service on the plea of having done enough and desiring rest. It would make almost one-sixth of our pastoral charges vacant at a stroke. It would take a long time to fill them with new men, and those others made vacant by filling these. And, suppose that it became an inflexible rule for all as they reached the age of sixty to retire, then the difficulty of supplying vacancies would be vastly increased, and there would be a constantly recurring loss, so large in its proportions, that the ability of the Church to make it good by new additions may fairly be questioned. In other words, you take, and keep on taking, from the numerical working force in your pastorates one-sixth; you diminish it by that much as a continuous fact; and the question is whether in any other way the equivalent of this retired force can be secured to the service of our congregations. We doubt if any denomination could stand it; could have such a drain on its service, constant and sure, and go on uncrippled and unharmed.

But there is another consideration of no less weight against the theory that ministers of advancing years, but active and able, should retire of their own volition, and be retired by public sentiment, from the discharge of regular pastoral duties. It is this: These same men are now, in many important respects, better able to discharge the functions of their office than they have ever been in their lives. Some things they could do better when younger; but they could not do near as well then as they can do them now. And it is precisely the more important functions of their office in which they have gained, and the less important in which they have lost. They have not as much inclination as they once had to ride great distances, if their lot be cast in country charges, to visit frequently, to talk on all possible occasions; but, instead, their years have brought them wisdom and their lives are rich in experience. Their influence is greater with men and in their communities than it ever has been, and that for the reason that in their own persons they represent more than they ever did before. That man has lived to little purpose, be he a professional or a business man, who has not gone steadily forward all his life in the acquisition and use of whatever elements make him of account to his fellows. The wisdom, the discretion, the experience, which come with years, are of as much importance, are as much a necessity in the pastorate as in any other sphere of human life. They cannot be safely dispensed with there. And were they dispensed with, by the procedure we have been discussing, the loss to the Church would be exceedingly great; greater by far than the mere numerical loss would indicate.

The Church needs its somewhat aged pastors and it needs them in the pastorate. It cannot afford to do without them, and that in the capacity in which they have been engaged all along. There is where their strength lies. But how can they be retained? How can their service be kept available? Two things have often occurred to us as of material account in this matter, whatever other things may also have weight.

One of these is the assistant pastorate. It is one of the things that are coming, and coming to remain. It will come to help where the labor in a congregation or charge is too much for one pastor. It will come to help where there is no real need for the multiplication of congregations and church edifices, with their costly contents, but where, nevertheless, in the one great congregation and thoroughly-furnished church there is work for two or more men. The Roman Church understands this matter thoroughly and acts most effectively on it. Our own Church has the custom in Europe, wherever it has the ability and freedom of action. We are having a fair beginning in this country, and it is one of the most favorable signs of the times among us, that charge after charge, and congregation after congregation, where there is actual demand for it in the work required, is calling an assistant pastor, and is thus retaining as senior pastor, the man whose labor, influence and character, during a long course of years, have probably made, in large part, the charge or congregation what it is. In nine cases out of ten it is a wise proceeding, as well as a just one.

The other thing to which we have referred is this. The Christian has need of more worship and less preaching and lecturing than is customary. Let no one take fright at this statement. It is simply the affirmation of what is taking place on every side in our general Christian life. The old sermon, one hour long, finds little favor. The minister is to speak, and speak frequently; but he is expected to speak briefly and to the point. The worship part of all our religious services has been materially increased. Whatever the forms are, they are growingly more varied, more numerous, more comprehensive in their distinctly devotional aspects. The sentiment is gaining in our congregations that Christian people ought to go to Church to worship, to take themselves an active part in the worship which is brought to God there. And our facilities for so doing have greatly multiplied in the way of singing, chanting, responsive reading of Scriptures and responses in prayer. As this conviction and this habit grow in the community, there will be much less need for the minister's being on his feet all day, and his talking till the mind wearies and the tongue tires. His services will be efficient for years longer.

WYOMING.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

WHY NOT PAY THE PASTOR PROMPTLY?

Under the above head we offer the following, believing that not a few ministers throughout the Church will find it true to their own experience. For who has not noticed at the annual meetings of Classes, that oft-repeated reply of the elder to the question, "Has the temporal contract between pastor and people been fulfilled?" And the elder answers, "Only in part." Many charges and consistories are inexcusably negligent in the prompt payment of their pastor's salary. They have extended a call to him to become their pastor, and promise him, along with their attention, love and obedience, a stipulated sum of money yearly. In most cases it is scarcely sufficient to enable him to live comfortably. It is usually agreed to pay him quarterly. The pastor is often a poor man, with nothing but this promised salary to live on.

Moreover, it is not unfrequently the case, that he has considerable of a debt resting on him. It has cost him $2000 to $3000 to secure his education, a part of which he had either to go in debt for, or abandon his design to become a minister. When he enters upon his work, he is offered a salary of $600—more or less. If he desires to get married, his debt is augumented by the cost of going to housekeeping; and if Providence has cast his lot in a country charge, he has the additional expense of the purchase of a horse and buggy. With these and the by no means inconsiderable cost of daily living to meet, is it a wonder that he should have to look eagerly to the expiration of the time when the amounts promised him are due? And is it a wonder that he should then feel a pang of keen disappointment to have his officers come with the half, or less, of what is due him and, with apparent unconcern say, "It is all that was paid in?"

The pastor has struggled through the quarter somehow, borrowing or buying on trust, and promising, on the strength of the written promise made by the charge to him, that he will pay at the end of that time.

But the charge has failed to keep its promise, and he cannot do this, so he must either go to his creditors with a sense of humiliation and excuse his default or be harassed with the thought that he is likely considered as a man of reckless promises. We have no doubt all such trouble begetting arrearages could be fully avoided, if officers—elders as well as deacons—had a proper sense of all that is involved in the matter. They should try to feel that it is no light matter to suffer a congregation thus to deal with their pastor's salary.

Sometimes congregations themselves [illegible] and have their work hindered for years by an attempt finally to make up a heavy arrearage on pastors' salary. Even if the pastor be in no immediate need of his salary it is wrong not to pay him promptly at the time agreed on. And it is a cruel wrong not to pay him promptly, if he be a poor man with a salary scarcely sufficient when it is paid.

Some pastors try to remedy the evil by occasionally lecturing the people about it from the pulpit. To say the least, this is a deplorable practice. One which we think is wholly beneath the dignity of the pulpit and beneath the minister's office. The pastor should be given what has been promised him without even having to ask for it, much less having to drum the people up from the pulpit about it. Surely if people would try to appreciate what a minister's life means, they would not permit him to suffer such annoyances from an unpaid salary, as he often does. In the first place, they should think of what it means for the minister. That it means he has sacrificed a large sum of money to fit him for his place. That it means usually continuous and wearing labor while in the pastorate, and eventually to have to retire from the active field, in many cases, having been unable to save anything from his meagre income to support him the few remaining years of his life.

In the second place they should think of what it means for them. Namely, that he is not a man hired for so much wages, paid according to the work he does, but is a minister of Christ, pointing them to treasures above price. That no amount of money they could lavish on him would be an equal return for the unsearchable riches of the Gospel of salvation he labors to advance them in. In the name of all charity and fairness then, ought he not to receive the temporal help promised him, and receive it promptly when due?

For Reformed Church Messenger.

FELLOWSHIPS.

A REPLY TO "SAMEK."

In an article on "Fellowships" in the MESSENGER of September 25th, referring to the Professorship in the Seminary at Lancaster, I made the following statement: "Where, throughout our entire denomination, in case of a vacancy, have we a man to step in and fill any one of these professorships satisfactorily? A newly elected professor will be handicapped for years by reason of the fact that pastoral work with its multitudinous and onerous duties admits of limited specialization in study." In your issue of December 25, I am taken to task for these statements by a writer who signs himself "Samek." In essence his arguments are, first: That my remarks are not very complimentary to the earnest and faithful labors of Drs. Nevin, Schaff, Harbaugh and Wolff, men who filled theological chairs in the Seminary; and secondly, that neither the precedent of former years, nor the recent action of the Potomac Synod in the matter of electing new professors will bear me out in my statements.

In the first place, it would be well for "Samek" to note that preaching and teaching are totally different things. The latter is a profession just as much as is the former. Drs. Nevin, Schaff, Harbaugh and Wolff labored as their first duty, to make preachers for the Reformed Church and not teachers for its Seminary. Consequently, the remarks in question cannot be uncomplimentary to the work of these professors.

In the second place, "Samek" asks, "What did the Church do, before these men now holding positions were called to these places, when chairs in the Seminary became vacant?"

They went into the ranks of the active ministry and elected men to fill the vacancies. So far, so good. Let us, however, permit the testimony of these men now holding positions certify as to whether they were able to fill the positions satisfactorily. Dr. F. A. Gast, Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Theology, says, "It took me fully a year after my election to get my Hebrew freshened up, and it took at least five years, after the hardest kind of preparation and study, before I was fully equipped to go ahead with all the branches in my department."

Dr. T. G. Apple, Professor of Church History and N. T. Exegesis, in interview, said, "Your position is right. We haven't a man in our denomination who could step in and at once fill a vacant professorship satisfactorily. It took me several years to get fully equipped for my duties as a professor."

Dr. E. V. Gerhart, Professor of Systematic and Practical Theology, says, that at the beginning of his carreer as a teacher he met with the same difficulties which confronted his colleagues. Dr. Gerhart is heartily in favor of the Fellowship system, and wishes it to be established in the Lancaster Seminary.

Again, "Samek" says: "At the last meeting of the Potomac Synod, what was done, when the newly endowed Chair in the Seminary was to be filled, but go (note the English) into the ranks of the ministry and select a suitable person for the work?" May I ask, what alternative there was other than to elect a man from another Seminary, or from another denomination? Brother Bowman, the newly elected professor, himself feels the need of the Fellowship system at Lancaster; for was he not the first to discuss the question in the columns of the MESSENGER? Furthermore, Brother Bowman realizes that he is unable to step in and fill his new position satisfactorily from the start. As we understand it (we trust he will pardon the liberty we take with his name,) he intends first to visit Andover, Hartford, Union, Princeton and other leading Seminaries to get methods and ideas. After that is accomplished he will come to Lancaster and work himself gradually into his duties, teaching only a few subjects the first year.

In the closing paragraph of "Samek's" article is this sentence: "We have men who are now engaged in pastoral work who have ripe experience and who could fit themselves to teach and to instruct and properly prepare any young man for the ministry, no matter from what college in the land he may hail." Now suppose there was a vacancy in the teaching force of the Seminary, and one of these men whom "Samek" has in mind should be called upon suddenly to fill the vacant Chair; if he was able to fill the Chair satisfactorily, why does "Samek" speak of him as one "who could fit himself to teach and to instruct," etc? The point of the whole argument, as admitted by "Samek" himself in the sentence quoted, is that a man elected from the ranks of the ministry must do a vast deal of preliminary study before he can fill his new position satisfactorily. The Fellowship system, by its privilege of specialization, would do away with a good part of this preparation, since the newly elected professor would have gone over many of his subjects, and thoroughly too, the first year after his graduation from the Seminary.

"Samek," evidently, does not like the idea of a Fellowship system. He thinks a Fellow is nothing more than a "theorizing graduate." He also does not hesitate to say that the writer "knows little about our ministry and less of the literary and theological ability found among the ministers of the Reformed Church." These are not points immediate to the question at hand; therefore, we pass them by. We might suggest, however, that it would help him to get rid of his use of sarcastic personalities if, the next time he writes, he does not seek cover behind a non de plume.

WILLIAM MANN IRVINE.

Lancaster, Pa.

To see the light of God and to choose the darkness is the most helpless condition into which any one can fall. It is probably that which is meant by Christ as the sin against the Holy Ghost, for which there is no forgiveness.—Donald McLeod, D.D.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A FEW MORE WORDS ON AN INTERESTING SUBJECT.

Our esteemed correspondent, W. R., in a recent issue of the MESSENGER, seems again by turns to admit and to question the accuracy of our testimony as to Dr. Nevin's views on women preaching. The quotations on this subject which we ventured to present from the pages of the old Mercersburg Review are, of course, admitted; but the views of the good old Doctor, as given in the course of conversation in our hearing, are still considered by our worthy critic to be somewhat questionable, especially because they seem so remarkably apposite to the matter in hand, as if they had been especially manufactured to suit the occasion; and also because they do not reproduce the precise emphasis and intonation as well as the exact words of our venerable preceptor—a requirement which, it seems to us, no reporter, whether of matters sacred or profane, could comply with, the writers of Scripture themselves not excepted. The exact words may, indeed, come within the scope of a reporter's power, and to some extent, also the emphasis, though even this is ordinarily a difficult matter to compass; but how about the intonation? Without the use of a phonographic apparatus we should really have to give it up—and unfortunately we had no such instrument conveniently at hand at the time the conversation referred to was heard. However, we had our ears with us at the time, and our hearing was good, and our memory has been tolerable.

Moreover, our worthy correspondent should do us the justice to remember that we did not originally set out to give the exact words, emphasis and intonation of our venerable preceptor on the occasion when his views on the subject were given. All that we professed to do, as we very distinctly stated at the outstart, was to give the substance of what Dr. Nevin said in our hearing. The readers of the MESSENGER may for themselves judge whether our report of what was then said is, or is not, in substantial agreement with the views of Dr. Nevin, as published in the Mercersburg Review for November, 1850, and as re-produced in the columns of the MESSENGER under a recent date. To ourselves it certainly does seem that there is a very close agreement between the two, in substance that is, and notwithstanding the singular declaration that we have not done the impossible by reproducing the emphasis and the intonation with which these views, as reported by us, were originally given.

Now, we have not adduced the teachings of Dr. Nevin as being the views of an infallible authority. We have simply referred to the views of this most eminent theologian, as we would consult any other most able commentator on holy Scripture, as to the meaning of any passage upon which we might desire information. And we do believe the views of so good and eminent a theologian as Dr. Nevin certainly was, by the confession of all, ought to carry great weight, and should not be set aside, except when they have been clearly shown to be wrong or not in harmony with the Scripture itself.

Neither have we allowed ourselves to attribute to our good friend, W. R., views which he does not hold. We have not the slightest doubt that in many regards he is in full accord with Dr. Nevin, his teacher, as well as our own, on the subject of women preaching, though we may be pardoned for questioning whether Dr. Nevin, were he still living, would sanction some of the positions of our worthy brother. On this point, at least, there seems to us an important disagreement between the two, this namely, that W. R. holds (having himself so said) that the words of St. Paul in 1 Corinthians xiv. 34, were only "a temporary rule based upon local and temporary circumstances," and were designed to apply only "to the simple Corinthian congregation," whereas we know that Dr. Nevin held (having ourselves heard him say so) that those words of the Apostle St. Paul were not based upon the temporary circumstances of the Corinthian congregation, but upon the constitutional differences between man and woman, and are therefore to be regarded as of binding authority for all ages and times. This we know to have been the view of Dr. Nevin upon the passage under discussion, our worthy critic's repeated disparagement of our testimony to the contrary notwithstanding.

But quite apart from what Dr. Nevin held or said upon this subject, it seems to us perfectly plain that the words of St. Paul in 1 Corinthians xiv. 34, in reference to women speaking in the churches cannot be fairly interpreted as being "a temporary rule, based upon local and temporary circumstances," nor yet as having been designed to apply only to "the simple Corinthian congregation."

That they were not designed to apply only to that particular congregation appears to us to be plain from the passage itself, as well as the connection in which it stands. As another has said, "The Apostle here expressly declares that his instructions are not specific or applicable to that one Church only. He speaks not of Corinthian women, but of women as such. He censures the Church at Corinth for introducing a practice which was unknown elsewhere. 'What! came the word of God out from you?' Is the Church at Corinth the Mother Church? Was it first established, or has it been alone in sending out the word of God? You have adopted customs which are unusual. You have permitted women to speak in a manner unknown to other churches."

It is worthy of note that, in the use of this passage, that thirty-sixth verse is not often quoted, nor even considered; and yet, as any one will notice who will be at the pains to read the whole passage over carefully, it has a most decided bearing upon the interesting and important question whether the Apostle's prohibition, as here given, was designed to be confined only to that "simple Corinthian congregation."

Neither is it well, in the consideration of this passage, to overlook the force of the thirty-seventh verse, in which the Apostle states the ground and authority of his claim to establish the customs of the Church, stating that his words are "the commandments of the Lord," and may be disputed by any man at his peril: concerning which words Dean Alford says, "No more direct assertion of inspiration can be uttered than this."

In considering this passage of Scripture, with the sincere purpose of ascertaining what was the meaning of the Apostle, it should not be forgotten, either, that the prohibition addressed at this place to the Church at Corinth is repeated in 1 Timothy ii. 12–14, and in such manner as to make it plainly impossible to restrict its application to any particular Church whatsoever. If we should grant (which we do not) that St. Paul, in the passage in Corinthians, designed that the prohibition there set forth should apply only to that particular church at Corinth, then to what particular church or congregation, at Corinth or elsewhere, were the words in 1 Timothy ii. 12–14 intended to apply? Were they designed to apply only to the church at Ephesus, of which St. Timothy at the time had charge? In the entire absence of any indication whatsoever, so far as we can see, that these words were intended to be so limited, and seeing every reason for believing them to have been of the nature of general instructions to St. Timothy, and as reflecting the general custom of the Apostle St. Paul in the management of all the churches he had established, we cannot help but regard them as being of force for the whole Christian Church in all ages and times—unless we are to suppose that the Epistles of St. Paul, having been originally written to certain particular churches, have no force or significance for any other churches beyond those to which they were specifically addressed—a position which, we think, scarcely any one will be willing to assume.

Neither do we believe that the words in Corinthians or in Timothy imply a temporary restriction "based upon the local and temporary circumstances" of a single congregation, whether at Corinth or at Ephesus. There is not the slightest evidence, so far as we can see, in these Epistles of St. Paul, that the prohibition was based either upon the local customs of these churches, or upon the secluded position which women held in Greek society generally; but on the contrary there is very decided evidence that the prohibition was based upon the constitutional differences between man and woman instituted by the Creator Himself, differences which are not local and temporary, but universal and permanent. When St. Paul wrote to St. Timothy, "I suffer not a woman to teach, or to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence," he could very easily have assigned as a sufficient reason for such a restriction, the well-known position of woman in Greek society, and the danger of prejudicing the Gospel by doing violence to local and temporary social customs; but there is not the slightest suggestion of such a reason for the prohibition. On the contrary, quite another reason altogether is assigned, namely, the divinely-appointed relation of the sexes. "For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman, being deceived, was in the transgression"—words for which no one need offer any apology, since they are the words of God's inspired Apostle. This is the ground of the prohibition, and we submit that it is not one which can be limited to any particular church or to any particular period in the history of the Church. There may be a way of getting over or around these words, in the spirit of gallantry, but it seems to us that so long as we hold to the inspiration of the Apostle St. Paul, they must stand unquestioned.

Our worthy correspondent has raised quite a number of side issues into which we have neither time nor disposition to follow. He has also given us quite a number of illustrations, the relevancy of some of which, at least, we must confess we cannot at all see. We shall make no effort, consequently, to reply to them. One difficulty, however, which he raises as a stone of stumbling in our way, we shall refer to briefly, and but briefly.

He challenges us to account for the right of women, everywhere commonly granted—and no where more cheerfully or more fully than in the congregation we have the honor to serve—to teach in the Sunday-school, to sing in the choir and to join in the worship of the sanctuary, assuming that from our position we can make no room for these but must, of necessity, regard them as direct violations of the Aposle's words, "Let your women keep silence in the churches. I suffer not a woman to teach."

Now, to this it might be sufficient to answer that St. Paul evidently could not have forbidden things of which he knew nothing, and that as he had never heard of Sunday-schools, or church choirs and methods of worship of our modern kind, he could not have designed to forbid them. But, aside from this, we hold that St. Paul was not forbidding anything of the sort. What he did forbid was, not that woman should take no part whatever in the service of God's house, but that she should not assume the right of public instruction. As we look upon the subject, it was not so much the mere matter of speaking that was forbidden, as of public speaking; not so much a matter of teaching, as of public and official teaching. It was plainly "public exposition," as Robertson calls it, or "officiating publicly in the congregation" as Conybeare and Howson, or "public addresses," as Ellicott expresses it. As we look upon it, it was plainly public exposition and exhortation as a leader and guide that the apostle contemplated,—or, as we should in these days say, preaching. We are perfectly aware that the functions of the ministry were not clearly distinguished in the Apostolic churches, and that the religious services of the early Christians were not conducted precisely as are our own; but we do know, both from the New Testament itself and from the writings of "the Fathers," that preaching was a chief feature of the service. And we hold that it was preaching, if not in our full modern sense of the word, then at least in the full early-church equivalent for it, that St. Paul forbade to woman. Our worthy correspondent declares that the question is not at all concerning women preaching, and forewarns us that we shall be "frivolous" if we so maintain. Well—we do so maintain; and we feel the more comfortable in so doing that we find ourselves in a very large and highly respectable company of serious commentators, every one of whom, it seems, is chargeable with like frivolity. We hold that it is a question precisely of women preaching and virtually nothing less than this, and not at all a question whether women shall open their lips in the churches or make any articulate sound whatsoever. To our mind it seems frivolous to suppose that St. Paul designed to forbid women to take part in the worship of the Church. It was not worship that was forbidden,—it was "teaching." "I suffer not a woman to teach," is the language: and in the original the words "to teach" are emphatic, as shown by their position in the sentence. The meaning seems to us to be, to teach in the public assemblies of the church, or as we say, to preach. We may be wrong in our judgment, but it seems to us that "teaching a class in Sunday-school" is not public instruction; it is not "teaching" in the sense in which the apostle employed the term; neither is singing in the choir, nor joining in the hymn, nor taking part in the responses of the service. From our standpoint we have no difficulty whatever in making room for these, as well as for many other methods in which Christian women serve the Master in these days. Did we hold that St. Paul literally forbade woman to open her lips at all in the church, we should be compelled to take the position of our esteemed correspondent, and say that this rule of St. Paul's was only a temporary regulation designed for that one particular Corinthian congregation alone. Whether he has been led to assume that position by the difficulties he himself suggests, we do not know: but we do not believe that the position that St. Paul's prohibition was a temporary rule, and designed only for the Corinthian congregation, can be the true one.

The whole matter resolves itself at last into this: not whether woman shall serve the Master in such spheres of usefulness as may, in the course of providence be thrown open to her; not whether she may teach in Sunday-schools, sing in choirs and read essays before missionary societies, but whether she shall preach. There is no evading that point. Our esteemed correspondent says that if women wish to preach, why, let them preach. He evidently sees nothing in God's word forbidding it. We do. And we see it not only in the Pauline Epistles but at many other places as well. "There is not in the book of the Acts of the Apostles a single instance in which any woman was ordained to any office or took any public part in its instruction or government." Nor can it be overlooked that no woman was chosen amongst the twelve apostles,—a fact which is the more remarkable forasmuch as the women who followed the Master, being "last at the cross and first at the tomb" possessed one qualification for the work of preaching the Gospel, which must be considered as far out-weighing all other qualifications which any women in any subsequent age of the Church could possibly possess, viz.: "Eye-witness." They, too, as well as the holy apostles themselves "were eye-witnesses of these things," and so were splendidly qualified for the work of public testimony in the Apostolic churches, and presumably far better qualified for such work than any most highly cultured women in any subsequent day could be; and yet not one of them was chosen as a public official and herald of the Cross. The influence of this significant fact upon the mind of St. Paul cannot be well overlooked, nor can the significance of it for our own day be ignored without, among other consequences, working harm to woman herself, woman's rights here as often elsewhere being the most palpable of woman's wrongs.

But enough. This whole subject has been again and again discussed pro and con. Probably as strong a presentment as can be made on the one side appeared in the Homiletic Review several years ago, by a writer of no less ability as a debater than Miss Frances Willard; and perhaps no more keen and crushing reply could be made to her argument than that which appeared in the same magazine the next month, from the pen of Dr. Henry Van Dyke the elder. We would recommend all who are interested in the subject to read those articles. "We shall be sorry if any reader of this article shall infer from it that we are insensible to the excellency or jealous of the legitimate influence of women in their appropriate sphere as defined by the word of God and the constitution of their own nature." With Dr. Van Dyke, also, we can truly say, "We have no apology to offer for these words (of the Apostle Paul's). For whatever else they forbid or permit, they certainly do prohibit women from assuming the office of the Christian ministry. The real scholarship of the Church has always so understood them. And, moreover, the great majority of women, especially of those who reverence their husbands and are loved by them even as Christ loved the Church, bow to their authority, while their own womanly instincts confirm the wisdom of the teaching. And so we believe it will always be." H. M. K.

Easton, Pa.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

UNIFICATION OF MISSIONS.

To place our Reformed Home Missions under one controlling power is what "Unification of Missions" means. This idea presupposes that our domestic missions are not yet unified. It does not mean, in my mind, that we are obliged to have only one Board. There are other civil governments in the United States besides the one at Washington; yet Washington governs each State through a Government of its own, and by itself created.

First, District Synods formed themselves in our Church. Afterwards the General Synod was organized; and that, not for the purpose of annihilating the District Synods, but for the purpose of governing them.

The missionary machinery of our Church must be put on the same basis, and the General Synod's Board must be the engineer.

The general grows out of the particular or particulars; yet must the particular remain. Otherwise there would be no necessity for the general. The particular must not only remain, but must have its rights respected. The particular rights stand in the general rights. The general, however, governs the particular. The particular is the free servant of the general. Each congregation, Classis and District Synod ought to have a Mission Board, the General Board infusing missionary enthusiasm into all the Mission Boards, so that every pastor and member could become liberal by giving to the Lord. ANON.

Boyertown, Pa.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

ORPHANS' HOME COLUMN.

BY REV. T. M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

Among the most efficient causes which help to support our work are the sewing societies in various congregations. As we have our work systematized at present they need not work without a definite object. Formerly the societies, without knowing just what was wanted, would sew anything that they might think would be of use in the Home, and frequently several societies would engage in the same kind of work, thus supplying more of one article than was needed. Now the societies generally write to the Superintendent and ask what is most needed. The officers at the Home knowing on what other societies are already engaged and what is still wanted will at once send measures or patterns such articles as can be used to best advantage. Thus the society works with a specific aim and our family is supplied with just what is needed. Many thanks for this assistance.

It is a matter of regret that we have no means to secure a music teacher for our drum corps. Some of our boys have a good start in playing the piccoloes and flutes, but just now we are out of funds. Several years ago we started a birthday fund and in the course of time raised about $65. This money was used to buy instruments and to give the boys instruction last winter, but just now, when they could make rapid progress, we are without a teacher. We cannot draw on our regular treasury—we need that money for food and clothes, but if a few of our friends who like instrumental music, such as boys can make, would send us five or ten dollars apiece for this purpose, it would not only be highly appreciated, but would do good in its own way to the boys and be of general benefit to the Home.

The first contribution made in response to the suggestion in the MESSENGER some time ago, to the girls' supply of fancy work, comes from Mrs. Harper, of Bellefonte, Center Co. Next summer on "Bethany day" when there is to be a grand reunion of Reformed people here at the Home, the girls' society will have a counter at which will be offered for sale fancy and small, useful articles. Our girls make many things but experience proves that more could be sold than they can make. The money realized from the sale of these articles is to be devoted to furnishing the proposed new girls' building. The Society, composed of the Home girls, under the direction of the matron, already has over $100 in the treasury towards this object. They expect to largely increase this amount next year and cordially invite their friends throughout the Church to co-operate with them by sending such articles as could be readily disposed of. Some of the Church societies have taken the matter up and propose to help in this work. Contributions, whether from societies or individuals, will be thankfully received.

Missions.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

BY REV. A. C. WHITMER, SUPERINTENDENT OF MISSIONS.

A SMALL WORD LEFT OUT.

In my "Missionary Notes" of January 15th, in reference to the transfer of the Pacific Coast missions, is the sentence:

"We do feel justified in transferring our missions in Oregon and Washington."

The little word "not" was left out. Of course, the printer did this. Printers often do dreadful things. The Board said, "We do not feel justified;" and with this correction the reader will know what was done.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL OFFERINGS AT EASTER.

The Board of Missions again asks the Sunday-schools in the Eastern and in the Potomac Synod to give us their offerings during the Easter season.

For several years, and especially for two years past, our treasury has been very greatly helped by the Easter offerings of the Sunday-schools.

The Superintendent lately sent to each pastor in these Synods a sample copy of the "Easter Greeting" of our Board for distribution in the Sunday-schools, offering to send as many copies as were needed, asking only that orders be sent in by return mail, so that he might know how many to have printed. Many pastors have not, at this writing, ordered any; but it is earnestly hoped that the children will nevertheless be asked to bring Easter offerings for this work.

It would be a good thing to have all the Sunday-schools throughout the whole Church at Easter lay their united offerings upon the altar of God for Home Missions; and a large income from this source would be one result if the Synods and Classes would direct and encourage their schools to make Easter the great Missionary Day of the year.

Brethren, why not fix upon this day and associate Home Missions with it, just as the Orphan Home interest is associated with Christmas?

But, to return to the matter just now demanding attention, we beg our pastors and elders to bring this matter before their schools early in February, explaining to them the meaning and necessity of the effort, telling them how to earn or secure money for this purpose, and excouraging them to offer sacrifices of thankfulness.

Last year a great many "tens" were raised in the schools, and the Classes will do so again, if they are asked. Our warm-hearted young people will give large sums if properly challenged and taught.

And will not this have a blessed effect upon the school? 1) It helps to magnify the Easter festival; 2) It makes the children feel that they are a part of the Church, doing her work as well as enjoying her blessings; 3) These Easter offerings will awaken such an interest in Home Missions as nothing else will.

"But my schools are not to open at Easter," says one.

Very well; but the children's hearts are open and your congregation is open. Promise the children a special service at Easter, and call upon them to prepare for it and bring their offerings. You will without doubt have a large turn out, and great good will come of it.

Or, if this is not to your mind, then wait until your schools are open, and at Whitsuntide make the effort. But an Easter effort is better, when so many thousands are engaged in the work.

Let every pastor see that his children in some way during the Easter season join with the thousands of our children in a thank-offering for Home Missions.

The Family.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE YOUNG PROPHETESS:

A TALE OF THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE.

BY REV. R. LEIGHTON GERHART.

CHAPTER V.

IN MY LADY'S CHAMBER.

The next day was another of bustle and excitement. John of Cologne with his associates had decided to remain and rest a day at the castle. Serena and Otho, their constant attendants, moved about with them among the throngs of children, listening to the wondrous stories of visions and revelations which many had to relate, and the enthusiastic hopes which all expressed of victory to be won in the Holy Land.

Serena was a good deal moved when she heard that Otho had been enrolled as one of the Crusaders. Though John pleaded and argued with her to go with them, she would give no definite answer; the attractions of the Crusade did not appear in a light sufficiently strong to her unspiritual, though strongly ambitious heart, to lead her to undertake the journey. That night, however, a conversation held with her tire-woman, gave a novel turn to her thoughts, and aided greatly in bringing her to a final determination.

It was the custom of this woman, named Matilda, who tenderly, but far from wisely, loved Serena, to entertain her, in the quietness of her chamber, with all kinds of talk, sometimes serious and sometimes wholly light and trivial. Apart from the pleasure found in the privilege of being allowed to talk freely, it was Matilda's chief desire to relate the news of the day, humor and flatter her young mistress, and at times banish the irritability which, when fatigued, the young girl was apt to suffer from, and very apt to visit upon the head of her devoted tire-woman. This evening the thoughtless talk was to aid in bringing about results that Matilda would gladly have changed when it was too late.

"What sayest thou?" inquired Serena, not quite comprehending a remark addressed to her, as, seated in a great chair before a crackling fire, she allowed herself to be prepared for bed.

"Each hair of thine head," returned the woman, repeating her remark with a few changes, "is like a thread of gold; and each thread shall bind a heart to thee; and thou hast ten thousand—nay, many times that."

"Thinkest thou so? thinkest thou so?" was the self-gratified reply.

"Thine eyes are like sapphires that shine like diamonds: and when thou turnest them upon men, they will forget the stars shining in heaven," and as she spoke, the tire-woman swept the brush through the long, yellow hair of the young girl.

"Matilda!"

"Well, my lady?"

"Thou art a great flatterer," with a look of pleasure—"but what dost thou think of this young leader—John of Cologne they call him, do they not?"

"He shall be King of Jerusalem, my lady," answered the woman, assuming the role of fortune-teller more completely,—one that she was, indeed, only too fond of taking.

"King of Jerusalem! How knowest thou?"

"He hath it in his face," with quiet conviction.

"I know not much of his face, but he hath a pleasant voice, and almost persuaded me of the truth of all he said."

"I noted his face and I noted his voice, too; and I saw—" but with this the tire-woman paused, as though hesitating to say more.

"What didst thou see?" cried Serena, impatiently, after waiting a moment for the sentence to be finished.

"I saw—" but again the woman paused.

"What didst thou see? what didst thou see? I like not such speeches—speeches that leave one in doubt. I like them not."

"I saw this same John of Cologne look at thee, my lady," was the soft and insinuating answer.

"And pray, what of that? I saw him look at thee, and I saw him gaze at the fire, and I saw him scan the wainscoting, and I saw him look at the tapestry. What of that? what of that?" and the girl laughed merrily.

"But not as he looked at thee, my lady."

"And how did he look at me?"

"Oh—oh—he looked at thee—he looked at thee—so—so—so," said Matilda, with charming uncertainty.

"He looked at thee; he looked at thee; oh—so—so," mockingly rejoined Serena; "and is that all thou canst say?"

"He looked at thee, as the young knights look at the fair ladies they would die for," replied the tire-woman.

"Truly, truly, Matilda?"

"Ay, truly."

"I think not so."

"Nay, nay, I made no mistake."

"Well, well, it may be; though I saw it not, neither do I care. Ah, me, how these men weary us, Matilda!" and for a few moments the girl gazed into the fire. At length, rousing herself, she inquired, with an assumed air of indifference:

"Who shall be Queen of Jerusalem?"

"I cannot tell certainly, but I can tell thee what she is like."

"What is she like?"

"She is like to one with long, golden hair and sapphire eyes; and she hath an 'n' in her name?"

"Is there an 'n' in my name?" was the wondering inquiry, for as was commonly the case with ladies and gentlemen in that day, Serena could neither read nor write.

"Ay, my lady, the letter before the last is an 'n.'"

"And sayest thou, I shall be Queen of Jerusalem?"

"Nay, I said not so, my lady."

"What didst thou say?" disconcertedly.

"I said the Queen of Jerusalem was like to one with long, golden hair, who hath sapphire eyes and an 'n' in her name."

"Matilda?"

"Well, my lady."

"Where is this Holy Sepulchre and this Jerusalem?"

"Over the hills and far away, my lady. Over the hills and far away," said the tire-woman, lightly.

"How do you go? What is the way like?"

"Oh," was the hesitating answer, for Matilda knew almost as little as her young mistress where Jerusalem was, "thou goest a long, long way on through Heilbrun till thou comest to a great, great forest, black as night and full of wild beasts; then thou comest to a wide, wide river, which thou must cross; then thou journeyest on through many strange cities, and comest to a desert where there is no water, but robbers everywhere; then thou sailest over a great, wide sea; then there are mountains to climb which are covered with snow, and get higher and higher as thou goest up; and so thou journeyest on through strange lands and over mountains and seas and deserts—on, and on and on, till thou comest to Jerusalem," and the tire-woman paused, smiling with satisfaction at her own ingenuity.

"Is it so of a surety?"

"Of a surety," was the answer.

"I think not so," returned Serena, not a ripple of impatience in her voice. "Listen to me, and I will show thee how little thou knowest. I heard one of these same young Crusaders say to another: 'Shall we get to Jerusalem to-morrow?' and the other said, 'Nay, not to-morrow.' Then said the first one, 'Shall we get to Jerusalem the day after to-morrow?' and the other said, 'Nay, not the day after to-morrow.' 'Then, when shall we get there?' and the second one said, 'We shall march on two days, three days, five days, six days, and then we shall get to Jerusalem.' Did I not tell thee I would show how little thou knowest?" and Serena smiled triumphantly. "How would they go on and on, over deserts, and mountains, and rivers and seas, and reach Jerusalem in six days?"

Such ignorance as this, for Jerusalem was nearly two thousand miles from Heilbrun, may well astonish us. Yet it is said, that these deluded children had little, or no conception of the length of the journey they had undertaken, and that even their leaders know only in a general manner the direction to be pursued. Even among the nobility great ignorance prevailed. Once in a while, as with Matilda, a person was found,—and strange to say, most frequently amongst those of low birth,—who had a smattering of letters, a knowledge that went far to give them influence over their patrons and lords. Serena had no sooner finished her confident statement, than, with great animation, Matilda began.

"O, my lady! O, my sweet lady! it is far, far away, over rivers and mountains, rivers and mountains, far, far away!" But perceiving that her words produced little effect, in a taunting tone, she added: "Go thou on this Crusade, then thou wilt know the way."

"That I will," was the astounding answer.

The woman's face grew blank. "Thou, my sweet lady, thou!" she cried in utter amazement, "I was but taunting thee. Go on this Crusade?"

"Ay," with calmness.

"Walk all those weary leagues?"

"Nay; I will walk not one step."

"A pilgrim and walk not!" cried Matilda, laughing at the absurdity of the thought. "Then, how wilt thou go?"

"I will make the young men carry me."

"Ay, get thee a couch of silk," laughed the tire-woman, now quite sure that her mistress was only jesting,—"a canopy of white samite over it; let it rest on long poles, so that the young men can take it on their shoulders,—a most excellent plan!"

"Ay, I will, Matilda; but I like not white samite; it shall be cloth of gold. Now put me to bed, for I am growing sleepy."

"Thou hast not said thy prayers," whispered the tire-woman, tenderly folding the cover over the beautiful form of her young mistress. "Thou hast not said thy prayers."

"Then say them for me," came drowsily from the pillows.

This command seemed in no way to astonish Matilda; she simply asked:

"How many?"

"Oh, let me see!" with a sleepy yawn. "How many fingers hast thou on thy two hands?"

"Ten, my lady."

"How many toes on thy two feet?"

"Ten, my lady."

No response was given to this for a few moments; then came the command:

"Say as many—as many aves as thou hast

Copyrighted by Chas. G. Fisher, 1890.

fingers on thy two hands, and as many paternosters as thou—as thou hast toes on thy two feet;" and the sleepy eyes partly unclosed and shot a subdued glance of merriment at the patient attendant.

A crucifix stood in a corner of the room, and seizing a rosary, hanging near by, the woman knelt before the image, and began to repeat the prayers aloud, with great rapidity, but had scarcely concluded a single ave before her young mistress cried out impatiently,

"Say the prayers to thyself: I am sleepy."

The order was obeyed, and for some time nothing was heard from the kneeling figure but a low murmur, followed at intervals by the soft clashing of the beads, as the suppliant's fingers glided over them. At length, the woman rose, and, moving softly, prepared to leave the room; but her steps were arrested just as her hand made the latch click. Waking from the light slumber into which she had fallen, Serena raised her head, calling softly,

"Come here, Matilda."

"What dost thou want, my lady? it is time for thee to be asleep," at the same time walking towards the couch. Turning her fair face upward from the soft pillows and silken coverlets, into whose depths she had again sunken, the girl replied:

"Bend thy head down to me."

"What for?" at the same time stooping.

"Bend down lower."

The woman obeyed.

"Lower yet."

And the woman stooped until her face almost touched the pillows, and then suddenly, quick as a flash, two white arms shot forth, and she was clasped tightly around the neck, while the girl's tender face was pressed against her own, and the red lips kissed her impulsively on mouth and cheeks.

"The Virgin bless thee, my sweet lady! May Heaven guard thee!" murmured Matilda, releasing herself at length; and drawing the coverlid once more over the shoulders of her impulsive young mistress, she glided from the apartment, a tender light in her dark eyes, and a gentle expression on her somewhat rugged countenance.

(To be Continued.)

OLD FOLKS AT HOME.

If you are so fortunate as to have the "old people" in the house, see to it that they have the warmest and sunniest corner and a goodly portion of the best that can be afforded of comfort, convenience and beauty; that aged blood may be kept warm and cheerful; that failing limbs may have restful repose, and that the dim eyes that have watched over you and yours through so many toilsome years may see around them the ever present evidence of faithful and grateful ease.

There is nothing in the world more pathetic than the meek, timorous, shrinking ways of certain old people—we have all seen them—who have given up their old home into younger hands and subsided into some out-of-the-way corner of it, to sit by the fireside and table henceforth as if they were pensioners—afraid of "making trouble," afraid of being in the way," afraid of accepting the half that is their due, and go down to their graves with a pitiful, deprecating air, as if constantly apologizing for staying so long. There is no scorn too deep and sharp for the sons and daughters who will accept this attitude on the part of those to whom they owe so much.

Sometimes, to be sure, people grow old with a bad grace. They become embittered by misfortune or affliction, or are peevish and unreasonable under the goading of illness. All the more do they appeal to great gentleness and faithfulness. Let it be borne in mind that we, too, are hastening on towards the sunset of life and that it is possible that we may ripen into very uncomfortable old people, to demand much more of patience and devotion than we, as children, yield.—Woman's World.

Youth's Department.

A BOY'S BELIEF.

It isn't much fun a-living
If grandpa says what's true,
That this is the jolliest time of life
That I am passing through,
I'm afraid he can't remember,
It's been so awful long.
I'm sure if he could recollect
He'd know that he was wrong.

Did he ever have, I wonder,
A sister just like mine,
Who'd take his skates, or break his kite,
Or tangle up his twine?
Did he ever chop the kindling,
Or fetch in coal or wood,
Or offer to turn the wringer?
If he did he was awful good!

In Summer its "weed the garden,"
In Winter, "it's shovel the snow,"
For there isn't a single season
But has its work, you know.
And then when a fellow's tired
And hopes he may sit still,
It's bring us a pail of water, son
From the spring at the foot of the hill.

How can grandpa remember
A fellow's grief or joy?
'Tween you and me, I don't believe
He ever was a boy.
Is this the jolliest time of life?
Believe it I never can;
Nor that it's as nice to be a boy
As a grown-up man.

—Harper's Young People.

DREADFUL.

"Where's mamma"

Dotty stole down from the nursery to see mamma for a little while; but mamma had gone out.

It was twilight and the sitting-room was nearly dark, except for the glow which came from the fire in the grate.

"Who's zis?" said Dotty, going toward the lounge.

There was quite a heap of things on it. Edith, her big sister, often threw her hat and cloak there when she came in from school; and now they were mixed up with the slumber-robe and somebody must be sleeping under them, for a bit of black hair peeped out from one end.

"Poor papa," said Dotty, going up and stroking the hair with her soft little hand. "He's tum home wiv a headache again. I'm sorry. I'll tomb his head and I won't 'sturb [him one bit."

She brought a comb, and carefully worked away at the black locks, whispering to herself:

"Papa always like his head tombed when he's dot headache.

"He's fast as'eep, I dess," she went on, finding that he did not move. She put her little face close down to the hair, and half-whispered:

"Papa, does I 'sturb 'ou?"

But papa did not answer, so she kept on combing, saying to herself:

"How g'ad he'll be when he wates up and finds his headache all don!"

But just then the comb caught in a tangle.

"O papa, did that pull?"

No answer, and the combing went on. Another pull, and the head moved a little.

O papa! I'll be more careful; 'ou see if I don't.

But a harder tangle came. The head moved towards her and—fell upon the floor at her feet.

"O-o-o-o-o!" What a scream went before Dotty as she rushed into the hall.

"What's the matter?" cried Edith, who was just coming down the stairs.

"What's the matter?" asked mamma, who was just coming in the street-door.

"O-o-o-o-o!" Dotty was too much terrified to answer, but Edith caught her in her arms as she tried to run up stairs.

"What is it, dear?" she asked.

"O-o-o-o-o!" cried Dotty, sobbing as if her heart would break. "Papa! Papa!"

"What about papa? He's down town."

"No—I've—pulled his head off."

"Nonsense, Dotty. What do you mean?

"Oh, I have—I did. In there—"she pointed to the sitting-room, but kicked and screamed when Edith carried her toward the door.

"Papa isn't here," said mamma!

Dotty hid her head on Edith's shoulder as mamma lit the gas, but took a little peep out as Edith said: "See. Papa isn't here."

"O-o-o-o-o! Yes, he is—he's on the lounge."

Mamma tossed over the things on the lounge. No papa was there.

"But—look on the floor," sobbed Dotty.

Mamma picked up the thing of long, straight hair which lay there.

"It's my new monkey-skin muff," said Edith. —Sydney Dayre, in Youth's Companion.

WHAT MARY GAVE.

She gave an hour of patient care to her little baby sister, who was cutting teeth.

She gave a string, and a crooked pin, and a great deal of good advice to the three year old brother who wanted to play at fishing.

She gave Ellen, the maid, a precious hour to go and visit her sick baby at home, for Ellen was a widow, and left her child with its grandmother while she worked to get bread for both.

She could not have seen them very often if our Mary had not offered to attend the door while she was away.

But this is not all that Mary gave. She dressed herself so neatly and looked so bright and kind and obliging, that she gave her mother a thrill of pleasure whenever she caught sight of the young pleasant face.

She wrote a letter to her father, who was absent on business, and gave patient attention to a long story by her grandmother, and when it was ended made the old lady happy by a goodnight kiss.

Thus she had given valuable presents to six people, in one day, and yet she had not a cent. —The Little Ones.

Pleasantries.

"And were you at Venice!" exclaimed Mrs. Hojack to her caller. "How interesting! Of course you saw the lions of St. Mark." "Well, no, replied Mrs. Trotter, "The fact is we didn't go to the zoological garden at all."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

There is a story going through the papers that some children had a discussion concerning church services. One youngster who had reached the mature of age of seven said, "I'd just like to know what preaching is for." "O, don't you know," inquired his five-year-old sister, "It's to give the singers a rest, of course."

NOTICE.

☞ Editorial Correspondence address to THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters pertaining to subscriptions and other business, address REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ No notice taken of anonymous communications.

For Terms, see page 11.

THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER,
907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 29, 1891.

AN APPARENT BLANK.

Of the first thirty years of Christ's life on earth we may be said to know comparatively little or nothing. His birth at Bethlehem was the dawn of a new era, a bright morn, after the twilight of the Jewish dispensation and the midnight of heathenish darkness. It was made illustrious by the song of the angelic host, by the adoration of the shepherds, the visit of the Magi, and the prophecies of Simeon and Anna in the temple. But the rising sun was soon obscured by dense clouds, that shut out its first few beautiful rays of light. Owing to the malice of the Wicked One the young child had to be concealed first in Egypt and then afterwards in an obscure city among the mountains of Galilee. When He was twelve years old some gleams of light began to irradiate His person as He stood among the doctors in the temple, and in mysterious language affirmed that God not Joseph was in some sense His Father. Mary, and no doubt Joseph also, kept all these sayings in their hearts and pondered them there. Prudently, and with much wisdom and foresight, she did not speak about them, for the time had not come, and the world in its smaller or wider circles was no wiser than it was before, in regard to what had at length come to pass.

But why, we are prone to ask, was not something put on record of a life of thirty years, which to us now would seem to be of the most intensely interesting character? We simply reply that it was not necessary. We know enough of the outward life of Christ, and if more had been given us, we strange beings would not have been satisfied and been still asking for more. Yet by study and reflection we may in fact get to know more about this apparent blank page than we may have supposed. Here everything depends on what we think of Christ—on the angle or standpoint from which we look at Him. At an early day many good Christians with imperfect and erroneous conceptions of His person filled out His infancy and childhood, especially, with numerous stories or myths of their own, which were doubtless pretty extensively believed. They were based on false conceptions of His two-fold nature, and although amusing to us now, they involved serious heresy, in making the human nature of Christ a mere machine upon which the divine is supposed to have acted. If that were so He was no man at all, a mere apparition, or magician, and our faith in Him as the Son of man falls to the ground. In modern times His adorable person has been studied with much intensity and the utmost sincerity, and we have come to occupy a position from which His life, recorded or unrecorded, may be contemplated more correctly than in the olden times, and at the same time with greater profit and edification. The attempt to do this is similar to that of the naturalist, who from a few bones reproduces the outlines of the animals to which they once belonged, or of the geologist when he reads the primitive history of the earth by the study of its stratification. Every one who reads the Bible diligently may thus in his own way call up the image of Christ's unrecorded life in a vivid, living form; but let him do it reverently—without giving heed to fables or myths, and all results of this kind will be truly refreshing and edifying.

HERETICAL.

Dr. Talmage in his recent work on the Life of Christ draws some interesting pictures of the boyhood of Christ, just as we might expect, some of which are doubtless true, and some, as we also might express, are overdrawn. Thus he says that "the boy Christ was most of his time getting the (other) boys out of trouble. There was not a rock or a hill or a cavern or a tree for miles around that he was not familiar with in childhood. He had cautiously felt his way down into the caves and had with lithe and agile limb gained a poisé on many a high treetop." That might do for the son of a Knickerbocker in the overflow of Dutch blood in boyhood, but Jewish mothers were very careful of their children, and we do not think that Mary would have allowed her son thus to endanger his life "If Christ was divine," says Dr. Talmage, further on, "was He not able at ten or twelve years to describe the human system as well as though He had been fifty years standing at an operating table or in a dissecting-room?" This is the old story, in fact a heresy, that Christ was not a man in the true sense of the term. Of course He could not have been a child or a boy, if He knew so much about the physiology of the human body.

THE REFORMED ALLIANCE.

We have read with much interest the last report of the Executive Commission (Eastern or European) of the "Alliance of the Reformed Church throughout the world holding the Presbyterian system." This new body is evidently succeeding in the accomplishment of the object for which it was called into existence: to promote greater unity among the Churches; "to bring their strength and influence to bear on the settlement of many questions of national, social and individual life; to present a united front to Heathenism and Infidelity; and thus to get them all to move onward as one to the conquest of the world for Christ." As is well-known, our own branch of the Reformed Church is represented in this union, just as it should be. Few of us, we presume, regard it as in itself likely, under its present form, to settle the question of Church History; but it is easy to see that it will do something, we may hope, in that direction, make one stride at least, and a considerate one too. It ought, therefore, to be encouraged and sustained by all whom it more immediately concerns.

In one of the papers accompanying the Report we read that "The Reformed Church of the sixteenth century exists to-day in the two great sections, known generally as the Reformed and Presbyterian Churches." This seems to us as a new and strange division of the branches of the Reformed family. Are such Churches then as the Episcopal, the Congregational and the Methodist not Reformed, even though they are not "generally known as Reformed?" Church History, from the time of Mosheim down to the present, usually regard them as branches of the Reformed Church, as distinguished from the Lutheran or Catholic. With respect to Church discipline the Methodists are quite as Calvinistic as any of the Presbyterians; and the Church of England, from the time of Hooker down to the present has, if anything, been more Calvinistic on the subject of the Lord's Supper than the Presbyterians or the Puritans. Its own great writers frequently call themselves Reformed, just as much so as the Scotch Presbyterians. There is considerable diversity as it regards doctrine and cultus in this division of Churches; but the Reformed image and superscription, stamped upon them in the beginning, remains. Even upon the Baptists, and they may be readily deciphered in our day, if we have enough charity to make the attempt. The term Presbyterian was local in its origin, and technical Presbyterians constitute only the smaller part of the Reformed Church. We, therefore, regard it as a good omen that the old and the more general title of Reformed is again coming into vogue and beginning to be emphasized in our day. It looks to the past and the future, and is sufficiently comprehensive in its significance to cover the one Universal Church of Christ,—provided all its branches are renamed, washed and cleansed of their errors. Then, in the sense of redeemed, it will be an appropriate title for the Bride of the Lamb.

THE FAMILY ALTAR.

What various hindrances we meet
In coming to a mercy-seat!

Most of us, we presume have experienced more or less interruption in conducting our ordinary family worship. Sometimes company comes in just as we wish to have our morning or evening prayers; at other times, matters about the house seem to be so urgent and to require such immediate attention that we hardly get time to pray. We remember a worthy elder in the church, who was accustomed to gather his family together for worship, but the other members of the household seemed to have so many things to attend to, and some of them were so tardy in making their appearance, that he gave up in despair, and omitted the regular devotions of the family altogether. That was certainly unfortunate. To prevent similar "sad declines" in family religion, we suggest that either the father or the mother, on whichever side the will-force is the strongest, to take the matter in hand and assert the necessity of prayer in the family in firm language or positive tones of the voice; and if neither of them has as yet spoken out nor made a beginning in such a truly Christian duty, they should do so at once, and not permit anything to interfere with them in its discharge.

Long as they live, should Christians pray,
For only when they pray they live.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

IN OLDEN DAYS BEYOND THE SEA.

The Reformed Church has suffered greatly from the lack of popular denominational literature. Our young people, in many instances, know all about the pioneers of New England, and are perfectly familiar with the work of Wesley and Whitefield, but remain ignorant of the brilliant names which adorn the history of their own Church. They read the books of other denominations until they imbibe their life and spirit, and are consequently inclined, when opportunity offers, to seek a home in some modern ecclesiastical organization, foolishly imagining that the new is better than the old.

We rejoice in the movements for the closer union of Christian churches which are now in progress, and would not willingly say or do anything that might be regarded as opposing them. Let us not, however, fall into the error of imagining, that the cultivation of a denominational spirit must necessarily be inimical to the cause of Christian union. To be a patriot, it is not necessary to suppress the love of home. To be a soldier, faithful to the flag, does not involve ignorance of the achievements of our particular regiment. In a similar way it may be acknowledged, that to cherish an intelligent affection for our own denomination will not interfere with the progress of the cause of Church Union, but will rather aid us in removing the obstacles which lie in its way and in hastening the time of its final consummation.

We heartily welcome Miss Schively's new volume, "In Olden Days beyond the Sea," because it meets the want which we have indicated; and heartily wish we had hundreds like it. Those who have merely read the successive numbers, as they were published in the MESSENGER, can hardly imagine how well the entire work appears, arrayed in graceful typography and beautiful binding. In reading a serial we are often in danger of losing the thread of the story; but with the complete volume in our hands, the interest increases with every page; we seem to become personally acquainted with the characters; and the imagination is stimulated to conceive of the scenes which are portrayed, as events of which we are ourselves the witnesses.

Miss Schively's book is modestly called a translation; but it is more than a translation in the ordinary sense of the word. Not only are two stories of German origin bound together with an original thread of fact and fancy, but almost every page bears marks of minute and accurate research. It is wonderful how much of Reformation history this single book contains. The sufferings of our fathers are vividly portrayed, but there is not a harsh word for those who persecuted them. The tone is irenic throughout; and there is a full appreciation of the fact that the zealots of the sixteenth century are not to be judged by our modern standards.

We are tempted to give the outlines of these interesting stories; but this would hardly be proper, as every one who has not yet done so ought to read them for himself. It will be enough to say that in the first story, "True to their Faith," we have an accurate picture of what was called "the Church under the Cross." In following the fortunes of Pastor Clignet and his family we see them fleeing from the terrors of the persecution of the Duke of Alva, hiding in caves, and exposed to unnumbered dangers, until they find a temporary refuge in the Palatinate. A son, who is accidentally separated from the fugitives, finds his way to France, and becomes a witness of the horrors of the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, but is finally restored to his afflicted parents. The account of the Walloon congregations in the Palatinate is of considerable historical value, as it contains information which cannot readily be found elsewhere.

The second story is called "The Siege of a Huguenot Town." The author of the German original is Pastor C. G. Zipf, of Wheatland, Iowa, who has derived his material from Gottfried Flammberg's "Tales of the Huguenots." "Flammberg" is known to have been the literary name of the late Rev. Dr. J. H. A. Ebrard, one of the most eminent theologians of the Reformed Church. The tale is warlike as its name indicates. It is full of remarkable incidents, and relates deeds of heroism which would seem incredible if they were not abundantly substantiated by historical records. The young will be especially pleased with this fascinating story, which presents a brilliant picture of the heroic struggles of the Reformed people of France, who are known as Huguenots. Nowhere else can we find such exalted ideals of self-sacrificing devotion in the cause of truth.

The Reformed Church needs such books as this, and we hope it will be followed by a long series of similar stories, derived from the history of the old "Church of the Martyrs." The material is abundant, and all that is needed is appreciation, and the extensive circulation of the books, as they appear. Every Sunday-school library in the Reformed Church ought to have several copies of "In Olden Days beyond the Sea;" and teachers, after reading the book, should earnestly recommend it to their scholars. There is no better way of teaching them to love the Church; and those who love will prove faithful.

D.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

IN MEMORIAM.

REV. D. C. TOBIAS.

It was on Thursday afternoon, January 15, A. D. 1891, on a bright and serene winter day, that the last earthly remains of Rev. Daniel Clinton Tobias, for many years a resident of Lititz, Pa., were tenderly borne to a quiet resting place in the Moravian cemetery, where now in peaceful repose he is sleeping the sleep of the just.

The deceased was born of Reformed parentage in Berks county, Pa., November 7, A. D. 1842, and died Jan. 12, A. D. 1891, at the age of 48 years, 2 months and 5 days.

He was baptized in his infancy, and confirmed in early life in Epler's church by Rev. A. L. Herman. After he had reached his manhood, he was constrained by an intense desire to devote his life to the Christian ministry. To attain this end, he received the kindly encouragement of Dr. B. Bausman, and also of the sainted John Ermentrout and his daughter Margaret, who became his most earnest supporters while pursuing his theological studies.

After having studied privately for several years, he entered the Theological Seminary at Mercersburg, Pa., in the fall of 1867, and graduated from the institution in the spring of 1870. He was examined by the Classis of Lebanon and licensed to preach the Gospel. Having received a call from Bethany charge, he was received as a member of Lancaster Classis at a special meeting held Sept. 27, 1870, and the call was confirmed. A committee was appointed, consisting of Revs. Dr. A. H. Kremer, W. T. Gerhard and F. Pilgram, who ordained and installed him on Sunday, Oct. 9, 1870, as the pastor of Bethany charge.

For twenty years he devoted his life to the service of his Master in this his first and only pastoral field, consisting of Bethany, Brickersville, White Oak and New Haven congregations.

The deceased was not only an earnest preacher of the Word, but also a faithful and devoted pastor, who was abundant in labors, earnestly striving to nourish and develop the spiritual life of the members of his charge. Although the confession was made by the deceased to his Moravian colleague that there was nothing brilliant in his ministerial career, yet the merited praise is accorded by all who knew him, that he was a faithful minister of the Gospel.

He has left a noble record of pastoral fidelity which is indelibly inscribed on the hearts of the people whom he loved and whom he served. Besides being an earnest preacher, he also was a diligent and successful student. One could not come into contact with him, without perceiving at once the genuineness of his simple-hearted piety; and even a casual acquaintance sufficed to show his interest in biblical study. This interest grew as he advanced in years. His articles on the early history of the patriarchs, contributed to the church papers, and the notes in manuscript form on the different books of the Bible, give testimony of the increased attention which he gave to a systematic study of the sacred Scriptures. The papers found in the archives of his study, show that he had mapped out a definite plan for literary work. For this purpose he had secured many valuable books, which his library does abundantly testify, and no doubt in time, his labors would have gained for him rich results. But his work on earth, as far as personal effort is concerned, is done, and he rests from his labors.

For twenty years, Brother Tobias ministered to his people without any interruption. The Lord had blessed him wonderfully with health to attend to the duties of his charge. On Dec. 28, 1890, the following entry was made in his journal, viz., "That he was obliged to remain at home on account of indisposition, and that this was the second Sunday during all the years of his ministry, that he was unable to fill his appointments." "God," he still further says, "has preserved me wonderfully, and helped me to endure the hardships and trials of a country parson."

The services at the house were brief, consisting simply of the reading of the 90th psalm antiphonally, led by Rev. A. C. Whitmer.

At 2 P. M. the cortege proceeded to the Moravian church, which was kindly tendered to the bereaved family to hold the funeral services. The pall bearers were Revs. W. F. Lichliter, Jno. M. Souder, S. M. Roeder, J. H. Pannebecker, J. W. Meminger and Jno. P. Stein, all members of Lancaster Classis.

The large church and rooms adjoining, were filled to overflowing. The service in the church was conducted by Rev. Dr. Jno. S. Stahr. The Scriptures were read by Rev. I. W. Brobst of the Lutheran Church, and the congregation was led in prayer by Rev. Dr. Thos. G. Apple.

Three brief addresses were delivered: one in English by Rev. Dr. J. M. Titzel, and two in German, one by Rev. C. L. Moench of the Moravian Church, the other by Rev. Dr. E. V. Gerhart of Theological Seminary at Lancaster. After the corpse was brought out of the dead house and carried to the Moravian Cemetery, located on a beautiful elevation, at a short distance in the rear of the church, where the body was consigned to its rest on a plot of ground, which the trustees of the Moravian congregation, who held the deceased in high esteem, generously bestowed to the bereaved family. Surrounded by a vast concourse of people, amid a strange and solemn stillness, Dr. B. Bausman touchingly read the beautiful burial service of the Church, thus fittingly closing, without any vain ostentation, the beautiful life of a faithful minister of Jesus Christ.

It may be here in place to state, that the deceased was twice married. The name of his first wife was Eliza Kaucher. Two children of his first marriage are still living, namely, Joseph K. Tobias, a druggist, living at Ephrata, and Martha, the wife of Rev. J. B. Stonesifer of Schellsburg, Bedford county, Pa. His second wife was the daughter of Rev. W. T. Gerhard. The only surviving son of this second marriage is Wm. A. Tobias, who is at present attending Franklin and Marshall College.

In addition to the clergy who have already been mentioned as present, were Revs. Dr. Theo. Appel, Geo. B. Seibel, A. B. Shenkle, S. Sweitzer, D. W. Albright, J. S. Hartman, Henry Mosser and H. Y. Stoner. And among the relatives were Revs. Calvin S. Gerhard, D. W. Gerhard and J. B. Stonesifer. From the private journal of the deceased the following summary of parochial work has been carefully gathered: Preached 2228 sermons and 408 funeral discourses; baptized 608 persons, confirmed 310; received by certificate 108, and performed 460 marriages. Among those that he confirmed, Rev. F. J. Hacker is the only one known to the writer that entered the Gospel ministry.

The garland that is here woven to the memory of the departed, is constructed from the noble acts of his own life. In the faithfulness of his ministry, he has reared for himself an enduring monument, and as we turned away from the open grave, having seen his face for the last time, we in silence said, "Requiescat in Pace."

> "How beautiful it is for a man to die
> Upon the walls of Zion! to be called
> Like a watch-worn and weary sentinel,
> To put his armor off, and rest in heaven."

J. P. S.

Poetry.

WINTER.

A kindly host is Winter hoar,
With icy fingers, warm of heart!
Who numbs us, till at every pore
We tingle with a grateful smart!

And welcome are the winter nights,
With cat beside the hearth close curled!
And all the fireside's dear delights,
Oblivious of the outer world.

Where snow upon the meadow lies,
And leafless branches shiver bare.
And stars oft blink their aching eyes
That look so long through frozen air!

Then, haply, while the shrill winds wail,
If lonesome on Life's ills we brood,
We seek some spirit-kindling tale
To rouse us from this heavy mood;

Or from the chest belike we take
Some faded letters, long unread;
And once more for the cherished sake
Of eager-winged hours fled,

We read them, seeming now to hear
Mute voices ring in happy chime—
Like leaves of Autumn stained and sear
They fill our hearts with summer time.

And if our eyes will fondly blur,
We pile of logs a merry pyre,
And list the cat's contented purr,
And homely gossip of the fire,

And still a pleasure without end
It is, upon a winter's night,
To sit in converse with a friend,
Cheered by the flickering firelight.

Then welcome is the harsh discord
Of hailstones on the window-pane,
That sweeter music doth afford
Than scented drops of summer rain!

—Academy.

Selections.

The test of every religious, political, or educational system is the man that it forms.—Amiel.

Let men laugh, if they will, when you sacrifice desire to duty. You have both time and eternity to rejoice in.—Theodore Parker.

I believe that if you and I were more to heed the whispers of our Father we should not have so many of His thunders.—J. Harrington Evans.

O, never is the path we tread
So dear, but if we upward gaze,
The favoring smile of Heaven will shed
Some solace for our darkest days.

—Beech.

Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindness, and small obligations given habitually, are what preserve the heart and secures comfort.—Sir H. Davy.

He who makes up his mind that he came into this world to do something, and then goes to work to do it, wlll be of service to mankind. He is the one who will make his mark among men. It may be an humble mark, but it will be well worth preserving. He will not be forgotten when his life is ended.

"Is life worth living? Yes, so long
As there is wrong to right;
Wail of the weak against the strong,
Or tyranny to fight.

"While there is one untrodden track
For intellect or will,
And men are free to think and act,
Life is worth living still."

Science and Art.

A locomotive working under a pressure of 140 to 163 pounds to the square inch may move a railway train at a velocity of 60 miles per hour, which we are apt to think of as a wonderful speed. But it is slow compared with the rate of motion of the projectile from a modern great gun. Such projectile flies at the rate of 1,375 miles per hour, impelled by a pressure of 35,000 to 40,000 pounds per square inch.

A New Paris industry is the manufacture of hoar-frost glass, which is covered with feathery patterns resembling those naturally produced upon the window panes in cold weather. The glass is first given a ground surface, either by the sand blast or the ordinary method, and is then coated with soft varnish. The varnish contracts strongly in drying, taking with it the particles of glass to which it adheres, and this reproduces very accurately the branching crystals of frost work. A single coat gives a delicate effect and several coats yield a bold design.

Items of Interest.

For the erection of a German Lutheran Church in Rome 15,000 have been contributed.

The Census Bureau has issued a bulletin showing the Indian population of the United States to be 244,704.

The railroad to Pike's Peak is finished and will be ready next summer to convey tourists to that delightful spot.

The Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York, after a sermon by its pastor, Dr. John Hall, on Home Missions, gave $21,000.

An appeal is made for contributions toward erecting a Reformed church building in Berlin, where the Lutheran influence predominates.

The Society of Friends in America, according to a table of statistics just published in The Christian Worker, has 781 meetings, 1,093 ministers and 76,136 members. These figures only embrace the ten yearly meetings belonging to what is known as the Progressive Body of Friends.

Chief-Justice Bleekley, of Georgia, has decided, in a suit brought with reference to the payment of salary to a minister, that the salary must be paid. He says:—"If any debt ought to be paid it is one contracted for the health of souls, for pious ministrations and holy service. If any class of debtors ought to pay, as a matter of moral as well as legal duty, the good people of a Christian church are that class. We think a court may well constrain this church to do justice. It is certainly an energetic measure to sell the church to pay the preacher, nor would it be allowable to do so if other means of satifying the debt were within reach."

Hints and Recipes.

A teaspoonful of camphor in a wide-mouthed bottle, well covered with boiling water, produces a warm vapor which can be inhaled for the relief of acute head colds. Ten minutes' use, three times a day, will suffice.

AVOID MISTAKES.—It seems needless advice too oft repeated to urge upon mothers and housekeepers the warning that bottles of medicine and liniment be so labelled and arranged that mistakes cannot possibly occur. Yet again and again do we read of accidents from taking wrong medicines quite unnoticed. However sure one may be he or she will never err; it is not safe to keep liniments, dangerous acids and poisonous lotions on the same shelf with other medicines. In haste, the dark, excitement of the moment or other cause—sometimes totally unexplainable—the wrong bottle may be grasped and fatal consequences result therefrom.

SHOE BLACKING AND COLD FEET.—"When the leather in your shoes becomes old and begrimed with blacking, you will ascertain that the feet will be cold," remarked the oldtime shoeseller. "Then is the time to cast aside the shoes and use them to wear beneath arctics or for some other purpose. I have seen it referred to many times, but tf you want to keep your shoes in good condition you should use vaseline on them often. The life will be kept in the leather, and, if rightly applied, you can shine the footwear just as well as if the preparation had never been used. Put it on at night when taking off your shoes. There is castor and like oil, also, that wlll as well serve the purpose, and keep your boots and shoes in good shape, imparting much greater warmth to the feet than if you allow blacking and the like to eat up all the life in the leather. When blacking commences to cake on the shoes, wash them with plain water, no soap."—Shoe and Leather Facts.

Farm and Garden.

The best way to manage dwarf pears is not to plant them. They resemble what is said of good people—"they die young." Better plant standards, which will bear as soon as they ought, and with decent care will last a life time or longer.

HINTS FOR HORSESHOEING.—In an address before a Minnesota Farmers' Institute an experienced horseman summed up some valuable advice on horseshoeing in this wise. 1. Do not get your horses shod at all unless necessary; and when that necessity no longer exists let the shoe disappear with it. 2. On no account allow the frog or bars to be cut or the sole thinned out. 3. See that the shoe is made to fit the foot, and not the foot to fit the shoe. 4. The less rasping done after the shoe is nailed on the better; if a correct fit has been obtained none will be necessary beyond a touch under each clinch sufficient to remove the horn fibers pushed through by the nails. 5. Never let shoes remain on longer than a month at the outside without being reset. 6. If it is absolutely necessary to have your horse shod with calkings ("calks") have the calkings made as small and as short as possible, so that the frog may come to the ground. With all your getting, get frog pressure; and despite the possible sneers, smiles, or prophecies of evil of your blacksmith, always bear in mind the good old maxim, "No frog, no foot; no foot, no horse."

Books and Periodicals.

Any of the books here noticed can be had through our Publication House, 907 Arch Street.

INDICATIONS OF THE BOOK OF GENESIS By Edward B. Latch. J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia. Price $1.

This is a singular book, in which with all good intentions we cannot feel at home. Genesis, it would seem, is a profound allegory, which the author professes to expound for us. His hermeneutical principles, however, if he has any, are not apparent. The reader can, perhaps, best judge of the character of the book from a specimen of its method of interpretation. The account of the Garden of Eden is an allegory which represents four independent consecutive races of men and their ages. The Euphrates, corresponding to the first seal in the vision of St. John, stands for the earliest race, which, white in color, was created about the year 29,789 B. C., and was destroyed by volcanic eruption and earthquake about the year 21,414 B. C. The Hiddekel represents the second race and corresponds to the second seal. This was a red race, created 23,017 B. C., and destroyed about 12,098 B. C. The Gihon, corresponding to the opening of the third seal in St. John's vision, represents the third, or black race, which was created about 13,465 B. C., and swept away by the great deluge of Noah about 2241 B. C. The fourth, or pale race, is represented by the Pison, corresponding with the fourth seal of the vision of St. John. This race was created about the year 3,897 B. C. If the reader can find indications of all this in the four rivers of Eden, it may be a comfort to him to know that he belongs to the Pisonic race.

THE VOICE IN SPEECH AND SONG. By Theodore E. Schmauk. New York: John B. Alden, Publisher.

The author has given us a delightful book, which will be appreciated by speakers and singers and all who love the arts of speech and song. In it he discourses pleasantly of the voice as an instrument of music, revealing the soul. He treats of the mechanism of the instrument and its management, of its timbre, quality and modulation, and of much else that is of interest to both speakers and singers. He has done his work well; and while he displays little originality in the treatment of his subject, he exhibits the fruits of careful reading and sound judgment. The book shows indications of marked literary ability and gives fair promise for the future.

THE QUIVER for February contains:—The Old Quince Tree, An Address to Members of the Metropolitan Police Force, A Chinese New Year, Sifted as Wheat, God in the Book of Nature, From Santa Claus, Noel, Self-Restraint, Sundays with the Young, Is it Well with Thee? Work in the Master's Name, Water Cress! Stories, poems, and Short Arrows bring the number to a close.

The Cassell Publishing Co., New York, 15 cents a number; $1.50 a year in advance.

THE MAGAZINE OF ART contains—The Portraits of John Ruskin, The Proper Mode and Study of Drawing, Mr. Brocklebank's Collection at Childwall Hall, Belvoir Castle and its History, The Illustrating of Books. The Notes, both American and foreign, are as full as usual.

Cassell Publishing Co., New York, 35 cents a number, $3.50 a year, in advance.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE. The number of The Living Age for January 24 contains—Alsace-Lorraine in 1890, Westminster Review; The Flight of the Shadow, by George Macdonald, LL.D., Sunday Magazine; Rural Life in France in the Fourteenth Century, Fortnightly Review; Henry Vaughan, Macmillan's Magazine; Give Back the Elgin Marbles, Nineteenth Century; Life among the Druses in 1845 and 1882, Asiatic Quarterly Review; Westminster Abbey, Spectator; The Carol, Speaker; Meteoritic Theories, Leisure Hour; Poetry and Miscellany.

$8.00 per year. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

LITERARY NOTE.

The date of February 16 has been definitely fixed for the publication of Edwin Arnold's new poem: "The Light of the World; or, The Great Consummation." It will be published simultaneously in America and England, the American publishers being Funk & Wagnalls of New York. As before announced, there has been in different portions of the poem collaboration between Mr. Arnold and an American poet, the results of this collaboration, of course, being incorporated in both the English and American editions. The American edition will contain also an Introduction, by R. H. Stoddard, and a reproduction of the celebrated paintings on the life of Christ, by the German artist Hoffman, by arrangement with the German publishers.

Marriages.

In Harrisburg, on the evening of the 31st of December, 1890, by Rev. Geo. W. Snyder, assisted by Rev. Sam'l W. Reigart of Salisbury, Md., Frederick H. Hantzman to Mary A. Hammaker, daughter of Wm. H. Seibert, all of Harrisburg, Pa.

On December 31st, 1890, in Emporia, Kansas, by Rev. D. B. Shuey, Daniel W. Kirk (formerly of Reading, Pa.,) to Miss Mary E. Shope, both of Bushong, Lyon county, Kansas.

On January 2d, 1891, by the same, at the house of the bride's parents, near Circleville, Kansas, Clark R. Stauffer (formerly of Westmoreland county, Pa.,) to Miss Myrtle Long.

At the residence of Mr. Levi Lininger, Beavertown, Pa., on the evening of the 24th of December, 1890, by the Rev. John W. Pontius, Mr. E. E. Haffley, of Woodbury to Miss Jennie Fouse, of Beavertown, Pa.

On the 25th of December, 1890, by the same, at the residence of Hon. S. B. Isenberg at Birmingham, Mr. M. A. Hovater, of Sioux City, Iowa, to Miss Clara B., eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Isenberg.

At the Parsonage, on the 14th inst., by Rev. J. H. Apple, Selby Diehl to Miss Mary Ida Diehl, both of Coleraine township.

January 18th, 1891, by Rev. N. J. Miller, of Manchester, Md., Mr. C. C. Wisner to Miss Cecilia I. Myers, both from the vicinity of Union Mills, Md.

Deaths.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than two hundred and fifty words.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were passed by Harbaugh's Reformed Sunday-school upon the death of Abraham Mickley:

WHEREAS, It hath pleased our Heavenly Father, in His infinite goodness and wisdom, to remove from our midst, to the rest that remaineth for the faithful, our beloved brother and co worker, Abram Mickley.

WHEREAS, Not understanding this dispensation of an all-wise Providence, which has thus afflicted us, yet we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, therefore be it

Resolved, That as a just tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased who was an efficient, earnest and active worker, we acknowledge his worth as that of one who deserves an expression of our sincerest regard and esteem.

Resolved, That we will affectionately cherish the memory of our brother's many Christian virtues, and pray that the sincere faith, unbending integrity, never-failing charity, and unswerving fidelity to religious principles, which characterized him in every relation of life, may be emulated by all who have been privileged to mark his good example.

Resolved, That by this providential dispensation we are again reminded of the brevity of life, and of the great need of working earnestly while the day lasts, knowing that the night cometh.

Resolved, That we extend our deepest and tenderest sympathy to the bereaved family, and prayerfully trust that He who doeth all things well will speak to their troubled hearts sweet words of peace in this time of their affliction; for they mourn not as those who have no hope of meeting on that bright shore, where sorrow, suffering, and death are unknown.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and be published in the REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER and the Waynesboro Village Record.

L. L. BENCHOFF,
B. F. HARTMAN,
J. A. JOHNSTON,
A. J. HARBAUGH,
Committee.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Consistory of Harbaugh's Reformed church, near Waynesboro, Pa., on the death of Abraham Mickley:

WHEREAS, It has pleased God, in His all-wise Providence, to remove from our midst Elder Abraham Mickley, a benevolent friend and brother, who through many years has been a faithful and loyal member of the church.

Resolved, That we submit to the will of Almighty God in this dispensation, knowing that He doeth all things well.

Resolved, That we deeply and sincerely feel the demise of this brother, and the loss of one whose calm judgment and guidance was always sought.

Resolved, That we extend to his bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this heavy affliction, and tenderly commend them unto Him who healeth all our sorrows.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be printed in the Waynesboro papers, church papers, that they be recorded on the minutes of the consistory, and that a copy be sent to his family.

Signed,
SEFELLEN E. STOFFLET, Pastor.
GEO. HARBAUGH, JR., Elder.
WM. E. SHELDON, } Deacons.
L. F. BENCHOFF, }

DIED.—December 6th, 1890, Thomas Bauer, of Ridgely, Caroline county, Md., late of Briggsville, Luzerne county, Pa., aged 84 years, 3 months and 17 days.

Father Bauer was born August 18, 1807, and was baptized in infancy, and in youth was confirmed a member of the German Reformed church, to which church he clung all through life. He sought to elevate the church and further its cause by continual charity and devotion.

He spent a long, unassuming, and humble life, laboring for those whom he loved so well. His later years were spent in lamenting the loss of his beloved wife, who preceded him to the heavenly world. Her death made him lonely and sad. Many weary hours came and went but few brought peace to his poor sorrowing soul. He sought solace in the old Bible. The gold old volume whose pages he pondered over almost daily,

"Whose pages were much dearer still,
Now that he was almost down the hill."

A short time before he expired he called the relatives and friends around him and with a thrilling, oh! how thrilling pressure of the hand, bade them all good by and wished them a long, successful life. This done he became unconscious and remained so till the last hour had come, when he fell asleep as calmly as a child goes into slumber. He fell asleep to awaken in eternity and to see Him who gave him this last blessing of deliverance.

Dear father, we miss thee. We bury a good friend and benefactor, and our hearts are left desolate and dreary, though we know that our loss is thy eternal gain. May God, who guided thy weary footsteps along life's highway, crown thee with loved ones in heaven.

"Thou then the longing heart that breakest,
Stealing our pleasures one by one,
We'll call Thee blessed when Thou makest
The parted one."

A MOURNER.

DIED.—December 13, 1890, near Shirleysburg, Huntingdon county, Pa., Elder Samuel Isenberg, aged 80 years, 1 month and 19 days.

Elder Isenberg died after a brief illness, and was buried in the cemetery adjoining the church near Shirleysburg. At the time of his death he was an active elder of the congregation which worships here. He was well and favorably known throughout the community, as well as in other parts of the county. His funeral was largely attended, and the church was filled to its utmost capacity. Rev. C. J. Musser, of Huntingdon, officiated at the funeral, and preached the sermon based on 2 Peter iii. 14.

Elder Isenberg was baptized in infancy, and confirmed when he was still under 20 years of age. He was, accordingly, an active member of the church for over 60 years. He was an elder for more than 40 years. The earlier part of his life was spent within the bounds of the Waterstreet charge, Huntingdon county, Pa. For many years he was the efficient superintendent of the Sunday-school at Alexandria. He always enjoyed the full confidence of his brethren, and as a mark of their great regard, the membership of this charge, forty years ago, made him a life-member of the American Tract Society.

Some years ago he moved to Shirley township, and was active in the organization of the Orbisonia charge. Up to the day of his death his love for the church and the Master's work never abated. Many of those with whom he labored entered before him into that rest which awaits the children of God. In the simplicity of his faith he waited the call of his Lord, and as he lived so he died. His faith gave him the victory over death as it had over the world. His hope was in the resurrection, and according to the promise, he looked for a mansion in his Father's house.

A pleasant man, gentle in speech and manner, loved by his kindred and honored by his friends was Elder Isenberg. Our sympathy we extend to his aged wife and children. May the Lord bless them and keep them to the end in the faith of their father. M.

DIED.—Near Grace Reformed church, Rowan county, N. C., on the 29th of December, 1890, Susan Elsie, daughter of Rev. C. B. and M. E. Heller, of membranous croup, aged 3 years, 2 months and 27 days.

She was baptized in her infancy, and thus ingrafted into Christ; but she was taken away before she had lived long enough here to develop the Christian life. She was a bright and lovely little girl, a precious bud removed from earth to grow, bloom, and bear fruit in the beautiful garden of the Lord. The loss of the bereaved family will be her great gain. Her mortal remains were laid in the burying ground of Grace Reformed church. A large congregation attended the funeral, which was conducted by the writer. The bereaved family has the sympathy of many friends.

P. M. TREXLER.

A NEW EDITION.

WON BY PRAYER.

Or The Life and Work of Rev. Massayoshi Oshikawa, Native Missionary in Sendai, Japan.

BY REV. A. R. BARTHOLOMEW,
Late Secretary Board of Commissioners for For. Missions, Reformed Church in United States.

An interesting story, well told, and an evidence of what has been and is being done for the salvation of the heathen in Japan. Well illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound.

Pp. 120. Price, 75 cts. Postpaid.

☞Percentage on sales given to Foreign Missions. Should have a large sale.

REFORMED CHURCH PUB. HOUSE,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE ALMANAC
FOR THE
Reformed Church in the United States
—TWENTY-EIGHTH ISSUE—
FOR 1891.

We are ready now to receive orders for our Almanac for 1891, at the following rates:

100 Copies, per express, $5.00
50 " " 2.75
12 " " .75
1 Copy, Postpaid, .12

When to be sent by mail 18 cents per dozen must be added for postage.

Also,
WESTERN ALMANAC
At the same prices as above.

GERMAN ALMANAC.
12 Copies, 90 cts.
Postage, 18 cts.
Single Copies, Postpaid, 12 cts.

Address,
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA.

Business Department.

TERMS:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage free. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.

No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrearages are paid.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made before the date transpires.

When the address of a paper is to be changed, the OLD and the NEW should be given.

☞Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

☞We do make mistakes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

☞Remittances should be made payable by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, or Registered Letter to the order of THE REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHAS. G. FISHER.

ADVERTISING RATE,
10 Cents Per Agate Line

Each insertion (fourteen lines to an inch).

Special Notices, set solid, double the price of display per counted line.

Reading Notices, leaded, three times the price of display per counted line.

Subject to the following Discounts:

FOR TIME.		FOR SPACE.
2 insertions	5 per ct.	100 lines	5 per ct.
4 "	10 "	250 "	10 "
8 "	15 "	500 "	20 "
13 "	20 "	750 "	30 "
26 "	30 "	1,000 "	40 "
52 "	40 "	1,500 "	50 "
No advertisement of less than 5 lines inserted at time rates on a contract for variable space.		To be used within one year.

Advertisements discontinued before completion of order, either by direction of advertiser or for non-payment, shall be paid for at regular rates for the advertising done.

An advertiser may use either scale or discounts, but cannot combine them. An advertiser is entitled to the highest discount which the entire amount of advertising done by him in any one year will secure.

Address all communications about advertising to

The Religious Press Association,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE NEW BOOK.

IN OLDEN DAYS
BEYOND THE SEA.

Translated from the German, to which are added Introductory and Closing Parts,
BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

An interesting book, giving a thrilling account of the trials and persecutions of those who were true to their faith in "olden days beyond the sea." Pages 305. Illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of retail price, $1.25.

Address,
Reformed Church Publication House,
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK,
"In Olden Days Beyond the Sea,"
AND
THE MESSENGER.

To any one sending us two new subscribers for THE MESSENGER and $4.00, we will send a copy of the above book postpaid.

To an old subscriber for THE MESSENGER, remitting $2.75, we will give credit for a year's subscription and send a copy of the above book, postpaid.

Address
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

Miscellaneous.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

OPENING OF THE WINTER TERM IN FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL COLLEGE.

SUBSTANTIAL PROGRESS.

Quietly the college passed out of the old year into the new. The usual Christmas vacation was preceded by the delivery of the senior orations by the first half of the class. When this exercise was over the students rapidly departed to their respective homes while the professors just as rapidly finished their work for the term, so that, in due time, all were prepared for the rest and enjoyment of the blessed Christmas tide. How well they enjoyed it could be easily seen when, after the interval of rest, they all assembled in the chapel on Tuesday morning, January 6th, to begin with promptness and cheerfulness the work of the new term. There was no opening address. All went, after prayers, immediately to the class-rooms, and never did professors and students enter upon their accustomed ronnd of labors in better spirits or with a more earnest purpose.

Thus the transition from one term to another was quiet and unostentatious, but it was accompanied with a feeling of satisfaction as to the past and hopefulness as to the future. For, besides the gratifying increase in the number of students, and the successful prosecution of the regular work of the college during the past term, there were several marked features of progress, of which, no doubt, the friends of the college have heard, but which it may be proper to emphasize in this connection so that they may be appreciated outside of the college, as we know they are felt and appreciated within. And here we may say in passing that we do not mean the record made either by the Football Team or the Glee Club, excellent as these are in their way, enlivening college work, quickening the pulses of professors and students, and binding college and community in closer union than ever before. By the regular work of the college (and solid, hard work it is) we mean the attainment of intellectual and moral culture, and in this field lies the progress to which we have referred.

The first feature is the opening of the Reading Room in the College Library which has become an educational factor of no mean proportion. Its influence is already plainly perceptible upon the students and is daily growing in extent and power. The selection of newspapers and magazines is admirable, and these, with the well-chosen books which are from time to time added to the Library, afford not only ample opportunity for the acquisition of useful information and literary culture, but also for original research in the different fields of investigation.

In the Daniel Scholl Observatory, too, decided progress has been made by the addition of new instruments and appliances, by means of which the work of the industrious professor who has charge of it, is made easier and more fruitful.

Perhaps the greatest improvement, because the want of it was so painfully felt, is the erection and equipment of the new Laboratory. While its influence is not so general or far-reaching as that of the Reading Room and the Library facilities which the college now enjoys, it puts the department of Natural Science and Chemistry on a plane with the other departments, and enables the incumbent of the chair to prosecute his work with joy and not with sorrow. The plan is one we have had in mind for years, and while the outlay of money is not very great, the realization adds wonderfully to the working capacity of the college. The arrangement of the working tables, the supply of apparatus and chemicals, the construction of the building, and the general equipment of both the larger and smaller working rooms, reflect much credit upon all who were concerned in the work. Similar improvements have been begun for the department of Physics, which are to be speedily followed by a full set of physical apparatus.

Just here it is proper that we should give honor to whom honor is due. The contributions which have made this great improvement in the college possible were begun in 1887 by two members of the Third Street Reformed church, Easton, Pa., Rev. H. M. Kieffer, D.D., pastor. The donors are Mr. Daniel Black and Mrs. Anna M. Eyerman, the former of whom gave $1000 and the latter $500. Later Mrs. James M. Hood of Frederick, Md., contributed $1000 ($500 for the proposed Library building). Other generous contributions were made by Mrs. C. K. Small, of Lancaster, Dr. S. H. Guilford of Philadelphia, with a number of others who gave smaller amounts. If these good friends can at all realize what a boon they have conferred upon the college, if they can even faintly surmise how we appreciate their gifts, or feel how earnestly we invoke God's blessing upon them (as we do upon all the generous friends and patrons of the college), what a satisfaction it must be to them, what a joy they must have in the fruit of their work of love!

And now as the college is rapidly advancing, its needs also become more pressing. We wish to name a few so that there may be no flagging in the good work.

1. We need a few more good contributions to complete the J. W. Nevin Memorial.
2. The outstanding subscriptions ought to be promptly paid.
3. Contributions of moneys or books, good books, new books, to the Library, will yield large returns on the investment.
4. Mineralogical or geological specimens, and objects of natural history will be thankfully received.
5. Contributions to the Scientific Fund are needed to make further improvements.
6. The increasing number of students makes the endowment of additional professorships an imperative necessity.
7. The erection of a Library building, a Scientific building or a new chapel, would enable us to pursue our work with tenfold greater ease and effect.

Besides these things we need funds for steam heating apparatus, a new pipe organ, the completion and equipment of the Gymnasium (now happily begun), and the improvement of the campus.

Friends, give us your prayers, your sympathy, your gifts, now if you can, or leave a blessing behind when you go to your reward in heaven.

J. S. S.

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 20, 1891.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A LETTER FROM SHENANDOAH VALLEY, VA.

I have been asked to write an article for the MESSENGER on my work in Virginia. This is not an easy task when it comes to deciding on what particular part of my work would be the most interesting to my readers. Having a commission from the Board of Missions and a number of letters from ministers of the church I started a stranger in a strange country to perform the work given me, viz: To visit the new towns springing up along the Shenandoah Valley R. R.

No sooner had I started on my way than my hands were thrust full of literature. And such literature as it was. Webster's Unabridged had been searched from beginning to end to find adjectives strong enough to give even the faintest idea as to what a great work is going on in Virginia. Talk of a vivid imagination and of flowery language, here in these sheets and pamphlets was enough to satisfy even the most enthusiastic.

In this place a great iron and steel metropolis is coming to the front. Pittsburgh and Birmingham are to be left far in the rear in the manufacture of these necessities. In another place, Altoona with her car shops is to find not only a rival but a peer. In still another place railroad after railroad is centering, giving promise of enormous trade in the near future.

As I read it seemed as if Aladdin's Lamp had come to the Old Dominion to transform her all at once into the brightest and best of all the States of the Union. There was one thing, however, that marred the beauty of the picture, and that was that there were so many places claiming to be the great ones. Cities of ample proportions and magnificent distances opened up on every hand.

Going about from place to place, keeping in mind the grand descriptions I had read, I found out much that was instructive in the manner of expressing oneself, so as to speak the truth and yet leave a favorable impression. For instance, a certain place is destined to be a great railroad centre. Such and such railroads are building towards it. At another place arrangements are being made on land adjoining the company's land for immense industrial plants. On the strength of these arrangements which are being made a future city is growing (?). It takes some study and a good deal of observation before one catches on, so as to make the advertisement and the actual facts correspond, but at last light dawns and the explorer is ready to go on his way rejoicing. He has found out that a railroad building towards a place does not necessarily imply that it must cross impossible barriers to get there. He has further found out that arrangements being made on land adjoining any company's land for industrial plants does not involve the integrity of that company if the whole scheme fails.

Having learned how to read the advertisements I was ready to get down to work and learn upon what foundations the great boom rested. In Pennsylvania it has long been a settled fact that the mountains contained the real wealth of the State. What is true of the old Keystone State is true of all the States through which the Allegheny system passes. Owing to different ideas and customs the South has so far left lie dormant the resources hidden in her mountains. Having swept across the prairies and mountains of the West, seeking new fields of enterprise, the explorer has at last been turned backward and is now pushing on with ceaseless tread to unearth the riches of the South.

On every side we see the skilled workman who has received his training elsewhere, busy at work laying the foundations upon which is to rest the material progress of this section. The iron, the coal, the lumber, in short the many natural resources with which this section abounds are all coming in for their share of notice. As a result, many furnaces, rolling mills, foundries, machine shops, and other manufacturing industries are springing up on every hand. Towns are going up in places as if by magic. People by the thousand are pouring into not only Virginia but all the mountain section of the South. A new era has dawned, bringing with it a hope that joining hand in hand in developing a common country there will soon pass away the thought that we have one people of the North and another of the South. That there are great resources, and that these resources are but beginning to be developed are two facts which soon impress the observer.

That there are many towns being laid out and boomed is another fact. It is also apparent to the most casual observer that many of the towns cannot grow. Just what towns will grow and what will not is a question hard to decide at present. Speculation in town lots is in many places wild and until money is brought down to the real development of the country there is going to be more or less uneasiness as to the growth.

Taking matters as they stand, with all the wild great expectations cast aside, I am firmly of the opinion that a great future is before this whole southland. Here it is that the thousands from the North are finding and will continue to find open doors for the skill acquired in their work-

Continued on Page 13.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

MELLIN'S

FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS.

TRADE ORA ET LABORA MARK.

FOOD

THE ONLY

Perfect Substitute for Mother's Milk.

INVALUABLE

IN CHOLERA INFANTUM AND TEETHING.

A quickly assimilated Food for DYSPEPTICS, CONSUMPTIVES, CONVALESCENTS.

A PERFECT NUTRIENT in all wasting diseases.

REQUIRES NO COOKING. KEEPS IN ALL CLIMATES.

SEND for our book, "The Care and Feeding of Infants," mailed free to any address.

DOLIBER-GOODALE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Snug little fortunes have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bonn, Toledo, Ohio. See cut. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time. Big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and wonderful. Particulars free.

H. Hallett & Co., Box 880 Portland, Maine

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.

VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA

"Once Tried, Always Used."

Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [64

Rubifoam 25¢

FOR THE TEETH

Deliciously Flavored

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS

SPENCERIAN STEEL PENS Are the Best

If You Wish To Try Them,

Samples of the leading numbers will be sent FREE on receipt of return postage, 2 cents. The Spencerian Pen Co., 810 Broadway, New York.

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE of 16,600f.

QUINA-LAROCHE'S INVIGORATING TONIC,

CONTAINING

Peruvian Bark, and Pure Catalan Wine.

Endorsed by the Medical Faculty of Paris, as the Best Remedy for

LOSS of APPETITE, FEVER and AGUE; MALARIA, NEURALGIA and INDIGESTION.

An experience of 25 years in experimental analysis, together with the valuable aid extended by the Academy of Medicine in Paris, has enabled M. Laroche to extract the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark (a result not before attained), and to concentrate them in an elixir, which possesses in the highest degree its restorative and invigorating qualities, free from the disagreeable bitterness of other remedies.

22 rue Drouot, Paris.

E. FOUGERA & CO., Agents for U. S.,

30 North William street, N. Y.

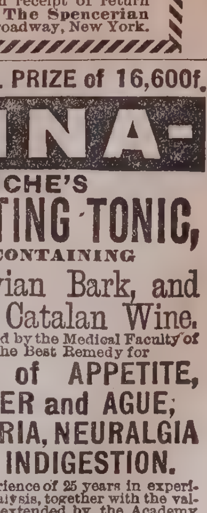
LAROCHE

BLATCHLEY WOOD FORCE PUMP Cheapest and most efficient. A Complete Fire Department on your premises. Write for descriptive circular. CHAS. G. BLATCHLEY, Philada.

HAIR

—ON—

Ladies' Faces



Destroyed forever. No pain, scar, shock, or injury by the Electric Needle by

DR. J. VAN DYCK,

Electro Surgeon,

1106 WALNUT ST, Phila.,

and 502 PENN AVE.,

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Never fails. Book free. Call or write.

shops. In this moving southward history is repeating herself. The original settlers of pretty much all this mountain section came from Pennsylvania and Maryland.

To-day the descendants of those left behind a hundred or more years ago are passing on to take a hand in building up the waste places. How different is this from the former tide. Then the pioneer with his ax and gun, slowly pushed his way into the wilderness, where by long, patient toil, he succeeded in getting a home. To-day, coming with steam and all the modern inventions, the pioneer is building up manufacturing interests and with his skill is bringing about a veritable revolution. As the typical Southerner sees these magical changes going on and begins to realize that a new power has come into the land, no wonder he is amazed and begins to tell the world that down here in Dixie we have a wonderful land.

Leaving their homes to seek their fortunes elsewhere, many persons leave behind them their religion also, is a fact that painfully impresses itself.

That the church has a great work to do is apparent on every side. Here is the spirit of development, and opening up of the God given resources. Should there not be also the teaching to turn the hearts of men to the great Giver of every good and perfect gift? As we look back over the history of our church we find that we as a church failed to go with our people to their new homes. Of late years we have tried to remedy this great evil, and have been and are still learning much that calls for a fuller consecration of our powers.

To-day in our own land the west calls loudly. The large cities everywhere are calling for helpers. And now flowing into this southland as it does, this stream of immigration calls to our church in a peculiar way.

Many of those moving are our sons and daughters. Many also have a kindly feeling towards us as being a church of their old home, a fact not to be overlooked, where there are divisions in the churches between the different sections of the country. Then last but not least is the fact that many of those coming are out in the world. To plant churches where the gospel is needed is getting to be the policy of the church. To do so successfully we must enter in as pioneers in places that give promise of growth.

There are many who complain that we as a church are too slow to enter into such work. As our Boards are getting experience they are getting also to be more prompt, and the day is fast coming, yea, is at hand, when it behoves the croaker to cease and go to work to strengthen the stakes so that the cords of our Reformed Zion may be lengthened.

How to save and strengthen the Classes of Virginia and North Carolina has long been a vexed problem. To-day there is being a way opened for the solution of the problem that points out clearly that we have a work to do in this section. This work calls upon the whole church as being one in a practically new territory. Last but not least it is a work that must commend itself to the two Classes most interested.

To bring out the Reformed church in their midst must make glad the heart of every true son and daughter of the church. At present work will be confined to three points. Basic City, in Augusta county, Va., is on the borders of our church. Forty-two miles south lies Buena Vista, while fifty-four miles further on lies Roanoke. From Roanoke the Roanoke and Southern R. R. is being built to Winston. When this is completed there will be a gap of only about one hundred and twenty-five miles between our church in Virginia and North Carolina.

Can churches be built in these new places is the problem now to be solved.

That grace and strength be given him to do well his part the missionary asks his readers to pray. Working and praying we will leave to God the result.

Yours in grace,
LEWIS REITER.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

OUR MISSION AMONG THE EMIGRANTS IN NEW YORK CITY.

A change in the person of our harbor missionary was thought to be advisable and even necessary for the success of the mission for some time. As long as three years ago a desire for such a change was expressed by ministers and laymen, who were interested in, realized the importance and understood the needs of our emigrant mission. But notwithstanding the earnest efforts of the Board of Home Missions of the German Synod of the East, to which Board the General Synod of 1887, convened at Akron, O., entrusted the management and control of said mission, a suitable man could not be found for the position, nor could the desired change be made until last fall, when the Board found in Bro. Paul Sommerlatte a man, in every respect, both capable and worthy of the important trust.

The Board of Home Missions of the German Eastern Synod did not act arbitrarily in this matter. At first it was in doubt whether it had the authority to make the proposed change, and therefore sought information and advice from several members of the Board of Home Missions of General Synod, especially from the President of said Board, the Rev. J. A. Peters, D.D. Even after we were assured that we were fully authorized to act in this matter, according to our best judgment, for the interest of the church, we took no further steps toward effecting this change until we were instructed to do so by our Synod at its late meeting in Baltimore, Md.

The new harbor missionary, appointed last December, is an elder in our congregation in East New York, of which Rev. J. Kuelling, D.D., is pastor. He is between thirty and forty years of age, conversant with the English as well as the German language, very sociable and of winning manners. Having received a higher education in his youth in the schools of his native land, Saxony, he had determined to study theology and enter the ministry; but on account of the influence a worldly-minded uncle exerted upon his father he was, to his deep and lasting regret, forced to abandon the course upon which he had entered and to engage in mercantile pursuits. His heart's desire is to work for the Lord and His church, and to lead souls to Christ. We firmly believe that he will fully justify the confidence placed in him.

Our harbor mission is an important and necessary branch of our Home Mission work. A number of brethren have reported that through our harbor mission they have received valuable additions to their congregations. And it is a blessed work, even though its tangible results may not always be as great as expected. Moreover our church is under solemn obligation especially toward those of the same household of faith, when they come as strangers to our shores, to give them Christian greeting, advice and direction, and to cheer and warm their hearts with true brotherly love.

The friends of our harbor mission will, as heretofore, make their requests and wishes known to our new harbor missionary. His address will very shortly be published in the church papers. Any contributions to enable him to assist poor emigrants will be most thankfully received. His salary is scarcely sufficient to support himself and family. All gifts will be promptly acknowledged and a full account of receipts and expenditures published from time to time in the church periodicals. God bless our harbor mission.

N. GEHR,
President of Board of Missions of German Synod of the East.

Christian World please copy.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE CLASSIS OF PHILADELPHIA.

At a special meeting of Classis held at the Publication Rooms, 907 Arch Street, on the 15th inst., the pastoral relation between Rev. H. T. Spangler and St. Luke's congregation, Trappe, Pa., was dissolved. A call to Rev. E. Clark Hibshman to the same was confirmed and a committee appointed to instal him. Shenkels Church of the Brownbacks Charge was separated from the charge, and the Lebanon Classis was overtured to cede the Birdsboro Mission to the Classis so as to form it and Shenkel's Church into a charge. The Goshenhoppen Classis was also overtured to cede to the Classis the territory around Royersford, with the view of organizing an interest there to be served in connection with some point within the bounds of Philadelphia Classis.

Church News.

☞Stated Clerks of Classes and Pastors will oblige us by sending such Items of News as will be of interest to the Church.

OUR OWN CHURCH.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia. — Christ church. The Ladies' Aid Society of this church gave their pastor, Rev. James Crawford, D.D., and wife, a reception in the church on Thursday evening, the 22d inst. A large number of the members of the congregation and their friends, together with several neighboring ministers of other denominations were present, to greet the pastor as he entered the place of assembly. It was an agreeable surprise to him. A very fitting address of welcome was made by Joseph A. Reed, Esq., after which Dr. Crawford and wife received those present. Music, social intercourse and the partaking of refreshments helped to make the occasion a pleasant one. The Ladies Aid Society is entitled to much praise for the success attending this exhibition of the affection and regard in which Dr. Crawford is held by the people unto whom he ministers in holy things.

Norristown.—Church of the Ascension. On Monday evening, the 19th inst., the members of this church gave their pastor, Rev. S. R. Bridenbaugh and wife, a very pleasant surprise. It was the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding day. Invited out for the evening, in answer to a hasty summons to the parsonage, they found it in possession of their people. A pleasant evening was spent. Professor-elect Rev. J. C. Bowman, a brother of the bride of the evening, was present and made a short address appropriate to the occasion. The pastor and wife received a number of handsome and useful presents. Both they and the members of the Church of the Ascension will not soon forget this "crystal" wedding.

Reading. — St. Andrew's Reformed church was dedicated on Sunday, the 25th inst. The services were conducted by Rev. C. F. McCauley, D.D., assisted by Revs. Dr. B. Bausman and H. Mosser. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev. Prof. J. C. Bowman, of the Theological Seminary, Lancaster, Pa. On the same day the pastor-elect, Rev. Stanley J. Krebs, was ordained and installed by a committee of Schuylkill Classis. Rev. A. R. Bartholomew preached the sermon, who with Rev. Drs. Bausman and McCau-

Continued on Page 14.

Cleveland's Baking Powder
Is Absolutely the Best,
Because—It is most economical: "An even teaspoonful of Cleveland's Baking Powder will do as much or more than a heaping teaspoonful of other powders."—Mrs. S. T. Rorer, Principal Philadelphia Cooking School.

Children always Enjoy It.
SCOTT'S
EMULSION
of pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda is almost as palatable as milk.
Children enjoy it rather than otherwise. A MARVELLOUS FLESH PRODUCER it is indeed, and the little lads and lassies who take cold easily, may be fortified against a cough that might prove serious, by taking Scott's Emulsion after their meals during the winter season.
Beware of substitutions and imitations.

THE WONDERFUL
LUBURG CHAIR.
COMBINING 5 ARTICLES OF FURNITURE.
50 CHANGES
100 STYLES.
BABY COACHES
INVALID SUPPLIES AND WHEEL CHAIRS
We retail at the lowest wholesale factory prices, and ship goods to be paid for on delivery. Send stamp for Catalogue. Name goods desired.
Automatic Brake on all Coaches
FREE WHEEL CHAIRS TO HIRE.
SPECIAL FREE DELIVERY.
LUBURG MFG. CO., 145 N. 8th St., Philada., Pa.

THE CURE FOR CATARRH
COLD IN HEAD
HAY FEVER
DEAFNESS
HEADACHE
ELY'S CREAM BALM
50c
ELY'S CREAM BALM
Applied into the Nostrils is Quickly Absorbed, Cleanses the Head, Heals the Sores and Cures
CATARRH
Restores Taste and Smell, Quickly Relieves Cold in Head and Headache.
50 cents at Druggists or by mail.
ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 133 Pearl St., N. Y.

For Gas
BAILEY'S
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass
REFLECTORS,
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free.
A. J. WEIDENER,
36 South 2d St. Philada.
For Oil
ALSO CHANDELIERS for OIL and ELECTRICITY

CHOICE CARPETINGS
IN ALL GRADES,
AT POPULAR PRICES.
A full line of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and Standard Domestic and Imported Carpets.
☞ We request only an OPPORTUNITY to show you our stock.
IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE.
NEW STORE,
1217 Market Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

CARPET buyers had better purchase of J. & J. DOBSON, 809 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, in order to receive full value for their money. They retail Carpets of their own make, which are reliable in every way.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.
Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and indorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your Grocers ought to have it on Sale Ask him for it. D. S. WILTBERGER, Prop., 232 N. 2d St. Phila., Pa.

SOWING & REAPING
By the Author of Gates Ajar, Song Treasury, etc.
Hymns, Tunes and Carols for the Sunday-school, Prayer, Praise and Gospel Service. Over 15,000 copies sold in advance of publication. 176 pages; beautiful lithograph title, superior in typography, press work, paper, binding and contents. Single copies, 35 cts, post paid. By express, $3.60 per doz., $30 per 100.
Address,
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

ley conducted the ordination and installation services. Collections were lifted at both services which amounted in the aggregate to over $2,000.

Trappe.—Rev. E. Clark Hibshman was installed pastor of St. Luke's church, this place, on Sunday morning, 25th inst., by a committee of Philadelphia Classis, consisting of Revs. H. W. Super, D.D., H. T. Spangler and A. H. Hibshman. Rev. Hibshman enters upon his new pastorate with every prospect of success. His father, Rev. Dr. H. W. Hibshman, was some years ago pastor of this same church.

Shenandoah.—Licentiate R. E. Butz has accepted a call to this place. Mr. Butz is a member of the last graduating class of the Theological Seminary, Lancaster, Pa.

Prospectville.—Rev. A. H. Hibshman, Pastor. Communion service was held on the morning of January 4th. Five persons were received into the communion of the Church: one by letter, two by confirmation and two by adult baptism. On New Year's Night upon his return home the pastor was surprised to find his rooms in the possession of the members of the congregation. He was presented with a pair of fur gloves and a collar both of elegant material. The ladies presented him with a beautiful sofa pillow. After partaking of refreshments which the ladies prepared, and exchanging well wishes for the coming year, having enjoyed a pleasant evening, the thoughtful visitors areturned to their homes.

Philadelphia.—At the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association of the Reformed churches, held on the 26th inst., a committee consisting of Revs. Crawford, Clark, Suckow, Sechler and Dahlman was appointed to consider the matter of the formation of a Church Extension or Missionary Society, and was requested to make a report to the meeting to be held on February 9th.

Wonders

Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.

"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa.

"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

Pittsburgh.–St. Mark's Memorial church. Rev. C. J. Musser has accepted a call to this church. The new congregation starts with 54 charter members.

Waynesboro.—Reformation Day (January 18th) was suitably observed in Trinity church of this place, Rev. F. F. Bahner, pastor. In the forenoon the celebration of the Holy Communion took place, in connection with which the pastor read to the congregation Zwingli's "Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper, as practised in Zurich in 1525." In the afternoon he spoke to the younger children of "Zwingli as a Boy at Home," and in the evening addressed the older boys and girls on "Zwingli at School." The offerings of the day were devoted to Beneficiary Education. Two young men were baptized and confirmed at the forenoon service.

Chambersburg.—St. John's, Rev. J. B. Shontz, pastor. At the communion services held in this church on the 18th inst., five were added to the membership, four of whom were confirmed. The pastor preceded the services by a week's preaching. The week following services were held each evening at Stoufferstown, about one mile from Chambersburg, where a number of members reside. Good results are expected. The work of the Lord is prospering in this new field and a glorious ingathering is expected at Easter. The prayers of the church should be offered for the success of this interest.

Hazelton.—Emmanuel's church. Communion services were held January 18th, and the attendance was fairly good. This mission became self-sustaining January 1st, 1891. The consistory at the January meeting felt that the pastor's salary should be increased. They gave him a donation of $50 in cash, and increased his salary $100 for 1891. This, with assuming self-support, is an increase for the congregation of $300. It is an heroic effort. May the Lord prosper them. He will prosper those who are faithful to Him. Work on the church is progressing, but not very rapidly, owing to the inclement weather. The roof is about half completed. Some of our friends are answering the appeal sent them, but how many there are who answer not at all. They will after a while? Very well. But think how much it is needed now. We lack considerably yet to make our second payment which falls due in a few weeks. Shall we hear from you? Rev. A. Noll, pastor.

Freeland.—Monday evening, January 19th, was appropriately celebrated as Reformation Day in St. John's Reformed church of Freeland, Pa., Rev. E. D. Miller, pastor. The pastor was assisted by Rev. H. A. Keyser of Mahanoy City, and Rev. A. Noll of Hazelton. The former addressed the congregation on "Frederick the Pious," the latter on "Catechization and its Importance." The meeting was very well attended and richly enjoyed by all. The day being also the anniversary of Bro. Miller's birthday, this event was doubly important to the pastor and his family and people.

Communion services were held in this church on January 18th, when a large portion of the membership communed. This service had been preceded by week day meetings for one whole week, at which the pastor was assisted by Revs. D. E. Schoedler and A. M. Masonheimer. The result was that greater interest in church life was awakened and many hitherto indifferent, will, doubtless, in the future, become active in the affairs of the congregation. Bro. Miller is a man consecrated to his work, and he desires the spiritual welfare of his people above all things to the glory of God. A. N.

Harrold's.—Rev. M. H. Mill, pastor. At the winter communion at this place, on the 18th inst., a class of twelve was confirmed.

MARYLAND.

Manor Charge.—Rev. S. L. Whitmore, pastor. Christmas festival services were held in this charge. All the churches took a deep interest in these services. The trimming, flowers, music, gifts and offerings all had their accustomed place. "Immanuel" was well rendered, especially at Adamstown, where there was the organ, piano, cornet and violin accompaniment. Offerings, $25.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Concord and China Grove.—The consistories of these two charges have arranged for a reconstruction so as to form two charges of two congregations each. The Classis will be asked to confirm this action. The arrangement is to go into effect at the close of this year. This will necessitate the resignation of the present pastors—Revs. P. M. Trexler, D.D., and Paul Barringer, the latter having already tendered his, and the former will do so in due time. This will leave the way open for a new selection on the part of the newly formed charges.

BOUND TO GET ON TOP.

In spite of all discouragements good gets on top. It takes long sometimes—it wears patience, and sometimes sours the disposition—but genuine good meets with genuine success. That's gospel to any one who knows the history of Drs. Starkey & Palen's Compound Oxygen Treatment. It is well known what obstacles had to be overcome at the outset, the most serious of which was the antipathy of physicians. But how is it now? To-day more than one thousand physicians use the Compound Oxygen Treatment in their practice. They have found it a faithful ally in their efforts to subdue disease, and they have admitted as much. A 200 page book which is free to any one, has the indorsements of many prominent physicians, besides the testimonials of clergymen and other professional men and women. It is over twenty years now that Drs. Starkey & Palen's Compound Oxygen Treatment has been doing its good work.

If you have anything that is good, you must say so; it is not enough to have value, the fact must be made known. So Drs. Starkey & Palen have given the Compound Oxygen Treatment its well-nigh universal vogue by systematic and careful advertising. The troubles of introduction and general acceptance were over years since, but they wish to remind you that the Compound Oxygen treetment is still available to assist the invalid.

Invalids need encouragement; it helps them to get well. The 200 page book above mentioned is filled from cover to cover with testimonials of grateful physicians and patients. It will be sent free of charge to any one addressing DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

SKINS ON FIRE

With AGONIZING ECZEMAS and other ITCHING, BURNING, SCALY, and BLOTCHY SKIN and SCALP DISEASES are relieved in the majority of cases by a single application of the Cuticura Remedies, and speedily, permanently, and economically cured, when physicians, hospitals, and all other remedies fail. Cuticura Remedies are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies of modern times, are absolutely pure, and may be used in the treatment of every humor, from the simplest facial blemishes to the severest diseases of the blood, skin, and scalp.

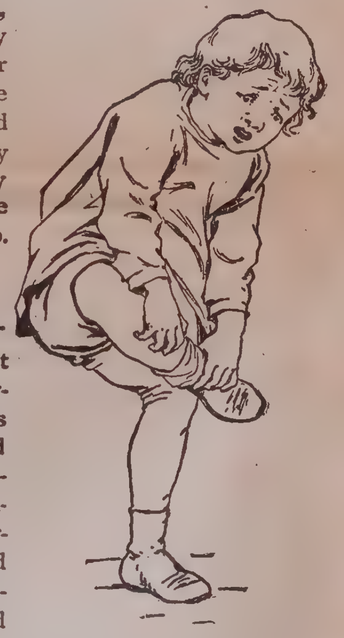
CUTICURA

The great Skin Cure, instantly allays the most intense itching, burning, and inflammation, permits rest and sleep, clears the scalp of crusts and scales, speedily soothes and heals raw and irritated surfaces, and restores the hair. CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, is indispensable in cleansing diseased surfaces. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier, and greatest of Humor Remedies, cleanses the blood of all impurities and poisonous elements, and thus removes the cause. Hence the CUTICURA REMEDIES cure every disease and humor of the skin, from pimples to scrofula.

☞ "HOW TO CURE DISEASES OF THE SKIN, SCALP, AND BLOOD" mailed free to any address, 64 pages, 300 Diseases, 50 Illustrations, 100 Testimonials. A book of priceless value to every sufferer.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Boston.

An Eye for Beauty is satisfied beyond expression when it gazes upon a skin purified and beautified by Cuticura Soap, incomparably the greatest of skin purifiers and beautifiers, while rivalling in delicacy and surpassing in purity the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only medicated toilet soap and the only preventive and cure of inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, rough, red, and oily skin, and simple humors of infants and children. Sale greater than the combined sale of all other skin soaps. Sold everywhere.



JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT Established 1810.

-UNLIKE ANY OTHER.-

Positively Cures Diphtheria, Croup, Asthma, Bronchitis, Colds, Tonsilitis, Hoarseness, Coughs, Whooping Cough, Catarrh, Influenza, Cholera Morbus, Diarrhœa, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Toothache, Nervous Headache, Sciatica, Lame Back, Soreness in Body or Limbs, Stiff Joints and Strains.

AS MUCH FOR INTERNAL AS FOR EXTERNAL USE.

It is marvelous how many different complaints it will cure. Its strong point lies in the fact that it acts quickly. Healing all Cuts, Burns and Bruises like Magic. Relieving all manner of Cramps and Chills.

ORIGINATED BY AN OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN.

All who buy direct from us, and request it, shall receive a certificate that the money shall be refunded if not satisfied. Retail price by mail 35 cts.; 6 bottles, $2.00. Express and duty prepaid to any part of United States or Canada. ☞ Valuable pamphlet sent free. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

GENERATION AFTER GENERATION HAVE USED AND BLESSED IT.

FOR INSOMNIA

Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. O. E. BINGHAM, Elgin, Ill., says: "I have used it in my practice for the past ten years, and am well pleased with the result."

For Reformed Church Messenger.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

On the 11th day of January, a new Reformed Church was dedicated at Bethel, Somerset Co., in a village on the S. & C. Railroad, a place of about two hundred inhabitants. Brother Burger having some members living in and around the village held services in such building as he could secure till at length it was thought advisable to erect a house of worship. There were only sixteen members who were immediately interested in the enterprise, but those sixteen had pluck and energy, and had a mind to work. The energetic pastor led this small force through all barriers and difficulties until the work was completed.

The church is a beautiful frame building with quite an imposing tower and a very excellent bell. The whole cost was about $1300. The interior is very neat and attractive, with hard wood finish, ceiling and all, including pulpit, altar, desk and altar-rail. The audience room is furnished with chairs and can seat about 200 people.

Dedication day opened and closed with rain, greatly to the disappointment of all concerned; yet the house was nearly filled. Still, many were not present who were eagerly expected, and it was thought best to postpone the service of dedication until evening. A sermon was preached by Rev. A. C. Snyder, of Tom's Brook, Va., after which an effort was made to secure at least part of the $550 still needed to make the house their own, and the effort was successful. In the afternoon a Sunday-school was organized and addresses were made by the ministers present, Revs. Earhart (of the Lutheran Church), Snyder and Kremer. In the evening, though it rained steadily, there was a crowded house. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev. A. R. Kremer; another effort was made to wipe out the debt and the whole amount was secured. Bravely done, we say. The people of Bethel—true to that significant name—all seemed to be interested in the good work, and helped to bring about such happy result. Much praise is due the pastor and his valiant little flock for their work so signally crowned with sucess.

During the previous week services were held in the new church, preaching by Revs. J. S. Wagner, Earhart, Snyder and the pastor. There is every reason to believe that the little flock of sixteen, now that they have such an inviting home of their own, will grow and become strong numerically as they are strong in good faith and good works. A. R. K.

Berlin, Pa., Jan. 19, 1891.

NOTICE.

The Ministerial Association of the Reformed Church in the Lehigh Valley will hold its next and third meeting at Easton, (College Hill) Pa., on Monday, February 2d, 1891, at 2.30 P. M., at the residence of Rev. Chas. W. Levan. An interesting programme has been prepared by the Executive Committee. EX. COMMITTEE.

Easton, Pa., Jan. 26, 1891.

Advice to the Aged.

Age brings infirmities, such as sluggish bowels, weak kidneys and bladder and torpid liver.

Tutt's Pills

have a specific effect on these organs, stimulating the bowels, giving natural discharges without straining or griping, and

IMPARTING VIGOR

to the kidneys, bladder and liver. They are adapted to old or young.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

DON'T Wear Stiff Corsets that ruin your health and comfort. Try "GOOD SENSE" Corset Waists They will please you.

NOTICE.

A Quarterly Meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Philadelphia Classis, will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 10th, 1891, at 10.30 A. M. and 2 P.M. in First Reformed church, 10th and Wallace streets, Philadelphia, Pa. All delegates and friends are earnestly requested to attend. Secretary.

NOTICE.

Harbor Missions at New York: 30 State Street.

All those who may expect relatives or friends from Europe to arrive at the port of New York, and those departing from here to Europe should communicate with our Harbor Misionary, Mr. Paul Sommerlatte, No. 30 State Street, New York City, and he will gladly give them all the advice and assistance possible without any charge. The names of the parties expected from Europe and the name of the ship they will arrive in, should be given to the missionary in time, and steerage passengers should be advised to carry the name of the missionary in sight while landing at New York, because the missionary is always present upon the arrival of steerage passengers in the Barge Office, and will take care of those directed to him.

Convenient lodging, good transportation, railroad and steamship tickets, passes, etc., can also be secured through the aid of our missionary. Address,

PAUL SOMMERLATTE,
30 State Street,
New York City, N. Y.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cures sick headache.

Acknowledgments.

Bethany Orphans' Home, Womelsdorf, Pa. Christmas Offerings received to January 6th, 1891.

(Continued from last week.)

Friend, Meyerstown,		$1 00
Thos B Schall, Baltimore, Md,		1 00
Per Chas Ochs, from Allentown,		3 00
Miss Soc, Ref cong, Freemansburg, T R Koch, secretary,		10 00
Ellen C Price, Harrisburg,		70
Jordan chge, Rev E J Fogel,		15 00
John S Rupp, Gordon, Pa,		5 00
Olivet Ref Mission S S, Reading, Pa, Rev H Y Stoner, pastor,		3 00
Ref Miss Soc and cong, Macungie, Rev T N Reber,		56 40
Knecht Bros, Parvin, Clinton Co, Pa,		10 00
Jane Bortz, Philadelphia,		1 00
Lady member of East Vincent Ref ch, Chester county,		5 00
P L Dieffenbacher and family, Turbotville, Pa,		2 00
Aid Soc, St Paul's Ref cong, Kutztown,		10 00
From friends, per H L Hertzog, Macungie,		4 20
S P Heilman, Heilman Dale, Lebanon Co,		5 00
Pikeland Ref S S, Chester county, Pa,		5 00
Salem Ref cong, Catasauqua, Rev W F More, pastor,		52 38
S S of Boehm's Ref ch, Montgomery Co, Pa, Rev C E Wehler,		43 13
Lady friend of Home, Kulpsville, Montgomery Co, Pa,		3 00
Natalie E Beighe, East Mauch Chunk, Pa,		2 00
Rev D B Albright and wife, Mohrsville, Pa,		5 00
Geo K Lorah, Brumfieldville, Berks Co, Pa,		5 00
Sunday-school class of Miss Katie Althouse, Sellersville, Pa,		400
Jared Harper, Bellefonte,		25 00
Daniel C Herr, Harrisburg,		25 00
Miss Sophie R Gelbach, Phila,		5 00
Ladies' Aid Soc, Ref ch, Sellersville, Rev J G Dengler,		15 00
Sellersville Ref S S, per Rev J G Dengler,		11 07
Mrs H T Trumbower, Passer, Bucks Co, Pa,		5 00
Mrs A R Trumbower, " "		2 00
J W Fly, Perkasie, Bucks county, annual contribution,		2 00
Per Rev S Schweitzer, Ephrata, Lancaster Co,		10 00
E H Burkholder, Esq, Farmersville, Lancaster county,		5 00
New Jerusalem chge, Rev W Donat,		6 00
Pine Grove chge, Rev C B Schneder,		27 55
Christ Ref S S, Huber's church, Rev Eli Keller, pastor,		17 62
Ref S S, Meyerstown, Rev H Hilbish,		13 49
St Luke's Ref cong, Lancaster, Rev W H Lichliter, pastor,		11 00
Misses Mary and Ellen Buchie, Lewisburg,		10 00
St Paul's Ref S S, Mechanicsburg, Rev W I Stewart,		17 42
Salem's Ref S S, Allentown, Rev A J G Dubbs, D D, pastor,		46 10
St Paul's Ref cong, Robesonia,		10 10
Mrs Smock, South Bethlehem,		1 00
Rev J B Stonesifer, Schellsburg, Pa,		1 00
Salem's Ref ch, Penn Hall, Pa,		5 15
Zion's Ref S S, Millersville, 9.50, Rev J P Stein, do, 1.00,		10 50
Ref cong, Elizabethtown, Rev S M Roeder,		15 61
East Vincent Ref S S, per I C Fisher,		13 50
Pius B Weaver, Bethlehem,		1 00
Ref S S, Willow Street, 10.50, Heller's Ref S S, 9.50, Rev D W Gerhard,		20 00
Ref S S, Bellefonte, Rev M Noll, pastor,		20 00
Ref cong, Milton, Pa, Rev D W Ebbert, pastor,		20 00
Ashland Ref S S, Rev R Duenger, DD, pastor,		10 00
St John's ch, Reading, Rev J W Steinmetz, pastor, S S, 31.70, cong, 10.00,		41 70
Schwartzwald charge, Rev A S Leinbach, DD, pastor,
Schwartzwald cong,	23 00
Henry Moyer, member of same,	2 00
St Laurence S S,	6 00
Alsace cong,	9 25
Sholter's cong,	4 00
Hinnershitz cong,	6 00	50 25
St Stephen's Ref S S, Reading, Rev C S Gerhard, pastor,		22 14
Zionsville Ref S S, Rev Eli Keller, DD, pastor,		14 38
Mrs A B Stoner, Landisburg, Perry county,		10 00
Class No 6, Amityville S S, Berks county,		2 35
Bethany (Orphans' Home) cong,		24 24
Total,		$1729 96

Thankfully received,

C. G. GROSS, Treasurer.

3716 Haverford Ave., Phila., Pa.

GOODS RECEIVED.

Zion's ch, York, Pa, Rev O P Schellhamer, clothing, 5 skirts, 10 aprons, 8 waists, 2 white aprons, 3 sheets, silk handkerchief, and lot of girls' underwear.

St John's Ref ch, Lebanon, per Mrs Mary G Heitshu, dry goods, 5 scrap books and 10 dolls.

Women's Miss Soc Ref churches of Lancaster, 27 dolls, building blocks, etc.

Mrs E S Beck, Annapolis, Md, 5 white aprons.

Master Thos B Snyder, Spring City, 6 comfortables and lot of Christmas cake.

Henry Smith and family, Lehigh Gap, box of girls' clothing, Rev T A Huber.

Leinbach & Bro, Reading, 100 pretzels.

Samuel Mumma, Womelsdorf, one barrel sweet potatoes.

Ladies' Aid Soc, 1st Ref ch, S Bethlehem, one comforter, Rev N Z Snyder.

Mrs Ann E Mounare, Pittsville P O, Philadelphia, one quilt.

Pastor's Helpers, Zion's Ref ch, Allentown, Rev T J Hacker, 15 woolen shirts, overcoat, gingham, calico, cotton, and lot of Christmas cakes.

St Paul's Memorial ch, Reading, 27 woolen shirts, bananas, oranges, cakes, and candy. Estimate $22.

First Ref ch, Philadelphia, box containing fur caps, comfortable, tea, sugar, dried fruit, canton flannel, corn starch, etc, contributed at a "Service of Giving."

Miss Josie Doll, Phila, 82 Christmas cards.

St John's Ref ch, Allentown, Rev S G Wagner, DD, Girls' Mission Band, 3 quilts and candy in stockings for the whole family; congregation and Sunday-school, lot of girls' hats, girls' coats, box wafers, candy, cakes, oranges and girls' clothes.

Soc of Christian Cheer, Trinity Ref ch, York, Pa, 14 sheets, 30 wash rags and tea towels

R T Whiskeyman, Womelsdorf, Pa, box of Christmas cakes.

Adam Laubach, Seigfried's Bridge, Pa, three boxes assorted cakes and crackers.

Mrs Sallie G Feather, Pottstown, one box raisins, one box oranges.

Rev Geo B Russell, Zullinger, Pa, 3 sheets.

Mr Samuel Wishard; " 1 "

Christ Ref ch, Bethlehem, Pa, Rev G A Schwedes, pastor, from Ladies' Aid Soc, one quilt; members of the congregation, quilt, one pair of shoes, five woolen shirts, table cloths, towels, flannel, sugar, lot of Christmas cakes and candy.

1st Ref ch, Reading, Rev H Mosser, pastor, barrel containing two quilts, butter, apples, nuts, oranges, cakes, candy and toys, estimated at $8.

Mifflinburg Ref cong, Rev L D Steckel, pastor, 11 lbs butter, 16 lbs soap, 13 aprons, 8 shirts, 18 handkerchiefs, 2 quilts, 2 pair mittens, comfortable, pair pillow cases, pair of shoes, girls' underwear, prunes, walnuts, etc.

Ref cong, Macungie, Rev T N Reber, pastor, lot of dry goods.

St Paul's Ref S S, Lancaster, Pa, Class G, 1 doz pair rubbers.

St Paul's Ref cong, Lancaster, dress goods, flannel, canton flannel, shirting, towels and towelling, 8 ties, 44 pair stockings, 15 pairs suspenders, 16 handkerchiefs, rice, etc.

Unknown friend, aprons and comfortable.

Thankfully received,

THOMAS M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

Acknowledgment.

From Whitemarsh Sunday-school—
For Orphan's Home,	$16 29
Foreign Missions,	7 43
From Whitemarsh congregation—
For Home Missions,	10 00
Beneficiary Education,	11 45
Per Rev J D Detrick, pastor.
Moses Hess, Dellville,	2 50
First Ref S S, Phila, per Miss Doll,	27 00
	$74 67

CHAS. G. FISHER.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

PAINLESS. EFFECTUAL.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS SUCH AS

Sick Headache, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Constipation, Disordered Liver, etc.,

ACTING LIKE MAGIC on the vital organs, strengthening the muscular system, and arousing with the rosebud of health The Whole Physical Energy of the Human Frame.

Beecham's Pills, taken as directed, will quickly RESTORE FEMALES to complete health.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Price, 25 cents per Box.

Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England.

B. F. ALLEN CO., Sole Agents for United States, 365 & 367 Canal St., New York, who (if your druggist does not keep them) will mail Beecham's Pills on receipt of price—but inquire first. (Mention this paper.)

THE J.P. BUSH M'f'g. Co.
BOVININE

BOVININE

A CONDENSED FOOD

THE Season Is Now Upon Us When CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, PNEUMONIA, RHEUMATISM, &c., Reign Supreme. In All such cases the Patient's Strength and Vitality should be sustained by a Free Use of BOVININE.

25,000 PHYSICIANS recommend it, and hundreds of thousands of people ARE NEVER WITHOUT IT.

Mrs. Sarah E. Urie pays $500,000 to Mrs. Matthew Baird as the price of the Hastings Square property, at Spring Lake Beach, N. J.

Men and women prematurely gray and whose hair was falling, are enthusiastic in praising Hall's Hair Renewer for restoring the color and preventing baldness.

A merchant cannot afford to sell at a small profit unless he does a large business, and the merchant cannot expect to do a large business unless he advertises his bargains.—Reading Eagle.

Why rub, and toil, and wear out yourself and your clothes on washday, when, ever since 1864 Dobbins' Electric Soap has been offered on purpose to lighten your labor, and save your clothes. Now try it. Your grocer has it.

We shall never acquire any great capacity for joy; the blessed peace of God will never possess our mind and heart, so long as we shrink from self denial.—D. March.

An Extended Popularity.—BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES have been before the public many years. For relieving Coughs, Colds and Throat Diseases they have proved reliable. Sold only in boxes. Price, 25 cents.

There is a female revolutionist in Japan who is described as young, pretty and wealthy, and whose only disadvantage is the hideous name of Kageama Hiddo. She proposes to be to Japan what Louise Michel has been to France, if the colors don't fade in the wash.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. Sold by druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

"SPECIAL"
CLEARING SALE
FOR CHANGE OF PLANS.
Our Entire Stock of English Clothing will be Closed Out
At Half Value.
E. O. THOMPSON,
SPECIAL CLOTHIER AND IMPORTER,
1338 Chestnut Street.
(Opposite the Mint.)

CLINTON H. MENEELY BELL COMPANY,
TROY, N. Y. Manufacture a Superior Grade of
CHURCH CHIME PEAL AND SCHOOL BELLS

Best quality Bells for Churches, Chimes, Schools, etc. Fully warranted. Write for Prices. BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY. VAN DUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY,
BALTIMORE, MD.
Best quality Copper and Tin BELLS for Churches, Schools, &c.
Also CHIMES AND BELLS.
Price and terms free. Name this paper.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N.Y., Bells
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others.

RIGGS & BROTHER,
Branch Store, 1005 Walnut St., Phila.
Ladies' 14-Carat Gold Watches, $25.
" 14-Carat filled case " 18.
Boys' Silver Watches, $7.00.
Watches and Clocks repaired.

400,000 The largest circulation of any periodical in the world. "The Phila. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies free. CURTIS PUB. CO., Phila., Pa.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS

Over 200,000 ESTEY ORGANS are singing their own praises the world over, as the most reliable organ made for tone, durability and fine finish. The ESTEY PIANO is as thoroughly and carefully made and guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has. If you want a first-class Piano that is sure to please you buy an ESTEY. Lowest prices for cash, or on easy monthly payments.
ESTEY, BRUCE & CO. 18 N. Seventh St. Philadelphia, Pa.

KNABE
PIANOS.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
BALTIMORE, 22 and 24 East Baltimore Street,
New York, 148 Fifth ave. Washington 817 Market Space
F. A. NORTH & Co., Sole Agents,
1308 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Mention this paper.
Books
New Books every week.
Catalogue, 132 pages. free
not sold by Dealers; pric too low; buy of the Pu
lisher, JOHN B. ALD
393 Pearl St., New Y

Dr A H Strickler] 14Feby90

ARCHITECTU
CHAS. W. BOLTON, 1510 Chestn Phila
Sketches of Churches, Public Buildings, Dwellings, etc., furnished gratis. Then, if desired, drawings and specifications will be prepared for a reasonable consideration.

Over 350,000 acres of Choice Farm Lands Failure of crops never known. Best all-the-year climate in the world. Soil adapted to all kinds of farming. Plenty of water. Low prices, and unusually liberal terms. C. E. SIMMONS, Land Com., C. & N.-W. R'y, Chicago, Ill.

ASTHMA—DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA!
Delicious, nourishing, absolutely pure. Costing less than one cent a cup.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE

The Great Church LIGHT.
FRINK'S Patent Reflectors give the Most Powerful, the Softest, Cheapest and the Best Light known for Churches, Stores, Show Windows, Parlors, Banks, Offices, Picture Galleries, Theatres, Depots, etc. New and elegant designs. Send size of room. Get circular and estimate. A liberal discount to churches and the trade. I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl Street, N. Y.

FORTY-THIRD ANNUAL STATEMENT
OF THE
PENN MUTUAL LIFE
Insurance Co. of Philadelphia.

Net Assets, January 1, 1890, . . .		$14,298,397 14
Receipts during the year:
For premiums, . .	$3,608,190 99
For Interest, etc., .	938,675 97	4,546,866 96
		$18,845,204 10

DISBURSEMENTS.

Claims by Death .	$1,068,909 07
Matured Endowment	182,570 85
Surrendered Policies	223 912 22
†Premium Abatements,	596,067 36
Total paid Policy-holders,	$2,071,459 50
Added to Reserve,	$1,507,715 00
Taxes and Legal Expenses	107,845 07
Salaries, Medical Fees, and Office Expenses,	138 979 65
Commissions to Agents and Rents	425,814 02
Agency and other Expenses, ...	131,518 17
Advertising, Printing, and Supplies, ...	30,425 88
Office Furniture, . .	6,889 09	$2,912,935 38
Net Assets, Jan. 1, 1891		$15,932,328 72

†Being sums allowed in reduction of collectible premiums.

ASSETS.

City Loans Railroad and Water Bonds, Banks and other stocks, .	$6,084,164 49
Mortgages and Ground Rents, first liens, ...	5,433,458 65
Premium Notes secured by policies,	557,618 62
Loans on Collaterals, Policy Loans, etc	2,696,800 91
Home Office and Real Estate bought to secure loans	958,851 60
Cash in Trust Companies and on hand	281,134 51
Net Ledger Assets, as above,	$15,932,328 72
Net deferred and Unreported Premiums	$407,384 10
Interest Due and Accrued, etc. . .	130,738 61
Market Value of Stocks, Bonds, over cost	104,409 57
Gross Assets, January 1, 1891,	$16,574,861 00

LIABILITIES.

Death Claims Reported but awaiting proof .	$144,320 00
Reserve at 4 per cent. to re-insure Risks . .	14,226,413 00
Surplus on Life Rate Endowment, Unreported Policies, etc. . . .	569,675 97
Surplus, 4 per ct. basis,	1,634,452 03
		$16,574,861 00

Surplus at 4½ per cent., Pennsylvania Standard, (Estimated)	$2,508,120 03
New Business of the Year, 7,539 policies, for	$20,568,534 00
Insurance Outstanding, Dec. 31, '90, 35,345 policies for	$90,278,701 00

EDWARD M. NEEDLES, President.
HORATIO S. STEPHENS, Vice-President.
HENRY C. BROWN, Secretary and Treasurer.
JESSE J. BARKER, Actuary.

DEAFNESS & HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Tubular Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Successful when all remedies fail. Sold FREE by F. HISCOX, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs

THE
SHEPHERD BOY AND HIS DOG.
From the German of Gustav Nieritz.
BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

It is an interesting story with scenes laid both in Gemany and Russia.

It should be in every Sunday-school Library. Price, $1.00, postpaid.

Address,
Reformed Church Publication House
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

AMERICAN FIRE
INSURANCE COMPANY,
Office, Company's Building,
308 and 310 WALNUT STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

A.D. 1810

CASH CAPITAL,...........................$500,000.00
Reserve for Reinsurance and all other claims,..........................1,733,053.18
Surplus over all Liabilities,...... 409,616.79
TOTAL ASSETS, JAN. 1, 1890.
$2,642,669.97.
THOS H. MONTGOMERY, President.
CHAS. P. PEROT, Vice-President.
RICHARD MARIS, Secretary,
JAMES B. YOUNG, Actuary
DIRECTORS.
Thos. H. Montgomery,
John T. Lewis,
Israel Morris,
Pemberton S. Hutchinson,
Alexander Biddle,
Charles P. Perot,
Joseph E. Gillingham,
Samuel Welsh, Jr.
Chas. S. Whelen.

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE
Capital paid up $1,500,000 TRUST CO. Surplus over $100,000
DENVER, COLORADO.
First Mortgage Loans and Gold Debentures.
Loans fully guaranteed. Safe as Government Bonds.
Philadelphia Office, Room 302 Bullitt Building,
ROBT. FORESMAN, Manager.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum. M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

The PENN MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.
Issues all approved forms of contracts adapted to every legitimate need, at the lowest, sure rates. Send for rates, etc. Home Office, 921 Chestnut Street. Philada.

CHURCH, HALL AND LODGE
Furniture. Pulpits, Chairs, Pews, etc.
BAXTER C. SWAN, 244 & 246 S. 2d St., Phila, Pa

CUMBERLAND VALLEY RAILROAD TIME TABLE.—December, 1890.

DOWN TRAINS.	H'g. Exp. No.2.	H'g. Acc. No 4	Mail train No 14	Day Exp. No.8.	Ev'g Mail No. 6 daily	N'ht Exp No10
LEAVE	A.M.	A.M.	A M.	A.M.	P.M.	P.M.
Winchester			7 00		2 10	5 00
Martinsburg			7 45		2 55	6 30
Hagerstown	4 15		8 30	12 30	3 45	9 05
Greencastle	4 37		8 55	12 55	4 13	9 32
Marion			9 06	1 06	4 24	9 43
Chambersburg	5 00	7 00	9 25	1 25	4 45	10 00
Shippensburg	5 22	7 23	9 48	1 48	5 09	10 24
Newville	5 42	7 44	10 07	2 07	5 30	10 44
Carlisle	6 05	8 08	10 30	2 30	5 55	11 06
Mechanicsburg	¶	8 33	10 54	2 54	6 22	11 30
Arrive Harrisburg	6 50	8 55	11 15	3 15	6 45	11 59
ARRIVE	A.M.	A.M.	A.M	P.M.	P.M.	P.M.
Philadelphia	10 20	1 25	3 15	6 50	10 55	4 25
Baltimore	10 10	1 15	3 10	7 45	10 40	6 25
	A.M.	P.M.	P.M.	P.M.	P.M.	A.M.

UP TRAINS.	Mp's Exp No. 3	Mail train No 9.	Acc. No. 5	Fast Line No.1.	H'bg Acc. No11	N.O. Exp. No. 7
LEAVE	P.M.	A.M.	A.M.	A.M.	P.M.	P M.
Baltimore	11 30	4 50	9 10	11 55	4 32	4 32
Philadelphia	11 25	4 30	8 50	11 40	4 25	5 22
LEAVE	A.M	A M.	A.M.	A.M	P.M.	P M.
Harrisburg	4 15	8 05	12 30	4 05	7 30	8 50
Mechanicsburg	4 35	8 27	12 52	4 27	7 52	9 08
Carlisle	4 58	8 52	1 17	4 52	8 17	9 27
Newville	5 20	9 15	1 40	5 15	8 40	9 50
Shippensburg	5 54	9 36	2 02	5 38	9 01	10 08
Chambersburg	6 05	10 00	2 25	6 00	9 25	10 27
Marion	6 22	10 17	2 42	6 17
Greencastle	6 32	10 28	2 52	6 28		10 50
Hagerstown	7 15	11 00		7 00
Lv Martinsburg	9 00	11 40		7 40
Arr Winchester	10 30	12 25		8 25
	A.M.	NOON	P.M.	P.M.		P.M.

On Sundays trains 3 and 11 west and 6 east will run between Harrisburg and Hagerstown, and a train will leave Hagerstown at 7.15 A.M., running one hour later than time of No. 4.

¶ Will stop at Mechanicsburg to let off passengers from points west of Carlisle.

THIS BRIGHT NEW 1891
needs the brightest and best of music. The 2,000,000 readers of this ad. are all invited to provide themselves with music or music books from our complete and varied stock.

☞Send freely for lists and information.

SOME OF OUR NEWEST BOOKS.

SONGS OF IRELAND. $1.00. Choice, revised collection of very favorite songs. 66 songs. 144 pages.

POTTER'S RESPONSES AND SENTENCES. 75 cts.; $6.75 doz. A timely and good collection, which will be welcomed by many choirs. More than 50 short pieces, with a number of Glorias, Chants, &c.

PRAYER AND PRAISE. Cantata. Ballard. A good and easy cantata, for a Choir or Chorus. 50 cents; $4.50 per doz.

MASONIC ODE. Fithian. A new, most convenient book of easy and good music, perfectly fitted for the masonic ritual. Much needed. 60 cts.; $6 doz.

COMIC AND MINSTREL SONGS. $1.00. 46 merry songs, well calculated to make time pass cheerfully.

BANNER FOLIO. Violin and Piano. Winner. Large number of popular melodies, skilfully arranged for Violin, with Piano accompaniment. $1.00.

MANDOLIN AND PIANO DUETS. Winner. About 75 popular airs for Mandolin and Piano. $1.00.

Any Book mailed, post-paid, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY, Boston
J. E. DITSON & Co., 1228 Chestnut St., Phila.

DO NOT STAMMER.
Prof. H. C. Wood, M.D., LL.D, University of Pennsylvania, writes: "I have seen a number of cases of stammering in which Mr. Johnston obtained most excellent results."
Send for 54-page pamphlet to E. S. JOHNSTON'S Institute, N. E. Cor. 11th and Spring Garden Sts. Phila., Pa.

If You Knew
Why these leading religious weekly papers had paid other advertisers, would not it be reason for you to try them?
1. They are read by prosperous families.
2. Their readers believe in them thoroughly.
3. They reach over 240,000 families every week.
4. They do not conflict in circulation, but cover different denominations.
5. Through them an advertiser is received with the confidence that attaches to a trusted friend.
6. They are read carefully in the quiet of the home circle, so that advertisements are sure to be seen and given attention.
7. The cost to advertise is low, and is arranged in a series of fixed discounts that gives to all advertisers equal service for the amount of their investment.

You Do Know
Whether you have anything to sell which prosperous families would buy if it were known to them. It is for you to tell them. It is for us to help you. We do it willingly. Ask for information.

THESE LEADING RELIGIOUS HOME JOURNALS 14 BEST WEEKLIES

PHILADELPHIA.
The Sunday School Times....Undenominational
The Presbyterian..........Presbyterian
The Lutheran Observer..........Lutheran
The National Baptist..........Baptist
The Christian Standard.......... Methodist
The Presbyterian Journal..........Presbyterian
The Reformed Church Messenger.................... Reformed Church
The Episcopal Recorder......Reformed Episcopal
The Christian Instructor.....United Presbyterian
The Christian Statesman.........Christian Politics
The Lutheran..........Lutheran
The Christian Recorder.........African Methodist

BALTIMORE.
The Baltimore Baptist..........Baptist
The Episcopal Methodist..........Methodist

The advertising rate is low and fixed. We shall be glad to receive your request for fuller information.

The RELIGIOUS PRESS ASSOCIATION
(MUTUAL LIFE BUILDING),
CHESTNUT & TENTH STREETS,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Reformed Church Messenger.

"AS THE TRUTH IS IN JESUS."

VOL. LIX.—NO. 6. PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, FERRUARY 5, 1891. WHOLE NO. 2926.

Entered at the Post-Office, Philadelphia, as second-class matter.

The Reformed Church Messenger.

ISSUED WEEKLY

IN THE INTERESTS OF THE

REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES

BY THE

REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE,

CHAS. G. FISHER, Proprietor,

Office: 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(For Terms, see page 11.)

Editorial Notes.

—The next Seminary Endowment Convention in the Pittsburgh Synod will be held in the Fairview charge, Butler county, Pa., Rev. H. S. Garner, pastor, from Feb. 10th to 14th.

—In the communication of Rev. J. W. Love in reference to Wichita University, in the issue of the 22d ult., he was made to say: "We are expecting to win a law-suit against the men who gave us a bond to pay for the building, but left us stick to the amount of over $4,000, etc." It should have read, "over $14,000."

—As it will be seen from a communication in another place, Rev. E. H. Dieffenbacher of Pleasant Unity, Pa., has been made to pass through sore bereavement in the death of his estimable wife. The prayers and sympathies of the Church are with him and the bereaved children in their great earthly loss. The Lord comfort and sustain them!

—The Pacific Volks Bote is the name of a small four paged German paper, to be issued monthly in the interests of the Reformed Church in the Pacific States, at Astoria, Oregon, by Rev. J. G. Schmid, missionary at Astoria. The subscription price is 50 cents a year. The January number is before us. It is filled with interesting matter. No doubt its circulation among the membership of the Church on the Pacific coast will be productive of much good.

—The Missionary Guardian for February is already in the hands of the subscribers. It is regarded as a good number. The subscription list is growing, but not as fast as one should suppose it would. The low price of subscription, it was thought, would enable the membership of the Church to generally subscribe for it. No doubt its list will soon number in the thousands. It will if it and its object are made known. Let the friends of the great cause of Missions help it forward by showing and talking of it to others!

—The New Era, of Lancaster, Pa., of the 24th ult., contains an abstract of an essay upon MORAL BEAUTY: "The Mark God sets on Virtue," which was read by John W. Apple, Esq., before the Cliosophic Society of that city, on the evening of the 23d ult. It is well written and exhibits much research and thought on the part of the essayist. It was well received by the society. We regret that the crowded state of our columns prevents us from giving it to our readers.

—As will be seen from a brief In Memoriam in another place, Mrs. Eleanor L., relict of the late Rev. J. S. Dubbs, D. D., of Allentown, Pa., entered into rest on the 29th ult., at an advanced age. The furneral services were held in Salem Reformed church on Monday afternoon, the 2d inst., and were in charge of Rev. G. W. Richards, assistant pastor. An appropriate sermon was preached by Rev. C. Z. Weiser, D. D., of East Greenville, Pa. The Church will be with the only son, Rev. Joseph H. Dubbs, D. D., and others of the family in their sorrow occasioned by the departure of their loved one and extend to them heartfelt sympathy.

—It will be recollected that a few weeks ago we asked for contributions to a fund which would be applied to sending the MESSENGER to such ministers and members who could not afford to subscribe for it. In response to our request, we have received a number of contributions, not by any means as many as we had reason to expect. As it is, we have been able to afford several the privilege of receiving the weekly visits of the church paper, and our thanks, in their behalf, are due to those who have enabled us to do so. The Sunday-school at Meyersdale, Pa., sent $2 to send the MESSENGER to a minister who was not able to pay for it himself. This was a generous act on the part of this school, and it has set an example worthy of imitation by others. We hope this noting of it will be the means of our receiving other contributions for the same laudable purpose.

—A correspondent, "X. Y. Z," gives in this issue, some good reasons why the endowment of more professorships in the Theological Seminary should for the present not be pressed, and why every effort should be made to raise the funds necessary for the erection of a building for the professors and students. We think they should be heartily accepted and should result in all energetically entering into the project of at once securing funds for the erection of the much needed Seminary building. The Church removed the Theological Seminary from Mercersburg to Lancaster upon the condition that $50,000 should be raised to provide it with a suitable home. Why was this not carried out? It is a shame that the Church has so far failed to fulfil such a solemn obligation.

—A contemporary asks: "What shall we say of the hundreds of elders and deacons in our Church who take no religious newspaper?" Another adds: "Speak of them as kindly as possible under the circumstances." We need not add anything except, that it is a matter of great surprise that so many office-bearers in the Church take so little interest in things outside of their own congregation. And this is because they are not readers of that which will tell them from week to week what is going on in the Church. Pastors owe it to such, to the congregation in which they are office-bearers and to the Church at large, that they see that every elder and deacon in their congregrations are readers of the church paper. It is as necessary to them, if not more so, than the secular paper. The latter tells of things of this world; the former, of those of the one which is to come.

—The publisher of The Lutheran, of this city has been urged to reduce its subscription to $2.00, the price now being $2.25. The reason advanced for the reduction is, that the publisher would get more subscribers if the 25 cents were taken off. The Lutheran man thinks, and that very wisely, that the offer of his paper at $2.00 would not increase the subscription list. On this we can speak from experience. When the subscription price of the MESSENGER was $2.20, the Board of Publication was urged to reduce it to $2.00, and if it were done, it was said, more new subscribers could be secured for it. The Board acceded to the request, but we do not think that anymore have been added than the usual number resulting from the increased membership of the Church. No, it is not the low price of a paper that induces people to subscribe for it. You can offer some things at too low a price, the effect being to give them a cheap look, and the consequent turning away from them by those who are expected to take them because of the low price asked. Rather, give the Church a good paper at a fair and proper price and her members will show their appreciation of it by liberally and cheerfully supporting it. When you bring the paper down to their level they turn away from it. A writer in The Indepcndent says in an article on "The Religious Press of the Next Decade:" "If the publisher says his paper is cheap, all the people will say Amen. But the religious public is self-respecting. It wants and is willing and able to pay for, the best." If this was ever true, it is so in reference to our own Church. There has been too much of doing things on the cheap order, giving our people cheap papers and cheap books. The effect is to cause them to think little of their Church. They should have the best and then will they rise above the low plane in which some seem to think they are moving. We feel we are giving the Church in the MESSENGER a full return for her patronage, and could give her something better if that were more liberal. In saying this we speak not our own praise, for not a day passes that we do not receive encouraging words from our readers who tell us they "do not see how they could do without it and wonder why there are so many members who do not take it."

—In keeping with the above—"Rambler," in the National Baptist of this city, says:

"There is among us, (as it were, in our midst) a long-felt want. What is wanted is a newspaper. But have we not already newspapers? Yes, but this is a newspaper of a peculiar kind. What is wanted is a religious newspaper that will express everybody's views, that will contain nothing from which any one will ever dissent, which will publish all the sermons desired by the hearers or authors, which will plead everybody's cause, which will have all the articles printed in italics (except such as are printed in capitals), which will publish every article within two days after it is received, and which will put everybody's article in the first column on the first page and will occupy the rest of the paper with directing attention to it. Now, when such a paper as this is found among us, the Rambler does not hesitate to say that he will be willing to take one copy, at club rates, for ten years, payable at the expiration of the subscription, subject to renewal on the same terms, with a free copy thrown in."

Poetry.

WHAT WOULD JESUS SAY?

BY REV. EDWARD H. BICKERSTETH.

When the morning paints the skies,
  And the birds their songs renew,
Let me from my slumbers rise,
  Saying, "What would Jesus do?"

Countless mercies from above
  Day by day my pathway strew,
Is it much to bless Thy love?
  Father, "What would Jesus do?"

When I ply my daily task
  And the round of toil pursue,
Let me often brightly ask
"What, my soul, would Jesus do?"

Would the foe my heart beguile,
  Whispering thoughts and words untrue,
Let me to his subtlest wile
  Answer, "What would Jesus do?"

When the clouds of sorrow hide
  Mirth and sunshine from my view,
Let me, clinging to Thy side,
  Ponder, "What would Jesus do?"

Only let Thy love, O God,
  Fill my spirit through and through,
Treading where my Saviour trod,
  Breathing, "What would Jesus do?"
    —Chips and Chunks for Every Fireside.

Communications.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A SECTION WORTH KNOWING.

There is one thing peculiar to Northeastern Pennsylvania. It is almost a State by itself. It has untold mineral wealth, a large and rapidly growing population, has its territory crossed by half a dozen of the great railroads of the country, and yet it is less known and understood by the rest of the State than any portion of our great Commonwealth. Large mountain chains cut it off from the eastern and southern sections, and the west branch of the Susquehanna river from the otherwise contiguous western section.

Its population is more mixed than any other portion of the State, scarcely excepting Philadelphia, which, as a world city, has probably all kinds of people in it. All nationalities, which send immigrants to the United States, are represented, and that in very considerable numbers. One does not, therefore, find the same homogeneity here to which we are accustomed elsewhere. And all this helps to bring about the isolation we have spoken of.

There are churches using ever so many languages; and that must be an almost inaccessible type of faith which has no representation. From Eastern Asia and from all over Europe representatives are here. Several congregations of the Greek faith have been established and seem to be doing well. The Sclavic element, Roman and Protestant, is strong in numbers, and much of it is settling down permanently. Germans, Irish, Welsh, English, Scotch, are here in masses. We presume the American born in the second generation is far in the minority.

It is a stirring, active life that beats here. Corporations with vast capital confront you on every side. They come here to make money, and apparently they make it. Incidentally the people get some of it, too. Cities grow large and villages become cities. Judge Rhone stated, a few evenings ago in the State House of Luzerne county, that, inside of fifty years, Wilkesbarre would grow from its present population of 40,000 to 200,000. Scranton has now full 75,000. Towns of 10,000 to 15,000 are no rarity at all. All this growth has been very rapid. It will continue, also, and that substantially at the same rapid rate, the reason for it being that the elements of wealth, which have brought about the present development, are practically inexhaustible. Besides, wealth and population attract and hold new forces not originally at hand.

Here lies open a great field for the Christian Church in its various forms. The Roman, the Presbyterian, the Methodist, the Baptist Churches have shown extraordinary foresight, skill and perseverance in organizing and developing these heterogeneous elements. The Episcopalians are making great efforts, well directed, too, to establish themselves not only in the large towns, but in every village where it is possible. They come a little late, but with measured step.

And as to the Reformed and the Lutherans, the natural representatives, the divinely ordained and ordered spiritual guides and shepherds of Continental Protestantism when it comes to our shores, what have they done in this northeastern Pennsylvania, and what are they doing now? They both have a number of congregations scattered here and there, and in a few places have firmly and permanently struck root. They came a little late. They went a little slow. And in this latter characteristic they differed much from their surroundings, and in consequence were left behind. Nor will they ever catch up, unless the growth of the general community slackens greatly, or the activity of these two Churches quickens greatly. Additionally, there has been for some years past, and there is now, some thinking done, about it, and around it and off from it. All well meant beyond question. What will the outcome be? There is yet, and will come, much people here to be gathered in by these two Churches of the Reformation. But work must be done on a larger scale than has been customary hitherto. Plans must be comprehensive, and they must be stuck to. More laborers, not less, must be put into the field, and the conviction must be reached that it is both wise and right to do this thing. The Lutherans have lately made organizations at Ashley, a suburb of Wilkesbarre, and at Sayre, near the New York State line; also a second German interest in Scranton. Apparently they have waked up. What are we Reformed going to do? Let us pull ourselves together and see what we can do; and let no time be needlessly lost.

WYOMING.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE SUPPORT OF OUR PASTORS AND PROFESSORS.

In furtherance of the very excellent article by "X" in a late number of the MESSENGER, we desire to say a few words.

As a rule our ministers are miserably supported, their salaries being ordinarily far below what the people can afford to give and ought to give. And the same is true of our professors.

Can we wonder that there is so great restlessness in the ranks of the ministry when the pressure of want is constantly felt, and silently and patiently borne for years in many a parsonage, until poor human nature at last wearies of the struggle, and sees hope only in change.

Change does not always bring relief, for somehow, congregations all over the country have a very nice sense of how much it will cost a man to live. If they give him $1000, you may be sure it will cost him every cent of it to live amongst them—and if they give him $1500 he will be expected to live in such a manner as to leave a very narrow margin, if any at all, by the end of the year.

The amount of work our ministers must perform and the demands made upon them in doing that work efficiently, is utterly out of proportion to their income. And this works both to cripple their usefulness and to hinder the prosperity of the congregations they serve.

Why do not more of our ministers attend the "Spiritual Conference" at Lancaster, the commencements of our institutions, our Alumni Association dinners, meetings of Ministerial Associations, held monthly for mutual improvement and encouragement? Why do they not take the almost ironical advice of a sapient critic, some time ago published in the MESSENGER, and go to New York or Philadelphia once in a while to hear the great preachers preach? Why do they not travel more and enlarge the views of men and things thereby, refreshing both a worn-out body and a weary spirit with an occasional trip across the continent, or a voyage beyond the seas? There is an answer to these, and many similar interrogations—and almost any minister in the Reformed Church can give it at a moment's notice.

Now,—one question: What is the remedy? When is the improvement to begin? Resolutions passed at Synod, however enthusiastically, and however unanimously (and that, too, by our poorly-paid ministers themselves), will do little if any good. But where is the start to be made? Where shall the movement in increasing our ministers' salaries commence?

Some time ago, an awakened and poorly-supported pastor, speaking of these things, said to the writer, "There is no hope for improvement in this matter until the salaries of our leading congregations, our wealthiest churches, are raised. When our city churches in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Allentown, Easton, Harrisburg, and so on, once increase their pastors' salaries to what they ought to be, then we in the smaller churches will get some relief. You've got to begin at the top, in this case, and work down: you can't begin below and work up. There is no hope for us here below, until there is improvement above."

There is good sense and sound reason in this, as may be seen on consideration. If you have, say a thousand men (our Church has about so many ministers) marching in a long procession, and the procession halts, those in the middle or in the rear cannot move until those on the lead advance.

Take the Presbyterian Church. We have not the figures at hand, but we believe the average support of the ministry in that Church is better than in our own. At least, in congregations of like strength and financial ability, the support is better. The average is higher, as "X" has shown, both amongst the clergy and the professors—but why? Because the salaries are better in the better positions in that Church.

Our people need to be stirred up on this point, and our ministers themselves, as X well says, should demand more than they presently receive. It is but "penny-wise-pound-foolish" to stint and starve the man who "breaks to us the Bread of Life."

Y.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

EMPIRICISM AND INTUITION.

By empiricism we mean the discovery of truth by observing, and experimenting on, facts, according to the inductive system of Bacon and Locke, and by intuition we mean the method of starting with first principles and deducing the consequences. Both methods are true, and the one complements the other. For the deductive method itself, the mere process of logical deduction as it prevailed especially in the Middle Ages, we have but little concern. The mere logical process never discovers new truth, but only unfolds what in principle is already known.

But we do lay great stress on intuition and speculation (using this latter word in the good sense) in the discovery and unfolding of truth. We shall not speak of intuition and speculation in the sphere of Natural Science, where perhaps the inductive method should take the lead, but we shall refer rather to the sphere of ethics and revelation.

And let us take revelation and its apprehension and interpretation first. What place have intuition and speculation in the interpretation of Scripture? Certainly certain conditions are necessary to the right interpretation of Scripture, among which we class first a knowledge of its language and its grammar and lexicon. We presuppose also a knowledge of Church tradition in the form of creed and doctrine, and especially the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

But now, with these necessary conditions at hand, what stress shall we lay upon the two methods, one of which we may designate the inductive, which starts from the particular and reasons to the general, the other the intuitive, which starts from the general and reasons to the particular. We use these names of the two methods mainly for convenience, and now explain briefly what we mean by them.

One theory says, make yourself thoroughly acquainted with the words, say of the Greek language, both in its classical and N. T. usage, compare passages in which the same word is used by the same author, and thus by the use of grammar and lexicon force the literal meaning of the writer, and this will give you the true, and only true, interpretation. The necessity and merit of all this we freely grant. But now we desire to call attention to another method, which goes deeper, we believe, into the mystery of revelation, and from which greater results are to be found in the discovery of Scripture truth.

Take, for example, the words and teaching of our Lord in the New Testament: the best key to unlock their meaning is a right apprehension of His divine-human person. We need that apprehension which Peter had when he made the great confession, or which John had when he denounced as anti-Christ every spirit that does not confess that Christ is come in the flesh. But how do you get that, it is asked, except by studying first his words with grammar and lexicon? Our Lord certainly recognized something more than this when he said to Peter, "flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." Oh, yes, it is said, we know that the Holy Spirit must enlighten us, but the question is, does the Spirit lead us into such truth mainly by grammar and lexicon, or by our intuition? Both are necessary, but we lay the greatest stress on the intuitions. The great mystery dawns in our faith not so much by a process of logical reasoning, as by intuition. When once we are able to grasp the mystery of our Lord's divinity, as Peter did, we have at least one great help in interpreting His words and acts.

But it is equally necessary to grasp His true, real humanity, else we have a Gnostic Christ, and this would give a Gnostic tinge to all our interpretation of His words and works.

Take as another example an epistle of Paul. We read and study all his words, and yet we seem to be only on the outside we fail to catch his true meaning. But now let our intuitions begin to work (under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, of course), and imagination and speculation as well, let us get a proper knowledge, e. g., of the errorists aimed at, say in his epistle to the Colossians, their teaching in regard to angels, to philosophy, to ascetic rudiments of the world, and as we go on studying and meditating the situation flashes upon us, the standpoint of Paul and that of his opponents, and now it all becomes plain. Now what we mean here is, that the deepest and best interpretation flashes upon us in the feeling that we have grasped the standpoint of the writer, his inmost spirit, and from this we go on to interpret anew his particular words and sentences.

Hence the ability to interpret Scripture in its deepest sense requires a special endowment. All believers are able to derive sufficient profitable, saving, truth from the Scriptures, but some have a keener spiritual sense to discern the mysteries of revelation, and they are our best commentators. Sometimes, indeed, the general consciousness of the Church comes in as a special help, as for example: the spirit that enabled Luther and the other Reformers to find new, and hitherto latent, truth in the epistles to the Romans and the Galatians. That great truth of justification by faith as it dawned upon their spiritual apprehension became the light that opened to them the meaning of St. Paul.

Read the epistle to the Romans with the presuppositions of the Calvinistic theory of election and predestination, and you find there, all perfectly clear, the ultra, supra-lapsarian doctrine of the divine decrees; but start out with the thought that St. Paul was arguing against the false conception of election held by the Jews, viz.: that all the natural descendants of Abraham were the only and true elect, and hold in mind also a Christological conception of God, and many passages then have a different meaning. In other words, the standpoint we occupy has a great deal to do in the interpretation of Scripture.

There is much in the Scriptures that has never yet been brought out fully to the mind of the Church. They are an inexhaustible well. The full delineation of our Lord's life has not yet been given. The more the Church advances in the life of grace, the more will she grasp the deeper meaning of Scripture. And in this discovery of new truth intuition and speculation will perform a great part.

Yet we grant that the office of intuition and speculation must be guided and judged by the grammatical literal sense. It is told of the School of the Mystics in the Middle Ages, that they interpreted the presence of Moses and Eljah on the Mt. of Transfiguration to teach, that their holy rhapsody must be restrained by the Scripture, the Law and the Prophets, represented by these two characters. Some say, intuition and speculation, important as they are in the interpretation of Scripture, must never depart from the grammar and lexicon, but these latter in themselves are not the most prolific source of deep Scripture interpretation. X.

For the Reformed Church Messenger.

ZWINGLI AND LUTHER—THEIR RELATION TO EACH OTHER AND THEIR INFLUENCE.

I.

These men were active participants in the work of Reformation in the XVIth century, but it cannot be said that either or both together originated that great work, for the principles underlying it and which called for it, were laid long before that century came in. Any one who has looked into "Ulman's Reformers before the Reformation," or who has heard of Wickliffe, Savanarola, Huss, and others, will understand that. Besides, it would be contrary to the idea of history, to say, as is sometimes said, and as your correspondent heard a graduate of a college and seminary say, commencing an essay, "If it had not been for Martin Luther, there never would have been a Reformation." Think of such wretched nonsense, showing what a miserable, wretched, pitiful, contracted idea of history the author had, or truly, no conception of history whatever. How dishonoring to God! These men were simply instrumental in the hands of Him who directs history to carry forward interests, pertaining to the kingdom of God, in the stream on which these interests were borne, and for this purpose God was bound to no man. How different the following from "Allen's Continuity of Christian Thought." "The events of the XVIth century have been too often regarded as constituting a break in history. But to the eye of thought reviewing the course of history the continuity remains unbroken. Luther was but the child of the ages preceding: the Protestant revolution was the natural and orderly sequence of a long course of preparation. . . Luther entered upon the inheritance of Wycliffe and of Huss, and still further he was indebted to the spirit of German mysticism," p. 270, 271. What a different world of thought, and of history that is, from the narrow, contracted conception of that referred to above. It is refreshing to read this.

These men commenced their work, to which, in the course of history, they were led, independently of each other, Zwingle in Switzerland and Luther in Germany. "While Luther's Reformation spread in Germany, a similar movement sprang up in the neighboring provinces of German Switzerland. Its earliest beginnings date back as far as A. D. 1516—Luther's theses, A. D. 1517." Ch. His. Kurtz, p. 262. "The Reformation in Switzerland was independent of the movement led by Luther; it began earlier, it followed a leader widely different in character from the hero of Germany, it originated from another impetus than that which impelled Germany to revolt, it was based on a different principle and reached in theology a different result,"—"the idea of the Divine immanence, was the fundamental principle with Zwingle, giving unity and consistency to his life as well as to his theology." Allen, p. 287. These men represent different tendencies, and as said, came to the work under different influences, Zwingle being learned and in every way a polished, Christian gentleman. Unknown to each other and the work going on independently of each other, as leaders this relation could not long continue, so that in due time they became acquainted with each other.

It is now only natural that by the force of circumstance, these men and the movements they led should become widely known, and the movement being of such vast importance, that an understanding should be had by them, as to the ways and means of carrying it forward, so as to accomplish the idea of "Reforming." In the attempts that were made to come to a proper understanding we are enabled to see the differences between them more clearly defined as well as the relation in which they stood to each other. From the fact that this movement became so popular and the people alive to it, is inferred the vast need for reformation, and throwing off the old which had done its work and taking up the living elements and forces offered in history the attempt was made to place them upon a new and higher plane for future development.

It is known, generally, to readers, that one of the chief points of difference among the reformers was that of the Lord's Supper. This comes out clearly in the Marburg Conference. Zwingle has been accused of holding and advocating the simply symbolic view, and insisting on the "is" in the words of institution as—"signifying." "He (Z.) developed his views more fully in his dogmatic treatise, Commentarius de vera et falsa relig. A. D. 1525, where he characterizes Luther's doctrine as an opinio non solum rustica sed etiam impia et frivola." Kurtz, p. 270. It must be borne in mind, however, that he assumed this position, as extreme, in opposition to the Romish theory of transubstantiation, and without question, had his life been spared, he would have settled into the view, held by some of the Swiss reformers, as Œcolampadius, and afterwards by Calvin. The Reformed Church never accepted the Zwinglian view as the Catechism clearly shows in Questions 75, 76, &c., which, clearly stated, is that defined by Melancthon and Calvin.

The Unaltered Augsburg Confession, drawn up by Melancthon was delivered to the Emperor Charles V. at the Diet of Augsburg, June 25, 1530, in which the Xth Article is as follows: "Concerning the Lord's Supper, we teach as follows:—that the body and blood of Christ are truly present in the sacrament, in the form of bread and wine, and there distributed and received. Therefore the opposite doctrine is rejected." Around this definition the war commenced because it was differently interpreted. "In 1535, there was a Conference at Cassel beween Bucer and Melancthon. A larger Conference was afterwards held at Wittenberg, at which Bucer and Capito from Strassburg, and eight other distinguished theologians from the uplands, were present. As they accepted the formula 'in, with and under,' the only question remaining was, whether unbelievers partook of the body of Christ. They admitted this in regard to the unworthy, but not, as Luther wished, in regard to the godless and unbelieving." Kurtz, p. 281. Here already, we find the doctrine defined and stated in the "in, with and under." No mistaking that. As there was considerable difference of opinion and Melancthon naturally inclined to peace, he allowed himself to make a change in this Xth Article, so as to read, "Concerning the Lord's Supper, they teach, (docent) that with (cum) the bread and wine are truly exhibited the body and blood of Christ to those eating in the Supper of the Lord," but the words, "et improbant secus docentes," (therefore the opposite doctrine is rejected) he entirely left out. This was in 1540 and is known as the Altered Confession. This alteration was displeasing to many, so also to Luther himself, and it is reported that he once said to Melancthon, "Philip, Philip, you do wrong, that you so often alter the Augsburg Confession, for it is not your Book, but it belongeth to the Church." During all this time there was a diversity of views and many efforts were made to find a basis of agreement. Hence these various confessions. In 1536, Melancthon composed the Wittenberg Concordat and was signed "by all," but in consequence of this union effort, three of the Swiss theologians seceded, and produced the Confessio Helvetica prior, in which the Zwinglian doctrine (in opposition to the "in, with and under") "was moderately but firmly maintained." Kurtz, 281. But with all these efforts the union, which was desired was not easily reached. "During the transactions of the Wittenberg Concordia, he (Luther) inserted in his Instruction, the following, as Melancthon terms it, clear and succinct 'Summa' of his views on the subject:—'The body of Christ is truly eaten in and with the bread, so that what the bread effects and suffers, the body of Christ effects and suffers: thus it is distributed, masticated and swallowed.' 'Und ist Summa das unsere Ireinung, dasz wahrhaftig in und mit dem Brod der Leib Christi gegessen wird, also dasz alles, was das Brod wirket und leidet, der Leib Christi wirke und leide, dasz er ausgetheilt, gegessen und mit den zähnen zerbissen werde." (Werke Luth. Hall. Ausg. XVII. p. 2486.) That is plain and there is no misunderstanding that language. According to Luther, Nach dieser regel lautet also Art. X. Augs. Con. That is the theory of consubstantiation which Luther propounded and which he unflinchingly held, and that perpetuated itself as true, veritable Lutheranism, in the "Galesburg Rule," "Lutheran pulpits for Lutheran ministers, and Lutheran altars for Lutheran communicants." All this is clearly consistent; only so that things are called by the right name and no attempt made to play "fast and loose." This theory found a stronghold in Scandinavia. That this view of Luther, on the Lord's Supper was the accepted one and became such is clear from the fact that the view of Melancthon, resembling that of Œcolampadius and Calvin, was bitterly assailed and the school which was forming around Melancthon declined, and what was here was obliged to take refuge in the Reformed, and the view of Luther, as in his "Summa" finally triumphed, while the Reformed, embracing the Melancthonian and Calvinistic tendencies, was driven out and forced to find expression elsewhere, which it did in the Heidelberg Catechism in 1563. Zwingle had little or no part in the settling of these tendencies for he died on the bloody field of Cappel, Oct. 15, 1531. S.

To be Continued.

For Reformed Church Messenger

ENGLISH AND GERMAN MISSIONS.

In an article in the MESSENGER of January 22d, Dr. Ruetenik gives an answer to the question, Why the German congregation of Cleveland did not take steps long ago to establish an English mission in that important city? The article is full of interest to the Church, and contains many valuable hints which should be carefully heeded, if English missions are to be strengthened and rapidly increased in membership with young material that is growing up under the influence of our German congregations. It needs no prolonged argument to sustain the wisdom of that policy, that seeks to bring the German and English languages into proper relation, in order to carry forward our missionary operations with the highest degree of success. It is likewise evident that one of the necessary qualifications in a pastor of an English mission that expects to draw largely upon the young material growing up in German congregations by which the mission is surrounded, is, that he should be able to deliberate with German pastors and take counsel with them and likewise hold a conversation with the German families, from which it is expected that at least some of the material is to be gathered. But the converse is likewise true, that here in America, where the English is destined to be the prevailing language, the pastors of the German congregations should be able and willing to accommodate the English tendency of their young material by catechising them in English in the spirit and genius of the German Church so as not to be lost to their own denomination.

The German Church will make a great stride forwards by heeding this English tendency and thus save itself from the reflection recently made on a public occasion, that it is assuming the position of being a conservator of the German language.

What is said in regard to German thrift, in the establishment of German congregations in the city of Cleveland is a beautiful and worthy tribute to their denominational zeal, which may be well spoken to the whole Church in the way of deserved praise. But when Dr. Ruetenik says that all the leading American Churches, namely, "the Methodist, the Baptist and Presbyterian are in the habit of liberally assisting their German missions, while in the Reformed Church the Germans had to help themselves," we are made to question the latter part of the assertion as being at variance with the facts in the case. That the Reformed Church has not been as liberal as other denominations towards its German congregations, we will not attempt to dispute; neither is she in a position to be as liberal as those denominations which the writer mentioned.

In the second place, the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian denominations are of English origin, and are ever on the alert to strengthen their Churches by the accession of German material.

But the English portion of the Reformed Church is the offspring of the German, which never seemed able to liberally endow its children.

In many cases, it sent forth its English material without any aid to establish for itself a religious home, and hence it requires some time to counteract the injurious effect of such a lesson. Besides this, the declaration made creates a strong impression, which is prejudicial to the good name of the Reformed Church. What are the facts in the case? In examining the Reports on Missions from 1856 to 1860 made by the sainted Rev. I. Gerhart, then President of the Board, special stress is laid upon the necessity of the Church coming to the help of the needy Germans. It was in response to this burden of his appeal to the Church that the funds for missions were largely increased and 60 per cent. was given to German Missions, and 40 per cent. to mixed and English missions. Take the Reports for the next three consecutive years, and you will find 9 per cent. of the mission fund is appropriated to mixed congregations; 25 per cent. to English and 66 per cent. to German missions.

Take the next three ensuing years, viz.: 1864, '65, '66, and the ratio is 16 per cent. for mixed congregations, 24 per cent. for English and 60 per cent. for German missions.

The reports on the Church-building Fund are not as complete as they should be, to determine accurately how much was given towards the erection of German churches. And yet, we learn from these, that in 1866 the German Church of Chicago received $3486.00, and the German Church of Milwaukee, $2500.00. In this large appropriation made to these two German churches, we know it to be a fact that $125.00 was given by an English mission—one year after it had become self-supporting, and which, at the time the aid was given, was not able to pay its pastor more than $500 salary.

In 1866 the transfer was made of the missions of the Board of the Eastern Synod to General Synod's Board. The reports for the ensuing three years are of such a character as to defy the future historian to tell accurately what proportion was given to the German missions.

But in the report of the Board to the General Synod of Cincinnati in 1872, we learn that the appropriations were made in the following rates: 24 per cent. for English missions; 30 per cent. for mixed congregations; and 46 per cent. for purely German missions.

It was at this crisis of the Church's history that the respective Synods constituting the General Synod were instructed to carry forward the mission work within their own bounds, and thus each Synod was, in a certain sense, confined in its mission work to its own territory.

In the labors of the Tri-synodic Board, it is known that a large portion of its mission funds were given to German churches beyond its territory, namely in New York and in the States of Oregon and California. It is likewise known, that the Tri-synodic Board was willing to transfer these German missions on the Pacific Slope to either of the German Synods with an annual appropriation of $2000 toward their support.

If our German missions in our sister Synods during these latter years were not as liberally aided by the English portion of the Church in the East, it is largely owing to the fact that an embargo was laid against all proper rights in the case. In view of the above facts, to say that the Reformed Church leaves the Germans take care of themselves, is incorrect and implies an unjust reflection upon her fair name. It may be that careless remarks were made in certain quarters in regard to letting the Germans take care of themselves, but such a judgment is in direct conflict with the official documents of the Eastern Synod.

There are serious wrongs in the past. Brother Ruetenik acknowledges the fact, and says, let the past be forgotten. We would rather say, no, let it be remembered, and the mistakes that were heretofore made, nobly corrected. Then there will be no clashing among the uplifted banners of our Reformed Zion, and then the whole Church, free from all crimination, will in unity of action, heed the words: "Tell the children of Israel to go forward." JNO. PHIL. STEIN.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

TO THE BRETHREN ONCE MORE.

Dear MESSENGER: No one asked for an opinion from a woman in regard to "Woman's Work in the Church, but we would kindly suggest that if the brethren would have given the time to helping the women and the work that they have given to letter-writing and discussions, the Church might be stronger to-day than it is; and the men more active and zealous for the cause of Christ. We do not aspire to the pulpit, but seeing the dire necessity for speedy work and the utter inability of those who had charge of it to do it alone, we bravely came to the front to do what we could. We are sure that both money and work have been gladly received by the brethren from the women We fear if much more time is lost, they will be called to assist us, reversing the order of things, which would be very humiliating to the D.D.'s.

A WOMAN OF THE REFORMED CHURCH.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE DAY OF PRAYER FOR COLLEGES AT URSINUS COLLEGE.

It has been the custom for years past to observe a day of special prayer for the colleges of our land. The propriety of the custom will at once commend itself to the favor of all Christian people, who will rejoice that the thought ever entered the minds of those who proposed it. And we are sure that the parents who have sons and daughters at College will be glad to know their children are remembered in the prayers offered on this day. The Faculty of Uusinus College being in full accord with the custom, had special services on Thursday, the 29th ult., in connection with the regular services at the opening of the College in the morning. An appropriate address was made Dr. Super acting as President, and prayers offered by several of the professors.

Those at the head of our College, although professing Christians, and in most instances ministers and men of learning, need the prayers of the Church in view of the importance and responsibility of the work committed to their care. When rightly considered all will agree that the work done in our colleges is of immense importance, not only to the vast number of the young gentlemen and ladies gathered in these centres of learning, but also to the future well-being of our land. There is probably no period in the life of a young man so formative as the years spent at college. Shut up as he is largely within the walls of the college, attending the instructions of the different professors, whom he is wont to regard as leaders of thought, hearing their views upon the many subjects that are discussed in the class-room, listening to the prayers they offer, the counsels they give, and receiving, as they do, the impress of their life, need we wonder that the views, habits and character which students form at college, will largely determine their future life? Surely the men who occupy positions of such responsibility, as those of the professors in our colleges, need the prayers of the Church that they may be divinely guided and assisted in the work of preparing and training the thousands of young men under their care and instruction for the duties awaiting them.

Nor are the prayers of the Church less needed for the students congregated in our colleges, separated, as they are, from the influences of home, and exposed to the allurements and dangers of the world. The age in which we live offers many temptations and seductive influences to the young, who are walking out into the world, with a view of deciding what profession they should enter, so as to make the greatest success of life. Many mistakes are here made which go far to account for the failures which so often occur in life. And whilst we believe that the religious influences of our colleges are good, guarding against prevalent false and infidel notions, as well as the open and flagrant sins of the day, yet it is still true that the young, inexperienced as they are, have many dangers and besetments to guard against, let their environments be what they may, so that they are in special need of the prayers, not only of their parents and friends, but also of Christians generally, making a day of prayer altogether proper and desirable. For these reasons the Faculty of Ursinus were glad to unite with other colleges as well as the Church at large, in the observance of the day of prayer for colleges that may become centres of influence and power for good that should be far and wide.

Nor would we limit the prayers of College Day to the professors and students, as if they were the only persons to be mentioned. Reading, as we have, of the large and princely donations made to our colleges and seminaries, during the past year, we ought to thank God that He put it into the hearts of those noble-minded men to give as they have and invoke the richest blessings of Heaven upon them, and incline others to similar acts of beneficence.

We are glad to report that education in missions is Christian and not merely secular, and that the students are, with only a few exceptions, professing Christians, giving proof that the influence of the College is what they intended it should be. G. W. W.

Collegeville, Pa.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

ORPHANS' HOME COLUMN.

BY REV. T. M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

On Sunday, January 25th, the little congregation at the Home celebrated the Holy Communion of the Lord's Supper. It was a season of holy joy. Collection for benevolence, $4.56.

There is not much outside work for the boys to do at present. The regular classes must be attended to, enough to give them plenty of exercise, but principal stress now is laid upon the schools and they are doing excellent work.

We have now two boys in the Mary Drexel Home (German Hospital), Philadelphia, for treatment. Last summer we took George Henry there, who was afflicted with a disease of the hip. He is improving slowly, and we hope that eventually he may be cured. He is receiving the very best of care and treatment, but such a case requires a long time for healing, and it is not likely that he will return to us before next summer.

On the 22d of January we took little Willie Yost, nine year old, to the same hospital. He is afflicted with an enlarged spleen. The doctors took a deep interest in the boy. What the result of their examination will be and what effect their treatment will have we are not yet able to say. We hope for the best.

What a blessing it is to have such institutions, devoted to the relief of humanity, and what a blessing that godly married women are willing to give of their means to erect and equip institutions of this kind, where the poor are received for treatment free of charge. We have now two boys in this, one of the finest and best equipped, hospitals in the land. As poor, orphan children they are received and treated free of charge. But we must remember that it takes a large amount of money to properly carry forward such a work. Although the buildings and equipment are there, the annual expenses are very heavy, amounting to about $50,000 a year. They have a large endowment, but the income from that is not sufficient to meet the heavy expenses, and the deficit must be made up by voluntry contributions. Here is an object worthy of the consideration of charitably disposed persons. The management is largely in the hands of the Lutheran Church but, as is seen by the admission of our boys, it does not confine itself to the care of one class or denomination, and so it is also worthy of the support of Christians of all denominations. Mr. Christian Gross, an elder of the Reformed Church, is on the Board of Directors of the German Hospital, and it was largely through his influence that our boys were admitted into this excellent institution.

It is always a matter of interest to know just how much it costs to support a family in one year, and especially is this the case in such a family as ours is. We can count all the money which we receive and add up all the bills which we pay, but we do not know the value of the contributions which we receive in goods. We would like all congregations, Sunday-schools, societies and individuals to put an estimate upon their gifts. We could attempt it, but our business judgment has not been so keenly trained that we could always hit the right mark, and therefore, lest offense be given, or injustice done, we prefer not to give any estimate of these contributions at all. Please state the value of the gift when sent in the shape of goods.

Missions.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

BY REV. A. C. WHITMER, SUPERINTENDENT OF MISSIONS.

CLASSICAL CHURCH-BUILDINC FUNDS.

Last spring at the meeting of the Tohickon Classis, the Superintendent explained the plan of Special Church-building Funds, and suggested that a Tohickon Classis Fund of $500 be raised; and in a very short time much of the money was definitely pledged, while some of the pastors and elders only promised to see to the matter and do what they could.

Without a doubt all want the fund fully raised and paid before the next meeting of the Classis; and those who have not yet secured their amounts should lose no time in doing so, for three months will soon pass by. Only two have as yet paid anything toward the Fund.

These lines are written, however, not merely to urge the Tohickon brethren to finish what was so cheerfully begun, but also to call the attention of other Classes to these funds, and to urge them to raise such funds bearing their names. Tohickon Classis did not apportion its fund, but the amount was to be raised by special effort, as each pastor saw proper, outside of the apportionment.

I ask the brethren of other Classes to consider this matter, so that at the next meeting they may be prepared to take definite action in the case. The Tohickon Classis did not even resolve to raise such a fund, but simply invited the Superintendent to make the effort to do so—which, however, was much the same.

We have a Virginia Classis Church-building Fund; we soon will have a Tohickon Classis Fund; and we hope within a year to have several more Funds bearing the names—of what Classes? Please, brethren, think over it.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

A REQUEST TO OUR PASTORS.

Dear Brethren:—A few days ago you received from our Secretary, Rev. Dr. Callender. a circular with the solemn and earnest appeal forwarded to him by our missionaries in Japan. Will you heed it? The writer is aware that there are many other objects claiming the benevolence of the Church. They need not be enumerated. But what object can have greater claims than our Foreign Missions, at the present juncture of affairs?

Our Theological Training School at Sendai filled with earnest young men, anxious to be prepared for the Gospel ministry: Our Girls' School with its increasing number of pupils; both Institutions enjoying the confidence of the Christians of Sendai. and doing a work the value of which to immortal souls cannot be estimated. Shall our missionaries, who are second to none other in Christian zeal, be disheartened through the apathy of the Church at home? Shall our bright prospects of permanent usefulness be blasted when we are on the very verge of absolute success? Shall we refuse the light to a people who are thirsting for the knowledge of Christ? The members of the Reformed Church at home need be but informed, and they will furnish the means. What is the reason that one-half of our congregations have never given anything to Foreign Missions? Simply, because the subject is not presented to them. They know nothing about it, and being allowed to remain thus, they are deprived of the blessings they might receive if they participated in the work. If the more than eight hundred ministers of our Church would act as eight hundred representatives of the claims of Foreign Missions, our treasury would overflow, and what would be a still richer blessing, we should enjoy a baptism of the Holy Spirit that would thrill our entire membership with renewed zeal, and a spirit of consecration to winning souls for Christ, not only abroad but at home also; for experience has fully proven that he whose heart is interested in Foreign Missions is also deeply interested in Home work. Proof of these statements will be apparent if we look at those pastors and congregations who have so nobly responded to the Foreign work. Are they any poorer for their donations; on the other hand, has not the Lord richly blessed their labors? He who refuses to work for or to give to Foreign Missions, starves his own soul in this world, denies himself the glorious opportunity to save immortal souls now enshrouded in the darkness of heathenism, and will very likely in the last great day hear from the lips of His offended Judge, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to the least of these, my brethren, ye did it not to me!"

Dear shepherds of our fifteen hundred congregations, suffer an humble layman to ask your consideration of these things, while he invokes upon you and your work the blessing of the Great Shepherd of Israel.

RUDOLPH F. KELKER.

Harrisburg, Pa.

The Family.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE YOUNG PROPHETESS:

A TALE OF THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE.

BY REV. R. LEIGHTON GERHART.

CHAPTER VI.

THE CRIMSON BANNER.

The army was on the march again. Along the narrow road following the windings of the clear waters of the Neckar, as it rippled on its course from the depths of the Black Forest, the children tramped through hamlets, villages and towns, everywhere spreading the enthusiasm that inspired them, and drawing recruits from home and fire-side.

As the evening of the second day after their departure from Heilbrun approached, silence, broken only by the sound of tramping feet, held the entire host. The day had been warm and sultry, and the innumerable feet raised clouds of dust that at times concealed sections of the long line from view. With heated faces and dry, parched lips, the weary and dusty little Crusaders pressed steadily on. At times, the wind lifted the curtain of dust, and the sun, shooting his glowing beams over the seemingly interminable line, lit with fiery splendor the hundreds of silken banners and gilded crucifixes borne above the ranks. But the silence was broken with abruptness: coming from far to the rear was heard the tumult of shouting voices, which increased in volume momentarily as those in advance perceived the cause and were infected with the sudden enthusiasm.

From the rapid running together of the children, it was evident that something of moment had transpired; but the surging crowds were too dense and the confusion too great for those at a distance to see what had occurred. Noting this, many took their stand by the roadside to wait and see what the uproar meant. They did not wait long. Bearing aloft a crimson banner, marked with a golden cross, and seated upon a richly caparisoned white horse, appeared a young girl. With head unconvered, her long yellow hair streaming in the wind, while her deep-blue eye scintillated like veritable sapphires, she rode along the line. Her progress was greatly impeded by the throngs that fairly surged against her; but pressing as rapidly forward as possible, at intervals her clear voice was heard, crying:

"We go to get the cross beyond the sea, and to baptize the Moslem infidel!"

With every repetition of her cry the excitement deepened, the shrill shouting of the children growing wilder and more confused. Four or five others, one of whom was a boy, mounted, and accompanied by heavily laden sumpter mules, were vainly endeavoring to keep pace with the enthusiastic girl, but in spite of their utmost efforts, the space separating them was rapidly widening, and as rapidly being filled with shouting throngs.

It was Serena. The unreasoning enthusiasm, more like a mania than aught else, that had set so many children wild, had finally gained full possession of her. Her intention, as declared to Matilda, so heedlessly encouraged by the latter, might have been overcome, but under the influence of John of Cologne and his associates, the fancy had ripened to a desire so strong that all expostulation, entreaty and command failed to divert her from her purpose. On the morning of the departure of the army from Heilbrun, she walked the battlements by the side of the young leader, listening to him with ever-rising emotions of hope and aspiration, as he eloquently set forth the deeds to be performed in that far off land, discoursed on the certainty of success, and portrayed the glory and renown to follow. He had no doubts, and as she listened her doubts vanished too.

"Come with us!" he finally exclaimed, rapturously seizing her hands and holding them tenaciously in his own. "You will inspire us to deeds such as cannot be wrought without you! Who can hesitate, who can fear, if you but speak a word of hope and encouragement? Unfurl your banner, beautiful lady, and the mountains will sink before you, and the waves of the sea open a path for your feet. You will go before the army like an angel of light. Together we will stand, our banners uplifted,—triumphant!—on the walls of Jerusalem. All Europe will sing thy praises, and thou shalt be blessed above all women! Come with us! beautiful lady, come with us!—to conflict and danger!—to triumph!—to glory!—to fame that will not die, even when earth and heaven have passed away! To the rescue of the Holy Sepulchre!—to the conquest of the City of our Lord!—to eternal glory we go!"

A large crowd, all ready for the march, had gathered around the two as they thus stood together, and now, transported by these fiery words, doubted by none, began to shout their battle-cries:

"Lord, restore to us the true and only Cross!"

"God shall give us the victory!"

"God will show what children can do!"

"Yes," cried John, turning his rapturous face heavenward, "out of the mouths of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength, because of thine enemies, that thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger."

Scarcely had he concluded, before the words, familiar through so many years as the battle-cry of the Crusaders, rang through the air:

"Dieu le vult! Dieu le vult!"

On the battlements the cry first rose,—then a thousand voices echoed it from the court-yard below and from without the walls, where the multitudes were already being mustered in marching order. The enthusiasm had now reached its height; banners were unfurled, crosses, crucifixes and images elevated; fire was applied to the censers, and as they swung from side to side, clouds of fragrant incense were diffused through the atmosphere. Some, who were provided with waxen candles, drew them from their bosoms and set them burning. Then, moved by a common, overmastering impulse, the dense throng formed itself in line, and, surging rapidly through the gates, joined the crowd without the walls, and began to march down the road. Thus while the glory of new day flushed the wide and fertile plains and uplands, this singular army passed forever from the shelter of the hospitable Castle of Heilbrun.

Bewildered by the tumult, transported by new and strange emotions called forth by the circumstances of the hour, forgetful of everything but the thoughts she had just heard, Serena was moving on with those around her, when, elbowing her way through the throng, Matilda, the faithful tire-woman, succeeded in reaching her, and flinging herself on the ground at the young girl's feet, clasped her about the knees, screaming:

"Stop, my lady! For the love of the Virgin, hear me, sweet child!"

Serena, a look of rapture on her pale, upturned face, without even a glance at her servant, murmured: "Lord, restore to us the true and only cross!" and attempted to move on; but the grasp of Matilda was tenacious, and she was compelled to stop.

"You have no food—you have no clothing—you cannot go on this terrible journey in this plight!" shrieked she.

Copyrighted by Chas. G. Fisher, 1890.

"What need of food and clothing? Is not God able to feed and clothe those He has called to redeem the Holy Sepulchre?" interrupted one of the older girls near by.

"Who are you?" cried another, angrily, "that dares to restrain one to whom the celestial call has come? Unhand her, woman!"

With this, rude hands were laid on Matilda's shoulders, and efforts made to thrust her out of the path, but clutching the limbs of the girl with frantic energy, her countenance now ghastly pale, the woman maintained her place. It was evident she would be finally overcome, if succor did not arrive; and it did arrive. From the outskirts of the throng the authoritative voice of the Countess, to whom word had been carried of the peril of Serena, was heard:

"Open a path for me, young gentlemen; I must speak to my niece."

Though not without some delay, the path was opened, and the Countess gained the side of the girl, and joining her efforts to those of Matilda, the two succeeded at length, by tears, expostulations, entreaties and promises, in prevailing upon her to delay her departure for a few hours, and make, at least, a few of the preparations needed for the long and terrible journey. Serena consented to this, but no arguments could induce her to abandon her intention. She allowed, though with indifference, the Countess to provide her with attendants, of whom Matilda was one, a purse heavy with gold and jewels, and such a supply of food and clothing as two sumpter mules could carry. Thus equipped, and accompanied by Otho, for whose safety similar loving forethought and care had been shown, she set out on horseback to overtake the army, already one day's march in advance. As we have seen, the cavalcade came up with the rear at the close of the second day.*

The excitement occasioned by the arrival of the fair girl, for her beauty, enthusiasm and dash drew all thought from the others of her party, resembled the greeting given one who had already achieved the highest renown. And when evening came, Otho saw his cousin seated upon a bank of moss under the shelter of a great oak, while a score of young Crusaders were busily engaged doing their utmost for her comfort. Several of the most skillful undertook to build her a bower of fir-branches, others gathered moss for her couch, while Matilda, assisted by several of the more intelligent girls, prepared the evening meal from the ample store brought by one of the sumpter mules, supplemented by contributions of wild fruit and other gifts, eagerly offered by the young people. The romantic gallantry of the times was fully roused by the presence of a girl of such noble birth and extreme beauty, and around her, as a centre, they instinctively and by common impulse gathered.

Among the number of those who thus attached themselves to Serena, was the daughter of a lieutenant in the body-guard of the king of France, Eunice de Yeelo. Her father happened to be in Cologne visiting some relatives at the time Nicholas began to preach. The girl became infected with the mania that had seized the young of every-rank, and in spite of his most strenuous efforts, the father was compelled to allow her to enroll her name among the followers of the young prophet.

Seeing his cousin so well cared for, so little in need of his help, and Serena was so flattered by the attention of the devoted group about her that she appeared to have forgotten Otho, the boy, after telling her that he would not be far distant, called his servant and set out to seek a place for his own rest.

"Where are we to sleep, Martin?" he inquired, dubiously, for the forest fairly swarmed with children.

"There is a spot yonder, my young master," replied the man, pointing to a level plot near by, which, from the scantiness of the herbage, had been avoided by the others. "'Tis useless, I think, to seek further to-night; every better place is already taken."

"Then we will delay no longer. Let us to supper, and then to sleep." Saying this, Otho led his horse toward the spot indicated, followed by Martin with the sumpter mules. The animals were quickly tethered, and with the rapidity of a skillful hand, the serving-man at once proceeded to open and spread out on the ground the contents of the huge packs they carried. Throwing to the ground a heavy wolf-skin robe and several blankets of Flemish manufacture, he was about to open a great wicker hamper, evidently containing food, when Otho stopped him.

"It were better to leave that to me, while you find provender for our beasts."

"Right, master; right, master. 'Tis a long journey we have before us, and heavy, indeed, will be the journey, if our good brutes fail—and I have it from the Father," referring to the priest at the castle, "and often enough has it been ding-donged into my ears, that a merciful man is merciful also to his beast." With this pious remark, Martin set out in the direction of a farm house, whose thatched roof could be seen in the distance.

(To be Continued.)

---

*"Bolts and bars could not hold the children. If shut up, they broke through doors and windows, and rushed, deaf to appeals of mothers and fathers, to take their places in the processions which they saw passing, whose crosses and banners, whose censers, songs and shouts and paraphernalia seemed like the winds of torrid climes, to bear resistless infection. If the children were forcibly held and confined, so that escape was impossible, they wept and mourned, and at last pined, as if the receding sounds carried away their hearts and their strength. It was necessary to release them, and saddened parents saw them exultingly depart, forgetting to say farewell.'—Dr. Zabriskie Gray's "The Children's Crusade," page 51.

Youth's Department.

LITTLE LOUISE.

Little Louise, our three-year old,
With eyes of hazel and curls of gold,
And cheeks with a cunning dimple bent,
And mouth like a Cupid's bow down-bet,
From her little couch at her father's side,
Arose the flush of morning-tide,
And, "Mamma, papa, dood morning. I say,
Papa, I was naughty yesterday;
But I'll tell you wgy" (with a positive nod
Of the curly head): "'Twas 'cause dood Dod
Who helps little children, went away
For a dreat long visit yesterday;
But now he's tome back again, and so
Louise will be dood to-day, you know."
Dear little one, in whose innocent heart
The demons of doubt and unrest have no part,
Who looks with unwavering trust above,
Nor questions the truth that "God is love."
May the good Lord never be farther away
From his little Louise than yesterday!

—Helen R. Churchill, in Harper's Young People.

LITTLE PUT-OFF.

BY SIDNEY DAYRE.

"I think you had better study your lesson before you go out to play, Mollie."

"O mamma, I want to play a little first," was the reply.

"Your lesson takes you only about fifteen minutes."

"I want to go and play a little while with Carrie Brooks, mamma, and then I'll come and study."

"And you must not forget the reading of your chapter to grandma."

"No mamma, I'll come very soon."

"Carrie is not at home," said Carrie's mother. "She has gone over to Luln Rand's."

"Then I think I'll go and see Kitty Morton," said Mollie to herself.

She thought of the unlearned lesson at home, but did not feel any more like going to it than she had before.

"Kitty has gone to Lulu Rand's," said Mrs. Morton. "How is it that you are not there? Lulu has a little party this afternoon," she continued.

It was a great surprise to hear this. Lulu was her dearest friend. How could she be having a party, and she not invited? Very mournfully Mollie went home. If all the other girls had gone to Lulu's, it was no use going to see any of them. She lingered in the garden awhile, and then went to grandma's room.

"I have been waiting almost all the afternoon for the dear little eyes," said grandma. And Mollie felt ashamed and sorry that she had not come sooner when grandma could see to read very little for herself.

It was almost tea-time when she went down stairs, and tea was over before she went to look for her book.

"What's this?" she said, as a note fell from it.

"It's a note Lulu Rand gave me after dinner to give to you," said her brother Jack. "I slipped it into your book so you'd be able to find it."

Poor Mollie gave a woeful wail.

"It's the invitation to Lulu's party," she said. "If I had studied my lesson at first, I could have gone. O dear, I'll never put off things again!"

WHAT A BEE-LINE IS.

I often hear boys talking about making a "bee-line" for some given point. I wonder if they know what a bee-line is. Bees can fly very fast, and for a long time without any rest. They can see a great distance, and when they are away from their hives they fly up in the air and look for the direction of the situation of their habitations. Then they fly toward them in a straight line, with great velocity. Because of their way of traveling, when we wish to take the shortest line between two points, we say "we are going to take a bee-line."—Selected.

Pleasantries.

Wool: "What did your father-in-law say when he gave your bride away?" Van Pelt: "He quoted from the Bible, but I can't remember it exactly." Wool: "That's funny." Van Pelt: "O yes; he said something about it being more blessed to give than to receive."

During an epidemic of scarlet fever at Carbondale, a gentleman, addressing the Sabbath-school told the children to pray that it might be God's will that they should escape the disease. Little Maggie C. upset the gravity of the school by saying, in very distinct tones: "I don't have to pray; I wear a camphor bag around my neck."

A reverend gentleman, addressing a school concert recently, was trying to enforce the idea that the hearts of the little ones were sinful, and needed regulating. Taking his watch and holding it up, he said: "Now, here is my watch; suppose it don't keep good time; now goes too fast, now too slow; what shall I do with it?"

"Sell it," shouted a youngster.

NOTICE.

☞ Editorial Correspondence address to THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters pertaining to subscriptions and other business, address REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ No notice taken of anonymous communications.

For Terms, see page 11.

THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER,
907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1891.

THE COUNTRY PEOPLE.

In a recent number of Littell's Living Age, an English writer makes the following just remark about France at the present time: "Whether Paris be the heart of France, or the head of France, has never been decided to the satisfaction of disputants, who do battle about words; but in the meanwhile, it is true that the soul and body of France are found remote from the capital in the worshops and the homes of provincial towns, and among the vineyards and cornfields of the pleasant land." The italics here are our own. Such a statement has much more truth in it at the present time than it had formerly, for the French people, by their vote can now decide all important questions pertaining to peace or war, no matter what Paris may have to say on the subject. What is thus said, however, is likewise true of other nations, especially where free and enlightened governments have come to prevail, in Europe no less than in America. Under the sovereignty of God, the sovereignty of the people is more likely to express the truth of things than those sovereignties in Church and State, that speak without any regard to the voice of unsophisticated human nature and intelligence. Infallibility, if it exists anywhere, will be found here more than elsewhere. Mistakes may be made or errors proclaimed by this tribunal, but they are sure to pass away, when men have time for a second sober thought. In this country we have numerous capitals, but our cities, mighty as they are becoming, have also a mighty counterpoise in our sub-urban population. The country people are stronger in numbers than those inhabiting cities, and, if not superior, are nevertheless equal to them in common sense. The remark of the writer referred to, as it seems to us, has more truthfulness about it in America than in France. The heart and brain of the nation may be largely in our centres of business, although, of course, not exclusively; but the body and soul of the nation are to be found in the country; and if so, there must be brains and heart-strings there also, which is, of course, implied in the union of these two fundamental elements in man's nature.

The Reformed Church is made up predominantly of what are called country people. Our strength relatively is not large in the great cities of the land. Such an allotment is, in some degree, a serious drawback, because city congregations usually make the largest contributions to benevolent objects; and at times we appear to disadvantage by the side of sister denominations. But this order has been so predestinated, —we mean providentially,—and we ought to be satisfied with our lot. It has in fact fallen to us in pleasant places and we have abundant reason to be thankful. We have a goodly heritage. Good rules the country, it is said, and country churches are doing good in many ways of which they may be unawares at the time. They have the element of permanence about them. cling to the substance of the old faith, and yearly send out their colonies to build up churches in other places. Some of their children go to the cities and there fill up the churches, some of which would die out or never be, if it were not for such annual supplies of heart and head, bone and sinew, from the country. In view of all this, country congregations ought every one of them to wake up and come up to the full measure of their high and holy calling.

Synodical Editors.

(Elected by the Synods.)

Eastern, ...	REV. JONATHAN H. PANNEBECKER.
Pittsburgh, ...	" DAVID B. LADY.
Potomac, ...	" J. SPANGLER KIEFFER, D. D.

THE MISSIONARY GUARDIAN.

The second number of this new periodical is upon our table. Its character is well sustained. It is packed full of interesting and important matter. Its breezy articles from the West and calmer statements from the East are readable and refreshing. The expectations raised by the first issue are fully met by the character of the one before us. The "Missionary Guardian" has bright prospects of long life and great usefulness.

It is an old and true saying that times change and we change with them. When the "Guardian" was first begun, forty years ago, by the now sainted, Rev. Henry Harbaugh, there was a demand for a Magazine of that character. The originator, who was one of the best interpreters of the wishes and needs of the people, recognized the demand, and the "Guardian" was begun to meet it. His pleasant, pious, poetical, graphic and sometimes humorous articles on all sorts of subjects were eagerly read and highly appreciated by young and old. It was a real treat to take them up for perusal of a Sunday afternoon. It did one good. It was like breathing pure air, or partaking of wholesome and nutritious food. One felt strengthened and built up by them. And it is a pity that the taste of that elder day is not the taste of our day. But it evidently is not. And if Dr. Harbaugh were alive now he would doubtless be one of the first to become aware of the change that has come over the spirit of our dreams.

Some ten years ago the growing missionary activity and spirit of the Church called into existence the "Missionary Herald." The age had become more practical. There was probably just as much piety and devotion among the people as before, but it sought expression in missionary activity and enterprises rather than in quiet contemplation of the truth or earnest contention for appropriate forms of approach to the Deity. There was a demand for an organ to give expression to this new phase of our church life. Perhaps it is not altogether accurate to call it a new phase. It is an old phase assuming greater relative importance, looming up and overshadowing interests which kept it in the back-ground years ago. There was a time when doctrinal interest was uppermost in our Church. These were the days of the "Principle of Protestantism," the "Mystical Presence," the "Anxious Bench," and the early years of the "Mercersburg Review." Times that had tried men's souls: a heroic period. Then followed the period of the Liturgical Discussion. The "Provisional Liturgy," the "Order of Worship," the "Directory of Worship," and whole volumes of pamphlets and Review articles were produced at that time. It was also a heroic period. Along with these two features of Church activity there was a calm, religious life, deep and earnest piety, a cultivation and appreciation of the beautiful and good; and this found expression in the pages of the "Guardian." Now the Missionary spirit is the ruling spirit. Whilst we have not lost our interest in doctrine, or in Cultus, and it is to be hoped we never will, we are mainly interested to-day in the extension of Christ's Kingdom. And it is evidence of this that the "Missionary Herald" has absorbed the "Guardian." For whilst the name and form, and we trust the literary excellence of the "Guardian" are retained, the spirit and contents of the new Magazine are entirely of a missionary character. That is what the Church asks for now. The Heidelberg Teacher" and the "Missionary Herald" have crowded out the "Guardian." We may regret the fact; but it is not wise to mourn long over what cannot be helped. It is better to recognize the spirit of the age and act in harmony with it. And we are glad to see that this is being done by those who have charge of these matters.

Another thing is foreshadowed, if we read the signs of the times aright, in this new Magazine. This is the union of all our Missionary operations under one head. Our present organization is an abnormal one. The fact that all the elements have come together in the editing and publishing of our Missionary Magazine indicates to us that the day is not far distant when all our operations will be carried forward under one management, to the avoidance of friction, the economy of means, the promotion of success, the honor of the Church and the glory of the Master. L.

A RULE FOR PREACHING.

There are different ways of preaching. Almost any method may be considered legitimate which is found capable of accomplishing the object which preaching has in view. Of necessity great freedom must be allowed in regard to this matter. Every man must be permitted to find out by trial the way which is best adapted to his own individual capabilities and needs. It is folly to affirm that there is one fixed way for all to follow. Especially is it absurd for any one to insist that his own particular method is the one which all his brethren in the ministry ought to adopt. The egotism of the man who, having been accustomed to preach from manuscript, and having been successful in so doing, forthwith announces the doctrine that all ministers ought to write their sermons in full and read them, is only equalled by the egotism of the man who, having been successful as a preacher without manuscript, solemnly proclaims that his rule is the rule for all to observe.

Not so, my brethren. This land of Preaching is a "free country." No one man, with his little rule, is appointed to lord it over us all. We are not all alike. One man can do what another can not. What is one man's meat is another man's poison. It is the part of wisdom for every one to inquire and ascertain what is best suited to his own peculiar capabilities, powers and limitations. It is well for us to recognize the fact that, as in Art there are different ways of painting, so, in the vocation of a minister of the Gospel, there are different ways, equally legitimate, of preaching.

There are, however, certain general principles, common to all these ways, and which may never safely be departed from. It is well to consider all such. The wise preacher will search everywhere for principles, and, when discovered, will humbly submit himself to be governed and guided by them. He will not disdain any rule, even the simplest, which may have been found useful by another, and in which the wisdom of experience may be expressing itself. A rule, indeed, may be, at bottom, nothing else than the serviceable formulation of some important general principle.

Such is the rule we remember to have seen somewhere,—we, think it is quoted, as the rule given by some eminently successful preacher, by Dr. Parker, in his volume entitled "Ad Clerum." This man's experience embodied itself in the following direction to the preachers: "Get your material together, and set fire to it in the pulpit." A rule which, in a very felicitous and striking manner, indicates two things which the preacher, in some form or other, whatever may be his particular method of preaching, will probably find it absolutely necessary to do.

First, the gathering of the material. Too much stress can hardly be laid upon this part of a preacher's work; it calls for all the intelligence and all the industry which he is likely to be able to command. The earnest preacher is a toilsome, plodding collector of material. He seeks it in all quarters. He digs, as a miner digs for gold, in that particular part of the great mine of God's Word in which his text sets him down. He meditates upon his subject; broods over it; the thought of it is in his mind by day and perhaps mingles with his dreams by night. He probably talks of it,—happy if he have a friend with whom he may talk it over. He reads as extensively as possible. He probably also writes more or less extensively. We are not of those who would insist that all preachers must carry writing with them into the pulpit; but we do think that the number of those who can entirely dispense with writing in their preparation for the pulpit, is exceedingly small. Writing is of inestimable value as a part of the process of collecting and organizing material. It is a powerful help to the clarification and the orderly arrangement of ideas. There is much truth in what George Henry Lewes says, when he writes: "Use the pen! There is no magic in it, but it keeps the mind from staggering about."

A man cannot be too industrious in gathering his material. He cannot put too much intellect into his work; he can hardly overdo the studying of his subject. He needs a considerable quantity of material; he ought to have much more than he is going to use. He cannot be at his best in preaching unless there be behind him a strong reserve upon which he does not draw except in case of necessity. In the best preaching there is a rapid progress of ideas and a wealth of suggestion which are possible only where the material is abundant. We have known sermons to fail simply because of insufficient material. The "stuff" was not there. In consequence, there was a painful scantiness, poverty of ideas and lack of movement. To use a figure borrowed from boyish appetite and hunger, the "spreading" was very "thin;" it had to be so, for want of spreading material.

The gathering of material is much; it is not all; indeed, it is scarcely more than the introduction to the preacher's proper work, which then first properly begins when the material has been gathered together. This material was gathered solely and exclusively that the minister, at the proper time and in his own way, may use it, or so much of it as he sees fit, for the accomplishment of a definite object. Its end is not in itself; it is his; it is his instrument, to use wisely or otherwise, in that high and solemn hour in which he stands face to face with the souls to whom he is to deliver the solemn message of Almighty God. Surely, that is a great hour; pregnant with possibilities; with something awful and also with something pathetic in it; an hour of high and intense activity and exertion; an hour of wrestling; possibly, also, of inspiration from on high. The preacher's crowning work is in that supreme hour, into which is condensed the activity, and in which is expended the energy of a hundred commoner hours. It is hard to express just what it is that the minister does or ought to do in that brief half hour, when, as the ambassador of Christ, he speaks from the pulpit to men. It is something subtle and mysterious. The word fire is perhaps the most suitable word to describe it. It is probably not far from the truth to say that, in the pulpit, a minister sets fire to the material he has previously gathered.

We like this rule because of the distinction which it makes between gathering the material and setting fire to it; and because of the stress which it lays upon that one thing which is to be done in the pulpit. The material which the preacher has gotten together is of no use unless it is set on fire; which is not always done. As we have known sermons to fail for want of material, so we have known sermons to fail for want of fire. Material there was in abundance; but the preacher did not set fire to it. It was simply brought and piled up; there was no fire.

We are very much of the opinion that this rule, properly understood, goes very near to the heart of the matter. The preacher is to gather material with an intelligence and an industry to the exercise of which no bound is set. But he is no mere gatherer of material; he gathers it merely for the purpose of using it in an extraordinary hour and in an extraordinary manner. He uses it; he uses just as much of it as he sees fit; he uses it freely, not as being fettered and bound by it, but as being the lord and master of it. And his use of it can hardly be described more appropriately than as a setting fire to it. He takes his material, so toilsomely gathered, so industriously set in order, so perfectly at his command, and, as he stands in the pulpit, makes a fire of it. He takes this dead material and makes it burn and glow. He is unbound and free. He is in a condition to use any new material which may at the moment present itself. In the following of this rule, there is room for that flash-like inspiration which will seldom be wanting when there has previously been hard and faithful toil. To him who is preaching after this manner, it is quite possible that an idea or illustration unthought of before, may suddenly present itself. And he welcomes it, and instantly puts it to use. He says: "Come on, O Idea, O Illustration! Thou art welcome. Thou comest at the right moment. Thou art a fit piece of fuel for such a conflagration as is going on here!" And in it goes, along with the rest. And the fire burns. And the flame mounts heavenward; giving forth light and heat.

J. S. K.

For Reformed Church Messenger

PROFESSORSHIPS IN THE SEMINARY.

It seems to the writer that the Church should call a halt in the endowment of further Professorships in the Theological Seminary. That institution now has four regular professors, besides a teacher of elocution. That number of professors is sufficient for the work to be done. Time was when two professors, Drs. Nevin and Schaff, did all the teaching in the Seminary, and did it well, besides a good deal of other work in writing for the periodicals of the Church. Let it be remembered that the College, with its four classes, and four years' course, has only six regular, working, professors, and it must appear at once that the Seminary is sufficiently supplied with teaching force in comparison with the College. The Seminary has three classes and a three years' course.

The fact that the older and larger Seminaries of the country have a larger number of professors, is no criterion for us. We should cut our garments according to our cloth. Those larger Seminaries can indulge the luxury of having 6, 7, and 8 professors, some of whom do very little actual teaching, but we have not arrived at that stage in our Church. Where Harvard, Yale, Union, Princeton, have six and eight professors in their Seminaries, they have fifty or sixty professors in the College department. Why should we attempt to rival them in our Seminary while we have but six professors in our College?

Of course work can be laid out for a larger number of professors, but the question is whether it is necessary at the present time. We do not believe it is, and we have a good many opportunities of judging, Professor Demarest, of the Dutch Reformed Seminary at New Brunswick, said to us within a year, that he considered the tendency to increase the number of professors in the Theological Seminary rather an evil than a good. A few professors will maintain unity of thought and of teaching better than a larger number.

But aside from this, the fact that we need a Seminary building at present is sufficient to show that the movement for endowing additional professorships ought to stop, at least for a time. This need is urgent. The Seminary has been occupying rooms in the College up to the present time, but the time has come when the Seminary ought to have a building of its own. There are not rooms sufficient for the theological professors in the College. The theological library lies huddled up on the third story of the College building, and it needs some better place. There are other reasons why the Church should have a Seminary building. But how shall we get it? Certainly not so long as the Church is drained for endowing new professorships for the Seminary.

Let the movement for endowing new professorships rest for the present, and let the three Eastern English Synods unite in raising funds for a Seminary building. After that is erected, if the Church has more money to give, let the work of endowing professorships go on; but for the present we do not see the need of more professors in the Seminary.

But the Synod has endorsed and ordered it. Yes, that is true; but many resolutions and schemes are carried through Synod without sufficent consideration, and this one for the endowment of three professorships, in our humble opinion, is one of them. In comparison with the faculty of the College four regular professors in the Seminary, with a teacher in elocution, is quite sufficient for present wants. If the Pittsburgh Synod is intent on endowing a professorship in the Seminary, let it be done, but let our Eastern Synod devote its funds to the erection of a Seminary building.

We speak with some knowledge of the teaching in the College and the Seminary, and we believe that four professors in the Seminary is quite sufficient in comparison with the faculty of the College. If we had the decision we would say, better, far better, endow an additional professorship in the College than in the Seminary.

We speak as a friend of both institutions when we say four professors in the Seminary are sufficient for the work of teaching from forty to fifty students three years, compared with six professors teaching 120 students for four years. Let us husband our means, and let there be now a united effort to erect soon a new Seminary building.

X. Y. Z.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

CORRECTION OF A MISTAKE.

In our notice of a book-notice in the Andover Review for January, we made the mistake of mixing the names of Professor Schurman and Dr. Stearns. The work we referred to was that of Dr. Stearns and not Professor Schurman, though by mistake we named Prof. Schurman in our article. Dr. Stearns seems to make Christian experience ultimate as evidence of the truth of Christianity, and we raised the question whether the inspired Scriptures should not at least be accorded a coördinate place. And so far as Protestantism is concerned, when the question is between true doctrine and heresy, must we not make the Scriptures the criterion? This is not, Indeed, just the same question as the evidence of Christianity, but only a phase of Christianity, viz., Protestant Christianity. Certainly the Scriptures here must be placed above tradition, which was the question in the 16th century.

But we merely intended to correct a mistake in regard to confusing the names of Professor Schurman and Dr. Stearns. The reader will please make the correction.

X.

Poetry.

IS THIS ALL?

H. BONAR.

Sometimes I catch sweet glimpses of His face,
But that is all.
Sometimes He looks on me and seems to smile,
But that is all.
Sometimes He speaks a passing word of peace,
But that is all.
Sometimes I think I hear His loving voice
Upon me call.
And is this all He meant when thus He spoke,
"Come unto me?"
Is there no deeper, more enduring rest
In Him for thee?
Is there no steadier light for thee in Him?
O, come and see!
O, come and see! O, look, and look again!
All shall be right.
O, taste His love, and see that it is good,
Thou child of night!
O, trust thou, trust thou in His grace and power!
Then all is bright.
Nay, do not wrong Him by thy heavy thoughts,
But love His love.
Do thou full justice to His tenderness,
His mercy prove;
Take Him for what He is, O take Him all,
And look above!
Then shall thy tossing soul find anchorage
And steadfast peace;
Thy love shall rest in His; thy weary doubts
Forever cease;
Thy heart shall find in Him and in His grace
Its rest and bliss.
Christ and His love shall be thy blessed all
For evermore!
Christ and His light shall shine on all thy ways
For evermore!
Christ and His peace shall keep thy troubled soul
For evermore!

Selections.

The end of our life is God; the rule of our life, duty; the obstacles, our bad passions.—Lacordaire.

All common things, each day's events,
That with the hour begin and end,
Our pleasures and our discontents,
Are rounds by which we may ascend.
—Henry W. Longfellow.

Nature and Revelation are alike God's books; each has its mysteries, but in each there are plain, practical lessons for every-day duty.—Tryon Edwards.

A devout Arab woman was asked in her last illness how she endured such suffering, and replied: "They who look upon God's face do not feel His hand."

The crowd of cares, the weightiest cross,
Seem trifles less than light;
Earth looks so little and so low,
When faith shines full and bright.
—Frederick W. Faber.

Telling an untruth is like leaving the highway and going into a tangled forest. You know not how long it will take you to get back, or how much you will suffer from the thorns and briers in the wild woods.

Science and Art.

Several years ago an engineering novelty was developed in the shape of a process of tunneling through quicksand by first freezing it. Of a somewhat similar order is the method lately employed in Germany by Herr Keukirch for securing a foundation under water. He introduces powdered cement into the sand of the river or harber bottom by compressed air. The cement "sets" by the action of the water in the usual way and forms what is virtually a solid rock foundation. This ought to be of value in lighthouse construction.

In Germany wood with a mirror polish is coming into use for ornamental purposes in place of metals. The wood is first submitted to a bath of caustic alkali for two or three days at a temperature of about 175 degrees Fahrenheit, then dipped in hydrosulphate of calcium for 24 to 36 hours, after which a concentrated solution of sulphur is added. After another dip in an acetate of lead solution at about 100 degrees, a shining metallic surface is given by polishing when dry with lead, tin or zinc.

Items of Interest.

Prof. Drummond's "Pax Vobiscum" ran up to 75,000 copies in its first edition. His "Greatest Thing in the World" has had a circulation of 250,000 copies.

"The widest plant on earth" is on exhibition at the railroad depot in Humboldt, Cal. It was cut at the Elk river mill, and is 16 feet in width. It will be among the Humboldt exhibits at the World's Fair in Chicago.

The royal baron of beef, for the Queen's table on Christmas Day, weighed 300 pounds, and was cut from a Devon ox, fed on the Prince Consort's show farm, Windsor, a royal example of old England's roast beef.

Professor Koch announced the composition of his lymph, which he says is the product of a pure cultivation of bacilli mixed with glycerine. He confesses he is ignorant as to what the active principle of the remedy is, but announces it is a most violent poison with a certain curative effect.

The Indians near Pine Ridge Agency, South Dakota, surrendered last week. Very few of their weapons were turned in, and it is thought that the Winchesters have been hidden in the hills. General Miles received permission to send a number of Sioux chiefs to Washington to confer with President Harrison.

Coiner Steel of the Mint has submitted to Superintendent Bosbyshell a report covering the work of his department. During 1890, 100,396,616 pieces were coined, having a value of $21,348.981. Of the pieces, 75 995 were double eagles, 58,043 eagles, 4328 half eagles, 8813 quarter eagles, 16,802,590 silver dollars, 12,590 half dollars, 80,590 quarter dollars, 9,911,541 dimes, 16,259,372 five cent pieces, and 57,182,854 cents.

Word comes from Japan, that the Synod of the United Church, the organization which includes all the Presbyterian and Reformed churches in the Empire, held a most important meeting in the month of December. At that meeting the name of the body was changed to "The Church of Christ in Japan," and a new constitution was adopted, with a new statement of belief. It was proposed to Synod to adopt, for its own use, the Articles of Faith recently adopted by the Presbyterian Church in England. But, after a full and careful discussion of the situation, it was concluded rather to adopt as the creed of the Japanese church the Apostles' Creed, prefaced by a brief statement of the doctrines of the atonement, justification, the work of the Holy Spirit, and the inspiration of the Scriptures.

Hints and Recipes.

One ounce of alum dissolved in one quart of water will be sufficient as a remedy against squash bugs and cucumber beetles. It is also an effective remedy for the cabbage worms. It should be sprayed on the plants by means of a syringe with a fine rose nozzle.

To make an impermeable glue, soak ordinary glue in water until it softens, and remove it before it has lost its primitive form. After this dissolve it in linseed oil over a slow fire until it is brought to the consistence of a jelly. This glue may be used for joining many kinds of material. In addition to strength and hardness, it has the advantage of resisting the action of water.

The Caterer gives this receipt for preparing panned oysters, Philadelphia style: —Fifty oysters, four ounces butter, four tablespoonfuls cracker dust, two saltspoonfuls salt, one saltspoonful white pepper, one saltspoonful mace, two tablespoonfuls whole allspice, one pinch cayenne pepper. Put the oysters and their juice into a bright stew pan, set on a quick fire, and the butter, salt and spices, sift in the cracker dust, stir gently till well mixed; at the first boil pour them into a hot tureen, cover and serve immediately. If longer cooked they shrivel and get tough and indigestible.

Farm and Garden.

The golden poppy, which grows wild all over the State, has been chosen as the State flower of California by the Federal Society of that State. It is of a deep orange or golden hue, typifying at once the orange groves and the golden mines of the States.

A Roxbury russet tree that had failed to yield any fruit of value for ten or twelve years was given a heavy coat of manure, and the next year it bore a good crop of fine fruit. A similar result followed in the case of an orchard of 150 neglected and barren trees. Manure was spread over the ground and the surface was cultivated, and the outcome was "as fine apples as were ever seen."

COWS BY THE QUART.—Up in Sussex county, N. J., they sell cows by the quart. A new way, to be sure, yet a good one. They give the cow a fair week's trial, keeping correct account of the number of quarts of milk she gives, and then divide it by seven, giving the number of quarts daily. The rule is to pay $2.50 a quart. If the cow gives an average of 20 quarts daily, she is then valued at $50; if, say, 16 quarts daily, then the price is $40. Not a bad way to get at the real value of a cow.

Books and Periodicals.

Any of the books here noticed can be had through our Publication House, 907 Arch Street.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE for February contains—A Wave of Life, Thomas Buchanan Read, The Example of Portia, The Mountain-Mirage, "Has Been," Men's Women, A Love-Song, An American Kew, The Worst of It, West of the Sierras, A Poet's Apology, Julien Gordon, A New Theory of the Universe, Copyright, With the Wits.

J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia. Price 25 cts.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE, February, 1891. Analysis of Contents. Frontispiece—Sargent's Portrait of Edwin Booth. At "The Players." Finland, part I., General View of the Country and People. Finland, part II., Sketches in Finland. English Writers in India. In the "Stranger People's" Country. What Shall it Profit? The Faith of President Lincoln. The Heart of the Desert. Both their Houses. The Minstrel. "Personal Intelligence" Fifty Years Ago. The Bond. For Izaak Walton. Smyth's Channel and the Strait of Magellan. The Heroic Adventures of M. Boudin. At the Zoo. Editorial Departments. Monthly Record of Current Events.

Harper Bros., New York.

CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE for February contains—The Temptation of Dulce Carruthers, The Queen of the Ice, Census, The Manger, Memories of Milan, Their Mysterious Business, The Keynote of Dinner, How to Choose a House, A Sharp Experience, A Word about Florida Crackers, and Gatherer.

Cassell Publishing Co., New York, 15 cents a number, $1.50 a year in advance.

ST. NICHOLAS for February contains—An Old-Time Valentine, How the Mails are Carried, Mehitable Lamb, The Family Drum Corps, A Little Girl's Diary in the East, Golden Fleece, Noah Brooks carries on the Kansas adventures, and Lady Jane.

POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY. Edited by W. J. Youmans. Contents for February New Chapters in the Warfare of Science, XI. From Babel to Comparative Philology, part II., The Development of American Industries since Columbus, III. Iron-Smelting by Modern Methods, Precision in Physical Training, Greeting by Gesture, Progress in Agricultural Science, The Aryan Question and Prehistoric Man, II., The Storage of Cold, Coeducation in Swiss Universities, Chinese Buddhism, Shetland Ponies, Sketch of Jean-Charles Houzeau, with Portrait; Correspondence; Editor's Table; Literary Notices; Popular Miscellany; and Notes.

Published by D. Appleton & Co., 1, 3 & 5 Bond street, New York.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY for February contains—Some Unpublished Letters of Charles and Mary Lamb, Two Philosophers of the Paradoxical, Second paper, Schopenhauer, The Ride to the Lady, Noto: An Unexplored Corner of Japan, VI.—XI., The New England Meeting-House, The House of Martha, XVIII.—XXI., The Next Stage in the Development of Public Parks, Hesternæ Rosæ, John Rutledge, Felicia, XIV.. XV., An Object Lesson in Civil Service Reform, A Long-Unpaid Debt, Richard Henry Dana, Sir Walter Scott by his own Hand, Comment on New Books, and The Contributors' Club.

Houghton, Mifflin & Company, Boston, Mass.

The contents of the MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY for February are—The Demand for Education in American History, Emigration from New England to New Brunswick in 1763, Antiquity of Carriages, An Historical Survival, Explorations in Louisiana, The Pickering Manuscripts in Boston, and The French Army in the Revolution.

Subscription price $5.00 a year. Published at 743 Broadway, New York City.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE. The number of The Living Age for January 31 contains—Alexander Vinet, Contemporary Review; Christmas Eve at Warwingie, English Illustrated Magazine; Birds, Nineteenth Century; Shakespeare's Ghosts, Witches and Fairies, Quarterly Review; Velasquez and his King, Nineteenth Century; A Secret Religion, Cornhill Magazine; Two Treatises on the Sublime, Macmillan's Magazine; Frost and Fog, Spectator. Poetry—Light; An Epiced, O Happy Year, Joy Cometh in the Morning, and "The Sun shone warm; the morning breeze." Miscellany.

$8.00 per year. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

Marriages.

January 15th, 1891, in Shiloh Reformed church, Danville, Pa., by Rev. J. A. Peters, D.D., Mr. William H. Antrim to Miss Anna Elizabeth Rishell, both of Danville.

On Wednesday, January 7, 1891, at the residence of the bride's grandmother, by Rev. Geo. G. Everhart, Mr. Thomas H. Van Metre to Miss Bettie R. Myers, all of Berkely county, W. Va.

January 14th, 1891, at Mechanicsburg, Pa., by Rev. W. I. Stewart, Mr. Wm. H. Kulp, Lynchburg, Va., to Miss Mary J. Cocklin, Bowmansdale, Pa.

January 8th, 1891, by Rev. N. J. Miller, of Manchester, Md., Mr. John T. Shorb, of Wentz P. O., Pa., to Miss Sarah Ann Fuhrman, of Melrose, Md.

November 27th, 1890, at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. J. D. Thomas, Albert Lubolt to Miss Sarah Klinger, all of Wayne.

December 18, 1890, at the home of the bride's parents, by the same, Emmerson Deter, of Venango, to Miss Emma Lubolt.

December 25, at the home of Charles Dupond, by the same, James W. Axtell, of Cochranton, to Lizzie Bell.

December 31, at the home of Nathan Fletcher, by the same, Alex. Klinger to Ada Shaw.

Deaths.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than two hundred and fifty words.

DIED.—At the Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia, December 29th, 1890, Mr. H. K. Bentz, of Lebanon, Pa., in his 52d year.

Elder Bentz was born and reared near Ephrata, Lancaster county, in the bosom of a large and well known family of that county. From his early youth he was of a kind and genial disposition, as well as of remarkably industrious habits, and these traits of character were soon put to good account.

About twenty-three years ago Mr. Bentz became a salesman for the firm of Messrs. J. C. Yost & Co., of Philadelphia, and has continued in that position ever since, holding the undiminished confidence and respect of his employers.

He was married to Catharine, one of the daughters of Mr. Peter Grubb, of Philadelphia, and resided in that city until about sixteen years ago, when he was induced to think that it would be for the best interests of his wife and two daughters, to bring them to the country. Lebanon was the place of their adoption, and they have resided here ever since.

Elder Bentz's early habits of industry followed him to the end of his life. It would be hard to find one anywhere who was more diligent in the pursuit of his calling. Early and late, in season and out of season, he went about his duty with an exactness and cheerfulness which was inspiring to behold.

Whilst he lived in Philadelphia he was a faithful member of Race Street Reformed church, and if the writer remembers correctly, for a time of Green street. In these relations his zeal and energy were no less manifest in the part which he took, especially in the songs of Zion. Upon moving to Lebanon he became a member of St. John's church, in which he has lived a life, and rendered services which were most valuable.

For quite a time he filled the office of deacon in the consistory, passing from that into the eldership, and for a number of years he has served as treasurer of the consistorial fund, in all of which places he displayed a most admirable devotion to the interests of his spiritual mother. Nothing that the church asked of him was too much for him to do, and never a complaint followed anything that he did for her. He was a man of exceptionally vigorous, restful confidence in the goodness of God's providence. He was called upon to bear some sore, heavy afflictions, but calm, beautiful resignation marked it all, because he hoped in God.

Last summer, not altogether unexpectedly to himself, he was stricken with paralysis, which resulted in progressive softening of the brain. It was hoped that at the Hospital he might be restored, and he was accordingly sent to the Pennsylvania. But just four weeks from that time he was taken away a corpse. On Saturday, the 3rd ult., we laid him to rest beside a sweet and lovely daughter, who, at the age of 17 years, preceded him to the heavenly world four years ago. The funeral services were held in the church which he loved so much, and the large number of persons in attendance testified to the esteem in which he was held. The chair which he occupied in the choir was draped in mourning, and the members of the choir sang with feeling some of the hymns which Bro. Bentz especially loved, such as "Lead, kindly Light."

A widow and one daughter remain to mourn his departure, but it is amidst the consoling recollection that as a husband and a father he had few, if any superiors, as a man he was most noble, and as a Christian he was singularly after God's own heart. May we all be truly benefited by the holy example which he has left us.

R.

DIED.—Departed this life, near Boalsburg, Pa., January 3rd, 1891, James C. Rubel, aged 42 years, 9 months and 14 days.

It becomes our painful duty to chronicle another sudden death, the fourth one that has taken place within the bounds of the Boalsburg charge during the last year. Mr. Rubel, the day before his death, had gone to a neighbor's, and while there the dread summons came to him in the form of an apoplectic stroke which proved fatal in less than twenty-four hours. The shock produced upon his family, and, indeed, upon the whole community, can better be imagined than described. Verily, in the midst of life we are in death. In a few short hours the joy of a happy family is turned into mourning, and where there was formerly laughter there is now weeping.

An aged mother, an affectionate wife, and three interesting sons, are made to weep by this mysterious dispensation of God's providence.

But they do not mourn as those who have no hope. They can take comfort in the fact that the dear departed was numbered with God's people and tried to live in God's fear. It affords the writer pleasure to bear testimony to the fact that he was earnest and attentive to his duties as a Christian, and was concerned for the welfare of his soul. This is the all important thing in burying our friends out of our sight.

May the Lord comfort the sorrowing ones, and be an ever-present help to them in this the dark night of their affliction.

**

DIED.—December 30th, 1890, George W. Stoler, of Liberty township, Bedford county, aged 34 years, 6 months and 20 days.

On Tuesday morning, about 4.30 o'clock, December 30, occurred the death of one of Liberty township's best and most active citizens—George W. Stoler. Some three weeks ago he accompanied a party on a hunting excursion. They hunted all day, and on their way home each discharged his gun at a mark, after which they proceeded on their way. Frank Stoler, cousin of the deceased, being the fourth in line from George, turned aside or around in place to put a cartridge in position. In so doing the gun was accidentally discharged, the muzzle being pointed almost in an opposite direction from George. The ball struck the ground, glanced, and struck a stone, and from that stone struck another and thence to the left leg of George, entering at the knee. The limb was not broken. No blame whatever attaches to Frank Stoler, as due and full precautions were taken by him.

George Stoler was a farmer. A number of years ago, while chopping wood, he cut his knee, from which he suffered terribly and in consequence of which he had a stiff knee. It was in this knee he received the wound which caused his death.

George was a son of Daniel Stoler and next to the youngest of a family of ten. All the others are living—D. M., S B., J. C., Mrs. W. Entrekin, Mrs. W. S. and Mrs. John S. Enyeart, Mrs. Dr. Livingstone, and Tillie and Sallie, who are still single. Daniel Stoler, the father, has liven on the old homestead for over fifty years. There never had been a death in the family until about two months ago, when Mrs. Stoler, the mother of George, died at the age of seventy-five years. All the family attended both funerals. George was laid to rest in St. Luke's cemetery on New Year's day.

George was married in Christmas, 1889, to Miss Lizzie Elder, eldest daughter of the late Isaac Elder, of Saxton.

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the widow in this hour of her sadness. May she be able to look unto Him who has promised to be a husband to the widow.

George H. Stoler was thirty-four years old—in the prime of life and the vigor of manhood. In early life George was consecrated to the Master's work, and during his whole life he proved himself a worker that his relatives and friends may well be proud of. His record as a Christian, as a citizen, and as a companion is one worthy of emulation. At the time of his death he was a member of the consistory of St. Luke's Reformed church. His second term having about expired, he was again nominated and on next Sunday would have been re elected to a third term.

His works will be remembered long after his face has vanished from our sight. On the resurrection morning we will see him among those who have washed their robes white in the blood of the Lamb.

A NEW EDITION.

WON BY PRAYER.

Or The Life and Work of Rev. Masayoshi Oshikawa, Native Missionary in Sendai, Japan.

BY REV. A. R. BARTHOLOMEW,
Late Secretary Board of Commissioners for
For. Missions, Reformed Church
in United States.

An interesting story, well told, and an evidence of what has been and is being done for the salvation of the heathen in Japan. Well illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound.

Pp. 120. Price, 75 cts. Postpaid.

☞Percentage on sales given to Foreign Missions. Should have a large sale.

REFORMED CHURCH PUB. HOUSE,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE ALMANAC

FOR THE

Reformed Church in the United States

—TWENTY-EIGHTH ISSUE—

FOR 1891.

We are ready now to receive orders for our Almanac for 1891, at the following rates:

100 Copies, per express,	$5.00
50 " "	2.75
12 " "	.75
1 Copy, Postpaid,	.12

When to be sent by mail 18 cents per dozen must be added for postage.

Also,

WESTERN ALMANAC

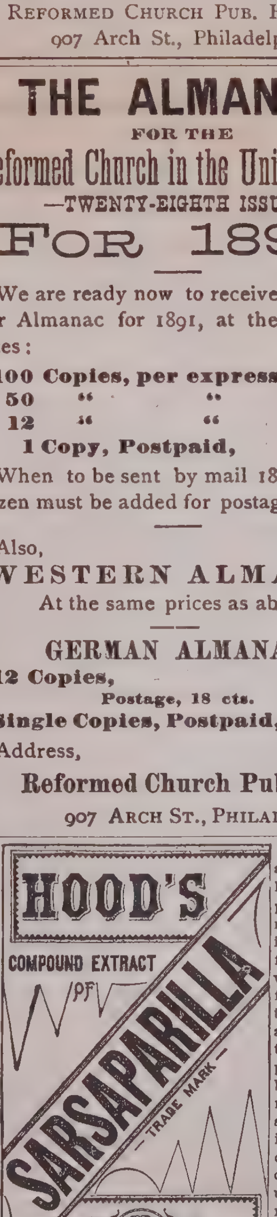
At the same prices as above.

GERMAN ALMANAC.

12 Copies, 90 cts.
Postage, 18 cts.
Single Copies, Postpaid, 12 cts.

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House
907 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA.



Hood's Sarsaparilla has by its peculiar merit and its wonderful cures won the confidence of the people, and is to-day the most popular blood purifier and strengthening medicine. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, dyspepsia, headache, kidney and liver complaint, catarrh, rheumatism, etc. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is peculiar to itself.

Hood's Sarsaparilla sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Business Department.

TERMS:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage free. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.

No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrearages are paid.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made before the date transpires.

When the address of a paper is to be changed, the OLD and the NEW should be given.

☞Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

☞We do make mistakes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

☞Remittances should be made payable by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, or Registered Letter to the order of THE REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHAS. C. FISHER

ADVERTISING RATE,

10 Cents Per Agate Line

Each insertion (fourteen lines to an inch).

Special Notices, set solid, double the price of display per counted line.

Reading Notices, leaded, three times the price of display per counted line.

Subject to the following Discounts:

FOR TIME.	FOR SPACE.
2 insertions...... 5 per ct.	100 lines......... 5 per ct.
4 " ......10 "	250 " ....10 "
8 " ......15 "	500 " ....20 "
13 " ......20 "	750 " ....30 "
26 " ......30 "	1,000 " ....40 "
52 " ......40 "	1,500 " ....50 "
No advertisement of less than 5 lines inserted at time rates on a contract for variable space.	To be used within one year.

Advertisements discontinued before completion of order, either by direction of advertiser or for non-payment, shall be paid for at regular rates for the advertising done.

An advertiser may use either scale of discounts, but cannot combine them. An advertiser is entitled to the highest discount which the entire amount of advertising done by him in any one year will secure.

Address all communications about advertising to

The Religious Press Association,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE NEW BOOK.

IN OLDEN DAYS BEYOND THE SEA.

Translated from the German, to which are added Introductory and Closing Parts,

BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

An interesting book, giving a thrilling account of the trials and persecutions of those who were true to their faith in "olden days beyond the sea." Pages 305. Illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of retail price, $1 25.

Address,

Reformed Church Publication House,
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK,

"In Olden Days Beyond the Sea,"

AND

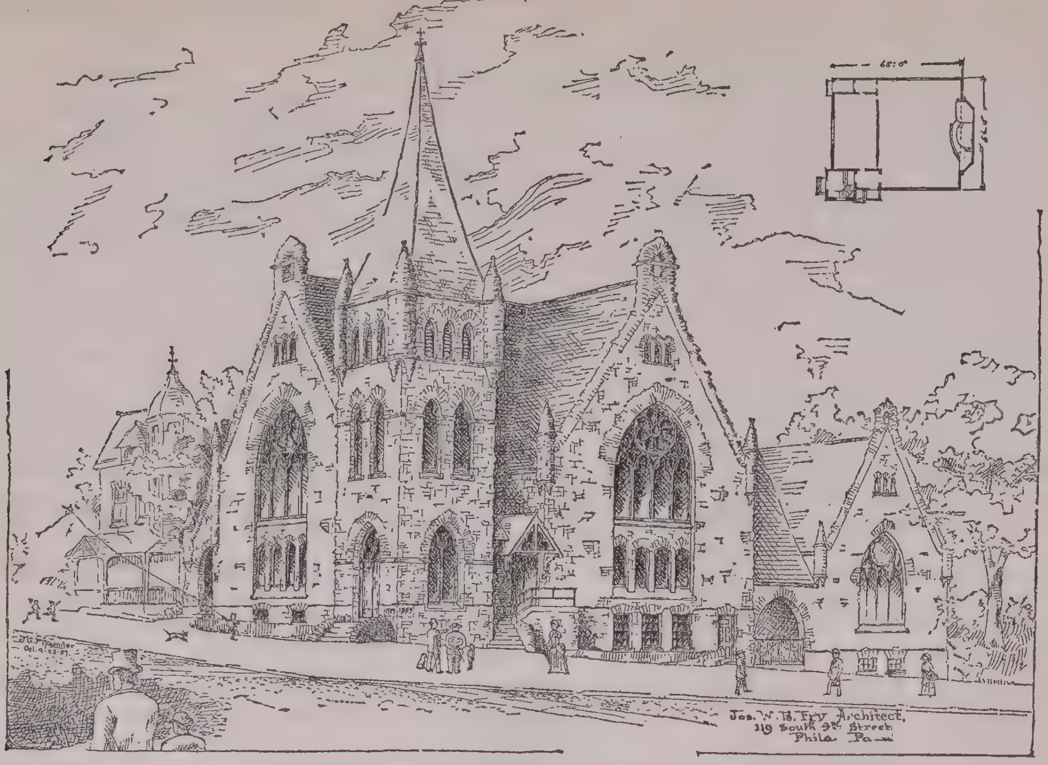
THE MESSENGER.

To any one sending us two new subscribers for THE MESSENGER and $4.00, we will send a copy of the above book postpaid.

To an old subscriber for THE MESSENGER, remitting $2.75, we will give credit for a year's subscription and send a copy of the above book, postpaid.

Address

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA.



ST. ANDREW'S REFORMED CHURCH, READING, PA.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

DEDICATION AND ORDINATION.

Septuagesima Sunday, in the year of grace, 1891, will record a unique chapter in the history of the Reformed church in the city of Reading. The dedication of a house of God and the ordination of its first minister is an unusual event in church-work circles. Such a rare occasion it was my happy privilege to witness. I shall ever cherish it as one of the golden days of my life, and I sincerely trust that its inspiration will follow me during my entire ministry. Let pastors and people, who fret and worry about the present progress and future prospects of our dear Zion, visit Reading, the Mecca of the Reformed church, and they will find a speedy remedy and a permanent cure for their groundless misapprehensions.

The Dedication.

The twelfth edifice, known as St. Andrew's, was solemnly set apart to the worship of the Triune God, in accordance with the simple and beautiful ritual of our denomination. Every available space was occupied long before the hour of service, and eleven ministers sat within the chancel.

The venerable Rev. C. F. McCauley, D.D., arose, and with a clear voice, said: "Arise, O Lord, into Thy rest: Thou and the ark of Thy strength," to which the people made hearty response.

The act of consecration was read by Rev. B. Bausman, D.D., in his usual impressive manner. Prof. John C. Bowman, of the Theological Seminary, Lancaster, Pa., preached the dedicatory sermon. His text was 1 Chronicles, 22d chapter, 5th verse: "And David said, Solomon my son is young and tender, and the house that is to be builded for the Lord must be exceeding magnifical, of fame and of glory, throughout all countries." The discourse was a masterly and eloquent delineation of the ancient temple, full of beautiful lessons for Christians of the present generation. He paid a glowing tribute to the ministers of Reading for their progressive spirit, as also to the excellent building committee who had charge of the erection of St. Andrew's church.

The Buildiag

This is one of the handsomest church buildings in the city. It is 56 by 73 feet in size, built of white hill stone, with brown sand-stone trimmings. There are three entrances to the church; the main entrance has an iron gate and the vestibule is tiled. The ceiling is a sky blue tint and the walls are terra cotta. Heavy beams of cherry extend from various parts of the roof to the centre, and rest on sand-stone projections. The wainscoting in the auditorium is of red oak, and the pews, chancel-rail, altar, pulpit, reading desk, sofa and chairs are also oak. The floor is nicely carpeted. Large handsome memorial windows adorn the East, West and North sides of the building. These windows are of the finest glass and illustrate the chief events in the life of our Lord. The pulpit and chancel furniture were donated by friends of the new interest. The cost of the building is $15,000, and, including the gallery, has a seating capacity of 650. The basement will be used by the infants, and has a seating capacity of 400.

Strange to say, St. Andrew's, like Calvary, has been built, without a congregation to worship in it. These magnificent structures are the product of that faith which worketh by love. They are the fruit of the piety and fidelity of our beloved brother, Dr. Bausman, and a circle of warm hearts, wise heads and willing hands.

One of the remarkable features of church-work in Reading is the spirit of self-help and help-others which the pastors and people display. No appeals are issued outside of the city for help in building churches, or in supporting their pastors, but the cause of home and foreign missions finds liberal supporters here. May God bless this portion of His vineyard.

The Ordination.

A committee, consisting of Revs. B. Bausman, D.D., C. F. McCauley, D.D., and A. R. Bartholomew, of the Classis of Schuylkill, were present at the evening service, to ordain the Licentiate, Stanley L. Krebs, to the work of the holy ministry. A large audience witnessed the solemn ceremony. Rev. Dr. McCauley led in prayer and read the Scripture lesson, the writer preaching the sermon from St John, 10th chapter, 14th verse, "I am the good shepherd." The characteristics of a good pastor were set forth, concluding with an earnest exhortation to the pastor-elect that he continue in the footsteps of the chief Shepherd and Bishop of souls. The ordination service was in charge of Rev. Dr. Bausman, all the members of the committee joining in the laying on of hands and in giving the right hand of fellowship. The installation service will take place at a later date. Rev. Krebs made a brief address, referring to this solemn moment in his life, promising to to do all he could to advance the cause of Christ and asking the people to pray for him in his new and important mission. We expect great things from this young brother and his flock. Few men have such a wide and effectual door opened unto them for great usefulness, but all who know Brother Krebs' eminent worth and ability will join with me in wishing him and his people a long, happy and successful pastorate.

A. R. BARTHOLOMEW.

Pottsville, Pa.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

WICHITA UNIVERSITY.

A very happy visit of three weeks among my old friends in Pennsylvania and Delaware ended with a joke. While away I lost no opportunity to extol the beauties of sunny Kansas. I returned by way of Canada, the land of long winters and deep snows, and the journey was rapid and easy until I got to our own land of sunshine, when we stuck in the snow one whole day. Agreeable company, however, made the joke a pleasant one.

The week and a half that has passed since my return have made me as happy as my visit. In this time I have confirmed five members in my church at Whitewater and received two by renewal of profession of faith. It is quite possible that I shall add four or five more in two weeks. The number will seem small to the eastern readers, but for me it is large enough to make me very grateful and happy, because there were only eleven members at Whitewater a little more than a year ago.

But that is not all. We have in this time also received seven new students in the University, and have good reason to expect several more in the course of a few days. Our school is good now; good in the number and spirit of the students, good in the work done. We who have been here from the beginning appreciate that. We need help, however, actually must have it, and I wish to set before our Reformed people the circumstances and conditions under which we labor.

The State of Kansas has three large institutions of learning, a University, an Agricultural College, and a Normal School. No tuition is charged in the state schools, and at least the Normal School, possibly the rest also, pay part of the car fare of the students. At the Normal School, however, there is no provision made for the boarding of students, and this is likely the case, too, at the other schools.

To a person not acquainted in Kansas, it would seem as if the state schools must shut out all others; but they do not for

Continued on Page 13.

A Noted Divine Says:
"I have been using Tutt's Liver Pills for Dyspepsia, Weak Stomach and Costiveness, with which I have long been afflicted.
Tutt's Pills
ARE A SPECIAL BLESSING.
I never had anything to do me so much good. I reccommend them to all as the best medicine in existance."
Rev. F. R. OSGOOD, New York.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
Office, 39 & 41 Park Place, N. Y.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

HUMORS of the BLOOD & SKIN Cured by Cuticura
TRADEMARK
HUMORS OF THE BLOOD, SKIN AND SCALP, whether itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, blotchy, or copper-colored, with loss of hair, either simple, scrofulous, hereditary, or contagious, are speedily, permanently, economically, and infallibly cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. CUTICURA REMEDIES are the only infallible blood and skin purifiers, and daily effect more great cures of blood and skin diseases than all other remedies combined.
Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston, Mass.
Send for "How to Cure Blood and Skin Diseases."
☞ Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin, ☜
☞ prevented by CUTICURA SOAP. ☜
Backache, kidney pains, weakness, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

PARSONS' PILLS
Make New, Rich Blood!
These pills were a wonderful discovery. No others like them in the world. Will positively cure or relieve all manner of disease. The information around each box is worth ten times the cost of a box of pills Find out about them, and you will always be thankful. ONE PILL A DOSE. They expel all impurities from the blood. Delicate women find great benefit from using them. Illustrated pamphlet free. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cts. in stamps; five boxes $1.00. DR. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., 22 Custom House St., Boston, Mass.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
The Original--Most Soluble.
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [65

BEECHAM'S PILLS
(THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.)
Cure BILIOUS and Nervous ILLS.
25cts. a Box.
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
Applied into Nostrils is Quickly Absorbed, Cleanses the Head, Heals the Sores and Cures
CATARRH
Restores Taste and Smell, quickly Relieves Cold in Head and Headache. 50c. at Druggists.
ELY BROS., 56 Warren St. N.Y.
THE CURE FOR CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAY FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE ELY'S CREAM BALM TRADEMARK 50c

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE of 16,600f.
QUINA-LAROCHE'S
INVIGORATING TONIC,
CONTAINING
Peruvian Bark, and Pure Catalan Wine.
Endorsed by the Medical Faculty of Paris, as the Best Remedy for
LOSS of APPETITE, FEVER and AGUE; MALARIA, NEURALGIA and INDIGESTION.
An experience of 25 years in experimental analysis, together with the valuable aid extended by the Academy of Medicine in Paris, has enabled M. Laroche to extract the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark (a result not before attained), and to concentrate them in an elixir, which possesses in the highest degree its restorative and invigorating qualities, free from the disagreeable bitterness of other remedies.
22 rue Drouot, Paris.
E. FOUGERA & CO., Agents for U. S.,
30 North William street, N. Y.
LAROCHE

☞ Send stamp for Catalogue. (Name goods desired.)
BABY CARRIAGES 100 styles. Automatic Brake on all. Free. Adjustable, Reclining and Invalid Wheel Chairs. Factory Prices.
LUBURG MFG. CO. 145 N. 8th St. Philada.

BLATCHLEY WOOD FORCE PUMP
Cheapest and most efficient. A Complete Fire Department on your premises. Write for descriptive circular. CHAS. G. BLATCHLEY, Philada.

TACOMA $100 to $10,000 carefully invested here brings annually from twenty to $100 %
Test us. Tacoma Investment Co., Tacoma, Wash.

everal reasons. Kansans are enthusiastically in favor of education, the state is very large, there is sectional pride, a desire to be educated as near home as possible, and the devotion of church members. In addition to this, the schools not backed by large churches, generally offer very cheap board.

As a consequence of these factors there are more students in Kansas to be found in other than the state schools, than in the state schools themselves. Flourishing schools are found in every prosperous section of the state. The Methodists have a large institution in the northeastern part, another college at Winfield; the Congregationalists have a magnificent college at Topeka; the Presbyterians have a successful one at Emporia; the Episcopalians had one at Salina; there is a large and prosperous private Normal School at Fort Scott; there is another successful private Normal School at Great Bend; and the private Normal School at Salina, with two other institutions in the same place, last year claimed an attendance of over four hundred students. There are still others.

Now what are our chances among this array of schools? I shall try to tell clearly and candidly. Our necessity comes with our greatest opportunity. We have ten chances to succeed now where we had one a year ago, or may have one a year hence.

We are in Wichita. I know many people in the East shake their heads knowingly or dubiously when Wichita is mentioned. But let us look at the situation fairly. Lots do not sell at several thousand dollars apiece now way out in the country, and many of those people who were here through the boom are failing. But Wichita still has a population of nearly twenty-four thousand and is (not expects to be) the center of one of the most fertile and beautiful sections of the State of Kansas.

Now it is not likely that Wichita will lose its position as the trade center, because the cities that once were rivals have been distanced in the race, and the people here are alive to their needs and opportunities. Even now they are completing arrangements for the erection of large grain elevators and the construction of a new railroad to Galveston.

Under the present circumstances we have, apparently, the very best location in Kansas. But Wichita will grow, very rapidly too, when it begins again; and with its growth the school will gain in importance, if it can lay hold of its opportunities.

Now ours is the only college here. Only two institutions have survived the collapse of the boom, Lewis Academy and Wichita University. We have a fair field before us. What an opportunity! Will the church take advantage of it?

We cannot make the full college course strong enough to support the school; but with the proper conditions, we can make the academic and normal courses pull out the institution financially and gradually build up the college courses.

Over against the state institutions, other schools not well endowed furnish cheap board, board at club rates. With a large hall on the ground we can compete with any of them. With the small club we can accommodate, we have been able to keep the average cost of board at $1.80 a week.

With a hall and a little additional advertising we could undoubtedly secure anywhere from twenty-five to fifty additional students in the spring when the public schools close, possibly many more. And who will say how many we might get by the end of another year? The Garfield University had a large attendance when it closed.

If they can secure their hundreds of students at Fort Scott, at Topeka, Salina, and Great Bend, why can not we at Wichita?

We need two boarding houses on the campus to do it. One we must have. Five thousand dollars will build it. Who will give the five thousand? Or who will give a part of it? Or who will suggest an effective plan to raise it? We are too busy to go out to collect it, almost too busy to write for it. Yet it must be secured now, we cannot fail to get it and exist. We who have toiled and suffered and waited here three years with our hands tied and our efforts handicapped and crippled, we would build that hall without hesitation, but we have not the means.

Many people in our church could give us the five thousand and never miss them. They would give less than we have given. Will not some one of them do it?

For Reformed Church Messenger.

RESOLUTIONS.

At a meeting of the Joint Consistory of Bethany charge of the Reformed church, held at Lititz on Monday, January 26th, 1891, to take action relative to the death of Rev. D. C. Tobias, late pastor of said charge, eighteen members were present.

Dr. D. Rhim Hertz, of Bethany congregation, was chosen president, and Mr. Milton K. Kremer, of White Oak, secretary.

A number of the members spoke in the highest terms of his pastoral qualifications, and paid feeling tributes to his memory.

Upon motion of Mr. Geo. S. Young a committee of one from each congregation was appointed to present to the President of Classis, Rev. Samuel M. Roeder, of the Reformed church, a request that said Classis assist in procuring a pastor for said charge, and also aid in providing occasional divine services until a permanent pastor can be engaged.

Committee consisted of Mr. Milton K. Kremer, of White Oak; Mr. Isaac W. Walter, of Brickerville; Mr. Samuel Carper, of New Haven; Dr. D. R. Hertz, of Bethany.

The following resolutions were presented and adopted as expressing the feelings and sense of the entire charge:

WHEREAS, It has pleased God, in His infinite wisdom, to remove from our midst our beloved pastor, Rev. D. C. Tobias, whom we loved and esteemed for his piety and energy; therefore be it

Resolved, That we deeply feel and deplore the loss of one who was a loving and pleasant pastor and a faithful minister of the Gospel, yet we bow in humble submission to the will of Him "who doeth all things well."

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family and friends, and commend them to the kind offices of our Heavenly Father.

Resolved, That God may enable us in His great mercy to realize that our loss is his gain, and that we may ever cherish the fond hope of a glorious reunion in heaven.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and also sent to several papers for publication.

MR. MILTON R. KREMER, White Oak,
MR. FRANKLIN ENK, Brickerville,
MR. JOHN G. CARPENTER, New Haven,
DR. D. R. HERTZ, Bethany,
Committee.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

DEDICATION OF A NEW CHURCH.

The dedication of a neat little church at Nottawa, Mich., on January 4th last, was quite an event. A congregation of twenty-three members was organized in this place by Rev. T. J. Bacher, April 4th, 1890. Though it looked to be an impossibility for it to erect for itself a spiritual home, yet in faith it was undertaken. By perseverance, self-denial and generous aid in money and labor, it was accomplished and on the date already mentioned it was dedicated to the service of the Triune God. Rev. W. H. Xanders preached the dedicatory sermon. Rev. S. A. Alt preached in the evening. The cost of the building was $1800. It was dedicated free of debt. It is a one story frame structure, 32x55 feet, with a pulpit recess and two class rooms. The pastor and his little flock are to be congratulated.

Church News.

☞Stated Clerks of Classes and Pastors will oblige us by sending such Items of News as will be of interest to the Church.

OUR OWN CHURCH.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia.—Christ Church, Rev. Jas. Crawford, D.D., pastor. On Tuesday evening, the 27th ult., the Choral Class gave a concert in the church. The programme was a varied and interesting one and the large audience present were high in praises of the proficiency attained by the class in so short a time under the leadership of Mr. Charles W. Yerger.——The 104th anniversary of the Pennsylvania Prison Society took place in this church on Thursday evening, the 29th ult. A. H. Love presided. Addresses were made by W. M. F. Round, corresponding secretary of the New York Prison Association, who explained the workings of the Burnham Industrial Farm School for Boys in the Berkshire hills, Judge Wilson of the Court of Common Pleas, this city, and by the pastor.——A meeting of the Universal Peace Association will be held in this church on Thursday evening, February 5th. General Morgan, Indian Commissioner of the United States, Herbert Welsh, Esq., of this city, and the pastor will deliver addresses. Representatives from the agencies which figured in the recent Indian troubles are also expected to be present.

Beaver Charge.—A special meeting of Clarion Classis was held in the St. Paul's church of the Beaver charge, January 27th. The pastoral relation between Rev. S. T. Wagner and the St. John's charge was dissolved, and a committee consisting of Revs. W. W. Deatrick, R. F. Gass and R. E. Crum was appointed to supply and assist the charge in securing a pastor. At this meeting also a call from the Beaver charge, lately served by Rev. J. F. Wiant, to Rev. S. T. Wagner was found in order and confirmed, and Rev. Wagner was installed as pastor of the charge, the installation service being conducted by the ministers of Classis present at the meeting, Revs. S. S. Miller of St. Petersburg, and D. B. Lady of Curllsville, making addresses, and Rev. J. F. Wagoner of Emlenton, performing the act of installation. Thus after a vacancy of some four months this important field is again supplied with a regular pastor, and one who has proved himself a zealous workman in the vineyard. We trust that a pastor will soon be secured for the flock left shepherdless by this transfer. Those desiring information in regard to St. John's charge can correspond with members of the committee mentioned above. D. B. L.

Maytown Charge.—Rev. M. M. Noacher, pastor. The Zwinglian Missionary Society of the Reformed church of Conestoga celebrated its second anniversary on Saturday evening, January 10. The programme was an appropriate one, and the rendering thereof was very acceptable and edifying. J. R. Yentzer, the president of the society, had charge of the music, which was very ably rendered. Hon. J.

Continued on Page 14.

Cleveland's Baking Powder
Is Absolutely the Best,
Because—It is highest in leavening power, yielding (average of Official Reports) 12.87 per cent. carbonic acid gas; an average equalled by no other cream of tartar powder.

THE PENN MUTUAL LIFE
Insurance Company issues all approved forms of contracts adapted to every legitimate need, for protection, for investment, and for both; for long or short periods, at the lowest, sure rates.
Its policies are squarely reciprocal, free from ambiguity and objectionable features, absolutely NON-FORFEITABLE and INCONTESTABLE. Send for rates, etc.
Home Office, 921 Chestnut St., Phila.

AMERICAN
Fire Insurance Company,
Nos. 308 and 310 WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA

BAXTER C. SWAN
MANUFACTURER OF
CHURCH, HALL AND LODGE
FURNITURE
IN GREAT VARIETY.
Pews and Chapel Seatings, Pulpits, Pulpit Chairs, Communion and Altar Tables, S. S. Teachers' Desks, &c.
Write for information to
244 & 246 South Second St.
PHILADELPHIA, PA., U.S.A.

WE MAIL FREE to any address a sample vial of RUBIFOAM for the Teeth. Deliciously flavored.
E. W. HOYT & CO., Lowell, Mass.

$3000 A YEAR! I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a Year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. No money for me unless successful as above. Easily and quickly learned. I desire but one worker from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number, who are making over $3000 a year each. It's NEW and SOLID. Full particulars FREE. Address at once,
E. C. ALLEN, Box 420, Augusta, Maine.

A NEW
Twilled Lace Thread
For CROCHETING.
BEST in the world!
Crocheting Book No. 2
50 Illustrated Patterns.
TEN CENTS.
Series of 12 Beautiful Illus. Tidies from London and Paris. Inquire for them of your dealer, or send 10 cents for spool—500 yards. 5 cents for Single Tidy or 60 cts. for 12 Tidy patterns, including copy of Crocheting Book No. 2.
GLASGO LACE THREAD CO., Glasgo, Conn.

VIRGINIA FARMS
FREE CATALOGUE
R. B. CHAFFIN & CO. RICHMOND, VA.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

For Gas
For Oil
BAILEY'S
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass
REFLECTORS,
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free.
A. J. WEIDENER,
36 South 2d St. Philada.
ALSO CHANDELIERS for OIL and ELECTRICITY

CHOICE CARPETINGS
IN ALL GRADES,
AT POPULAR PRICES.
A full line of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and Standard Domestic and Imported Carpets.
☞ We request only an OPPORTUNITY to show you our stock.
IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE.
NEW STORE,
1217 Market Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

CARPET buyers had better purchase of J. & J. DOBSON, 809 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, in order to receive full value for their money. They retail Carpets of their own make, which are reliable in every way.

SOWING & REAPING
By the Author of Gates Ajar, Song Treasury, etc.
Hymns, Tunes and Carols for the Sunday-school, Prayer, Praise and Gospel Service. Over 15,000 copies sold in advance of publication. 176 pages; beautiful lithograph title, superior in typography, press work, paper, binding and contents. Single copies, 35 cts, post paid. By express, $3.60 per doz., $30 per 100.
Address,
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

YOUR CHILD must be kept healthy, or she cannot be beautiful. Sensible mothers buy the "GOOD SENSE" Corset Waist for themselves and their growing daughters

H. Landis of Manor township, and Takeo Noya, Japanese, delivered an address. Both addressess were highly appreciated by the congregation. The pastor also made a few remarks. The secretary then read the report of the society, in which she gave a brief account of all the work done by this little band since its organization. The service closed by singing the doxology and receiving the benediction. Thus ended the second birthday of Zwinglian Missionary Society of Conestoga.

This little handful of missionary workers is to be congratulated for what it has done during the two years of its existence, and pray for still greater results.

The greater part of last week the pastor and wife spent visiting among the members of Conestoga congregation, and on Thursday evening these faithful people of Conestoga came together at the house of J. R. Yeutzer and gave them a complete surprise.

The evening was happily spent in social conversation, and by partaking of some refreshments prepared by the ladies of the congregation.

Before the happy party left for their respective homes, the pastor addressed them in words appropriate upon such an occasion, after which they all joined in the repetition of the Lord's Prayer, and received the benediction. As a token of the esteem in which they hold their pastor, they left behind a table well loaded with all kinds of edibles for the sustenance of the pastor and his family.

Catawissa.—It was announced in our last issue that Licentiate R. E. Butz had accepted a call to Shenandoah. It should have been Catawissa, Pa.

Willow Street.—Rev. D. W. Gerhard, pastor. The Reformed church at Willow Street, on Sunday evening, enjoyed the Christmas services held by the Sunday-school. A beautifully shaped tree, reaching to the ceiling, ornamented to suit the occasion, and lit up with many lights towards the close of the service, presented a fine appearance.

A service appropriate to the Christmas season was used under the direction of the superintendent, Mr. John Zercher, and the pastor. The choir rendered some excellent music and the school assisted in some of the selections. Particularly well rendered was the hymn sung by the little ones. Recitations and three minute addresses were made, and the superintendent and the pastor also made short addresses. The treasurer reported that $41 had been expended for the school, and that $14 remained in the treasury.

—Salem church.—At Salem or Heller's church a service entitled "The Son of God, The Son of Man," was used, and was rendered with spirit and energy, being conducted by the superintendent, Mr. D. R. Doner, assisted by the pastor. Addresses were made by the pastor and superintendent. After all who were connected with the school were given their gifts, the teachers were surprised with presents from their scholars. The two trees which graced the pulpit chancel were beautifully decorated, and together with the improvements recently made, gave the church a very handsome appearance.

The collection for Beneficiary Education amounted to $7.50. Offerings for the orphans, $9.50. Expenses of the school, $47. Pupils, 147; teachers, 11; officers, 7. Total, 165.

Shenkle's church.—The Shenkle's congregation, Chester county, Pa., which formed a part of the Brownback charge until the recent action of the Philadelphia Classis, has been without a regular pastor for months past. Being near Collegeville it has been supplied by the students of the senior class of that institution, so that it has not suffered for the want of preaching. The communion of the Lord's Supper not having been administered for months past, Rev. George W. Williard, D.D., of Ursinus College, by request, held said service on the 18th ult. The weather being very unpropitious, the attendance was not what it otherwise would have been. "It was pleasant," Dr. Williard writes, "to see the spirit which animated the members, who now, since the recent reconstruction of the charge, are in hopes of soon having a regular pastor. The prospect for building up a large congregation are encouraging. The people seemed grateful to the professors and students of Ursinus College for supplying them with preaching while they were without a pastor, and will no doubt show their appreciation of the service rendered by contributing liberally to the erection of the Bomberger Memorial Hall which is soon to be erected."

Myerstown.—The Reformed congregation of Myerstown, of which Rev. H. Hilbish is the pastor, is one of the largest in the Eastern Synod, having about 600 communicant members. The services are still largely German, the preaching in the morning being only once in four weeks in the English. The evening service is all in the English language. Many of the people talk the German in their ordinary conversation, it being the most familiar with them. We enjoyed our visit to the congregation very much as it was the first time we had ever preached here. The occasion was one of more than ordinary interest, as it was the time of the English communion in the congregation, which has four communion services annually, two in the German and two in the English. The number that communed was about 200, which was a very large number in view of the heavy fall of snow during Saturday night. All the services were largely attended. Twenty young persons were confirmed after having attended a regular course of catechization, which added greatly to the interest of the occasion. The Sunday-school was also largely attended considering the inclemency of the weather, there being nearly 200 present. The pastor is the superintendent and takes quite an interest in it. Brother Hilbish seems to be doing a good work here, and preaches fluently in both the English and German language.

Myerstown is situated in a fertile valley and has a population of about 2500. It is easy of access, as the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad runs by it. Palatinate College is also located here, thus affording the citizens an excellent opportunity to educate their children. It has an attendance of 74 students, and is in charge of Dr. W. L. Schaeffer as President. We were pleased to make a visit to the College and form an acquaintance with the President and other members of the Faculty. Our stay, although short, was pleasant, so that we shall look back to it with much delight. Our thanks are due Bro. Hilbish and his people for the cordial welcome they gave us. G. W. W.

Allegheny.—Rev. J. V. George, of Reamstown charge, after a ministry there of nine months, has accepted a call from the Allegheny charge, lately served by M. L. Fritsch, and expects to commence his labors there about the first of March.

Water Street.—Rev. C. U. Heilman, pastor. There were seven additions at a communion of the Sinking Valley Church, of Water Street charge.

Altoona.—Trinity Mission. Rev. Lloyd E. Coblentz, pastor. On January 11th the Holy Communion was administered for the first time in the new church. The attendance was unexpectedly large and the service was quite solemn and impressive. Five persons were received as members since the preceding communion. The offering amounted to $30.68.

MARYLAND.

Baltimore.—St. Paul's (German), Rev. N. Gehr, D.D., has taken temporary charge of the congregation lately served by Rev. J. C. Hauser, now deceased. Dr. Gehr's address is 306 N. Schroeder street, Baltimore, Md.

Middletown.—Rev. T. F. Hoffmeier, pastor. Christmas was observed in the Reformed church, Middletown, Md., by a Sunday-school service on Christmas eve, when the service, "Immanuel," was used, and a congregational service on Christmas morning at 10.30. The contributions amounting to $36.86 were divided equally between Bethany and Butler Orphans' Homes.

On Sunday morning and evening, January 4th, 1891, the Missionary Society held its anniversary. An interesting sermon was preached in the evening by Rev. H. F. Dittmar, of Jefferson, Md. The society is in a prosperous condition. Its contributions during the year amounted to $99, which were devoted to Home and Foreign Missions, with the exception of a small donation to the support of one of the Japanese students at Franklin and Marshall College. If we do not have distinctively Women's Missionary Societies down here, we still have Missionary Societies which are doing a good work and interesting not only the women, but men and children also.

The contributions noted above are not by any means all that the congregation gave to benevolent purposes in the past year.

Mt. Pleasant.—Rev. A. Shulenberger, pastor. The members and friends of the Sunday-school at this place spent an enjoyable Christmas in the church on Christmas eve. Promptly at 7 o'clock, the large school marched into the auditorium, headed by the officers, singing, in unison, The Greeting to Immanuel. The service prepared by the Publication House, entitled "Immanuel," was used on the occasion, and all the different parts were well rendered, especially those assigned to the children. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion and was pronounced by many as the prettiest they had ever seen. A collection was lifted for Bethany Orphans' Home, which was the largest Christmas collection ever taken in this church. The most pleasing feature of all for the children was the distribution of the usual Christmas presents.

OHIO.

Miamisburg.—Rev. H. M. Herman, D.D., pastor. At the winter communion three were added to this church. The congregation is in a flourishing condition. A new pipe organ has just been placed in the audience chamber. The whole church is lighted by electricity.

Akron.—Trinity. Rev. E. D. Wettach, pastor. The Church east will read with eager interest a few words from one of the youngest members of the large and growing missionary family. It is more apparent each day that this new church enterprise was needed in this city. The increased large attendance; the deep interest prevailing; the opportunities of doing good, all testify to the wisdom of establishing this congregation. Work was begun here October 1, 1890. To-day there is a congregation of 117 communicants and 63 unconfirmed member. They have a neat, cozy chapel; a flourishing Sabbath-school; a ladies' missionary society, equipped for aggressive work and a C. E. Society, with its earnest young workers, ready to go on a hundred errands for Christ at the suggestion of the pastor. Following the dedication there was held a week's special services, the neighboring pastors rendering valuable help. On January 25th the first communion was held. The congregation received a fresh baptism for service. Thirty new members were enrolled and seven children consecrated to God in baptism. Both pastor and people are much encouraged. They ask the prayers of their brethren.

NORTH CAROLINA.

East Rowan Charge.—Rev. C. B. Heller, pastor. Christmas services were held in both congregations—at Bethel on the day before Christmas and at Grace the day following Christmas. The "Order of Worship for Christmas" was used by both schools. The usual gifts were received by the scholars, in addition to which the following named pupils of Grace received each a beautifully bound pocket Bible—Mattie Fisher, Lillie Miller, Lillie Meisenheimer, Lottie Roseman, Jennie Probit, and Daisy Miller. The pastor and his wife were also kindly remembered. The collection at each service was made for the Orphans' Home.

HEALTH RESORTS.

"Pyrhus was counselled to take the repose he was about to seek with so much fatigue." He must have had wise counsellors. And would it not be well for many in our day to take the counsel to themselves? For example, those not only, who seek repose from the cares and worries of business, but also, and more especially, those who go abroad to seek health, "with so much fatigue." A tour of one's own city or neighborhood will often afford more pleasure and recreation than one has dreamed of. How many are there in our large cities who have seen all the objects of interest. It is only strangers who do so. While enjoying home comforts, so necessary to the invalid, and making yourself acquainted with the attractions of your own neighborhood, try the Home Treatment of DRS. STARKEY & PALEN. If you wish further information and to examine the testimonials of many who have tried it, write for our brochure, sent free. It is a book of 200 pages, giving a full account of Compound Oxygen, its nature, discovery and results. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

DON'T GIVE UP

The use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One bottle may not cure "right off" a complaint of years; persist until a cure is effected. As a general rule, improvement follows shortly after beginning the use of this medicine. With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Perseverance in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk, the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradicated."—L. W. English, Montgomery City, Mo.

"My system was all run down; my skin rough and of yellowish hue. I tried various remedies, and while some of them gave me temporary relief, none of them did any permanent good. At last I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, continuing it exclusively for a considerable time, and am pleased to say that it completely

Cured Me.

I presume my liver was very much out of order, and the blood impure in consequence. I feel that I cannot too highly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla to any one afflicted as I was."—Mrs. N. A. Smith, Glover, Vt.

"For years I suffered from scrofula and blood diseases. The doctors' prescriptions and several so-called blood-purifiers being of no avail, I was at last advised by a friend to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and now feel like a new man, being fully restored to health."—C. N. Frink, Decorah, Iowa.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by Druggists. $1, six $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE
For Impaired Vitality
and weakened energy, is wonderfully successful.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

IN MEMORIAM.

DIED.—On January 29th, at Allentown, Pa., Mrs. Eleanor L. Dubbs, widow of the late Rev. J. S. Dubbs, D.D., in the 89th year of her age.

She was born on the 24th day of December, 1802, in Greenwich township, Warren county, New Jersey. Her parents were David Lerch, and his wife Eleanor, a daughter of Joseph Jones, of Bethlehem township, Pa. She was twice married, her first husband being John S. Murphy, of Warren county, New Jersey. After the death of the latter she spent some time in New York, and then removed to Pennsylvania, where she was for some years engaged in teaching a private school. In 1837 she was married to Rev. Dr. Joseph S. Dubbs, at that time pastor of Zion's Reformed church, Allentown, Pa. Two sons blessed this union, one of whom died in early childhood, in 1844, during the meeting of Synod in Allentown, on which occasion the Synod passed a resolution of condolence with the bereaved parents. The surviving son is Rev. Joseph H. Dubbs, D.D., at present a professor in Franklin and Marshall College. Her stepchildren are Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs, D.D., pastor of Salem Reformed church, Allentown, Mrs. O. L. Schreiber and Mrs. J. O. Shimer, being the children of her late husband by a previous marriage.

Mrs. Dubbs was a woman of intellect and force of character, and was well known and highly esteemed by a generation that has now almost passed away. For many years she lived in retirement, but was until recently in full possession of her faculties. After an illness of seven weeks she fell gently asleep, and on Monday, 2d inst., was laid to rest in Union Cemetery, by the side of her deceased husband. She will be remembered as a faithful servant of the Lord and His church.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Louisa Dieffenbacher, wife of Rev. E. H. Dieffenbacher, departed this life, in the 56th year of her age, at Pleasant Unity, Westmoreland county, Pa., Monday, January 19th, at 10 o'clock, A.M.

In the death of this excellent woman, a faithful minister of Christ is sorely bereft of a most cherished and beloved companion; a son and daughter separated from the tenderest of mothers; and a hitherto cheerful parsonage left desolate.

The deceased was a daughter of Rev. Jonathan Zeller, a minister of the Reformed church, who entered into rest thirteen years ago.

Born of devout parents and carefully nurtured in a Christian family, her life, from childhood up to the day of her death, was the unfolding and ripening of a beautiful and lovely character.

Her amiable disposition, her many excellent qualities of mind and heart eminently fitted her for the position she was called to fill in life. She, indeed, was a model pastor's wife, a helpmate in the fullest sense of the word.

She realized the solemn and responsible work committed to her husband, and it was her aim in life, as well as the delight of her heart, to help him in every way possible.

Being a woman of more than ordinary intelligence, and having received a solid Christian education, her judgment, her counsel and her advice were always of service to her husband.

Wherever the Master of the vineyard called His servant to labor, she was willing to go, though it separated her from warm friends and cherished associates. But such was her kindly feeling toward all, and such her open-heartedness, that she soon won new friends wherever her lot was cast.

In the home circle she was the centre, the beating heart. She made home happy and cheerful for her husband, and to her son and daughter it was the most desirable spot on earth.

Now that she is gone it is truly comforting for her husband to be able to say: "In all the years of our wedded life she never gave me an unkind word."

When duty called him away from his home, her prayers for his safety and protection accompanied him, and on his return cheerful smiles and kind words greeted him.

As for her children, she never tired planning and working for their happiness and welfare.

As a Christian, she always endeavored to fulfil her solemn vows and obligations. She loved her church and did what she could to advance its interest. Like Paul she could say, "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." Her summons to depart this life was sudden and unexpected, but it did not find her unwilling nor unprepared. She was not confined to her bed over 48 hours, and when the news went abroad that she was dead the entire community was startled.

Her funeral took place in the Reformed church at Pleasant Unity, on Wednesday, at 1 P.M., in the presence of a vast concourse of sympathizing neighbors and friends.

Revs. A. E. Truxal, N. H. Skyles and C. M. Hartzell, were the officiating ministers of the Reformed church, who were assisted by the Lutheran and Presbyterian pastors of the town. Rev. N. H. Skyles preached the sermon from the text, "To die is gain." Rev. A. E. Truxal led in conducting the service at the altar. The Lutheran pastor also made a brief but very appropriate address.

Her remains were taken to Lock Haven, Pa., where they were buried on Thursday, the 22d ult.

"So He giveth His beloved sleep."

N. H. S.

Jeannette, Pa.

NOTICE.

Harbor Missions at New York: 30 State Street.

All those who may expect relatives or friends from Europe to arrive at the port of New York, and those departing from here to Europe should communicate with our Harbor Missionary, Mr. Paul Sommerlatte, No. 30 State Street, New York City, and he will gladly give them all the advice and assistance possible without any charge. The names of the parties expected from Europe and the name of the ship they will arrive in, should be given to the missionary in time, and steerage passengers should be advised to carry the name of the missionary in sight while landing at New York, because the missionary is always present upon the arrival of steerage passengers in the Barge Office, and will take care of those directed to him.

Convenient lodging, good transportation, railroad and steamship tickets, passes, etc., can also be secured through the aid of our missionary. Address,

PAUL SOMMERLATTE,
30 State Street,
New York City, N. Y.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cures bilious and nervous ills.

Acknowledgments.

Bethany Orphans' Home, Womelsdorf, Pa.

Rec'd from "No Name," (C. G. F.), $5 00

Thankfully received,

C. G. GROSS, Treasurer.
3716 Haverford Ave., Phila., Pa.

Statement of Money received by the Treasurer of Tohickon Classis since May 12th, 1890.

Charges.	On Assessment.	Voluntary.
Indian Creek,	$213 36	$74 31
Seilersville,	184 83	196 07
Springfield,	48 00
Kiegelsville,	152 67
South Bethlehem,	49 66	47 75
Ridge Valley,	13 13
Lansdale,	24 00
Nockamixon,	61 35	22 00
Durham,	78 90	30 00

ISAAC G. GERHART,
Treas. Tohickon Classis.

Telford, Pa., Jan. 1st, 1891.

Jacob K. Funck, Treasurer Lebanon Classis, acknowledges the following receipts, viz.:

1890.
Aug.	18	Rev J B May, Birdsboro Mission,	$1 30
"	19	Rev T C Leinbach, Harvest Home col, Christ ch,	10 00
"	25	First Ref ch, Lebanon, Pa, For Miss, Japanese Student,	60 00
Sept.	5	Rev T M Yundt, for Missions,	5 28
"	5	Rev J E Hiester, DD, Annville chge,	245 08
"	5	Rev J B May, Birdsboro Mission,	2 20
"	13	Rev S A Leinbach, (per J L Loos), Bern cong,	23 38
"	19	Swatara chge, per Rev J A Wickert,	60 00
"	19	Rev S A Leinbach, per W B Kline, St Michael cong,	20 00
"	19	Rev J B May, Birdsboro Mission,	1 00
Oct.	11	Rev H J Welker, for Bethany Orphans' Home,	25 00
"	24	Rev H J Welker, from Tulpehocken chge,	60 00
Nov.	3	Rev L D Stambaugh, Receipt Rev A C Whitmer,	10 00
"	3	Rev L D Stambaugh, Womelsdorf cong,	10 05
"	26	Rev L D Stambaugh, Rehrersburg cong,	10 85
"	26	Rev L D Stambaugh, Mount Ætna cong,	10 85
"	25	Rev L D Stambaugh, Sheafferstown cong,	7 00
Dec.	2	Rev S A Leinbach, per W B Kline, St Michael cong,	26 75
"	4	Swatara chge, per Rev J A Wickert, Schell's cong,	14 00
"	4	Swatare chge, per Rev J A Wickert, St John's S S, Jonestown,	11 00
"	20	Rev T M Yundt, Bethany cong,	6 00
"	20	Miss Fannie S Brunner, treas W C M S, Lebanon Cl,	20 00
"	22	Rev George B Resser, St John's cong,	111 00
"	29	Swatara chge, per Rev J A Wickert, St John's S S,	15 97
"	29	Swatara chge, per Rev J A Wickert, Salem's S S, Walmer's,	4 03
"	29	Rev J E Hiester, DD, per G W Stine, W C M S, Thanksgiving day,	7 08
"	30	Rev S A Leinbach, per W B Kline, St Michael cong,	47 65

JACOB K. FUNCK,
Treasurer Lebanon Classis.

THE J. P. BUSH MFG. Co.
BOVININE
A CONDENSED FOOD

CONSUMPTION. "It is by the aid of the digestive organs alone that consumption can be cured. Leave the lungs alone and direct the attention to the organs of nutrition, the stomach and bowels," which will receive BOVININE and return with interest in new blood and tissue the care bestowed upon them, BOVININE is the vital principles of Beef concentrated, a highly condensed raw food, palatable to the most delicate taste, and is indispensable in CONSUMPTION, Pneumonia or Bronchitis, and all wasting diseases. Will sustain life for weeks by injection. Causes feeble infants and their mothers to thrive wonderfully. BOVININE is the only raw food that will not spoil, and is retained by the most irritable stomach; is daily saving life in cases of Phthisis, Typhoid Fever, Diphtheria, Bright's Disease, &c.

BOVININE is Sold by all Druggists.

Baldness ought not to come till the age of 55 or later. If the hair begins to fall earlier, use Hall's Hair Renewer and prevent baldness and grayness.

M. Jules Ferry has been elected president of the customs committee of the French Senate.

There is nothing (unless it be the sewing machine) that has lightened woman's labor as much as Dobbins' Electric Soap constantly sold since 1864. All grocers have it. Have you made its acquaintance? Try it.

An English astronomer states that the oldest historical record of a solar eclipse is in Homer's Iliad (xvii. 367).

TRUE MERIT APPRECIATED.

BROWN'S Bronchial Troches are world renowned as a simple yet effective remedy for Coughs and Throat Troubles. In a letter from Hon. Mrs. Perry, Castle Gray, Limerick, Ireland, they are thus referred to: "Having brought your 'BRONCHIAL TROCHES' with me when I came to reside here, I found that, after I had given them away to those I considered required them, the poor people will walk for miles to get a few." Obtain only "BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES." Sold only in boxes.

FASTED LONGER THAN SUCCI.

Robert Park, of Newark, N. J., has just ended a fast which exceeds by several hours the famous starvation feat of Succi.

On Thanksgiving Day Park was seized with ulceration of the stomach, and took to his bed, which he did not leave for nearly forty-six days. Dr. Wendell, the well-known Newark physician, who attended him, found that he was unable to retain any solid nourishment on his stomach; and, during the whole period of his illness, the patient lived on a pint of water a day and two or three spoonfuls of Bovinine. It may be added that the Newark faster is employed in the fire department, and is not going into the dime museum business.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. Sold by druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER.

We make some Entirely New and Extraordinary OFFERINGS
IN LADIES' OVERGARMENTS.

A recent purchase of Cheviot and Stockinette Cloth from a manufacturer desirous to realize cash has enabled us, by reason of our recently greatly extended manufacturing facilities, to turn this cloth into the latest styles of

Choice Newmarkets,
Reefers, and Tight Fitting Jackets

at a cost to us lower than ever before.

At this season of the year we are enabled to make up these garments more cheaply than in busy times; not by cutting down the wages of operatives, but by giving work at fair prices to those who would otherwise be out of employment.

All this results in a saving to our patrons of

At Least One-Third the Lowest Regular Prices

for such excellent quality of garments.

All were carefully cut by experienced men tailors, and made up right here in our own building under most careful supervision.

With fully one-half of the winter weather before us, such an offering as the above in winter garments cannot but command widespread attention.

Strawbridge & Clothier,
EIGHTH & MARKET STS.,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

DO NOT STAMMER.

Mr. C. W. Terry, Highland, Ky., writes: "I am more than pleased with my success in speaking and bodily development. I feel it a duty to influence all I can to attend your Institute."

Send for 54-page pamphlet to E. S. JOHNSTON'S Institute, N. E. Cor. 11th and Spring Garden Sts. Phila., Pa.

CONFESSIONS of a NUN, } by Sister Agatha
A work of startling realism. Cl. $1; paper 50c
JORDAN BROS., Publishers, 211 N. 9th St., Phila., Pa.

"SPECIAL"
CLEARING SALE
FOR CHANGE OF PLANS.
Our Entire Stock of
English Clothing will be Closed Out At Half Value.
E. O. THOMPSON,
SPECIAL CLOTHIER AND IMPORTER,
1338 Chestnut Street.
(Opposite the Mint.)

CLINTON H. MENEELY BELL COMPANY,
TROY, N. Y. Manufacture a Superior Grade of
CHURCH CHIME PEAL AND SCHOOL BELLS

Best quality Bells for Churches, Chimes, Schools, etc. Fully warranted. Write for Prices. BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY, VAN DUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY,
BALTIMORE, MD.
Best quality Copper and Tin BELLS for Churches, Schools, &c.
Also CHIMES AND BELLS.
Price and terms free. Name this paper.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N.Y., Bells
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others.

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO
CINCINNATI, O., sole makers of the "Blymyer" Church, School and Fire Alarm Bells.
Catalogue with over 2200 testimonials.

RIGGS & BROTHER,
Branch Store, 1005 Walnut St., Phila
Ladies' 14-Carat Gold Watches, $25.
" 14-Carat filled case " 18.
Boys' Silver Watches, $7.00.
Watches and Clocks repaired.

400,000 The largest circulation of any periodical in the world. "The Phila. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies free. CURTIS PUB. CO., Phila., Pa.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS

Over 200,000 ESTEY ORGANS are singing their own praises the world over, as the most reliable organ made for tone, durability and fine finish. The ESTEY PIANO is as thoroughly and carefully made and guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has. If you want a first-class Piano that is sure to please you buy an ESTEY. Lowest prices for cash, or on easy monthly payments.
ESTEY, BRUCE & CO. 18 N. Seventh St. Philadelphia, Pa.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S NEW GUIDE
If you want ROSES, FLOWERS or SEEDS of any kind, write for OUR NEW GUIDE—FREE. It will help you select the best things NEW and OLD—Correct prices, careful service, whether you buy much, or little, or nothing, is immaterial. If you are interested in Flowers we want you to have our Book, and understand our methods of business. If not interested don't send for it, it is intended for those who plant things.
THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., WEST GROVE, PA.

USE FERRY'S SEEDS
BECAUSE THEY ARE
THE BEST.
D. M. FERRY & Co's
Illustrated, Descriptive and Priced
SEED ANNUAL
For 1891 will be mailed FREE to all applicants, and to last season's customers. It is better than ever. Every person using Garden, Flower or Field Seeds, should send for it. Address
D. M. FERRY & CO.
DETROIT, MICH.
Largest Seedsmen in the world

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.
W. BAKER & CO.'S
Breakfast Cocoa
Is absolutely pure and it is soluble.
No Chemicals
are used in its preparation. It has more than three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is, therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, EASILY DIGESTED, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as persons in health.
Sold by Grocers everywhere.
W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.
BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:
JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

Mention this paper.
Books
New Books every week. Catalogue, 132 pages. free; not sold by Dealers; prices too low; buy of the Publisher, JOHN B. ALDEN, 393 Pearl St., New York.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum. M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE
Capital paid up $1,500,000 TRUST CO. Surplus over $100,000
DENVER, COLORADO.
First Mortgage Loans and Gold Debentures.
Loans fully guaranteed. Safe as Government Bonds.
Philadelphia Office, Room 302 Bullitt Building,
ROBT. FORESMAN, Manager.

THIS BRIGHT NEW 1891
needs the brightest and best of music. The 2,000,000 readers of this ad. are all invited to provide themselves with music or music books from our complete and varied stock.
☞ Send freely for lists and information.

SOME OF OUR NEWEST BOOKS.

SONGS OF IRELAND. $1.00. Choice, revised collection of very favorite songs. 66 songs. 144 pages.

POTTER'S RESPONSES AND SENTENCES. 75 cts.; $6.75 doz. A timely and good collection, which will be welcomed by many choirs. More than 50 short pieces, with a number of Glorias, Chants, &c.

PRAYER AND PRAISE. Cantata. Ballard. A good and easy cantata, for a Choir or Chorus. 50 cents; $4.50 per doz.

MASONIC ODE. Fithian. A new, most convenient book of easy and good music, perfectly fitted for the masonic ritual. Much needed. 60 cts.; $6 doz.

COMIC AND MINSTREL SONGS. $1.00. 46 merry songs, well calculated to make time pass cheerfully.

BANNER FOLIO. Violin and Piano. Winner. Large number of popular melodies, skilfully arranged for Violin, with Piano accompaniment. $1.00.

MANDOLIN AND PIANO DUETS. Winner. About 75 popular airs for Mandolin and Piano. $1.00.

Any Book mailed, post-paid, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY, Boston
J. E. DITSON & Co., 1228 Chestnut St., Phila.

KNABE
PIANOS.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
BALTIMORE, 22 and 24 East Baltimore Street,
New York, 148 Fifth ave. Washington 817 Market Space
F. A. NORTH & Co., Sole Agents,
1308 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

ARCHITECTURE
CHAS. W. BOLTON, 1510 Chestnut St., Phila
Sketches of Churches, Public Buildings, Dwellings, etc., furnished gratis. Then, if desired, drawings and specifications will be prepared for a reasonable consideration.

Over 350,000 acres of Choice Farm Lands Failure of crops never known. Best all-the year climate in the world. Soil adapted to all kinds of farming. Plenty of water. Low prices, and unusually liberal terms. C. E. SIMMONS, Land Com., C. & N. W. R'y, Chicago, Ill.

DEAFNESS & HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Tubular Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Successful when all remedies fail. Sold FREE only by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs

A State of Siege

FOR DEFENCE
SCOTT'S EMULSION
FOR DEFENCE
PALATABLE AS MILK
SCOTT'S EMULSION
FOR DEFENCE
SCOTT'S EMULSION

Dr A. H Strickler
14Feby90

How many people there are who regard the coming of winter as a constant state of siege. It seems as if the elements sat down outside the walls of health and now and again, led by the north wind and his attendant blasts, broke over the ramparts, spreading colds, pneumonia and death. Who knows when the next storm may come and what its effects upon your constitution may be? The fortifications of health must be made strong. SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda will aid you to hold out against Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases, until the siege is raised. It prevents wasting in children. Palatable as Milk.

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. All Druggists.

Reformed Church Messenger.

"AS THE TRUTH IS IN JESUS."

VOL. LIX.—No. 7. PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, FERRUARY 12, 1891. WHOLE No. 2927.

Entered at the Post-Office, Philadelphia, as second-class matter.

The Reformed Church Messenger.
ISSUED WEEKLY
IN THE INTERESTS OF THE
REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES
BY THE
REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE,
CHAS. G. FISHER, Proprietor,
Office: 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(For Terms, see page 11.)

Editorial Notes.

—We are requested to announce that on account of a necessary delay the new Hymnal will not be ready by the end of this month.

—The Church will sympathize with Rev. O. H. Strunck and wife in their bereavement occasioned by the death of another of their children, which occurred last week.

—"The Monitor" is the name of a four-paged paper issued by Jacob H. Kuhns, as editor and manager, in the interests of the Emanuel Reformed congregation, of which Rev. J. F. Snyder is pastor. It is a sprightly and tasty sheet; and if succeeding monthly numbers are equal to it, it will be the means of doing great good in that section of the Church.

—We give elsewhere the letter from Prof. John B. Keiffer, Librarian of the College Library, and the note from Prof. W. M. Nevin giving cordial approval of the object aimed at, to the Alumni of the College suggesting the propriety of forming an Alumni Library Association for the purpose of securing funds for the increase of the library. It is to be hoped that a cordial and general response will be given in behalf of this most worthy object.

—"All Hail! our Risen Lord" is the name of the new service our Publication House will issue for the coming Easter. It is by Rev. J. C. Leinbach and Prof. Ferd. K. Hill, who have been giving us such excellent and popular services. The peculiar features of their services will be found in the new one. The music is beautiful, indeed the best that Prof. Hill has so far produced. We hope our Sunday-schools will wait to see it before they place their orders. It will be furnished at the usual rates: $4 per hundred, per express, $4 50 post paid.

—Here is something more upon the subject of cheap papers. Ii is from the Interior, and quite practically does the editor comment upon the Examiner's attempt to gain subscribers by making the price of subscription, as it thought, within the reach of everybody:

"The Examiner, New York, the oldest and most prosperous of the Baptist papers, has an article nearly a column long, urging its subscribers to pay their subscriptions. We are not surprised at this. The Examiner though prosperous, attacked its numerous Baptist contemporaries by cutting down its subscription price below what they could live upon. There was but one step from this to writing dunning editorials. There is a method of making subscribers pay up their subscriptions that never fails: charge them sufficient to enable you to make a good paper: make a good paper. Then in paying their subscriptiens they know they are closing a good bargain for themselves, and they will not be slow about doing it. Cheapness runs into the ground at as sudden a slant as a fence-stake. It is very, very cheap, almost no money at all, urged the Examiner. On that line their subscribers thought that there was only one thing better—that was, no money at all."

—The Glee and Mandolin Clubs of Franklin and Marshall College returned last Monday a week from a very successful tour through the cities of Hagerstown, Frederick, Baltimore and Washington, D. C., being at the last place, as will be learned from an account given elsewhere by pastor Apple, on Friday evening, January 30th. In all these places large and enthusiastic audiences greeted them, and by their fine singing and playing won for themselves high encomiums of praise. Should they return to any of these places large audiences will be sure to greet them. Their singing is pronounced by good and competent judges to be equal to any College Glee Club in this country. This is saying a great deal. It is, nevertheless, true. Arrangements are being made to have them give a concert in this city, and from the favorable impressions made by the Quartette present at the Alumni reunion on the 6th inst., a royal reception undoubtedly will be given them.

—The fifth annual meeting and dinner of Franklin and Marshall Alumni Association of Philadelphia on Friday last was, as was pronounced by all present, the most pleasant and successful one yet held. It is exceedingly gratifying to those upon whom the arranging for these reunions devolves that they, year after year, increase in interest and in numbers in attendance. No little benefit to the College has grown out of these annual gatherings of her sons around the festive board to "enjoy a feast of reason and a flow of soul." To day she is better known in the city of Brotherly Love, and even to many of her own sons; and hence attention has been attracted to her distinctive characteristics as an Institution of learning by those outside of her own constituency. A number present at this reunion were there for the first time, and evidently went away filled with renewed interest and fired with fresh zeal in behalf of the College, and resolved to be hereafter among those who come together to tell and hear of her progress, and her needs in order to make her one of the well-equipped Institutions in this country.

—The addresses both by invited guests and members of the Association were well received and whether jocose or grave, they greatly helped to make the occasion a profitable and enjoyable one. President Fisher presided with grace and dignity, and facetiously and appropriately introduced each speaker. The reference by President Stahr to the approaching celebration of the eighty-fifth anniversary of the birth of Prof. Nevin, and his being charged with bearing the venerable and much beloved Professor's salutations to the Associarion, was most befittingly received and quite heartily followed the response to the toast proposed by Hon. A. C. Reinoehl to rise and drink to his health. The Association felt itself honored by the presence of Judge Arnold, Pres. Fetterolf, Prof. J. E. Garretson, Prof. Stibitz and Dr. Hulburd, and the kind sentiments and the eloquent words they uttered in response to the call of the President, will not soon be forgotten by those in hearing. And none the less appreciated were the responses of President Stahr on "The College," Dr. Steiner on "Old Marshall," Dr. Gerhart on the "Alumni Association of Philadelphia," and those of Messrs. Weigley, Reinoehl, Guilford, Franklin and others. The full attendance this year augurs a larger and more successful one at the next meeting. And that it will be if the sons and friends of the Institution will then show their interest in her welfare by their presence.

—The Universal Peace Union held a meeting in Christ Reformed church, Green below Sixteenth, this city, Thursday evening, the 5th inst. A number of the Indian delegation now at Washington, D. C., together with quite a representation of the Indian boys and girls from the Lincoln Institution were present. The pastor. Rev. James Crawford, D. D., made an address of welcome which was responded to by A. H. Love, Esq., President of the Peace Union. The principal address was by Genl. T. J. Morgan, Commissioner of Indian Affairs at Washington, who gave in a very clear and concise way the present situation of Indian affairs and some suggestions as to how they may be different and thus put an end to the outbreaks by the Indians. He was followed by Herbert Welsh, Esq., Secretary of the Indian Association, who, in a very positive manner pointed out the causes of the trouble as being, incompetent agents and want of keeping faith with the Indians on the part of the government, and urged every one to appeal to the President and their member of Congress to devise things so that these wards of the nation may be educated and given employment, and thus made to care for themselves. One of the friendly Sioux Chiefs, John Grass, made a short address in his own language, which was interpreted by Rev. Chas. Cook, a native Indian and an ordained minister of the Episcopal Church. He told of their efforts in self help and expressed his pleasure at appearing before them. Rev. Cook also spoke of the great influence Christianity had upon the Indians as they were by nature religious. The children from Lincoln Institute sang several songs in a very creditable manner which was pleasing to the delegation of Indians and to the large audience present. The names of some of the Indians present besides John Grass, were Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Horse, Hollow-Horn-Bear, Clarence-Three-Stars and Maj. Geo. Sword. It is felt that a crisis has been reached in Indian affairs and it is to be hoped that the visit of the delegation now in Washington may result in effecting arrangements by which there may be no more outbreaks among them and that in time all may become civilized and make useful and honored citizens. This no doubt can be brought about if the promises of the government are carried out and the politicians of the country cease to have control in the conduct of affairs among them.

Poetry.

THE KING IN HIS BEAUTY.

I wandered, oné night, in spirit
  To the land that is far away,
The earth was sleeping in darkness,
  But my path was as light as day.

I passed through the pearly portals,
  And entered the heavenly fold,
'Midst a host of angel welcomes
  I stood on the street of gold.

I took my place in glory
  With the happy white-robed throng,
While the golden bells of heaven
  Rang out the glad new song.

But fairer than all the brightness
  I saw in that radiant place,
Was the sight of "the King in His beauty,"
  As I saw Him face to face.

And sweeter than all the music
  That angel choirs could sing,
Was the well-known voice of Jesus,
  My own Redeemer, King.

Bring the great of every nation
  All treasure rich and rare,
Heaven would not be heaven
  Without my Jesus there.

—Katie A. Ciarke.

Communications.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

OUT OF CONTACT.

There is a class of people in all our larger towns and in the cities with whom the Christian Church finds it difficult to keep in contact. We do not mean the criminal class, nor such individuals, whether intelligent or ignorant, well-to-do or poor, who take an open stand against religion. We leave all these entirely out of view. They are out of touch, drifted away, or willfully torn loose by their own act; and they need consideration, and receive it, too, in various ways, from the organized forces of Christianity. But it is not they whom we mean, and we are anxious not to have them mixed up, even in thought, with those to whom we refer. The class of persons we have in view is fairly distinct, and numerous enough to claim the serious attention of the Church.

How shall we describe these people as a body? Not an organized body—far from it; nevertheless a body in the sense of there being very many of the same sort, with certain common characteristics. Let us sketch some of them from life.

Here is a widow with several grown-up children. She is a godly woman, who has worked hard and suffered much in her day. Her trials and afflictions have brought her nearer to the Master, and taught her to seek comfort and strength in the worship and sacraments of the Church. So her life goes on from year to year, as she ripens for the eternal world.

And her grown-up children? The one is married to an excellent member of the Church, and they walk together, as well as they know how, in the ways of righteousness. It is the other members of the family with whom the difficulty begins. Let us say here, too, that they have all been baptized, instructed and confirmed, and there is not one of them opposed to religion, morality, or, definitely speaking, the Christian Church. Rather, all their convictions are favorable. If they have children they would like to have them baptized; if one of their family is dangerously sick they send for the minister; if one dies, the services of the Church are invoked. If the Church does not answer their wish in any of these respects, they are offended, and even willing to make any reasonable concessions and promises. Practically, however, the congregation is not in touch with them. The concessions are neglected, the promises forgotten. They hardly ever attend the services of the congregation; their children get to the Sunday-school simply when convenient; the congregation receives no regular financial support from them, and can look to them for no service in the various lines of its activity and charity. They cannot be kept on the list of members. If put there, in consequence of some resolution taken in the hour of trial, a few months or a year will tell that it was no use. The Church cannot keep in contact with them. Its hold on them is slight when it exists, and practically it can be brought to exist only now and then.

These people live a mile or more from the place of worship: they have a fair income, and are accounted average good citizens.

The point that we wish to emphasize is this: They appear to have no conscious need of the Church, its worship and sacraments, except in occasional instances. And this family is representative of many others.

Over yonder hill live quite a number of families, who have moved from different counties in the State into town, but who were country people in their first home. They have been church members in their time and at the old home. How much they ever went to church, and to what extent church life once influenced them, we have no means of knowing. But they are fairly out of contact with the church now. Perhaps they drop in to a service once or twice a year; perhaps not. If a death occurs in the family they will call upon the minister, whom they make it a point never to meet, unless he hunts them up, at any other time, to conduct the funeral services. The minister does visit them as often as with propriety he may, and as his other duties allow. Members who formerly knew them, or who have later on come to know them, are requested to speak to them on the subject of their Church connection. But in many cases all this is to no effect. They live in very limited circles of people like themselves, generally cultivate no society worth naming, go on in their isolated life, and show next to no sign of any conscious need of the Church, its worship, and its sacraments, especially as the latter meet them in the form of the Lord's Supper. We have said that these people live over on yonder hill, but their like live also in every large town and city in the land in great numbers, and all over the bounds of the congregations in such places.

Some families are passable church members, but seem to have little control over their children after they reach the age of eighteen to twenty-one; perhaps have exercised a very vague religious influence over them in their younger days. In many instances such children are confirmed when the proper time arrives. But soon afterward they begin to stray away from the Church. They attend service once in a while; they go to communion once, twice, thrice. Then the congregation loses sight of them, not willingly, but because it does not know where to find them or how to retain an influence over them. Practically they cut loose from their spiritual anchorage. One such young man, whom we had confirmed in former years, once told us, when we urged him both to his duty and his privilege: "I am a rail-roader, and rail-roaders find it inconvenient to go to church; besides one begins to be active in church matters when one gets older and has children, to whom one must set an example." We thought to ourself that he spoke probably the language of many young married men. How can the Church keep in contact with people of such views, or how can it get sufficient hold on them to bring about a change in their views and habits?

WYOMING.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

LETTER NO. I.

Dear Sisters: There has been considerable discussion of late in the MESSENGER and elsewhere, as you know, in reference to the position and sphere of woman in the work of the Christian Church. It seems that the membership of our Church, both male and female, is still divided in opinion on this question. Some of you are in full and active sympathy with the so-called aggressive workers of your sex in other denominations. Some are shocked at such teaching and practice, believing that women should literally keep silence in the churches. Others are in doubt on the whole question. So long as this is the case there is room for still further discussion.

In order to help toward a solution of the question, I deem it well to write to you some open letters. In doing this, I take it for granted, that you and I, both in teaching and learning, are actuated only by love of the truth. "There are no tricks in plain and simple faith." I shall, therefore, bring to the subject plain words, but without malice; frank, but without guile.

That I am the husband of a wife, the father of two daughters and an ordained minister in our Church, may be evidence to you that I am not without personal interest in the matter, nor without a solemn sense of the responsibility resting upon me in publicly writing upon this subject.

First of all, then, let us look to a starting point as a foundation upon which we all can agree to stand and from which we can agree to look at the whole subject in all its bearings.

We all are agreed that the will of God is our only absolute and infallible guide in this as in all other matters. We are further agreed that His will is revealed to us in His Word (Christ and the Holy Scriptures); that His will is law for us in all our thinking, speaking and doing, and that any transgression of that law is sin. I take it for granted that not one of you doubts these things.

But we must be careful to guard against two errors at this point. We must distinguish between what we may call our immediate and our mediate relations to that law. In other words we must bear in mind the twofold character of the law as defined by our Saviour Himself. In one part of that law direct obedience to God is required, in the other indirect, that is, in and through the person of our neighbor. In the first case, the will of God is the same to all human beings, because, as such, they all hold the same relation to Him; in the second that will is not the same because all human beings do not hold the same relation to one another. All human beings, for example, are sinners, and as such, it is his will that they should repent. But all human beings are not kings, nor judges, nor fathers, nor mothers, nor masters, nor servants. The same truth holds in the sphere of Christianity. Here, too, the will of God is the same to all Christians as such. He wills that all should walk in the Spirit, that all should be perfect as he is perfect, that all should be one in Christ, as He is in the Father. Here "there is neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, male nor female, for all are one in Christ Jesus." But all Christians are not apostles, nor prophets, nor elders, nor deacons, nor husbands, nor wives. It must be clear to your minds that a person in any of the positions named has duties which others not in such position do not have. And as all duties, in whatsoever position one may be, are grounded in the will of God, it follows that the will of God is not the same to all. True, in principle it is the same, for love is the fulfillment of the law in every form. But we have now to do with the question, what is the sphere in which you, as Christian women, can and ought to be active under the will of God, and not, what should be the underlying principle of that activity, which is love, of course. I have dwelt thus long upon this point of difference in our relation to the will of God, for it is here that so many seem to be at sea in their thinking.

But there is another common error against which we must guard if we are to have a right understanding of the question before us. It is often said in substance, that the posession of a bodily, mental or spiritual endowment by any one is sufficient evidence that it is the will of God that the possessor of it should use it without restraint except such as he himself sees fit to determine. Such self-restraint, of course, is supposed to be influenced by custom, expediency, the spirit of the age, common sense, etc. But it is supposed, also, that there is and need be no special determination by the will of God as to the sphere and purpose in and for which such endowment is to be used. The mere possession of it is taken to be authority enough in this direction, especially if the end for which it is exercised be deemed good. This is frequently the whole sum of the argument of speakers before the various societies in our Church, and even is not seldom heard on the floor of our Church judicatories. And such persons, by the way, generally manifest considerable impatience if their position is questioned, and are ready at once to pronounce the questioner an obstructer of God's work.

But a little serious and candid reflection ought to be enough to show you the fallacy of such a position. An attorney at the bar may know more law than the judge on the bench, does that give him authority to exercise his attainments as judge? A son may be stronger in every way than his father, does that fact of itself give him authority to take the father's place? Your maid-servant may have a stronger will and be a better housekeeper than you are, does that give her authority to displace you as mistress of your household? It must be clear to you that the persons named can only rightly use their endowments and attainments under the law and within the limitations of the positions which they hold. Their superior ability is no authority in the case, for might does not make right; neither is their own will, nor the will of man, but that of God; for "there is no power but of God. The powers that be are ordained of God." Hence the inspired expression of His will in reference to persons holding the various positions in life, both in the Old Testament and in the New.

We are now ready for the main question, to which I shall direct your attention in my next.

Your brother in Christ, N.

For the Reformed Church Messenger.

ZWINGLI AND LUTHER—THEIR RELATION TO EACH OTHER AND THEIR INFLUENCE.

II.

Another interesting chapter in the history of the Reformation and in which we can see these men, side by side, we have in the Conference at Marburg in 1529. "Philip now summoned leading theologians on both sides to a Conference at Marburg, in his castle, which lasted from the first of October till the third, 1529. On the one side were Luther, Melancthon, Justus Jonas, from Wittenberg, Brentz from Swabia, and Osiander from Nuremberg; on the other side, Zwingli from Zurich, Œcolampadius from Basel, Bucer and Hedio from Strassburg. The public conference began on the second day. On many points agreement was had, but on that of the Lord's Supper there was none. He (Z.) took his stand upon John 6:63, 'The flesh profiteth nothing;' but Luther wrote with chalk on the table before him, 'This is my body,' as the Word of God which no one may explain away. No agreement was reached." (Kurtz, 273.) As no agreement was had, therefore it was superfluous to proceed with the Conference. "Nevertheless, Luther called upon the Swiss to renounce their doctrine, and to pass over to his. Zwingli, Œcolampadius and Bucer protested solemnly. They called upon all the spectators as witnesses, that Luther had not established his doctrine by the Word of God; that they, on the contrary, had shown him his error, and had sufficiently established the foundation of their doctrine in the Word of God and the old Church fathers. Enraged, Luther concluded: 'Then we will also let you go your way and commend you to the righteous judgment of God, who will indeed find out who is right.' 'We do the same,' replied Œcolampadius. Zwingli silently turned away. Every one saw that his eyes were full of tears. Before they separated, the Landgrave, on the 4th of October, caused the points to be drawn up on which they agreed. He also admonished them, at least to recognize each other, mutually, as brethren. This admonition of the prince, affected Zwingli greatly. Moved, and with tears in his eye, he stepped forward and offered Luther the hand of reconciliation. But Luther, roughly rejected his hand, saying, 'You have a different spirit from us.'" Grob's Life of Z., p. 155, 156. Alas! Luther evidently had not studied the 13th ch. 1 Cor., or if so, evidently missed the true spirit of that great lesson on charity. There is a grand summing up of that Conference, the tendencies entering into it, by Allen. "Con. of Chris. Thought," p. 291, 292. "The controversy with Luther about the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, was one of the painful incidents in the Reformation, if for no other reason, because Luther appears in the affair so far below his true self. It was a case where the disputants failed to understand each other, because neither fully understood himself. Zwingle made the sacrament a memorial of the death of Christ, and found in it as such a spiritual efficacy; to Luther's mind this seemed to empty the sacrament of its significance; he preferred to regard it as charged with a divine presence, as containing the actual body and blood of Christ. But Zwingle had no necessity for confining to the Eucharist a beneficent presence with which the world was full, whose secret shrine was in every faithful heart. If Zwingle seemed to rob the sacrament of a real presence of Christ, Luther seemed to rob the world itself of such a presence, just as the Latin Church had done when she lost the idea of the immanence of Christ in humanity, and made the sacraments channels for the conveyance of grace from His remote abode. The controversy illustrates the inevitable confusion of thought in the age of the Reformation, but it also shows how Zwingli had revolutionized theology from its basis, while Luther remained divided in his allegiance between two systems, one of which claimed the devotion of his life, while the other held him bound by the sacred associations of religious sentiment. So long as Luther did not formally recognize the immanence of the essential Christ, as the redeeming force in human life, there was a want in his thought, which his doctrine of the Eucharist was an attempt to supply. It was creditable to Zwingle that he still wished to maintain Christian fellowship with Luther, despite their difference of opinion. It was characteristic of Luther, that although the hour was full of danger, he would make no compromise of his convictions for the sake of advantage. The words of Luther to Zwingle when the discussion was over, 'You have a different spirit than we,'—'Ihr habh einen andern geist denn wir,'—were true in a deeper sense than either of the antagonists were aware."

From what has been said it is above every thing else clear that there were two tendencies, the one purely Lutheran, and the other the Melancthonian-Calvinistic, in the doctrine of the Lord's Supper, and that the Reformation divided into these two streams, the Lutheran, the consubstantiation theory, "in, with and under," while the other the spiritual real presence, as afterwards developed by Calvin. These tendencies, as in the continuity of Christian thought and the course of history moved onward, the former conquering Scandinavia, while the latter, broader and wider, passed into Holland, France, England, Scotland and into this country, evidently, by far the widest stream. Recently a work issued from the press and coming from the pen of Prof. Jacobs of the Lutheran Seminary, Philadelphia, in which it is attempted to show the work and influence of Lutheran theologians in the English Reformation, who came over into England from the continent. It is no doubt true that theologians from the continent, came to England, by invitation, known as Lutheran theologians, so also were Reformed present who took part in that reformation, but when you take up the Book of Common Prayer, in which that great work culminated, and read over the XXXIX Articles you find not a trace of Luther's influence, nothing of consubstantiation, or the "in, with and under," but in the XXVIII Art. of the Lord's Supper, it is said, "The body of Christ is given, taken and eaten in the Supper, only after a heavenly and spiritual manner. And the mean whereby the Body of Christ is received and eaten in the Supper is by Faith." This clearly is not Luther's view as given "in Summa," but is emphatically Reformed. These theologians, doing this work for the English Church were, in principle Reformed, and not Lutheran, and it can be asserted truly that the Reformed tendency made its impress on the Anglican Church, as the above Article clearly shows, and that in spirit that Church is Reformed, barring its wretched, uncharitable spirit of exclusiveness, which was developed afterwards through Archbishop Laud and others. This Reformed tendency made its way onward and at this day, the vast body of the Protestant Church is in principle Reformed, and in this country, in the Lutheran branch, the larger portion is in principle Reformed, while the other remained true to the old Lutheran theory of consubstantiation, the "in, with and under." There can be scarcely a reason assigned why the Reformed and that portion of the Lutheran holding the Reformed tendency, should not unite and form one body, for really, there seems to be no reason to keep them apart, but the name, and the insignificant one, ludicrously mentioned, one saying "unser vater," the other "vater unser."

(To be Continued.)

For Reformed Church Messenger.

AGED MINISTERS AGAIN.

The question with reference to the retirement of aged ministers has again been brought to the front by "Wyoming," our regular and very interesting contributors to the MESSENGER. What he has said on this important, and somewhat vexed question, suggests some other things to the mind of the writer, and he, in this brief article, would humbly venture his opinion on this subject.

We do not believe, as a rule, that ministers are retired by reason of their age, or gray hairs.

For there are a number of young and middle-aged men in the Church who are not employed, and for some reason or other do not seem to be in demand. It strikes the writer that Wyoming does not look in the right direction for the cause of the difficulty. The same conditions existing in the case of the young man will just make him as unpopular (in the good sense) as if they existed in the case of the old man. We suppose that in proportion to their number there are just as many aged ministers in the Church who are doing effective work, and whose services are in demand as there are young ones. That which will cause the one to be retired will also cause the other, without taking the gray hairs into consideration. There are certain things, which if they are found present with either class of men, will produce the same results, and eventually lead to the same end,—retirement. And so far as these things go, age has nothing at all to do with it.

This is an age in which there must be advance made all along the line, and in which men in all the callings of life must keep up with the times. If the merchant, or the physician, or the attorney fail in this direction, and keeps no account of that principle of progress, the chances are that he will be retired very soon. And, indeed, he ought to be.

And so it is precisely with the minister, whether he be young or old. If he do not, in season and out of season, make an earnest effort to give the people committed to his care the very best his ability is able to produce, and to bring out of the Scriptures things new and old; if he go into the pulpit Lord's day with scarcely any, or at least only superficial, or Saturday afternoon preparation, we are not to wonder if the people show a disposition to have such a minister retired, irrespective of his age. We are obliged to confess that many of our good people show a great deal of patience and long-suffering in this regard, and so it is likewise in the duties of the pastoral office. If the wants and the needs of the people are not regularly and systematically met in this direction, if the pastor do not show a special interest in his parishioners in their homes where he can secure their confidence, as perhaps he can do nowhere else, if he only visits them once in a decade of years, as is sometimes really the state of the case, the logical inference is that his usefulness will by-and-by come to an end, and a change will naturally be desired. And it is not otherwise in all the work connected with the ministerial office. The time has come, if it did not always exist, in which every interest of the pastoral charge needs the immediate and direct attention of the minister, and in which every energy of his being is called into exercise.

The demands of the age are of such a character, that the man of God must rise in his might and meet these demands. And to the extent in which he fails to keep abreast with the progress of things, and to allow his activities to go out in all these varied directions where work is to be done, and can be done for the Master, he falls short in the great race set before him, and he is making himself a candidate for retirement, and this is true whether he be young or old. And this is just one of the primary reasons why "able and efficient pastors," so called, are sometimes put upon the shelf. Not unfrequently age is made a scapegoat upon which these other things are saddled, and those who find fault with the Church in this particular do not look at the right place for the real cause of the trouble.

Other things being equal there should not be, and there is not, any more of a demand for the young minister than for the old, or any disposition to push the old one out. Because a man's hair is getting gray, or because he is past the meridian of life, is no reason why he should become old in his feelings or notions, or it is no reason why he should refuse to fall in with the spirit of the times, and earnestly try to meet the demands made upon him in the age in which he lives. Some of the youngest men in our day are really the oldest, young in ideas and feelings, and yet aged in years. And in our humble judgment this is just one of the causes of the trouble spoken of by Wyoming in his paper,—not "advancing years," but these other things that had been hinted at in this article. And in the discussion of this question, let us not overlook these things. * *

For Reformed Church Messenger

A REPLY TO H. M. K.'s LAST FEW WORDS.

We are bound in candor to say that our expectation has not been fulfilled by these last few words. The light which H. M. K. intimated that he possessed on the subject of St. Paul's directions in regard to the conduct of women in the Church, turns out to be no new light, after all, and to our mind at least does not satisfactorily illuminate the subject in hand. The theory which he advances is one that we knew before, but which we do not believe to be at all adequate to the circumstances of the case.

Before we go on to consider this theory, however, we are bound to correct, at least, one misrepresentation of our position; which, though very material, is, of course, not material on the part of our critic, but simply illustrates a critic's difficulty of correctly apprehending and reporting the thoughts of another. H. M. K. quotes us as saying that St. Paul's directions, in 1 Cor. 14: 34, were, "intended to apply only to the simple Corinthian congregation," and then labors through more than a column of his article to show up the absurdity of this position. Now, we have said no such thing, neither in our sermon, nor in our previous articles on the subject. What we did say in our first article, was, that St. Paul, when writing those directions, was not thinking of the modern distinction between Sunday-school teaching or reading essays at missionary meeting, and public praying or preaching; but that he had in his mind only the simple (not single) Corinthian congregation, in which the functions of the ministry were not yet distinguished. This is an essentially different thought from that which H. M. K. attributes to us. It never occurred to us that it was necessary to say anything as to the extent of the intended application of those directions. We would now, however, distinctly say, what we believe every careful and candid reader of our articles has understood us to mean, that we hold St. Paul's directions to be applicable wherever there prevail circumstances similar to those existing in the Christian community of Corinth in the time of Paul. They were intended to apply to all churches of Grecian or rather oriental habits of thought and life. And we are willing to go even so far as to say that, if in any modern congregation there should be a considerable number of brethren of weak minds and tender consciences, there the sisters had better stand back, and so avoid giving offence.

But now for H. M. K.'s own theory. He does not say, indeed, that he regards the directions of St. Paul now under consideration, as the expression of an essential moral principle. But he does say, what to our mind implies this, namely, that he holds them to be of binding authority for all ages and times, and, as we infer, for all circumstances. They are not temporary rules based upon local and temporary circumstances; but they are universal in their extent and application. They are believed to be based upon the permanent constitutional differences between man and woman, which the Creator Himself has instituted. They are, accordingly, principles involved in the nature of thing, like the commandments of the decalogue. But, then, they are not meant to prohibit all speaking in the Church on the part of women, nor even all teaching, but only "public instruction"—"public exposition and exhortation as a leader and guide" or in short, what we call preaching. This we believe to be a fair statement of our opponent's theory.

Let us examine first what is here assumed to be the ground of St. Paul's prohibition, namely, the divinely-ordained constitutional differences between man and woman. Our critic tells us that there is very decided evidence in favor of this assumption, and then quotes as such evidence the passage in 1 Tim. 2 : 13; which, however, was written many years after that contained in 1 Cor. 14 : 34, 35, and is therefore not decisive as to the meaning of that. But waiving this point, we maintain that the passage in the Epistle to Timothy does not prove at all what it is here supposed to prove. The Apostle here gives two reasons for his command that women should learn in quietness and not be permitted to teach. The first is that Adam was created before Eve; the second, that Eve was first in the transgression. The first reason asserts mere temporal priority of existence; but this proves nothing as to the supposed notion of a constitutional difference between the respective beings. Indeed, according to the general laws governing the development of the universe, a being of later creation is more completely organized and more perfect than one of earlier creation, and, therefore, would seem to be more fit to exercise dominion than the latter. And the fact that Paul here speaks of Eve as having been first in the transgression, could hardly be accepted as proof that he was thinking of the constitutional differences between man and woman, unless we suppose Paul to have believed that the sex was originally and by nature more inclined to sin than the male.

It is not our busines here to explain St. Paul's particular method of reasoning in this case. It is sufficient to have shown that the bare notion of a natural difference between man and woman was not what influenced his judgment. For if it had been, then—to adopt our critic's way of arguing—it would have been easy for him to say so. The conception of nature as an order of fixed laws and tendencies was quite familiar to his mind. If in this conception he had found the reason for his injunctions, then what a strange way he had of expressing his meaning!

In the passage in 1 Cor. 14 : 34, 35, which was written many years before the Epistle to Timothy, and which was all that the Corinthian Christians had to determine the Apostle's meaning, he gives another reason for his prohibition, namely, that it is shameful for a woman to speak in the church. "The original word here is aischron, the same that is used in the same Epistle (chap. 11 : 6) in reference to a woman's cutting off her hair. He is arguing there for the propriety of women being veiled in public assemblies. For not to be veiled is the same as being shorn or shaven. But by common consent, it is shameful (aischron) for a woman to be shorn. Therefore, let her be veiled. So in the other case: it is shameful for a woman to be veiled in the church. Therefore, let the women keep silence in the churches. But now, what makes it shameful for a woman to be shorn? It cannot be a fundamental fact in human nature; for there are whole races of mankind in which this sentiment can never prevail. It must, therefore, be a matter of education and custom. And with the same word the Apostle characterizes the speaking of women in the church: it is shameful, nothing more. It it be asked what makes it shameful, we believe that the same answer must be given: education and custom.

Let it be borne in mind that the conception expressed by the word shameful is not a moral but an æsthetic conception. The Apostle does not say that it is something morally bad or wicked (kakon) either for a woman to cut off her hair or to speak in a church, but simply that it is something shameful. It is, then, not a violation of an essential moral principle or law, involved in the nature of things, and therefore forever unchangeable. With this view agrees our universal human feeling and judgment, and especially the Christian consciousness. Suppose we were to see a woman in a pulpit preaching a sermon, and suppose that our judgment of her were one of disapprobation. Then suppose we were to see another woman stealing a piece of goods from a store. In this case also our judgment would be one of disapprobation. But the two judgments would be totally dissimilar. They would differ not merely in degree, but in kind. The latter would be a moral judgment, and would be the same among all men of cultivated moral feeling, time and circumstances making no difference. The former would be what we may call an æsthetic judgment. But such æsthetic judgments, though they have their formal laws, too, yet as to their contents depend largely upon custom and taste, concerning which there is proverbially no disputing. In the ancient oriental world, both Jewish and Greek, it was shameful for a woman's face to be seen and voice heard in any public assembly; and this is a sufficient answer to the remark on which H. M. K. lays so much stress, that in the Acts of the Apostles, no woman occupies a prominent position as a public teacher, and this notwithstanding the fact that some were probably well-qualified to act in such capacity. But what was regarded shameful in ancient oriental society, was regarded as less shameful in Roman society, in which woman enjoyed more privileges, and lived a less secluded life; and may not be regarded as shameful at all in a totally different order of civilization, such as the Anglo-Germanic in modern Europe and America.

In the Greek communities of his own day the Apostle felt justified, in spite of his teaching elsewhere, that in Christ there is neither male nor female, to interdict women's speaking in public Christian assemblies altogether. Though it is a common exegetical device, yet we believe that it is altogether a vain device to distinguish here between preaching in the modern sense, and other subordinate exercises, such as teaching classes in a Sunday-school or delivering addresses at missionary meetings, and to say that the Apostle meant to condemn the former but to allow the latter. H. M. K. agrees with us that St. Paul never thought of these modern exercises in which woman are so largely engaged; but he holds that the Apostle could not have forbidden what he never heard of. And yet he holds that the prohibition is a universal principle of binding authority always and everywhere! Does the eighth commandment only forbid the crimes against property that were known in the days of Moses? Moses had probably never heard of the forging of a bank check? That way of reasoning will not do. If St. Paul's rule were an essential moral principle, and therefore in its own nature universally applicable, then it would involve all female speaking in the church in equal condemnation.

But let us see what St. Paul himself says. To Timothy he writes: "Let a woman learn in quietness with all subjection. But I permit not a woman to teach, nor to have dominion over a man, but to be in quietness." Our excellent critic noticed the emphasis on teaching in this verse, but he overlooked the emphasis on the twice repeated quietness, which certainly seems to imply more than a prohibition of "public instruction," or "preaching." In the earlier Epistle to the Corinthians the Apostle says: "Let the women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but let them be in subjection as also says the law. And if they would learn anything, let them ask their own husbands at home" This last sentence seems to have escaped the notice of our critic altogether. Does it look as if the Apostle here meant merely to prohibit public instruction or preaching, when he forbids even the asking of questions? Looking at the sentences of St. Paul as they stand, no one would have thought of this theory, had it not been for the necessity of meeting a "condition."

By the way, what is preaching, for which women are said to be constitutionally unfitted, and how does it differ from such other forms of teaching as they are supposed to be fitted for? We read in the Acts of the Apostles that Philip preached Jesus to the eunuch. Now if a woman in the Sunday-school teaches a class of twenty young men about Christ, how does that act differ from preaching? Is there any essential difference in the nature of the two acts? Is not this whole distinction an arbitrary imposition of modern thought upon the Apostle's language, in order to support a theory of church-order of which the Apostle knows nothing? To our mind it is clearly evident that what St. Paul meant to forbid was all public speaking on the part of women in any Christian assembly. But it is equally evident to us that this prohibition, like his prohibition to eat meat and drink wine in certain circumstances, was simply an accommodation to the manners of his time. and has no application, except in the circumstances already referred to in the second paragraph of this article, to the Church of our day.

On the question of women's preaching we have declared our position with sufficient explicitness in our former articles. H. M. K. says correctly, that if a woman should undertake to preach, we would not be able, from our standpoint, to find anything in God's word to condemn her. We have plainly said that before. We would not be able to do that tor this reason, among others, that the Bible, in spite of all the prejudice against public female teaching in Bible-lands, tells us of prophetesses as well as of prophets. But if the question should come up on the expediency of ordaining women to the pulpit and making them pastors, we should vote in the negative every time. There are many good reasons why that should be done. The question, however, like the much larger question of Church polity and government in general, is one that cannot be settled by an appeal to the Bible, as though that was a fixed code of laws, in which everything is laid down from the beginning that is necessary for the right organization and government of the Church in all times, providing only men are sharp enough to discover it. We would, then, not undertake to settle the question of woman's right to preach by the authority of St. Paul. But that is a question that will never arise on any large scale. As we said before, nature has sufficiently provided against that.

With these few words in reply to the few words of our friend H. M. K., in the MESSENGER, of January 29th, we finally dismiss this interesting subject. W. R.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

ORPHANS' HOME COLUMN.

BY REV. T. M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

The Superintendent spent Sunday February 1st, with Rev. J. G. Dengler and his people of Sellersville charge. Although the roads were in a very bad condition and consequently some of the congregations small, yet the interest which these people take in the care of the orphans was again shown by the liberal offerings which they gave for the support of this work.

One by one the workers fall in the ranks and others are called upon to take their places. At the January meeting of the Board of Managers, Mr. P. C. Wiest, of York, Pa., was elected to take the place in the Board made vacant by the death of Elder Henry Wirt, of Hanover. It gives us pleasure now to announce that Mr. Wiest has consented to accept the election and aid in the management of the Home.

In this connection it may be a matter of interest to the friends of the Home to know who are the members of the Board and of the Ladies' Committee and where they live. According to our charter the Board consists of thirteen men. There is now no vacancy. Following is the list: Rev. B. Bausman, D.D., President, Reading; Jas. T. Reber, Reading; Louis Kraemer, Reading; C. G. Gross, Treasurer, Philadelphia; N. Wetzel, Philadelphia; Jacob Rader, Easton; W. R. Lawfer, Allentown; W. H. Levan, Schuylkill Haven; J. W. B. Bausman, Esq., Lancaster; Geo. Z. Kunkle, Harrisburg; Dr. J. Z. Gerhard, Harrisburg; P. C. Wiest, York; and Thomas M. Yundt, Secretary, Womelsdorf.

The Ladies' Committee consists of sixteen members besides the secretary. Mrs. Matilda Chidsey and Mrs. Chas. Hemingway, Easton; Mrs. Thos. Steckle and Mrs. S. A. Butz, Allentown; Mrs. B. Bausman (President), Mrs. H. Mosser, Mrs. A. S. Leinbach (Treasurer), Mrs. Isaac McHose and Mrs. Jas. T. Reber, Reading; Mrs. Wm. D. Rauch and Mrs. T. S. Walmer, Lebanon; Mrs. Geo. Z. Kunkle and Mrs. J. Z. Gerhard, Harrisburg; Mrs. Henry Shirk, Miss Anna Dorwart and Mrs. C. K. Small, Lancaster; and Mrs. Thos. M. Yundt (Secretary) Womelsdorf.

On Friday, February 13th, these two bodies will hold a special meeting at the Home to finally decide upon location and plans for the new building which is to be erected next summer and to attend to such other business as may come before them.

Missions.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

WHAT IS TO BE DONE?

If any one will carefully study the present condition, and the outlook for the near future, of the cause of Foreign Missions, he cannot avoid the conviction, that a crisis is imminent. Hitherto the work has been largely of a preparatory character. Pioneers had to be sent into the field; the attention of the people had to be challenged; interest awakened, and institutions established. Before large results could be looked for, Christianity must needs be presented to the heathen world in a concrete form, and its power and truth illustrated by its fruits in the individual, social, domestic and political life of the people.

Years of self-denial and labor have been expended in this service, and as was certainly to be expected, the blessed results are largely appearing. Enough souls have, by the grace of the Holy Spirit, been converted, in the several heathen nations, to exhibit to the people, the transforming power and spirit of our holy religion. They have become as a candle in a dark place, whose light cannot be hidden. Thought has been awakened, inquiry stimulated and many are providing themselves with the Bible and Christian books, and are earnestly studying the principles of the religion of Christ. These enquirers, in their ordinary intercourse with their neighbors, acquaintances and kindred, at home and in their travels, are spreading this spirit of enquiry. The missionaries in their evangelistic tours, find in towns and villages, nuclei of enquiring souls, formed around, perhaps one or two persons who have been impressed by the truth, and they gladly hear the word of truth and ask that teachers be sent them. This state of things exists to a wide extent, and is rapidly increasing in the heathen world. And it would really seem that the Lord had opened the way for a grand advance along the whole line.

But is the home Church ready for the advance? Noble souls have responded to the call to go forth, and the Church has contributed the means to accomplish the preparatory work, but now that the door is thrown more widely open, for some sad reason, the Church is failing in an adequate response. Some of the Boards, in adventurous faith have moved forward, only to find themselves involved in embarrassing debt. Others are distressed by the necessity of refusing the importunate calls for enlarged operations, to meet the growing opportunities. While others have been compelled to reduce by a heavy percentage, the most economical estimates, thus abandoning for a time at least work already commenced. What does all this mean? Is the Church growing weary in well-doing? Having laid its hand to the plow, is it about to turn back? May a gracious God avert such a calamity.

Now how is it with our own work in Japan? Unhappily it is no exception to the general experience just indicated. In some respects our embarrassments are more intense. Our preparatory work is not yet completed. It will require some $5000 to finish our Seminary building at Sendai. The Board took the ventures to borrow $5000 already, and now finds itself indebted to that amount. So that it will require $10,000, beside current expenses, before our preparation will be fully completed. And now in the face of all this, we find the funds coming in so slowly that there is a necessary delay in remitting the quarterly payment of salaries, etc., to the great embarrassment and hardship of our Missionaries.

Now what is to be done? One of two things is inevitable. Either the Church must furnish the Board with the necessary means, or it will be compelled to cut down the estimates. This means to curtail our work, and still further to refuse to send out reinforcements, now seemingly so imperatively necessary. How is the deficency to be raised? The responsibility of the answer to this question, in the sight of God, rests upon our pastors. No plea of exorbitant demands will avail, so long as the contributions to Foreign Missions are the pitiable figure of from six to eight cents per capita. Scores, and perhaps hundreds, of our congregations, have not in years contributed one cent to this holy cause. Brethren, whose fault is this?

Let immediate action be taken. Let every congregation be asked and urged to lay an offering upon the altar of the Lord, and let the collection, be it large or small, be sent promptly to the Treasurer, that the Missionaries may no longer suffer, and the work no longer be stayed in its soul-saving progress.

S. N. CALLENDER, Secretary.

To repress a harsh answer, to confess a fault, to stop, right or wrong, in the midst of self-defence, in general submission, sometimes requires a struggle for life and death; but those three efforts are the golden threads with which domestic happiness is woven.—Mrs. Caroline Gilman.

The Family.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE YOUNG PROPHETESS:

A TALE OF THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE.

BY REV. R. LEIGHTON GERHART.

CHAPTER VII.

MADELEINE.

Left to himself, Otho was not long in opening the hamper. The first object he grasped was a large loaf, brown and fragrant, of fine, wheat bread. Placing it beside him, he thrust his hand again into the hamper and brought out a roasted fowl. Pursuing his investigations, he was rewarded by finding a great venison pasty; then several rich tarts; then a flagon of Rhenish wine; a cheese of about five pounds weight followed; then a jar of honey, and then three smoked beef's tongues, already cooked. These delicacies he spread out around him without thought of order, and, overlooking the fact that he already had enough to furnish a feast for a dozen hungry men, instead of but two, he again plunged into the hamper, and after wrestling a moment or two with a large, unwieldy object, folded in a linen cloth, drew out a boiled ham of fully twenty pounds weight. He was about to continue his labors, when a low but eager "O—h!" caused him to look up. To his surprise, he found himself surrounded by at least a score of little Crusaders, all facing him, with red crosses on their bosoms, and all staring hungrily at the good things, so temptingly set before them.

"Ho!" cried Otho, his cheeks flushing with embarrassment. Recovering himself quickly, with a half humorous twinkle in his eye, he gravely said: "If it pleases your worships to be seated, I will count it an honor to have you as my guests." To his surprise not one moved. They looked at him dubiously, as if wondering whether he were in jest or in earnest. Nearly all were the sons of peasants, who never in their lives had partaken of such princely fare; that they were now really invited to such a feast by a youth of rank, they were slow to realize. Seeing them hesitate, and partly divining the cause, Otho repeated his invitation in more simple language, and presently had the satisfaction of seeing them seat themselves one by one on the ground around him. The carving, helping and eating had scarcely begun, however, before others, attracted by the unusual sight, came hurrrying to the spot. The venison pasty vanished in a twinkling, the great ham was picked to the bone, while cheese, tongue, tarts and honey disappeared with equal rapidity; yet still the throng increased. Seeing this, and unwilling to keep what others were in need of, Otho, in a spirit of prodigal hospitality, set out all that remained in the great hamper, and thus provisions intended by his friends to last him a fortnight, were exhausted at a single meal.

The turmoil of the feast was at its height, and frequently the turmoil was increased by rude and greedy scrambles for the rapidly-disappearing luxuries, when Martin, almost buried beneath a heap of hay, returned. Throwing his burden to the ground, he stood staring, dumb with amazement, at the unexpected sight. Realizing, at length, that the food for many a day was gone, devoured, as he thought, by a crowd who had no right to it, his anger increased by the reflection that his own share of the good things towards which his thoughts had gone in many a wistful anticipation during the day, was lost forever—stung by these thoughts, and imagining that Otho was being robbed, he rushed in among the happy children, waving his arms and crying:

"Varlets, thieves, beggars! Out upon you! out upon you! Away! away, every vagabond! or I'll shake you till your bones rattle like peas in a dry peas cod! What! rob a gentleman of the bread and meat on his own table! Away! away! Out upon you! out upon you!"

Confounded by this sudden and warlike demonstration, some sprang to their feet and fled in dismay, while others, huddled together in confusion, stood their ground in a state of puzzled trepidation, not knowing what to do. All doubtless would have taken to their heels, if Otho had not sprung forward, and, grasping the man by the arm, commanded him to cease his interference. He was calmed with difficulty. Even after learning that the children were not robbers but guests, he was slow to become quiet. Turning on Otho, he began to upbraid him for his improvidence and folly, mingling censure and advice with pathetic lamentations over the loss of the good things he had thought to share.

"What folly, my master! when thou hast so many weary leagues to travel! Waste not, want not; waste not, want not, hath not my lady, thy mother, often said? It was a thoughtless thing—good wheat bread and ham—tarts and honey—tarts and honey—for peasants who may well thank the Virgin for a bowl of oatmeal porridge and milk! Oh! oh! and the venison pasty! the toothsome pasty which I packed with so much care, lest it be injured by the jolting of the beast, not a fragment of it left!—and the meat in it was covered with eggs, boiled hard and sliced!—and think of the pepper-corns in it! To give a dish like that to peasants, who have ground their teeth to the gum a-munching black bread!" and pausing to take breath, he ruefully surveyed the ground strewn with fragments of meat and bread.

"Prudence is good, Martin," replied Otho, with intent to soothe the man, and at the same time show that he had not acted altogether without thought, "but what would you have a soldier do? Keep a store on hand for himself while his comrades go hungry? No, no, Martin, such prudence I like not."

"Ay, ay," rejoined Martin, wagging his head impressively, "wisdom is wisdom! With all thy getting, get understanding, the good priest hath said; and a wiser word I never listened to: with all thy getting, get understanding. Now, hearken to me, my master: couldst thou not have divided a part with thy comrades today, and a part to-morrow, and a part the next day, and so, as thou journeyest on? And thus have kept for thy friends and thyself somewhat for the future, instead of emptying basket and store in one riotous, riotous feast? My master, my young master, there's not a drop of the Rhenish left, not a drop! The flagon is dry! alack-a-day! it is dry, my master. I am much disappointed in thee. Oh! there is no longer conscience in man or beast!"

"Out upon thee, my man!" replied Otho somewhat nettled at his servant's rebuke. "Hunger and disappointment have turned thee topsy-turvy. Thou art forgetting thy manners. Not so freely with thy tongue. I am not so lacking as you suppose. Have I not money for the future? There is still enough for thee," referring io the fragments left, of which there was still enough to satisfy any one's need. "Eat thy supper, and then lie down and sleep off thine ill-humor."

"Ay, ay, money, money, money enough for the future! Can you eat money? Bread is money, meat is money, cheese is money. Money is bread, is cheese, is meat. Ay, money is Rhenish. Alack! alack! and the flagon as dry as an empty pipkin that hath hung by the fire unused since Candlemas! Why not give thy money, too? I like not thy logic, my master; it is far from good logic. Hearken, my most kind, young master, this is wisdom:—dole out thy money, as thy shouldst have done thy food, a little to-day, a little to-morrow, a little the next day. Hearken, my young master, this is wisdom:—dole it out, dole it out, dole it out carefully."

---

Copyrighted by Chas. G. Fisher, 1890.

Convinced that it was useless to continue the conversation longer, and feeling, too, that however harsh the advice sounded, it was worth heeding, Otho spread his robe on the ground, and wrapping himself in his blankets, lay down to sleep. The stars were already beginning to shine in the darkened heaven, while through the wood the deepening shadows rendered every outline dim. He felt depressed. The enthusiasm of the past few days had largely departed, and in spite of his efforts to buoy up his heart by repeating to himself the assurances he had received of the certainty of divine guidance and support, the Crusade began to take to itself the vague and unsubstantial appearance of a dream. At length he slept. Several hours passed and then he awoke. He found himself so wide awake that he threw off his robe and rose to his feet. A wonderful change had taken place. The many camp-fires that blazed so brightly in the evening were smoldering heaps of coals. The night was still and cold, but the darkness was almost wholly dispelled by the flood of ivory light descending upon the world from the full moon, which in an unclouded sky floated steadily upward toward the zenith. Won by the enchantment of the hour, Otho stole lightly from his place and strolled onward through the wood. Around their smoldering fires, in groups, or solitary and alone, beneath the trees, with no covering but the garments they had worn during the day, the children slept. It was a pitiful sight, and a sad foreboding of impending sorrow and calamity deepened upon the boy's heart as he surveyed the scene. Coming out at length from behind a great fir whose low branches quite concealed the view in front, he was startled to find himself within a few paces of a young girl. She was standing in an open glade, in the full splendor of the moon; the very atmosphere enveloping her was filled with the glory of that marvellous light. Countless drops of dew, scintillating like diamonds, clung to every blade of the soft forest-grass at her feet. Her face, wondrously fair and spiritual, was turned upward, her hands were folded over the red cross on her bosom, and her whole attitude betokened one engrossed in worship. At the sound of Otho's feet, she turned.

"I crave your pardon," murmured the boy, modestly retreating.

"Do not go, I pray you." The voice was sweet, and clear as a bell.

"The night is one to charm the heart," he replied, facing her again; "but I fear, after the fatigue of the day, it were better if both of us were resting, like our comrades."

The sensitive mouth quivered, and then she spoke, though reluctantly, as though shrinking from assuming the attitude of a teacher:

"Is there not a higher rest that we need?"

Otho made no reply, and after a brief pause, she continued:

"I find here,—with our Heavenly Father,—in prayer to Him,—a rest, a strength,—oh! a joy that takes away hunger and thirst, and pain and ache. He hath spoken to me."

The last words, uttered with intense feeling, made Otho fairly quiver.

"Who?" he asked, in a startled whisper, making a quick step forward.

"God," was the calm, assured answer.

"God!" he reiterated, a superstitious dread mantling his cheeks with pallor. "How did He speak? Where?"

"I was praying," replied the girl, "for I knew not whether to follow the Crusade. It was night, and I was alone in my father's garden. I was praying there, when in the sky,"—and lifting her hand heavenward, she stood gazing upward as if the vision were again before her,—"when suddenly, in the sky, I beheld a flaming cross, and one all glorious in shining apparel,—an angel, with broad, white wings, uplifted stood by it. He spoke!—"

"He spoke!" exclaimed Otho, in his eagerness and excitement, interrupting her.

"Ay! he said, 'Fear not to follow.'"

A deep sigh of relief escaped the boy.

"And hast thou no fear?" he asked.

A smile of calm assurance, even of joy illumined the girl's face as she answered simply:

"None."

"But the way is long. What dangers there are, I know not, but they must be great. Food, clothing, all we need that an army needs," demurred Otho.

"Hath God not made all things? And will He not sustain us whom He hath called to this Crusade?" And following this, the girl told Otho the wondrous story of the journey of the Children of Israel from Egypt to Canaan, of which he knew but little: of the path opened through the sea; of the rock that poured forth water; of the manna; of the quails; and of the miraculous overthrow of Jericho. All this she told, and much more, applying it to their own case so forcibly that, ignorant as he was, his doubts and fears vanished.

"Will you not tell me your name?" he inquired reverently, as he at length turned to depart.

"Madeleine von Koch; and thine?"

"Otho von Hieldrich."

When the boy again reached his resting-place, he once more folded his robe about him and lay down to sleep; but the gray light of day found him still awake.

(To be Continued.)

Youth's Department.

IN THE DARK.

I know it is dark, my darling,
  And fearful the darkness seems;
But shut your eyes! in a moment,
  The night will be bright with dreams;
Or better, you'll sleep so sound at night
It will seem but a moment till morning light.

There is only one kind of darkness
  That need to trouble us, dear,
Only the night of temptation,
  And then we must all of us fear;
But even then, if we be but brave,
There is One who is ever at hand to save.

We have only to ask Him to help us,
  And He will shield us from harm.
Only to whisper "Jesus,"
  His name is a holy charm;
"Jesus, save me," we need but say,
And the night of temptation will flee away.

"How can He be always near us,
  Near all of us, everywhere!"
Ah, that is beyond our knowing!
  But there is no bouud to His care;
And dear as the whole big world in His sight
Is the little child He bids good-night.

—Harriet McEwen Kimball.

HOW SHE ATTRACTED NOTICE.

This little incident—is a true story—occurred a few years ago in Philadelphia. The owner of a large store gave a holiday to all his employees in the middle of June. Cashiers, foremen, salesmen and women, cash-boys and porters, all were invited to spend the day on the grounds of the country-seat owned by the employer. Tents were erected, a beautiful dinner and supper were provided, a band of music was stationed in the grove, and special trains were chartered to carry the guests to the country and home again. Nothing else was talked of for weeks before the happy day. The saleswomen, most of whom were young, anxiously planned their dresses, and bought cheap and pretty muslins, which they made up in the evenings, that they might look fresh and gay. Even the cash-boys bought new cravats and hats for the great occasion.

There was one girl, whom we shall call Jane, who could not indulge herself in any pretty bit of finery. She was the only child of a widowed mother who was paralyzed, Jane was quick and industrious, but she had been but a few months in the store, and her wages barely kept her and her mother from want.

"What shall you wear?" said the girl who stood next her behind the counter. "I bought such a lovely blue lawn."

"I have nothing but this," said Jane, looking down at her rusty black merino

"But that is a winter dress! You'll melt, child. There'll be boating and croquet. You must have a summer gown, or else don't go."

Girls of fifteen like pretty gowns. Jane said nothing for a few minutes.

"I shall wear this," she said firmly. "And I think I will go. Mother wished it."

"But you can't play croquet in that!"

"It is always fun to see other people have fun," said Jane, bravely

The day came bright and hot. and Jane went in her heavy, well-darned dress. She gave up all idea of "fun" for herself, and set to work to help others find it. On the cars she busied in finding seats for the little girls and helping the servants with the baskets of provisions. On the ground she started games for the children, ran to lay the table, brought water to the old ladies, was ready to pin up torn gowns, or applaud a "good ball." She laughed and was happy and friendly all the time. She did not play; but she was surrounded by a cheerful, merry group wherever she went. On the way home to town, the employer, who was a shrewd business man, beckoned to his superintendent.

"There is one girl here whose friendly, polite manner is very remarkable. She will be valuable to me as a saleswoman. Give her a good position. That young woman in black," and he pointed her out.

The next day Jane was promoted into one of the most important departments, and since that time her success has been steady. The good humor and kindness of heart which enabled her to "find fun in seeing others have fun" were the best capital for her in her business. She had the courage, too, to disregard poverty and to make the best of life,—a courage which rarely fails to meet its reward.—Selected.

Pleasantries.

On being asked what a nephew is, a little Boston school girl replied: "It is when your niece is a boy," a statement which would be hard to controvert.—New York Tribune.

The following is a literal transcript of a sign on a Pennsylvania village store: "Tea and Taters, Sugar and Shingles, Brickdust and Lasses, Whisky, Tar and other Drugs."

Here is a sentence of thirty-two words which an ingenious person has constructed of the six letters found in the word "maiden." Ida, a maiden, a mean man named Ned Dean and Media, a mad dame, made me mend a die and dime, and mind a mine in a dim den in Maine.—St. Louis Republic.

NOTICE.

☞ Editorial Correspondence address to The Reformed Church Messenger, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters pertaining to subscriptions and other business, address Reformed Church Publication House, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ No notice taken of anonymous communications.

For Terms, see page 11.

THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER,
907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1891.

The readers of the Reformed Review are much indebted to Dr. Reily for his able review of Dr. Kaftan and his "New Dogma," in the January number. It must have cost the writer a long and careful study. We read it with interest, because we were anxious to know exactly where and how the successor of Dr. Dorner stood on vital questions in theology. With much that he says we heartily concur, but with probably just as much, with Dr. Reily, we do not. It is the office of the Church, from time to time, in a certain sense, to formulate new doctrines, and at the present time we need a new and better statement of the doctrine concerning the person of Christ; that is, of what He really is. It cannot, however, be entirely new, as Kaftan seems to imply; it must be based on the old doctrine and growing out of it, new and yet old, at the same time. Every doctrine of Christ must embrace in it a doctrine of His Body, the Church, the continuation of His theanthropic life here on earth. The two are inseparable. Cut them apart, and both lose their vitality. That is too often done, here as well as elsewhere. It is a defect, as it seems to us, in German theology, pretty generally, that it does not make proper account of the historical Church as something generic, Catholic or Universal as an object of faith; it is perhaps because the Church in the fatherland is too much in subjection to the State. Having produced a Neander, the father of Church History, her theologians ought by this time to have given us a full delineation of her, having seen "her in her beauty." But perhaps Neander is forgotten and Ritschl has taken his place—at least among too many of her learned men. Does Kaftan believe that before Abraham was Christ was, or as He said, I am? We are not sure that he does. Does he believe in the Scriptural Trinity? We hope he does, but if he does not, then his "New Dogma" is nothing worth. Any proper conception of the Son includes in it that of the Father, and the Spirit that unites the two—as we are taught in the Apostolic Benediction.

THE LAST SIX MONTHS.

Towards the autumn of the year A. D. 29, Christ turned His face to go up to Jerusalem. He had spent about three years in His public ministry, during half of which He had performed by far the greater part of His active work in the towns, villages and cities of Galilee. As He came down from the Mount of Transfiguration, the period of His passion or suffering may be said to have begun. All along, from His conversation with the Jews about the destruction of the temple, He knew that the temple of His own body would be destroyed. In such a pleasant garden as Galilee was in His time, in His intensively active life, teaching, preaching, going about doing good to the souls and bodies of men, we may suppose that His death did not engage His attention to a large extent. It could not except in the midnight air. It was brought, however, the more vividly before His mind when Moses and Elias spoke to Him of His decease at Jerusalem. From that time onward it no doubt confronted Him more and more in its most awful reality. Voluntarily, and now with a full knowledge of what awaited Him, He went up to Jerusalem to the Feast of Tabernacles that He might offer Himself as a sacrifice for the sin of the world. Everything around Him in the spirit and conduct of the Jews betokened the storm of their coming wrath. During the six months that He spent in Judea or Perea beyond the Jordan, He was compelled in some degree to conceal Himself. He was an outcast and a premium had been set on His person or life. What then were His thoughts when He left Galilee until the time had come for Him to suffer at Jerusalem? To some extent we may imagine. The reverential study of this period of His life under any view must prove to be edifying; but it must have that effect still more so during the Passion Period—as a preparation for a profitable observance of Good Friday and Easter.

AN OLD TRUTH.

The old argument that there must be some authority in the Christian Church to decide upon questions of doctrine or morals, is still in vogue, and possesses, as it ought, no small degree of vitality. The Roman Catholics hold it up in our days with their wonted tenacity, and successfully too, with a certain class of very respectable people. It was a one-sided view of it that led Newman into the Church of Rome. For the most part it makes converts of such as flounder about in uncertainty, having no firm foundation upon which to rest their feet. At the same time it confirms vast multitudes on that side of Christendom in the belief that they are in the true ark of safety, whilst all other Christians are out upon the dark waves of uncertainty. Such an opinion may become a snare and a trap to such as trust in it. There is, doubtless, much truth in the proposition that there must be a compact authority in such a body as the Church, for unless there is, it could not exist, and must have gone back to its primitive atoms long ago. The Protestant Church has always exercised authority in one form or another, through its confessions of faith, its catechisms, its consistories, synods, or other judicatories. Even in Congregationalism, where general Church authority appears to be at its minimum, it is felt as an unseen power, else it never could have become such a respectable body of believers, as it is at present, and must have disintegrated long before this. It is all nonsense to affirm that private opinion is the rule or the law on the Protestant side of the house, for there it has always been kept at bay in one form or another; and the authority of the Church has found its way to the people in a more satisfactory way than it has among Roman Catholics, where Puritanism, or rather Calvinistic discipline, is very much needed still to keep the members in order, as it regards the moralities.

THE FORM OF CHURCH AUTHORITY.

The question of Church authority among the sensible Christians is not one of fact, but rather as it regards the form under which such authority is to be exercised, so that it may be brought to bear upon the minds of intelligent Christian people in the most wholesome and salutary way. In the Church of Rome, the theory of government is that of an absolute monarchy, with the Pope at its head; in the Anglican Church, it is more or less aristocratic in its character; and it must be conceded that Christianity as thus organized, has presented an imposing appearance, especially when assailed by barbarism on the one side, or philosophy on the other. Through turbulent ages these visible bodies served as bulwarks against the inroads of error and the insidious assault of the wicked one. But they were one-sided, and the theories underlying them must give way to something better or more comprehensive. Progress in that direction is quite manifest as it regards the old mechanical views of the State. The divine right of King is becoming more and more obsolete—exploded, as Carlyle says, at the battle of Bunker Hill—and political power is everywhere gradually descending from kings and potentates down to the people, the great body of society; but the idea of the State remains intact and is materializing itself in new and more beautiful forms—in free institutions—than those in which it was wont to dwell in former times. And such precisely must be the result in ecclesiastical affairs, of which we have already precursory symptoms and signs. The ministry in the Christian Church, whether including pastors, prophets, evangelists, bishops, canons, deans, cardinals or popes, has a threefold character, the prophetic, the priestly, the kingly—and in an emphatic sense also—but these attributes belong also to the Church as a whole and to its members individually. According to the Bible every follower of Christ is a prophet, priest and king, and the true form of the Church will never be realized until the rights and privileges, as well as the freedom of believers are freely conceded to them. Then every one, although apparently a mere atom, will be a burning and shining light and have something to do and something to say in Church matters, women as well as men. The fullness of time for this has not yet come, but it is coming, —in the way of progress, in the course of a normal historical growth. As power is descending from absolutists in the State to the body of the people, so in the Church it is already beginning to flow down from priestly reservoirs, where it had been jealously guarded and concentrated for ages, and the Gospel of the nineteenth century is becoming every day the plain truth that it is the duty of the body of the believers to rule and to obey in the Church, which is simply the high privilege of every follower of Christ. This, of course, does not imply disorder or confusion, because, where every member of Christ is in his place, discharging his appropriate functions, there is order, just as when the members of our bodies are in a healthy condition, each doing its duty. It will also exclude all false democracy, which is just as bad as the opposite, the absolutism already referred to. There is room for a Christian commonwealth, which is neither the one nor the other, in which freedom and authority, liberty and law shall dwell together in unity. In proportion as this idea is actualized, Mount Zion, in the city of our God, shall be beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth. But if the time for this has not yet come, every one should do what he can to bring it about as soon as possible.

ONE PROSELYTE.

There are many difficulties in the way of the proper unity of the Christian Church, among which the spirit of proselytism is considerable. In many places it alienates congregations and sows the seeds of unpleasant discord among the members, more, perhaps, than anything else. It exists to a greater or less extent among all denominations, from bishop and rectors, both Anglican and Roman, down to the smallest sects that prey upon old and venerable churches. If all reports are true, the Episcopalians, in this respect, are no better than the Methodists, the Lutherans, or even the Reformed. This un-Christian spirit grows out of our poor, prostrate human nature, and is encouraged by the divided state of the churches. There are doubtless instances in which it is right and proper for ministers or members to change their ecclesiastical relations. As we know from our own experience, one denomination may call gifted men from another, who, by their peculiar gifts, can do more good among strangers than at home. It is something providential, and all reasonable persons will approve of it. But proselyting is quite a different thing, and needs only to be looked at to be condemned. Imagine for a moment the case of a minister of the Gospel encouraging another, most probably weak-minded —to forsake his own fold, where he is needed, and go to another, where there are already a surplus of shepherds. The case is practically the same where a member of a weaker congregation is cajoled into another that is stronger, where he will have nothing to do, or probably be little more than a nobody. These are by no means extreme cases. They are so numerous that they scarcely provoke a protest. That however, does not change their character as a survival of the spirit of the old Scribes and Pharisees, who compassed land sea to make on proselyte. It is a bad business, and must be put out of the way, if as Christians we are ever to come together in the bonds of unity and peace. There is a better way of which our memory here supplies us with an iliustration.

A good while ago the young men of a certain Reformed congregation were wide awake, active in the prayer meeting, in the Sunday-school and not afraid to urge other young men to flee from the wrath to come. They were the means of bringing a number of them into the Church. Several from the Lutherans joined them, and attended their meetings. Much interested and edified by their society and conversation, as they said, they proposed to pass over into their Church. The pastor, however, told them to remain where they were, do all the good they could and consider themselves as always welcome to join with his own members for prayer and praise. They did as they were advised, and became fruitful in good works in their own congregations, like trees planted by the rivers of water. If such wisdom could come to prevail, one stumbling would be taken out of the way and Christsans now of different names would come to understand and love each other much better.

TO THE ALUMNI OF FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL COLLEGE.

Dear Sirs :—During the spiritual conference of ministers of the Reformed Church, held in the buildings of Franklin and Marshall College last August, several of your number, in view of the changes made in the college library, suggested the propriety of establishing an Alumni Library Association whose object it should be to secure ampler funds for the increase of the library from year to year. In the nature of the case, however, it was impossible for the librarian to take steps looking to the institution of such a subsidiary organization before the alumni had discussed the proposition, and had come to some definite conclusion as to its feasibility. But the deplorable destitution of the library, especially in certain well defined departments, has been a constant challenge to the librarian to make some effort to put it at once in a condition of greater practical utility for the young men who are now here, and who are in almost daily need of such a collection of books of reference as the college library should contain. And no department is in this respect so completely destitute, and has been so signally neglected, as that of ENGLISH LITERATURE.

In view of this fact, and because the department of English Literature and Belles Lettres is, by special adoption, under their care and charge, the librarian deems it every way right and proper to appeal to the Alumni of the college for contributions of money to be used in remedying this deficiency. There is also a peculiar fitness in making such an effort at this particular juncture. The scholar who has presided over the department with such marked ability, and to whom every alumnus of the institution owes so much, undoubtedly would look upon the effort as a tribute of respect to him in his old age, and as a pledge that the department he has loved and served so well at last is to receive, in the matter of material equipment, the attention it of right demands.

Can we not raise at least five hundred dollars for this worthy object? The sum should be many times as much, but this certainly is within our means and can be secured. The librarian invites your contributions, large or small, and will be glad to acknowledge their receipt by letter, and, if desired, in the REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER. Address all communications and enclosures to JOHN B. KIEFFER,

Librarian F. and M. College.

Lancaster, Pa., Nov. 18th, 1890.

As Horace, when he has completed the first three books of his Odes, exclaims, "Exegi monumentum aere perennius," so Prof. Kieffer, now having so fully succeeded in having the room in the college designed for its library, so thoroughly renewed, remodelled, and repaired, as it has been under his direction, might justly express himself, were he so minded, in the same exultant words of Horace as above quoted; for though this work of his, now accomplished, may not perhaps be so long enduring in time, yet it will, at any rate, ever prove more serviceable in the promotion and forwarding of education, as we may well surmise, than ever has been, or ever can be, any monument of whatever kind, made or fashioned out of brass.

But as the soul of a library consists in the volumes which it contains, and not in the tenement or tabernacle which contains these, however valuable and appropriate that tenement or tabernacle may be, and although through his persevering efforts and through the liberality of many of the Alumni and of the Board of Trustees and others benevolently disposed, considerable sums of money have already been given for the purchasing of books for some particular departments of learning designated, yet as many of the shelves, and especially those designed for the reception of books on English Literature, are still remaining incomplete, gaping, as it were, with open spaces—hiatus valde deflendi—anxious to be filled; and as a library abhors a vacuum as utterly as ever Nature did, as believed of her by the schoolmen of old, we would earnestly conjoin with Prof. Kieffer in soliciting the Alumni and others so disposed, as far as their means will allow them and their benevolent feelings prompt them, to be completing the soul of this library by their generous donations of money for the purchase of suitable books, thus making it a complete corporeity—sana mens in corpore sano.

And as the proud prophecy of Horace, concerning the durability of his books has been amply fulfilled, by their having afforded to the youths of all academies and colleges from his own time down to the present, including a period of some two thousand years, one of the indispensable means for acquiring the fullest knowledge of the language and literature to which they belong, so also will this library, when fully completed, as we fondly trust and believe, to the youths here assembled, be affording valuable literary knowledge, for many ages to come. WILLIAM M. NEVIN,

Emeritus Alumni Professor of English Literature

November 21st, 1890.

THE SYNOD OF JAPAN.

The Synod of the Church of Christ in Japan met December 3d, in Tokyo, and more than ninety members were present. The principal business was the report of the Committee appointed in May, 1889, to draft a Constitution and Confession of Faith. The Confession of Faith was considered first, and the consideration consumed the greater part of four days. The Committee had recommended the Creed recently submitted to the Presbyterian Church of Englan, but this the Synod rejected. A proposition to take the Apostles' Creed alone as the Confession of Faith of the Church was warmly advocated, but the majority of the members was not satisfied with this. The following was adopted as the Confession of Faith:

"The Lord Jesus Christ whom we worship as God, the only begotten Son of God, for us men and our salvation was made man and suffered. He offered up a perfect sacrifice for sin; and all who are one with Him by faith are pardoned and accounted righteous; and faith in Him working by love purifies the heart.

"The Holy Ghost, who with the Father and the Son is worshipped and glorified, reveals Jesus Christ to the soul, and without His grace man being dead in sins cannot enter the kingdom of God. By Him the Prophets and the Apostles and holy men of old were inspired, and He speaking in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments is the supreme and infallible judge in all things pertaining unto faith and living.

"From the Holy Scriptures the ancient Church of Christ drew its Confession; hence we, holding the faith once delivered to the saints, join in that Confession with praise and thanksgiving. Here follows the Apostles' Creed:

The Constitution, Canons and Appendix submitted by the Committee were amended in many places. The Synod became a representative body, and will hold its first session under the new Constitution in November next. The Constitution, however, goes into effect almost immediately. Only those ministers can vote in Chukwai (Classis) who are settled pastors, evangelists appointed by Chukwai to the care of pastorless churches, or of evangelistic work, and teachers in theological schools recognized by the Synod. Churches may have deacons or not, as they please. They are earnestly requested to bring their letters of dismission from Classes and Presbyteries at home, and regularly connect themselves with this church. If unable to do so, and yet "statedly co-operate in the work of the Church," and "sincerely accept the Constitution, Canons and Confession of Faith," they may become advisory members of one or the other of the Chukwai.

The name of the Church was changed after much discussion, and is now the Church of Jesus Christ in Japan, i. e., the word "united" is omitted.

—The "Independent" takes the generally fair rule "that when a minister fills the place of pastor for a Sunday he should receive one per cent of the minister's salary."

This seems like a good rule. It would be well if it were adopted and put into practice. A minister, when supplying a congregation would then feel that his services were appreciated. Often his services are accepted as a matter of course, and he is obliged to pay his horse hire or care fare in the bargain. These things ought not to be in the Church. It is not so in the other professions.

—Fifty cents will send the MESSENGER on trial to a friend or fellow member for six months. Every reader could find such as ought to take their church paper.

Poetry.

FINISHING THY WORK.

Finish thy work; the time is short;
The sun is in the west;
The night is coming down—till then
Think not of rest.

Yes, finish thy work; then rest;
Till then rest never;
The rest prepared for thee by God
Is rest forever.

Finish thy work; then wipe thy brow;
Ungird thee from thy toil;
Take breath, and from each weary limb
Shake off the soil.

Finish thy work; then sit thee down
On some celestial hill,
And of its strength-reviving air
Take thou thy fill.

Finish thy work; then go in peace;
Life's battle fought and won,
Hear from the throne the Master's voice;
"Well done! Well done!"

Finish thy work; then take thy harp,
Give praise to God above;
Sing a new song of mighty joy
And endless love.

Give thanks to Him who holds thee up
In all thy path below;
Who made thee faithful unto death,
And crowns thee now!

—The British Friend.

Selections.

Reputation is what men and women think of us; character is what God and angels know of us.—Paine.

The only thing that walks back from the tomb with the mourners and refuses to be buried is character.

Internal conformity unto the habitual grace and holiness of Christ is the fundamental design of a Christian life.—Dr. Owen.

There is no death! The stars go down
To shine upon some fairer shore,
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown
They shine forevermore.

The seeming shipwrecks we meet with in the voyage of life often prove the very things which best speed our course to the haven where we would be.

There is nothing like prayer for producing calm self-possession. When the dust of business so fills your room that it threatens to choke you, sprinkle it with water of prayer, and then you can cleanse it out with comfort and expedition.—The Rev. James Stalker.

See the spider casting out her film to the gale—she feels persuaded that somewhere or other it will adhere and form the commencement of her web. She commits the slender filament to the air, believing that there is a place provided for it to fix itself. In this fashion should we cast forth our endeavors in this life, confident that God will find a place for us.—Spurgeon.

How like the prodigal doth nature seem,
Where thou, for all thy gold, so common art!
Thou teachest me to deem
More sacredly of every human heart,
Since each reflects in joy its scanty gleam
Of heaven, and could some wondrous secret show
Did we but pay the love we owe,
And with a child's undoubting wisdom look
On all these living pages of God's book.

—Lowell.

Science and Art.

Mica is now being used as an electrical insulator, while preparations of it are said to form an excellent lubricant for machinery, so that the field of use for this material—hitherto chiefly used for stove doors—is rapidly extending.

A new process for burning coal without smoke has lately been discovered. It consists in sprinkling water containing a special preparation of resin over the coal, and the result is that there is no smoke and the glow is as intense as coke.

A further step toward the artificial production of the diamond has been made by passing an electric current through carbon electrodes in a cell containing a fine white sand and electrodes, the whole being under considerable pressure.

The discovery by Dr. Schlunck that the fats in cocoanut oil make a very satisfactory substitute for butter seems to be the beginning of a new and important industry. Already at Mannheim a large factory has been established, which produces daily about 3,000 kilograms of the new butter substitute, which is retailed at a price equivalent to twelve or sixteen cents per pound. The nuts are obtained from the South Sea and Coral Islands, and also from Africa, Arabia, and South America. The new butter is of a clear, whitish color.

Items of Interest.

The Mohammedan Observer states that a society in Hyderabad is about to despatch three missionaries to preach Islam in England.

Toronto, Canada, has nearly two hundred thousand people. The street cars stop running at 11 P.M. Saturday night till Monday. The saloons are closed tight from 7 o'clock Saturday till Monday morning. Toronto has grown from 80,000 in 1880 to nearly 200,000 in 1890.

In a vote upon the most popular hymn, gathered by the Independent, "My Faith Looks up to Thee" had the largest majority. Other hymns receiving a large vote were "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," "Softly Now the Light of Day," "I Love to Steal Awhile Away," "I would not live Alway," &c.

E. A. Street works at telegraphy in winter and prospects in the summer. Some time ago he located a placer claim in Lemni county, Idaho, and bought up adjoining ones until he had 1600 acres. He reported his find to ex-Senator Tabor, who sent experts to examine, and on their findings he paid Street $100,000 for his property. It is now reported that the placer property is worth fully $15,000,000.

The two sides of the human face are not exactly alike, and a German biologist asserts that the lack of symmetry is, as a rule, confined to the upper parts of the face. In two cases out of five the eyes are out of line, and seven persons out of every ten have stronger sight in one eye than in the other. Another singular fact is that the right ear is almost universally shorter than the left, not only a little shorter, but enough to show an even inexact measurement.

In Jaffna, Ceylon, the Christian women take from the portion of rice daily measured out for the family food a double handful and put it into a bag hanging against the wall for an offering to God's work. A heathen priest heard of the practice and commended it, introducing it among the heathen women, and from their offerings, in time, a temple was built. This shows how little things aggregate and become powers for good or evil.—Heathen Woman's Friend.

In The Forum for November, 1889, the question was asked, "Who owns the United States?" and reasons were given for the belief that one-half of all the national wealth is owned by 40,000 families and that three-fourths of it is in the possession of fewer than 250,000 families. These estimates were based in part upon official tax returns, but in part, also, upon private information as to the wealth of seventy estates, specifically named, each estimated to be worth more than $20,000,000, and averaging $37,500,000.

Hints and Recipes.

WASHING WINDOWS. — A man who makes his living by washing city windows gives his method thus: Wet a linen or cotton cloth in cold water and wash the window; then take a piece of clean cheese cloth and rub it dry and polish it. Soap, ammonia, and warm water only add to the trouble and labor. In cold weather the hands get colder using warm water than using cold, because of the alternations of temperature; and simple cold water suffices to remove all dirt.

HOW TO TAKE CARE OF A PIANO.—With proper care and attention a good piano should last a family a lifetime. If this is not given it, the piano will in time become harsh and "tin-panny," and afford little satisfaction or delight to its owner. Ordinary practice, whether by a child or a grown-up person, will not injure a piano in any way. It is not necessary to be a professional piano player, and to know exactly with what force to strike the keys in order to keep the instrument in good condition. Of course it will not be improved by thumping the case, or by striking the keys with any hard substance. Neither does this remark apply to schools and institutions where playing is taught and the instrument is used continuously for ten or twelve hours every day. In the latter case the felt portions will wear out sooner than if it was used in a private family.

The matter of tuning should not be neglected, and should never be entrusted to any other than an experienced person. Incapable tuners very often work irreparable injury to the most perfect and costly instruments. During the first year a new piano should be tuned every three or four months at least. After that it will only be necessary to have it tuned at longer intervals.

Dampness is the most dangerous enemy the piano has to contend against, and for this reason the climate must be considered. If the instrument is placed in a damp room, or left open in a draught of air, the result will be that the strings, tuning-pins, and the various metal parts will become coated with rust, and the cloth used in the construction of the keys and action, becomes swollen. It is positively painful to play on such a piano.—C. H. Steinway, in Ladies' Home Journal.

Farm and Garden.

As a safeguard against the borer some fruit growers use fine wire mosquito netting, wrapping a small piece around the body of the tree a few inches above and below the soil.

Old strawberry beds are mulched when the ground is frozen, and then burned over clean. It does not harm the plants, but clears off the ground and causes the plants to come up in better condition in the spring. It is a method now highly commended by some fruit growers.

The hens need to work. Thousands of poultry raisers get no eggs in winter because the hens do not care to work for a living. They get too fat and cannot lay. Keep a deep layer of chaff or cut straw in the hen-house and scatter wheat or corn among it, and let the hens scratch for it and get exercise and they will lay eggs.

Books and Periodicals.

Any of the books here noticed can be had through our Publication House, 907 Arch Street.

FROM SOLOMON TO THE CAPTIVITY. The Story of the Two Hebrew Kingdoms. By Revs. David Gregg, D.D., and Lewis W. Mudge, D.D. New York: American Tract Society. Pp. 292. $1.25.

This book opens with a brief sketch of the two Hebrew Kingdoms. Then follow twenty-four sermons upon the Sunday-school Lessons for the first half of this year. It is a helpful book to Sunday-school teachers.

THE 19TH CENTURY YOUNG MAN. By the Rev. William H. Myers, Pastor of Grace Lutheran church, Reading, Pa. 16mo, pp. 164. Lutheran Book Store, Philadelphia. $1.

This book is made up of twelve lectures delivered by a pastor to the young people of his congregation. The design of these is to point out to the young how to form a character and fit themselves for taking their place in the Church and State, and making what is demanded of the young men of this century. It is well written and the points are forcibly put, and its reading is calculated to do good. It is handsomely printed and bound.

THE BOOK OF ISAIAH. Vol. II. Isaiah XL.—LXVI. By the Rev. George Adam Smith, M.A., Minister of Queen's Cross Church, Aberdeen. New York: A. C. Armstrong & Son. Pp. 474. $1.50.

This is another in the series of The Expositor's Bible. It is a series useful to the general reader as well as to the ministry. The author maintains his views with clearness and depth of thought as exhibited in the other volume and gives the student valuable aid.

SOCIAL AND RELIGIOUS LIFE IN THE ORIENT. By K. H. Basmajian. 16mo, pp. 247. American Tract Society, 1512 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

This is a valuable contribution to the account given of the work of missions. Great things have been accomplished in the Turkish Empire. Mr. Basmajian gives his own observations, and they bear valuable testimony of what has been done there in the work of Christianizing that country. The reading of it will do great good and help the cause.

LYRICS: FJELDA, ETC. By Joseph Hudson Young. Cloth. Pp. 131. $1.00. New York and London: Funk & Wagnalls.

A volume of poems upon a variety of subjects. The muses have sung touchingly, freely, lovingly, and more than one will feel moved by the sentiment expressed. It is a neat volume, and will have its place in the library, and prized for its worth.

THE PROTESTANTISM OF THE PRAYER BOOK. By Rev. Dyson Hague, M.A., Rector of St. Paul's church, Halifax, N. S. Pub., The J. E. Bryant Company (Limited), Toronto, Canada.

The aim of this book is to vindicate the Protestantism of the Book of Common Prayer. This the author successfully does by contrasting its teachings with that of the Church of Rome, on the subject of the use of the Scriptures in the vernacular by the laity, the doctrines of the Mass, Auricular Confession and priestly judicial absolution, etc. It is designed as an argument against the Romanizing tendency, which he acknowledges and deplores, as widespread and aggressive in the Anglican Church. He combats the disposition to fall back to the Prayer Book of Edward VI., which he holds to contain much derived from the pre-reformation British Church, which he tells us, agreed with Rome, back even beyond Augustine of Canterbury, except as to the supremacy of the Pope, and which was not sufficiently eliminated by Cranmer. It is interesting reading, as exhibiting the contention which is disturbing the Church of England, and the strength of the Romanizing tendency, with which it is agitated.

THE ARENA for February contains—"New Discoveries on Mars," "The Nature and Cause of Apparitions," "The Farmer, the Investor, and the Railway," "Discovery of Professor Koch," "The Fall of Adam," "The Froth and the Dregs," and "His Mother's Boy." Frances E. Russell writes at length on Woman's Dress Reform, a question which is at present engaging the attention of leading women in conservative as well as radical circles.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE FOR 1891. This, as usual, is an elegant book of 100 pages, containing a catalogue of seeds, vegetable and flower, with beautiful illustrations. Vick, the seedman, is reliable and has secured a large patronage through his supplying his customers with good seed. Every one should have a copy of his Guide for 1891.

Marriages.

Christmas eve, December 24, 1890, at the Reformed Parsonage, Salisbury, Pa., by Rev. J. M. Evans, S. P. Fullem to Ellen E. Maust, both of Summit Mills, Pa.

December 31, 1890, at the same place, by the same, Mahlon Wisler to Annie E. Engle, both of Summit Mills, Pa.

January 6th, 1891, in Trinity Reformed church, New Germany, Md., by Rev. J. M. Evans, Louis Warnick to Ida Jane Bancord, both of New Germany, Md.

Deaths.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than two hundred and fifty words.

DIED.—December 16, 1890, Mrs. Catharine Dittmar, late of Loysburg, aged 70 years, 9 months and 10 days.

After a lingering illness of three or four years, Mother Dittmar passed peacefully away. She was born in Friends Cove, Bedford county, Pa. A daughter of Mr. John and Magdalena Diehl. Given to her Saviour in infant baptism, and confirmed, thus early she was consecrated to her Master's service, and remained faithful unto the end. She was the wife of Elder John Dittmar, and the mother of Revs. D. N. and H. F. Dittmar. No doubt many of our ministers will read the notice of Mother Dittmar's death with sorrow. Her home was the minister's home. No one more welcome than the minister of Christ. How she would make the ministers feel at home! How she would delight in talking on Bible subjects, and quote old familiar hymns! But in the last years of her life her Saviour was her all. This was summed up in almost the last words she uttered, "I owe nothing, Jesus paid it all." A whole volume in that.

Being blind in addition to her other sickness, she longed for the time when God would relieve her of her suffering. Never complaining, but always resigned and submitting all to her Heavenly Father's will, God called her home to her long sweet rest.

She leaves to mourn her departure, her husband, Elder John Dittmar, three sons and three daughters. May God comfort the hearts of the bereaved family.

DIED.—On November 24th, 1890, at Tylersville, Clinton county, Pa., Mrs. Polly, wife of Tobias Frantz.

Mrs. Frantz was a communicant member of the Reformed church for many years. Her age was 65 years, 11 months and 12 days.

A THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

Remarkable Statement of Personal Danger and Providential Escape.

The following story—which is attracting wide attention from the press—is so remarkable that it is given to the public entire.

To the Editor Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat:

SIR. On the first day of June, 1881, I lay at my residence in this city surrounded by my friends and waiting for death. Heaven only knows the agony I then endured, for words can never describe it. And yet, if a few years previous any one had told me that I was to be brought so low, and by so terrible a disease, I should have scoffed at the idea. I had always been uncommonly strong and healthy, and weighed over 200 pounds and hardly knew, in my own experience, what pain or sickness were. Very many people who will read this statement realize at times that they are unusually tired and cannot account for it. They feel dull pains in various parts of the body and do not understand why. Or they are exceedingly hungry one day and entirely without appetite the next. This was just the way I felt when the relentless malady which had fastened itself upon me first began. Still I thought nothing of it; that probably I had taken a cold which would soon pass away. Shortly after this I noticed a heavy, and at times neuralgic, pain in one side of my head, but as it would come one day and be gone the next, I paid little attention to it. Then my stomach would get out of order and my food often failed to digest, causing at times great inconvenience. Yet, even as a physician, I did not think that these things meant anything serious. I fancied I was suffering from malaria and doctored myself accordingly. Bul I got no better. I next noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing—also that there were large quantities one day and very little the next, and that a persistent froth and scum appeared on the surface, and a sediment settled. And yet I did not realize my danger, for, indeed, seeing these symptoms continually, I finally became accustomed to them, and my suspicion was wholly disarmed by the fact that I had no pain in the affected organs or in their vicinity. Why I should have been so blind I cannot understand.

I consulted the best medical skill in the land. I visited all the famed mineral springs in America and traveled from Maine to California. Still I grew worse. No two physicians agreed as to my malady. One said I was troubled with spinal irritation; another, dyspepsia; another, heart disease; another, general debility; another, congestion of the base of the brain; and so on through a long list of common diseases, the symptoms of many of which I really had. In this way several years passed, during which time I was steadily growing worse. My condition had really become pitiable. The slight symptoms I had at first experienced were developed into terrible and constant disorders. My weight had been reduced from 207 to 130 pounds. My life was a burden to myself and friends. I could retain no food on my stomach, and lived wholly by injections. I was a living mass of pain. My pulse was uncontrollable. In my agony I frequently fell to the floor and clutched the carpet, and prayed for death. Morphine had little or no effect in deadening the pain. For six days and nights I had tne death-premonitory hiccoughs constantly. My water was filled with tube-casts and albumen. I was struggling with Bright's Disease of the kidneys in its last stages!

Whilst suffering thus I received a call from my pastor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, at that time rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, of this city. I felt that it was our last interview, but in the course of conversation Dr. Foote detailed to me the many remarkable cures of cases like my own which had come under his observation. As a practicing physician and a graduate of the schools, I derided the idea of any medicine outside the regular channels being in the least beneficial. So solicitous, however, was Dr. Foote, that I finally promised I would waive my prejudice. I began its use on the first day of June, 1881, and took it according to directions. At first it sickened me; but this I thought was a good sign for one in my debilitated condition. I continued to take it; the sickening sensation departed and I was finally able to retain food upon my stomach. In a few days I noticed a decided change for the better, as also did my wife and friends. My hiccoughs ceased and I experienced less pain than formerly. I was so rejoiced at this improved condition that, upon what I had believed but a few days before was my dying bed, I vowed, in the presence of my family and friends, should I recover, I would both publicly and privately make known this remedy for the good of humanity, wherever and whenever I had an opportunity, and this letter is in fulfillment of that vow. My improvement was constant from that time, and in less than three months I had gained 26 pounds in flesh, became entirely free from pain and I believe I owe my life and present condition wholly to Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy which I used.

Since my recovery I have thoroughly re-investigated the subject of kidney difficulties and Bright's disease, and the truths developed are astounding. I therefore state, deliberately, and as a physician, that I believe more than one-half the deaths which occur in America are caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. This may sound like a rash statement, but I am prepared to fully verify it. Bright's disease has no distinctive features of its own, (indeed, it often develops without any pain whatever in the kidneys or their vicinity) but has the symptoms of nearly every other common complaint. Hundreds of people die daily, whose burials are authorized by a physician's certificate as occurring from "Heart Disease," "Apoplexy," "Paralysis," "Spinal Complaint," "Rheumatism," "Pneumonia," and other common complaints, when in reality it is from Bright's disease of the kidneys. Few physicians, and fewer people, realize the extent of this disease or its dangerous and insidious nature. It steals into the system like a thief, manifests its presence if at all by the commonest symptoms and fastens itself in the constitution before the victim is aware of it. It is nearly as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families, inheriting it from their ancestors, have died, and yet none of the number knew or realized the mysterious power which was removing them. Instead of common symptoms it often shows none whatever, but brings death suddenly, from convulsions, apoplexy, or heart disease. As one who has suffered, and knows by bitter experience what he says, I implore everyone who reads these words not to neglect the slightest symptoms of kidney difficulty. No one can afford to hazard such chances.

I make the foregoing statements based upon facts which I can substantiate to the letter. The welfare of those who may possibly be sufferers such as I was, is an ample inducement for me to taks the step I have, and if I can successfully warn others from the dangerous path in which I once walked, I am willing to endure all professional and personal consequences.

J. B. HENION, M. D.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 30.

A NEW EDITION.

WON BY PRAYER.

Or The Life and Work of Rev. Masayoshi Oshikawa, Native Missionary in Sendai, Japan.

BY REV. A. R. BARTHOLOMEW,
Late Secretary Board of Commissioners for For. Missions, Reformed Church in United States.

An interesting story, well told, and an evidence of what has been and is being done for the salvation of the heathen in Japan. Well illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound.

Pp. 120. Price, 75 cts. Postpaid.

☞ Percentage on sales given to Foreign Missions. Should have a large sale.

REFORMED CHURCH PUB. HOUSE,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Mention this paper.

Books

New Books every week. Catalogue, 132 pages, free; not sold by Dealers; prices too low; buy of the Publisher, JOHN B. ALDEN, 393 Pearl St., New York

Business Department.

TERMS:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage free. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.

No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrearages are paid.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made before the date transpires.

When the address of a paper is to be changed, the OLD and the NEW should be given.

☞ Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

☞ We do make mistakes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

☞ Remittances should be made payable by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, or Registered Letter to the order of THE REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHAS. G. FISHER.

THE ALMANAC
FOR THE
Reformed Church in the United States
—TWENTY-EIGHTH ISSUE—
FOR 1891.

We are ready now to receive orders for our Almanac for 1891, at the following rates:

100 Copies, per express,		$5.00
50	" "	2.75
12	" "	.75
1 Copy, Postpaid,		.12

When to be sent by mail 18 cents per dozen must be added for postage.

Also,
WESTERN ALMANAC
At the same prices as above.

GERMAN ALMANAC.
12 Copies, 90 cts.
Postage, 18 cts.
Single Copies, Postpaid, 12 cts.

Address,
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK.

IN OLDEN DAYS
BEYOND THE SEA.

Translated from the German, to which are added Introductory and Closing Parts,
BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

An interesting book, giving a thrilling account of the trials and persecutions of those who were true to their faith in "olden days beyond the sea." Pages 305. Illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of retail price, $1 25.

Address,
Reformed Church Publication House,
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK,
"In Olden Days Beyond the Sea,"
AND
THE MESSENGER.

To any one sending us two new subscribers for THE MESSENGER and $4.00, we will send a copy of the above book postpaid.

To an old subscriber for THE MESSENGER, remitting $2.75, we will give credit for a year's subscription and send a copy of the above book, postpaid.

Address
Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

Miscellaneous.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

FIFTH ANNUAL MEETING AND DINNER OF FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL ALUMNI ASSOCIATION OF PHILADELPHIA.

The fifth annual meeting and dinner of the Franklin and Marshall Alumni Association of Philadelphia was held Friday, 6th inst., 5 P. M., at the Hotel Bellevue, Philadelphia. The members, friends and invited guests of the association assembled in the reception room, and the first part of the evening was spent in social intercourse and the transaction of business.

The annual election of officers to serve the ensuing year resulted as follows; President, Joseph A. Reed, Esq., Philadelphia; Vice-President, Peter D. Wanner, Esq., Reading, Pa.; Secretary, Francis E. Bucher, Esq.; Treasurer, Rev. James Crawford, D.D.; Executive Committee, James H. Wolfe, Esq., Dr. A. S. Gerhard, Rev. C. G. Fisher, D.D., W. W. Weigley and T. A. Fenstermaker. Between 6 and 7 o'clock the company, numbering about 65, headed by the President of the association, Gen. B. F. Fisher, and the Rev. John S. Stahr, Ph.D., President of the college, proceeded to the banqueting room. The table was set in the shape of a horseshoe and the room was decorated with the college colors, blue and white. The blessing was asked by the Rev. L. Kryder Evans.

General B. Frank Fisher, of the German-American Title and Trust Company, presided. President Stahr, of Franklin and Marshall College; Hon. Michael Arnold, Court of Common Pleas; President A. H. Fetterolf, of Girard College; Rev. Merritt Hulburd, D.D., of Spring Garden Methodist Episcopal Church; Rev. George W. Stibitz, of Ursinus College, and Hon. J. F. Long, of Doylestown, were among the guests of the association. A quartette of the College Glee Club, composed of W. M. Irvine, U. O. H. Kershner, J. C. Bolger and W. H. Keller, was present and gave to the delight of all present a number of college and other songs.

Among those who sat down to dinner were Dr. S. H. Guilford, Philadelphia Dental College; Dr. L. H. Steiner, Baltimore; Rev. E. V. Gerhart, D.D., President of Theological Seminary; Rev. James Crawford, D.D., of Christ Church; Prof. J. E. Kershner, Lancaster; A. C. Rienoehl, Esq., District Attorney of Lancaster Co.; Mahlon H. Stout, District Attorney of Bucks Co.; Peter D. Wanner, Esq., Reading; James E. Garretson, M.D., and Abraham S. Gerhard, M.D., of the Medico-Chirurgical College; Rev. Charles G. Fisher, D.D., of the MESSENGER; Hon. Walter M. Franklin, Lancaster; Rev. Nevin H. Fisher, Catholic High School, Philadelphia; W. W. Weigley, James H. Wolfe, Joseph A. Reed, Armon Acheson, Jr., Levi H. Bell, Samuel Bell, Jr., of Philadelphia; John W. Bickel, Esq., Norristown; J. C. Bolger, Franklin and Marshall College; Cyrus Borgner, F. B. Birch, F. E. Bucher, Esq., Philadelphia; Henry U. Brunner, Norristown; F. W. Bushong, Media; John R. Cassel, Rev. C. H. Coon, Trinity church, Philadelphia; Jacob Y. Dietz, E. J. Durban, Philadelphia; Rev. L. Kryder Evans, Pottstown; T. A. Fenstermaker, Edwin Ford, Rev. Edwin A. Gernant, Philadelphia; John U. Hobach, M.D., Baltimore; Wm. M. Irvine, Theological Seminary; Rev. George H. Johnston, D.D., Philadelphia; Professor J. B. Kieffer, W. H. Keller, Franklin and Marshall College; J. B. Kremer, Carlisle; U. O. H. Kershner, Franklin and Marshall College; David Levan, Reading; W. G. Mayburry, Geo. Mays, M.D., Milton Mays, Philadelphia; Rev. Jacob J. Rothrock, Lansdale; Ernest B. Sangree, M.D., Philadelphia; W. B. Scheibley, New Bloomfield; Professor R. C. Schiedt, Lancaster; Rev. A. M. Schmidt, Baltimore; Rev. C. S. Slagle, Westminster, Md.; Rev. J. H. Sechler, of First Reformed church, Philadelphia; Rev. Levi C. Sheip, Doylestown, Pa.; Howard P. Wanner, Reading; John F. Unger, Philadelphia; J. C. Uhler, Lebanon.

After some time spent by those present in consuming the good things spread before them, the opening address was made by President Fisher.

The toast, "The College," was responded to by President Stahr. He said that the spirit of the college will maintain itself down to the ages yet to come. The college must be distinguished from the grammar school on the one hand. When we send our sons away to school we want to make strong, healthy men of them. On the other hand, the college is to be distinguished from the university, which has technical courses of study. Dr. Stahr would like to see at the college more professors and a better equipment. An advance, however, has been made, a good laboratory has been equipped and a gymnasium is under way. It is the desire of the college to keep in line with the best educational thought of the day. There are 225 students in the different departments. The college never has been in a better condition than it is now. What the college will be depends largely on the alumni. Two or three new professorships will be needed in the near future.

A letter was read from the Rev. H. C. McCook, D.D., who was unavoidably prevented from being present.

The toast, "The Collegian in Law," was responded to by the Hon. M. Arnold. Prof. G. W. Stibitz, Ph.D., of Ursinus College, responded to the toast "College Fellowship."

The toast, "Old Marshall," was responded to by L. H. Steiner, M.D., Librarian of the Enoch Pratt Free Library, Baltimore. The latter said that Franklin and Marshall has grit in it and is bound to go.

The Rev. E. V. Gerhart, D.D., of Lancaster, responded to the toast of "Franklin and Marshall Alumni Association of Philadelphia."

Remarks were also made by Professor Garretson, Rev. Dr. Hulburd, W. W. Weigley, Esq., Hon. A. C. Reinoehl, Rev. Chas. G. Fisher, D.D., Prof. J. B. Kieffer, Rev. E. A. Gernant, Walter M. Franklin, Esq., Rev. J. Crawford, D.D., and Prof. S. H. Guilford.

In a graceful and touching manner A. C. Reinoehl referred to the fact that Prof. Wm. M. Nevin, LL.D., would on the morrow celebrate the eighty-fifth anniversary of his birth, and proposed that those present rise and drink to the health of the honored and beloved Professor, which was most heartily agreed to and done. Upon motion of Dr. A. S. Gerhard the association also sent its hearty congratulations and good wishes to Prof. Nevin, the secretary authorized to communicate the same to him.

The thanks of the association were tendered the Executive Committee and the Quartette from the College Glee Club.

The Quartette leading in singing "Auld Lang Syne," and the pronouncing of the benediction by President Stahr, closed the most successful and pleasant reunion of the association.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

DEDICATION OF ST. MARK'S CHURCH, NEW BUENA VISTA, PA.

The new church erected in New Buena Vista, Bedford county, Pa., and named St. Mark's, was consecrated to the service of the Jehovah God and His Christ, with appropriate ceremonies on the 23rd of January.

On the Thursday evening before Rev. S. C. Stover, of Cessna, preached the first sermon in it. On Friday evening Rev. S. C. Long, of Mann's Choice, preached. On Saturday afternoon the pastor, Rev. James B. Stonesifer, held baptism and preparatory services, also preached in the evening.

On Sunday morning, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, a large congregation assembled, and after the consecration sermon by Bro. Long, about $300 was subscribed by persons present, and the balance necessary to the consecration of the church free of debt was assumed by our faithful building committee, then, with the assistance of the above brother, the pastor proceeded with the act of consecration.

The Holy Communion was administered in the evening.

The new church is a substantial brick structure, 38x60 feet, with recess for altar. The church furniture is a fac-simile of the set recently placed in the St. Benjamin's church of near Westminster, Md.

The interior of the church is neatly finished in hard wood. Every window was taken as memorials or presents. They are rolled cathedral glass in tasteful designs.

The church was built at a cost of about $4,000. We consider it an honor to our beloved Zion and community, as well as a monument to our present congregation in their effort to discharge the work entrusted to them in upbuilding the glorious kingdom of our common Master here on earth. S.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Franklin and Marshall Glee and Mandolin Club has come and gone. Their concert in the city on the evening of the 30th of January was a signal success. It was well attended and highly enjoyed by every one. The club has well sustained the high reputation it has already won, and scored another victory. A noticeable feature in the programme was the high order of its music, and at the same time its briskness and raciness as it sparkled with humor and bubbled over with fun. That they are equally good in sacred music, their singing on Sunday proved.

The services on Sunday were enthusiastic; the chapel was crowded both in the morning and at the missionary society meeting in the evening. At the latter, warm, earnest, missionary addresses were made, breathing the spirit of love, hope and courage. The speakers were Mr. J. N. Naly, who drew a vivid picture of the needs of a world under the power of sin, and the difficulties of missionary work; Mr. U. O. H. Kershner, who pointed out forcibly the fundamental character of love in all missionary activity, and Mr. Wm. M. Irvine, who presented the bright side of the picture, the certainty of the final triumph of mission work, as shown by the conquests of the past, and as assured by the omnipotence of Jesus Christ and the promise of His abiding presence with us to the end of time.

The people of Grace congregation have most highly enjoyed this visit of the young men of the College and Seminary. They feel that they know "Franklin and Marshall" all the better because of it; while the friendly feeling created by it will, we trust, continue to grow.

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT ESTABLISHED 1810.

UNLIKE ANY OTHER. As much For INTERNAL as EXTERNAL use.

Originated by an Old Family Physician in 1810

Could a Remedy WITHOUT REAL MERIT Have Survived for Eighty Years?

Dropped on Sugar, Children Love It.

Every Traveler should have a bottle of it in his satchel

THINK OF IT.

In use over 40 YEARS in one family.

Dr. I. S. JOHNSON & Co.—It is sixty years since I first learned of your JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT; for more than forty years I have used it in my family. O. H. INGALLS, Dea. 2d Baptist Church, Bangor, Me.

Every Mother Should have JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT in the house for Croup, Colds, Sore Throat, Catarrh, Tonsilitis, Colic, Nervous Headache, Cuts, Bruises, Cramps, Pains, Soreness in Body or Limbs. Delays may cost a life. Relieves Summer Complaints like magic. Sold everywhere. Price, 35 cts., 6 bottles, $2. Express paid. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

MELLIN'S FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS. TRADE ORA ET LABORA MARK. FOOD

THE ONLY

Perfect Substitute for Mother's Milk.

INVALUABLE IN CHOLERA INFANTUM AND TEETHING.

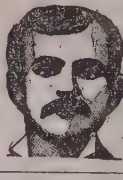
A quickly assimilated Food for DYSPEPTICS, CONSUMPTIVES, CONVALESCENTS.

A PERFECT NUTRIENT in all wasting diseases.

REQUIRES NO COOKING. KEEPS IN ALL CLIMATES.

SEND for our book, "The Care and Feeding of Infants," mailed free to any address.

DOLIBER-GOODALE CO., BOSTON, MASS.



$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.

VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA

Appetizing--Easily Digested.

Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [66

ELY'S CREAM BALM Applied into Nostrils is Quickly Absorbed, Cleanses the Head, Heals the Sores and Cures

CATARRH

Restores Taste and Smell, quickly Relieves Cold in Head and Headache. 50c. at Druggists. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St. N.Y

THE CURE FOR
CATARRH
COLD IN HEAD
HAYFEVER
DEAFNESS
HEADACHE
ELY'S CREAM BALM
TRADE MARK
50c

Rubifoam FOR THE TEETH Deliciously Flavored 25¢ SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.

W. BAKER & CO.'S

Breakfast Cocoa

from which the excess of oil has been removed, Is absolutely pure and it is soluble.

No Chemicals are used in its preparation. It has more than three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, EASILY DIGESTED, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as for persons in health.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.

W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE of 16,600f.

QUINA-LAROCHE'S INVIGORATING TONIC,

CONTAINING

QUINA LAROCHE

Peruvian Bark, and Pure Catalan Wine.

Endorsed by the Medical Faculty of Paris, as the Best Remedy for

LOSS of APPETITE, FEVER and AGUE, MALARIA, NEURALGIA and INDIGESTION.

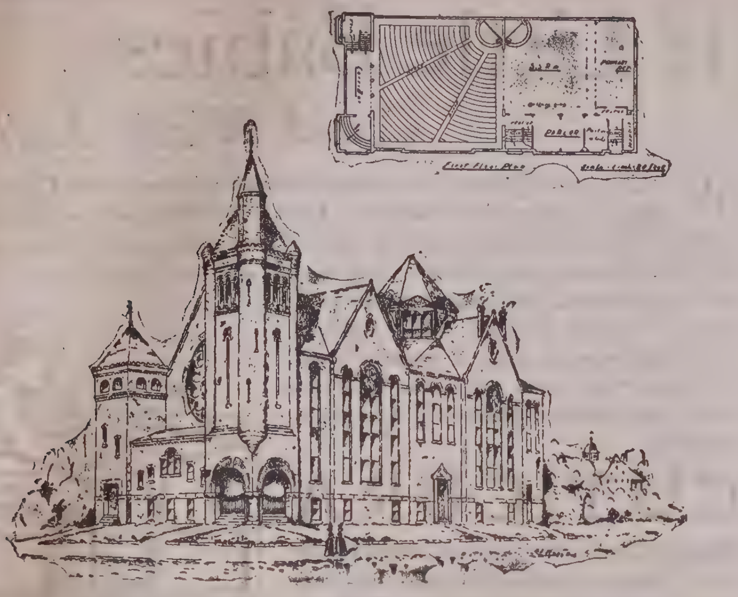
An experience of 25 years in experimental analysis, together with the valuable aid extended by the Academy of Medicine in Paris, has enabled M. Laroche to extract the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark (a result not before attained), and to concentrate them in an elixir, which possesses in the highest degree its restorative and invigorating qualities, free from the disagreeable bitterness of other remedies.

22 rue Drouot, Paris.

E. FOUGERA & CO., Agents for U. S., 30 North William street, N. Y.

LAROCHE

BLATCHLEY WOOD FORCE PUMP Cheapest and most efficient. A Complete Fire Department on your premises. Write for descriptive circular. CHAS. G. BLATCHLEY, Philada.



GRACE REFORMED CHURCH, CLEVELAND, O.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

GRACE REFORMED CHURCH, CLEVELAND, O.

The above cut gives a fair impression of the handsome church building which the congregation of Grace Reformed church of Cleveland, O. (the only English congregation of the Reformed church in that city), is striving eventually to occupy as its church home. The plans are of a stone structure, 115x56 feet, upon which the estimated cost is $20,000. This estimate is $2,000 below the architect's figures and is added in order to be on the safe side. It will be seen that the front half is the main auditorium with a gallery over the entrance. The rear half embraces a center Sunday-school room with a seating capacity for 200 people, and connecting side and gallery apartments, providing a primary department, church parlor, pastor's study, library and class-rooms, which, when thrown into the centre room, will add seating capacity for 300 people—500 in all. The two halves can be thrown into one by raising partitions, and the pulpit is so arranged that it can be seen from every direction. A basement under all provides kitchen and other facilities. Work on this building will be begun in the spring. The indications are that the rear half only will be completed next summer, and it perhaps only in part. The building committee will not go into debt to any degree. Therefore what can be accomplished next summer depends on the cash on hand, or reasonably sure to be on hand. Four thousand dollars are in cash and pledges at this time. To complete the rear half will require say $10,000 by next October—it may be less. What a gigantic task there is before this very, very young mission! But it must be accomplished. The mission has arrived at a stage where the signs plainly whisper: "Get into an adequate church home without a burden of debt and prosper, or stay where you are and struggle against impossibilities."

Dear brethren, it need scarce be said that on the day of the dedication of the rear half of the above building, if it comes next fall, there will go up to heaven hallelujahs of joy, thankfulness and victory, and the Reformed church will have given its English interest a footing in Cleveland from which it will reap a rich harvest. Six hundred of the 1000 ten dollar shares are still to find men and women anxious to place money for the Reformed church where it will do great good. Oh, you prosperous congregations and you well-meaning Reformed men and women, why do you keep silent when an interest like this is pleading for a hand of help in its infancy. Help Grace Mission to erect this chapel, brethren. It will provide amply for her and assure her the strength and prosperity which will enable her to liquidate the $5,600 mortgage now on the lot and then to build the front half of a handsome Reformed church in this great city of churches.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

CENTRAL LETTER.

Of all my climatic experience, that of this locality during the past year has been the most pleasant. There was a paucity of rain during a part of last summer, yet the crops were by no means a failure. A delightful fall weather prolonged itself till the coming in of the new year. Then we got a taste of winter, not disagreeably severe; a large amount of sunshine and a pure, bracing atmosphere continuing till the present. From reports no locality, east, west, north or south, has been more favored in this respect. But other things than climatic claim attention.

Things Pleasant.

Away at one side of our Reformed church and isolated in a measure, the perspective view and indications favorable to her future, afford some degree of satisfaction. Her papers, with the Intelligencer, by their welcome visits afford encouragement, give signs of progress, and of waking thought and activity. Many new papers, local in character, come to hand indicative of enterprise, pastoral ability and work. Two new and specific publications reached me worthy of special remark, The Missionary Guardian and The Brotherhood Star, each having a grand field for range and work. Though the former transplants an honored publication long serving the interests of younger readers, yet much more may it now accomplish in moving onward all classes in the entire church in missionary work, so urgent for her future success. Though it might have been regretful to drop its antecedent name, yet the first issue in the present form, and considering its prospect and possible attainment by able work, would have justified it to bear the title of a Review—Reformed Missionary Review. The latter, The Brotherhood Star, we take it is significant of almost a new era in Reformed church working. The organization it represents warrants the assertion that it is not only timely, but most proper and complete, strong and effective. Perhaps in no other church than the Reformed could a similar organization have been effected, possessing the same underlaying thought, order and spirit. The qualities long since have been at hand in the church for proper and efficient working and training on the part of the younger membership, could they have been materialized and enlisted. The Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip is a most proper organization to this end. A little "looking backwards" is sufficient to convince any one of the disadvantage to the church in the past, in the lack of a more general and actively working membership. Not long since, and there was found an exceptional member, mostly an elderly person, who was fitted for an officer in the congregation or as delegate to ecclesiastical assemblies; that was about the most expected. That state of things, thank God, is past—not a bit too soon. Many older members have now set the example for the younger ones to qualify themselves and be ready to take hold of Christian working at once, freely and vigorously. To become a member of the church is right and necessary; but the act itself is a most solemn obligation to church working and Christian activity. Long live the Brotherhood and mighty be its achievements for good.

Woman.

This was the signature to a brief and spicy article, "For the Brethren," in the MESSENGER of January 8th. Its reading (I confess for myself) produced inwardly a pleasurable sensation. It was so brief, clear cut, and sharply pointed, that but for lack of Methodistic responsiveness there might have escaped an ejaculatory "amen." It had just the ring in it; indicative of what has long been a fact, the development of woman in the Reformed as well as other churches, to assume a more prominent part in church and Christian work. From this sample as well as many others, we are safe in saying, contributing to church papers is an open field for her. We are glad to have her say to us men, "We do want you to move on a little faster." We would be glad to have all male members respond, "By God's help we will."

All know what was early and long the prevailing thought and custom in the churches respecting woman's part and activity. That it was narrow, one-sided and Scripturally unjustified is now admitted. A few individual exceptions there may yet be; but with such we have here no argument—not in fossilizing mood. The fact is now squarely and plainly before our eyes, that the church is needing, calling for woman's help; not only as it is at present being given, but as it is yet to be given in a far more general, verified and efficient form. Room is yet to open up before her as she prepares and fits herself to fill it. And she will. Let no obstacles be cast in her way. That such obstacle should be presented by theological teaching, training and Scriptural interpretation is the least justifiable of all. A general view of what the Bible narrates of woman, the goodness and nobleness in which it presents her, her inseparable and near relation to all that pertains to revelation and human redemption, forbids any such interpretation. More than is here room to refer to must present itself to every thinking one, what Christianity has done and is doing for woman; and what she is called to do in its behalf in the church and world.

Only yet a brief suggestion: it may be proper in connection with the above. Since we are favored by a Brotherhood, in order and spirit of the Reformed church, is there not room for a Sisterhood of like character? A "Sisterhood of Maria's," or other suitable name. There is talent, courage and zeal enough in the women of the church to organize and with telling effect.

Ex.

Beatrice, January 16, 1891.

PRESENTATION.

The pastor, Rev. W. T. Auman, of Bloomsburg, Pa., a few weeks ago, was made the happy recipient of a handsome solid gold Hunting case watch, a gift from the congregation, as a Christmas present It is a beautiful and highly prized gift. The edges are richly chased, on the front outside lid, nearly covering it, is engraved a monogram of the letters W. T. A., and on the back lid 1890, while the inscription "Presented to the Rev. W. T. Auman by Trinity Reformed Church," appears on the inner lid.

Cleveland's Baking Powder
Is Absolutely the Best,
Because—It has the best keeping qualities: As shown by a series of tests of the leading brands made by Mass. State Analyst, Dr. B. F. Davenport, June, 1890.

I took Cold,
I took Sick,
I TOOK
SCOTT'S EMULSION
RESULT:
I take My Meals,
I take My Rest,
AND I AM VIGOROUS ENOUGH TO TAKE ANYTHING I CAN LAY MY HANDS ON; getting fat too, FOR Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda NOT ONLY CURED MY Incipient Consumption BUT BUILT ME UP, AND IS NOW PUTTING FLESH ON MY BONES
AT THE RATE OF A POUND A DAY. I TAKE IT JUST AS EASILY AS I DO MILK." SUCH TESTIMONY IS NOTHING NEW. SCOTT'S EMULSION IS DOING WONDERS DAILY. TAKE NO OTHER.

THE WONDERFUL LUBURG CHAIR. COMBINING 5 ARTICLES OF FURNITURE. 50 CHANGES
100 STYLES. BABY COACHES
INVALID SUPPLIES AND WHEEL CHAIRS
We retail at the lowest wholesale factory prices, and ship goods to be paid for on delivery. Send stamp for Catalogue. Name goods desired.
Automatic Brake on all Coaches FREE
WHEEL CHAIRS TO HIRE. SPECIAL FREE DELIVERY.
LUBURG MFG. CO., 145 N. 8th St., Philada., Pa.

HAIR
—ON—
Ladies' Faces
Destroyed forever. No pain, scar, shock, or injury by the Electric Needle by
DR. J. VAN DYCK,
Electro Surgeon,
1106 WALNUT ST., Phila.,
and 502 PENN AVE.,
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Never fails. Book free. Call or write.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

For Gas BAILEY'S For Oil
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass
REFLECTORS,
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. A. J. WEIDENER, 36 South 2d St. Philada.
ALSO CHANDELIERS for OIL and ELECTRICITY

CHOICE CARPETINGS
IN ALL GRADES,
AT POPULAR PRICES.
A full line of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and Standard Domestic and Imported Carpets.
☞ We request only an OPPORTUNITY to show you our stock.
IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE.
NEW STORE,
1217 Market Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

CARPET buyers had better purchase of J. & J. DOBSON, 809 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, in order to receive full value for their money. They retail Carpets of their own make, which are reliable in every way.

CHURCH, HALL AND LODGE
Furniture. Pulpits, Chairs, Pews, etc.
BAXTER C. SWAN, 244 & 246 S. 2d St., Phila, Pa.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.
Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and indorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your Grocers ought to have it on Sale Ask him for it. D. S. WILTBERGER, Prop., 232 N. 2d St. Phila., Pa.

Good Sense CORSET WAISTS
Fit all Ages. Infants to Adults.
Are made of the best material and workmanship

Church News.

☞Stated Clerks of Classes and Pastors will oblige us by sending such Items of News as will be of interest to the Church.

OUR OWN CHURCH.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Carlisle.—Tuesday evening, the 27th ult., a large number of the members of the Reformed church gave a substantial token of their appreciation of their venerable and esteemed pastor, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Kremer, who for more than a half century has labored zealously in the ministerial field, many of those years being spent among the Carlisle congregation, by tendering him a surprise donation. The visit was kept a secret and last night when they thronged into his residence the surprise to him and Mrs. Kremer was complete.

In accordance with an arrangement made several members early in the evening called upon Dr. and Mrs. Kremer, the visit being for the purpose of detaining them at home until the arrival of the donors, who were rapidly assembling at the residence of Mrs. Sipe, on the same street. In a short time the members of the party entered the Doctor's house depositing their gifts upon a table in the dining-room. The donation consisted of a great many things useful in a family. Several envelopes containing sums of money were found among the presents.

When Dr. Kremer had recovered from the surprise, he made a brief but very pleasing address to the visitors, referring to the surprise of the visit and expressing his sincere thanks for the substantial manner in which they manifested their appreciation and friendship. After refreshments were served and some amusements were engaged in all retired to their homes.—Daily Herald.

BRONCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the consoler of the afflicted.'"—Jaime Rufus Vidal, San Cristobel, San Domingo.

Young Children,

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

Jeannette.—Rev. N. H. Skyles, pastor. Grace church, of this place, celebrated the Lord's Supper January 18. Received by certificate, 3; confirmation, 1. Communion alms, $15.

South Easton.—St. Peter's, Rev. Jonathan W. Miller, pastor. On Thursday evening, the 8th ult., the pastor and people of this congregation were no little surprised by being made the happy recipients of a bell for their new church. The bell was made in Cincinnati, Ohio, weighs eleven hundred pounds, and is keyed on b flat. It is the generous gift of Mr. Enos Ott, of Easton, who with his family are members of the Third Street Reformed church, in memory of his sainted father, who for many years was a faithful member of St. Peter's Reformed congregation, South Easton. Many thanks to the kind donor.

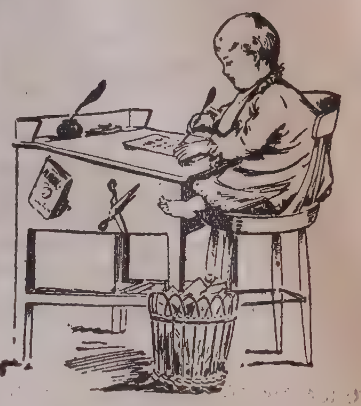
On the morning of the 1st inst., the congregation, during service, took action increasing the pastor's salary $150. This, no doubt, is the first result of the strong effort that has been put forth during the last three or four months, in this congregation, to establish a system of systematic giving. A giving that will place the burden alike upon all, and tone that is worthy the name. Much has been written and said of late upon this particular weakness (a lack of systematic giving) of our church. We believe that much of this could be remedied if the pastors, instead of theorizing so much, would take the trouble to become practical financiers for their congregations themselves.

Orbisonia.—As a member of the committee on supply for Orbisonia Mission, Rev. D. S. Dieffenbacher began services preparatory for the Holy Communion in St. John's Reformed church, Orbisonia, on Friday evening, January 16th. On Saturday evening one adult was baptized and seven young persons confirmed. The Holy Communion was administered on Sunday morning. Some of the aged members were kept away on account of the rain and snow. May this mission soon be supplied with an under shepherd is our earnest wish and desire.

Chalfont.—The members of the Pleasantville Reformed church took their pastor, Rev. Charles Alspach, by surprise on Tuesday evening, 27th ult., at his home in Chalfont. A few friends called in the afternoon and as is customary in some communities, brought a few articles from their well-filled granaries and consequently a well-regulated donation was not suspected. As early as 7 o'clock about a dozen devoted ones being loaded down with several rocking and an elegant study chair besides a number of other packages, appeared at the door and begged admittance. Then it dawned upon the pastor and wife that something extraordinary was about to take place.

The people came from Warringtonville, Prospectville, Line Lexington, Eureka and Chalfont to the number of seventy persons. A supper was prepared by the visitors which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The company dispersed at an early hour after singing "Blest be the tie that binds," and left behind them an abundance of things for man and beast, and evidence of kindly feeling existing between pastor and people, which is more to be desired than the mere material things of life. —Doylestown Intelligencer.

Reading.—Olivet Reformed congregation in Reading, Pa., of which Rev. H. Y. Stoner is pastor, will dedicate its church on Sunday, the 15th next. On last Sunday the first exercises in the new church were held by the Sunday school. This mission grew out of a Union Sunday-school organized in North Reading, August 14th, 1880. Wm. B. Gross was then chosen superintendent. Two years ago it was transferred to the care of the First Reformed church, of which Rev. H. Mosser is pastor. John Shepp is the present superintendent. The lot upon which the church stands was donated by Mrs. D. R. Althouse.



If Little Babies

Could Write Letters

WHAT a host of grateful testimonials the proprietors of the Cuticura Remedies would receive. How their little hearts would overflow in ink. They know what they have suffered from itching and burning eczemas and other itching, scaly, blotchy, and pimply skin and scalp diseases before the Cuticura Remedies were applied. Parents, are you doing right by your little ones to delay a moment longer the use of these great skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies? Everything about the

CUTICURA

Remedies invites the confidence of parents. They are absolutely pure, and may be used on the youngest infants. They are agreeable to the most sensitive. They afford instant relief in the severest forms of agonizing, itching, and burning skin and scalp diseases, and are by far the most economical (because so speedy) of all similar remedies. There can be no doubt that they daily perform more great cures than all other skin and blood remedies combined. Mothers, nurses, and children are among their warmest friends.

"ALL ABOUT THE BLOOD, SKIN, SCALP, AND HAIR" mailed free to any address, 64 pages, 300 Diseases, 50 Illustrations, 100 Testimonials. A book of priceless value to mothers, affording information not obtainable elsewhere.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, the Great Skin Cure, 50c.; CUTICURA SOAP, an Exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, 25c.; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the greatest of Blood Purifiers and Humor Remedies, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Boston.

Pimples, Blackheads, red, rough, and oily skin and ' nds prevented and cured by that greatest of all Skin Purifiers and Beautifiers, the celebrated Cuticura Soap. For the prevention of facial blemishes, and for giving a brilliancy and freshness to the complexion, Cuticura Soap is incomparably superior to all other skin and complexion soaps, while rivalling in delicacy and surpassing in purity the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only medicated toilet soap, and the only preventive of clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blotches, and blackheads. Sale greater than the combined sale of all other skin soaps.

—On the afternoon of the 8th inst., the corner-stone of Faith Reformed Mission was laid with appropriate ceremonies. This mission is under the auspices of the Second church, whose pastors, Revs. C. F. McCauley, D.D., and Rufus W. Miller, conducted the services, assisted by other ministers of our church.

Tulpehocken.—The congregations composing the Tulpehocken charge, Lebanon county, Pa., now under the pastoral charge of Rev. H. J. Welker, have agreed to divide and form two charges. A special meeting of Lebanon Classis will be held on the 12th inst., for the purpose of confirming this action and making arrangements for carrying out the same. This has been long desired by those who are aware of the disadvantages to pastor and people to have so large charges as this has been, and beyond a doubt greater pragress will mark the future of the two new charges. To the earnest efforts of the present pastor is this division largely due.

Irwin.—Rev. D. A. Souders has accepted a called to Irwin, Westmoreland county, Pa., and will remove there in a short time.

Philadelphia.—At the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association action was taken to secure a Conference of the Association with representatives from the various congregations of the Reformed churches, with a view of forming a Layman's Missionary Society in the interest of church extension in this city.

Action was also taken protesting against any change in the existing laws of the Commonwealth, whereby all worldly employment is made unlawful on the first day of the week, works of necessity and charity excepted. Rev. Dr. James Crawford and Rev. Charles H. Coon were appointed to represent the Association in the Legislature when action is taken upon the proposed bill.

Bedford.—The tenth anniversary of the Missionary Society of the Reformed congregation of Bedford, Pa., was held in the church on January 25th, 1891. Rev. Dr. S. Z. Beam, of St. Clairsville, delivered an address both at the morning and evening sessions. A beautiful service, consisting of songs, anthems, and responsive readings, was rendered by the choir and Sunday-school. A collection amounting to $25.98 was lifted.

At the regular meeting of the society on January 28th the treasurer was requested to send $30 to the Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions.

St. Thomas.—Trinity, Rev. J. F. Mackley, pastor. Services were held on Christmas evening. The Sunday-school used "Immanuel." Every pupil received their usual treat. The pastor was presented with a handsome cutter. The church was tastefully decorated.

—Keefer's.—Zion's. Services were held on Christmas eve. A program arranged by Miss Mamie Keefer was very successfully rendered. The church was neatly decorated. The pupils received the usual gifts.

Newburg.—Licentiate Joseph W. Bell has accepted a call to Newburg, Pa.

Butler.—A new congregation has been organized in Butler, Pa., and Rev. R. E. Crum has been called as its pastor.

VIRGINIA.

Woodstock.—Sunday afternoon, January 18th, 1891, a hearty welcome was extended to Rev. A. K. Kline and wife, in the Reformed church at Woodstock, by the different congregations and the people of the place. Rev. Ball of the M. E. church, delivered the address of welcome. He said, "We are thankful to the Lord for your and your wife's safe return from your long journey to Europe and the Holy Land." In a happy mood the pastor responded at considerable length. It was a happy meeting.

FOR NERVOUS HEADACHE
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. F. A. ROBERTS, Waterville, Me., says: "I have found it of great benefit in nervous headache, dyspepsia and neuralgia. I think it is giving great satisfaction where it is thoroughly tried."

A GOLDEN WEDDING.

The Manor Valley News contains a lengthy account of the golden wedding of Hezekiah Wangaman and wife which was celebrated at their residence, near Harrison City, Westmoreland Co., Pa., on Wednesday, January 7th, last. We gather the following from it.

Hezekiah Wangaman and Catharine Lauffer were married in 1841. Thirteen children, nine sons and three daughters of whom are living. These and their families came from different parts of the county to the old homestead on the day named to rejoice with one another in a happy reunion.

At 11 o'clock A.M., the family and guests gathered together, to listen to a carefully prepared history of their ancestry, after which the pastor, Rev. A. E. Truxal read a Scripture lesson and offered prayer. The dinner followed. At one table sat the aged parents, their twelve children and the pastor.

A number of handsome and valuable presents were received by the aged couple one of which was a gold watch and chain for the father and several gold-lined pieces of silver were for the mother from their childaen. The occasion was a pleasant and joyous one. The wish of all present was that they in whose honor they were gathered together might live yet many years to enjoy in quietness and peace the fruits of their labors and cares of the days past and gone.

The history of the Wangaman family can only be traced to a family that lived in Adams Co. Pa., the latter part of the last century. In this family were two sons, John and Peter. The latter became the head of the Wangamans now living in Adams, Bedford, Somerset and Fayette Counties, and in Maryland. John and his wife Elizabeth emigrated to Westmoreland County, Pa., in 1804. They had seven children. Of these, Peter, the second, was married to Rachel Walton. They raised eleven children. The seventh of these was Hezekiah. He was married by Rev. Dr. Hacke to Catharine Lauffer in 1841. Catharine Lauffer was one of the old staid families of Westmoreland County, Pa.

The Lauffer family came from Northampton County, Pa. Christopher Lauffer was born in Lehigh township of that county in 1769. He became the father of five sons. Towards the close of the century he with his wife Susanne and four sons moved to Westmoreland County and settled on the Little Sewickly, near the Fisher settlement. The son Peter, who remained east, became the head of the Lauffer family in and about Allentown, Pa. Of the four sons in Westmoreland County, John, in 1806, was married and settled on a farm near the site of the present Harrison City, Pa. He was married twice, the first wife being a Mary Kemerer. The second the Widow Fritchman. He was the father of fourteen children, six of whom are still living. The thirteenth of these was Catharine, who was married to Hezekiah Wangaman. After Hezekiah's marriage he moved on his father in-law's farm and lived there as a renter for thirteen years. At his father-in-law's death in 1851, he purchased it. By industry and economy they have paid for it and greatly improved it. Mrs. Wangaman has lived all her life at the same place and she and husband have therefore spent the entire years of their married life on the same farm.

A MORBID SENTIMENT.

"'Tis a misery to be born, a pain to live, a trouble to die." Rather a dark picture of the world that many of us find so alluring. We think a course of the Compound Oxygen Treatment would have caused the writer to take a more cheerful and hopeful view of things. But read for yourself what Compound Oxygen has done for patients who found it a "pain to live," but up to the present, have been spared the "trouble of dying:"

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"I have this to say: "Your Compound Oxygen Treatment has made me a new man. I wish that it was in my power to tell suffering humanity far and near, of its good results." ROBT. C. ARMSTRONG, Winona P. O., Jefferson Co., Ky. DRS. STARKEY & PALEN: "I am alive yet, thanks to your Compound Oxygen Treatment. I can cheerfully recommend it to any one suffering from pulmonary diseases, insomnia, indigestion and loss of appetite." C. E. ELY, Lerado, Kans., Oct., 18, 1888.

We have given a few testimonials above, but our brochure and our quarterly, "Health and Life" are full of them. Send for them by all means. There is evidence enough to convince the most "refractory jury" in the world. Sent free. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

Acknowledgments.

Bethany Orphans' Home, Womelsdorf, Pa.

Christmas Offerings received from January 7th to February 2d, 1891.

From S S Smith, Greenbrier, Pa, 7.00, Harry, Chas E. and Ella Smith, each 1.00,	$10 00
Per Rev U H Heilman, treas Maryland Cl, from 3rd Ref ch, Baltimore, Rev C Clever, DD, 39.00, Christ ch, do, Rev A M Schmidt, 7.75, Middletown chge, Rev T F Hoffmeier, 18.43, Evan Ref ch, Frederick, Rev E R Eschbach, DD, Christmas alms, 50.00,	115 18
From Christ ch, Hagerstown, and Salem's cong, per Jno Gassman, treas,	15 25
St Paul's Ref ch, Lancaster, Pa, per Daniel H Heitshu, treas,	20 48
Lewistown Union S S, per J I Yost,	3 19
Per Rev M H Dieffenderfer, treas Lehigh Cl, from Egypt chge, Rev W R Hofford, DD, 35.50, St John's cong, Allentomn, Rev S G Wagner, DD, 73.31, Christ cong, Allentown, Rev M H Dieffenderfer, 26.06,	134 87
From St John's Ref ch S S of Catawissa, per J S Shuman,	5 00
Zion's Ref S S, Allentown, Rev T J Hacker, 51.52, Pastor's Helpers, 35.50, per William R Lawfer,	87 02
From Sunbury Ref S S, per Geo Hill, Esq, treas E Susq Cl,	25 00
Martinsburg, W Va, cong, per Rev J A Hoffheins, DD, 6 A M, Christmas coll,	8 37
Per Rev J David Miller, treas Carlisle Cl, from Duncannon S S, 6.50, Marysville S S, 15.00, St Peter's Ref S S, Perry Co, Landisburg chge, 8.00,	29 50
From Christian George, Hazleton, Pa,	100 00
Shiloh Ref ch and S S of Danville, Pa, per Rev J A Peters, DD,	42 24
Per Rev T J Barkley, treas Gettysburg Cl, from Cashtown charge, Rev A C Geary, pastor, 15.25, Gettysburg charge, Rev T J Barkley, 23.82,	39 07
From Ladies' Sewing Circle of Salem's Ref ch, Allentown, per Rev M H Dieffenderfer, treas Lehigh Cl,	10 00
Per Rev S R Bridenbaugh, Norristown, Pa, from Church of the Ascension, 78,37, Mission S S, do, 18.42, District Sunday-school Convention, 1.14,	97 93
From 1st Ref ch, S Bethlehem, per Rev N Z Snyder,	10 00
St Peter's Ref cong and S S, South Easton, Rev J W Miller,	15 05
Robesonia, additional,	75
Friend of Home, Ballietsville, Pa,	1 00
Bernville chge, additional, Rev T C Leinbach,	12 70
St John's Ref S S, Orwigsburg, Rev George B Walbert, pastor,	8 50
Infant S S, Heidelberg Ref ch, Phila, Mrs I E Bleim, teacher,	17 00
Trinity Ref S S, Norristown, Pa, Rev J B Henry, pastor,	17 30
Mrs C K Small, Lancaster, Pa,	50 00
Mrs Nathan F Martz, Sunbury,	5 00
Wentz's Ref S S, Rev S M K Huber, pastor,	32 00
Mrs Sarah Yundt, Allentown,	1 00
Dryland cong, Northampton Co,	13 07
Zion's Ref S S, Chambersburg, additional,	3 25
Per Rev T A Huber, Weissport, Pa,	3 85
Quarryville Ref S S, per Mrs J G P Raub,	10 00
Trinity S S, Sinking Spring, Rev J W Kershner,	10 00
Ref S S, Burkettsville, Md, Rev J M Mickley,	10 50
Ladies' Aid and Miss Soc, Topton, Pa,	5 00
Trinity Ref cong and S S, Pottsville, Rev A R Bartholomew,	50 00
St Paul's Mem Ref cong and S S, Reading, Pa, Rev B Bausman, DD,	110 00
Arendtsville chge, Rev B F Bausman, pastor,	21 90
Per Mrs D C Tobias, Lititz, Pa,	8 62
Emanuel's Ref cong and S S, Hanover, Pa, Rev J C Bowman,	100 00
Bernville chge, Rev T C Leinbach,	37 09
Infant class, St Luke's S S, Trappe, Pa, per Mrs A H Royer,	5 00
Mrs E C Ermentrout, Reading, Pa, per Rev B Bausman, DD,	5 00
Mt Pleasant Ref S S, Md, Rev A Shulenberger, pastor,	8 00
Moore Township chge, Northampton Co, Pa, Rev J E Smith, pastor,	8 06
Christ ch S S, Northampton county, Rev S P Mauger,	16 00
Kimberton Ref S S, Rev J A Mertz,	12 00
Mifflinburg Ref S S, Rev L D Steckel,	17 63
St John's Ref S S, Shamokin, Pa,	21 25
Salem's Reformed cong, Harrisburg, Rev E N Kremer, Infant Sunday-school, 10.00, Main department, 40.00,	50 00
Trinity Ref S S, Pottstown, Rev L K Evans,	50 00
English Bible Class, Spinnersville, Pa, Rev C Z Weiser,	11 81
Friedensburg Ref cong, Rev I S Stahr,	14 35
David's Ref S S, Killinger, Pa, Rev T Derr, pastor,	2 92
St John's Ref S S, Phœnixville, Pa, Rev F C Yost,	17 00
Mrs Mary Weaver, Harrisburg, Pa,	10 00
Meyerstown Ref S S, additional,	25
2d Ref S S, Reading, Pa, Rev C F McCauley, DD, annual contribution,	60 00
Miss Sallie Snyder, Reading, Pa,	2 00
St Mark's cong, Easton, Pa, Rev T O Stem, pastor, 7.00, Infant department S S, 4.00, Main school, 24.81,	35 81
Rev D B Shuey and family, Emporia, Kansas, annual,	5 00
Zion's Ref S S, Chambersburg, Pa, Rev W C Cremer,	20 00
Manheim chge, Rev D W Albright, pastor,	20 00
Towamensing charge, Rev T A Huber, pastor,	11 20
Per Jacob K Funck, treas Lebanon Cl, from Swatara chge, Rev J A Wickert, 20.00, St Mark's S S, Lebanon, Rev O P Stechel, 16.00, St John's S S, do, Rev Geo B Resser, 45.00, First S S, do, Rev D E Klopp, DD, for Building Fund, 30.00, do, Sustenance, 50.00,	161 00
From "A Friend." Schwenksville, Pa,	5 00
Miss Rachel F Faus, Bloomsburg, Pa, per Rev Wm T Auman,	2 00
S S of Grace Mission, Washington, D C, per Jas B Albright, treas,	15 00
Zion S S, per Rev A Houtz, pastor,	2 05
Geo W Guldin, Dorance, Luzerne Co, Pa,	5 00
Ref church, New Providence, Pa, per Rev J M Souder,	12 00
St Paul's S S, Overton, Pa, per Miss Manda Musselman, sec,	2 22
Uniontown chge, per Geo Hill, Esq, treas E Susq Cl,	20 00
Trinity S S, Watsontown, Pa, Rev Geo S Sorber, per Mahlon Metzger, treas,	12 14
From Zion's Ref ch, Hagerstown, Md, Rev J S Kieffer, DD, pastor, per Rev U H Heilman, treas Md Cl,	20 00
From Mt Bethel cong, Nittany Valley chge, per Knecht Bros,	5 44
Emmanuel's S S, Bridesburg, Philada, Rev B Forster,	5 00
Trinity Mission S S, Altoona, Pa, per Rev F A Rupley, DD, treas Juniata Cl,	5 59
Per Rev W A Haas, treas E Susq Cl, from St John's Ref ch, at Williamsport, 8.50, St John's, St Paul's churches and Christ Ref S S, Beaver Springs chge, 7.13, Ref S S at Aaronsburg, 5.00,	20 63
Bernville chge, additional, Rev T C Leinbach,	5 50
Emanuel's Ref S S, Hazleton, Rev A Noll,	15 56
Grace Ref S S, Easton, Rev C W Levan,	5 00
Total,	$2019 09

Thankfully received,
C. G. GROSS, Treasurer.
3716 Haverford Ave., Phila., Pa.

GOODS RECEIVED.

Mrs James T Reber, Reading, paid for making boys' pants $20.20.

Mrs S A Butz, Allentown, one piece of calico.

Chas H Small, Harrisburg, one year's subscription to "Youth's Companion."

William Servant, Circle of King's Daughters, 3rd Ref ch, Baltimore, one quilt.

Class No 13, Amity Ref S S, Meyersdale, Pa, quilt and aprons.

Reformed and Lutheran Sewing Society, Emaus, Pa, 3 quilts, calico, thread, etc.

Thankfully received,
THOMAS M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

If You Have

No appetite, Indigestion, Flatulence, Sick Headache, "all run down," losing flesh, you will find the remedy you need. They tone up the weak stomach and build up the flagging energies. Sufferers from mental or physical overwook will find relief from them. Nicely sugar coated.

Tutt's Pills

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

SAMPLE BOTTLE
PERSIAN CORN CURE
FREE
BEST IN THE WORLD
ENCLOSE 5¢ FOR MAIL'G
S. COHN & BRO 271 GRAND ST. NEW YORK

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

BEECHAM'S PILLS
PAINLESS. EFFECTUAL.
WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.
For BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS

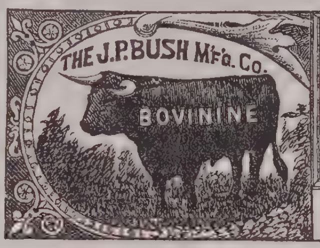
Such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Fullness and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness, and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c.

THE FIRST DOSE WILL GIVE RELIEF IN TWENTY MINUTES.
BEECHAM'S PILLS TAKEN AS DIRECTED RESTORE FEMALES TO COMPLETE HEALTH.

For Sick Headache, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Constipation, Disordered Liver, etc.,

they ACT LIKE MAGIC, Strengthening the muscular System, restoring long-lost Complexion, bringing back the keen edge of appetite, and arousing with the ROSEBUD OF HEALTH the whole physical energy of the human frame. One of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is that BEECHAM'S PILLS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE OF ANY PROPRIETARY MEDICINE IN THE WORLD.

Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England. Sold by Druggists generally. B. F. ALLEN CO., 365 and 367 Canal St., New York, Sole Agents for the United States, who (if your druggist does not keep them) WILL MAIL BEECHAM'S PILLS on RECEIPT of PRICE, 25cts. A BOX. (MENTION THIS PAPER.)



THE J.P. BUSH Mf'g. Co.
BOVININE

BOVININE
A CONDENSED FOOD

A SEVERE ATTACK OF INFLUENZA, or "LA GRIPPE"

Always leaves the system in a Weak and Exhausted Condition. -BOVININE- The TONIC and NUTRIENT, will alleviate the feeling of lassitude and depression and tone up both body and mind to their normal state. Ask your Physician about it. C. M. HURLBURT, M. D., of South Dennis, Mass., writes: "I am "convinced that for a person requiring a gentle stimulant, combined "with food of a highly nutritive quality, I have never found an article "so eminently fitted to fill that place as your BOVININE.

For a Disordered Liver use BEECHAM'S PILLS.

The squadron of evolution arrived at New Orleans yesterday.

Go and do likewise. If your whiskers are grizzly and unbecoming use Buckingham's Dye and they will look as when you were younger.

While Bernard A. Stuckenberg was returning to his home near San Antonio, Texas, Sunday night, he was thrown out of his carriage and was dragged to death.

Did you ever go within a mile of a soap factory? If so you know what material they make soap of. Dobbins' Electric Soap factory is as free from odor as a chair factory. Try it once. Ask your grocer for it. Take no imitation.

Naturally, as wealth increases, the demand for finer grades of wool will increase. There is no profit in growing poor wool any how.

COUGHS AND COLDS.

Those who are suffering from Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Soar Throat, etc., should try BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES, a simple and effective remedy. They contain nothing injurious, and may be used at all times with perfect safety.

LARGE or small investors will be interested in the advertisement of Blair & Co., bankers, 10 Wall Street, New York, which appears in another column of this paper. Mr. John I. Blair, of Blairstown, N. J., the senior member of the firm, has a national reputation as one of the wealthy men whose money is bestowed with liberality for good work. His munificent benefactions to Princeton College have aided largely in increasing that institution's opportunities for wider learning. Messrs. Blair & Co., offer many desirable investments paying good interest, and their control of them enables them to divide them in sums to suit all investors. It would be well for intending investors to get fuller particulars from these advertisers.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. Sold by druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

"SPECIAL" CLEARING SALE

FOR CHANGE OF PLANS.

Our Entire Stock of

English Clothing will be Closed Out At Half Value.

E. O. THOMPSON,
SPECIAL CLOTHIER AND IMPORTER,
1338 Chestnut Street.
(Opposite the Mint.)

CLINTON H. MENEELY BELL COMPANY,
TROY, N. Y. Manufacture a Superior Grade of
CHURCH CHIME PEAL AND SCHOOL BELLS

Best quality Bells for Churches, Chimes, Schools, etc. Fully warranted. Write for Prices. BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY. VAN DUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY,
BALTIMORE, MD.
Best quality Copper and Tin BELLS for Churches, Schools, &c.
Also CHIMES AND BELLS.
Price and terms free. Name this paper.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N.Y., Bells
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others.

RIGGS & BROTHER,
Branch Store, 1005 Walnut St., Phila
Ladies' 14-Carat Gold Watches, $25.
" 14-Carat filled case " 18.
Boys' Silver Watches, $7.00.
Watches and Clocks repaired.

400,000 The largest circulation of any periodical in the world. "The Phila. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies free. CURTIS PUB. CO., Phila., Pa.

ESTEY PIANOS. AND ORGANS

Over 200,000 ESTEY ORGANS are singing their own praises the world over, as the most reliable organ made for tone, durability and fine finish. The ESTEY PIANO is as thoroughly and carefully made and guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has. If you want a first-class Piano that is sure to please you buy an ESTEY. Lowest prices for cash, or on easy monthly payments.

ESTEY, BRUCE & CO. 18 N. Seventh St. Philadelphia, Pa.

KNABE PIANOS.

UNEQUALLED IN

Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.

BALTIMORE, 22 and 24 East Baltimore Street,
New York, 148 Fifth ave. Washington 817 Market Space

F. A. NORTH & Co., Sole Agents,
1308 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

JOHN I. BLAIR (Blairstown, N. J.).
DE WITT C. BLAIR. OLIVER C. EWART.
JAMES A. BLAIR. CLINTON L. BLAIR.

BLAIR & CO.,

BANKERS,

No. 10 WALL STREET.

MUNICIPAL BONDS.

WE OWN AND OFFER THE FOLLOWING:

$ 25,000	Plattsmouth City, Neb., 20 Year 6s.
25,000	Pueblo, Colorado, School District 5s.
87,000	Dallas, Texas, Gold 30 Year 5s.
200,000	Omaha, Nebraska, 20 Year 4½s.
200,000	Seattle, Washington, 20 Year 5s.
20,000	Butte, Montana, 10-20 Year 6s.
20 000	El Paso, Texas, 15-30 Year 6s.
20,000	Sandusky, Ohio, 5 Year 4½s.
25,000	Newark, Ohio, 6 Year 5s.
50,000	Muskegon, Mich., 23 Year 5s.
50,000	Washington County, Neb, 20 Year 5[illegible]
10,000	Salem, Oregon, School District 6s.
10,000	Polk County, Oregon, School Distric[illegible]

Further particulars on application in pe[illegible] by letter.

The bond department is in charge of M[illegible] L. Marston.

Dr A H Strickler] 14Feby90

DO NOT STAM[illegible]R.

OFFICE OF POSTMASTER-GEN., WAS[illegible] D. C.
Dear Sir: I know Mr. Edwin S. Joh[illegible] whom you write, and have knowledge of the fact that he has produced wonderful cures of stammering.
Yours most truly, JOHN WANAMAKER.

Send for 54-page pamphlet to E. S. JOHNSTON'S Institute, N. E. Cor. 11th and Spring Garden Sts Phila., Pa.

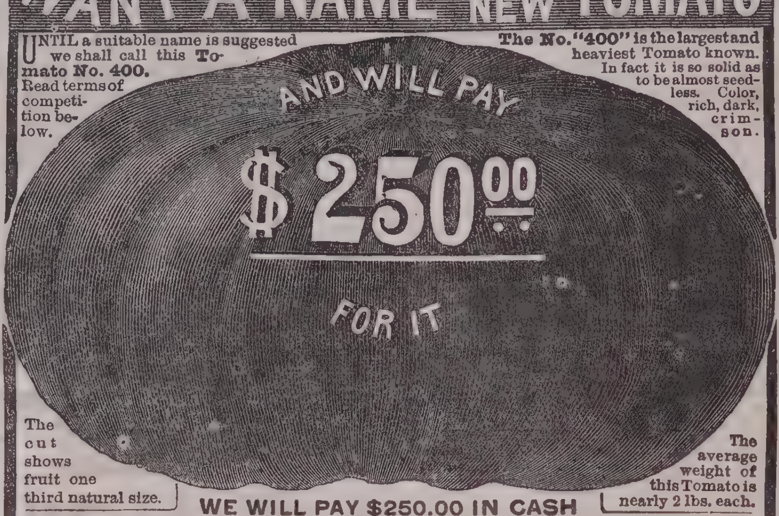
Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER ABSOLUTELY PURE

WE WANT A NAME FOR THIS NEW TOMATO

UNTIL a suitable name is suggested we shall call this Tomato No. 400. Read terms of competition below.

The No. "400" is the largest and heaviest Tomato known. In fact it is so solid as to be almost seedless. Color, rich, dark, crimson.



The cut shows fruit one third natural size.

The average weight of this Tomato is nearly 2 lbs. each.

WE WILL PAY $250.00 IN CASH

For the best name suggested for this New Tomato.

Purchasers are entitled to send in a name for each and every packet they buy. The names can be sent in any time before October 1st, 1891, and will be considered by a disinterested committee of three, who shall award the prize. Full directions for entering the names for competition given on every packet of seed.

Price of New Tomato No. "400," 25 cts. per packet, free by mail.

With every order for a packet or more, we will also send free our magnificent New Catalogue of "EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN" for 1891, (the value alone of which is 25 cts.), on condition that you will state where you saw this advertisement.

PETER HENDERSON & Co. 35 & 37 CORTLANDT ST. NEW YORK.

ESTABLISHED 1838 DREER'S SEEDS FRESH & RELIABLE

TRY DREER'S GARDEN SEEDS,

PLANTS, BULBS, and Requisites.
They are THE BEST at THE LOWEST PRICES.
DREER'S GARDEN CALENDAR for 1891 full of garden topics, mailed for 6c. postage. Abridged edition Free.
HENRY A DREER, 714 Chestnut Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Library of American Literature. By E. C. STEDMAN AND E. M. HUTCHINSON.

Highest authorities pronounce it the most valuable of recent publications. Should be in every American home and library. Illustrated specimen pages free. CHAS. L. WEBSTER & CO., 3 E. 14th St., NEW YORK.

AMERICAN FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

Office, Company's Building,
308 and 310 WALNUT STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

CASH CAPITAL,	$500,000.00
Reserve for Reinsurance and all other claims,	1,994,685.25
Surplus over all Liabilities,	455,708.82

TOTAL ASSETS, JAN. 1, 1891.
$2,950,394 07.

THOS H. MONTGOMERY, President.
CHAS. P. PEROT, Vice-President.
RICHARD MARIS, Secretary,
JAMES B. YOUNG, Actuary

DIRECTORS.

Thos. H. Montgomery, Alexander Biddle,
John T. Lewis, Charles P. Perot,
Israel Morris, Joseph E. Gillingham,
Pemberton S. Hutchinson, Samuel Welsh,
Chas. S. Whelen.

The PENN MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO. Issues all approved forms of contracts adapted to every legitimate need, at the lowest, sure rates. Send for rates, etc. Home Office, 921 Chestnut Street, Philada.

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE TRUST CO.

Capital paid up $1,500,000 Surplus over $100,000
DENVER, COLORADO.

First Mortgage Loans and Gold Debentures.

Loans fully guaranteed. Safe as Government Bonds. Philadelphia Office, Room 302 Bullitt Building, ROBT. FORESMAN, Manager.

BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA!

Delicious, nourishing, absoluely pure. Costing les than one cent a cup.

WOULD YOU LIKE

A NICE GARDEN?

If so, raise PERFECT VEGETABLES with POWELL'S SOLUBLE PHOSPHATES For GARDENS

Which are clean and inodorous. Put up in suitable quantities for small and large gardens. No trouble to use. Not expensive. For sale by general stores, Druggists and Seedsmen. An interesting circular telling how to make a good garden, sent Free. W. S. POWELL & CO. Chemical Fertilizer Mfrs. Baltimore, Md.

ARCHITECTURE

CHAS. W. BOLTON, 1510 Chestnut St., Phila

Sketches of Churches, Public Buildings, Dwellings, etc., furnished gratis. Then, if desired, drawings and specifications will be prepared for a reasonable consideration.

Over 350,000 acres of Choice Farm Lands Failure of crops never known. Best all-the year climate in the world. Soil adapted to all kinds of farming. Plenty of water. Low prices, and unusually liberal terms. C. E. SIMMONS, Land Com., C. & N. W. R'y, Chicago, Ill.

DEAFNESS & HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Tubular Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Successful when all remedies fail. Sold FREE only by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs

---

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address. T. A. Slocum. M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

SOWING & REAPING

By the Author of Gates Ajar, Song Treasury, etc.

Hymns, Tunes and Carols for the Sunday school, Prayer, Praise and Gospel Service. Over 15,000 copies sold in advance of publication. 176 pages; beautiful lithograph title, superior in typography, press work, paper, binding and contents. Single copies, 35 cts, post paid. By express, $3.60 per doz., $30 per 100.

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa

THIS BRIGHT NEW 1891

needs the brightest and best of music. The 2,000,000 readers of this ad. are all invited to provide themselves with music or music books from our complete and varied stock.

Send freely for lists and information.

SOME OF OUR NEWEST BOOKS.

SONGS OF IRELAND. $1.00. Choice, revised collection of very favorite songs. 66 songs. 144 pages.

POTTER'S RESPONSES AND SENTENCES. 75 cts.; $6.75 doz. A timely and good collection, which will be welcomed by many choirs. More than 50 short pieces, with a number of Glorias, Chants, &c.

PRAYER AND PRAISE. Cantata. Ballard. A good and easy cantata, for a Choir or Chorus. 50 cents; $4.50 per doz.

MASONIC ODE. Fithian. A new, most convenient book of easy and good music, perfectly fitted for the masonic ritual. Much needed. 60 cts.; $6 doz.

COMIC AND MINSTREL SONGS. $1.00. 46 merry songs, well calculated to make time pass cheerfully.

BANNER FOLIO. Violin and Piano. Winner. Large number of popular melodies, skilfully arranged for Violin, with Piano accompaniment. $1.00.

MANDOLIN AND PIANO DUETS. Winner. About 75 popular airs for Mandolin and Piano. $1.00.

Any Book mailed, post-paid, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY, Boston
J. E. DITSON & Co., 1228 Chestnut St., Phila.

If You Knew

Why these leading religious weekly papers had paid other advertisers, would not it be reason for you to try them?

1. They are read by prosperous families.
2. Their readers believe in them thoroughly.
3. They reach over 240,000 families every week.
4. They do not conflict in circulation, but cover different denominations.
5. Through them an advertiser is received with the confidence that attaches to a trusted friend.
6. They are read carefully in the quiet of the home circle, so that advertisements are sure to be seen and given attention.
7. The cost to advertise is low, and is arranged in a series of fixed discounts that gives to all advertisers equal service for the amount of their investment.

You Do Know

Whether you have anything to sell which prosperous families would buy if it were known to them. It is for you to tell them. It is for us to help you. We do it willingly. Ask for information.

THESE LEADING RELIGIOUS
HOME JOURNALS 14 BEST WEEKLIES

PHILADELPHIA.

The Sunday School Times	Undenominational
The Presbyterian	Presbyterian
The Lutheran Observer	Lutheran
The National Baptist	Baptist
The Christian Standard	Methodist
The Presbyterian Journal	Presbyterian
The Reformed Church Messenger	Reformed Church
The Episcopal Recorder	Reformed Episcopal
The Christian Instructor	United Presbyterian
The Christian Statesman	Christian Politics
The Lutheran	Lutheran
The Christian Recorder	African Methodist

BALTIMORE.

The Baltimore Baptist	Baptist
The Episcopal Methodist	Methodist

The advertising rate is low and fixed. We shall be glad to receive your request for fuller information.

The RELIGIOUS PRESS ASSOCIATION
(MUTUAL LIFE BUILDING),
CHESTNUT & TENTH STREETS,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

CONFESSIONS of a NUN, by Sister Agatha
A work of startling realism. Cl. $1; paper 50c
JORDAN BROS, Publishers, 211 N 9th St., Phila., Pa.

Reformed Church Messenger.

"AS THE TRUTH IS IN JESUS."

VOL. LIX.—NO. 8. PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, FERRUARY 19, 1891. WHOLE NO. 2928.

Entered at the Post-Office, Philadelphia, as second-class matter.

The Reformed Church Messenger.

ISSUED WEEKLY

IN THE INTERESTS OF THE

REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES

BY THE

REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE,

CHAS. G. FISHER, Proprietor,

Office: 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(For Terms, see page 11.)

Editorial Notes.

—Death has invaded the parsonage at Jeannette, Pa., and Rev. N. H. Skyles and wife mourn the departure of a lovely daughter. May the Lord comfort and sustain them in their bereavement!

—Rev. J. S. Stahr, Ph. D., President of Franklin and Marshall College, had the degree of Doctor of Divinity conferred upon him by the Board of Trustees of Lafayette College, Easton, Pa.

—An address before the Philomathean Literary Society at Frederick, Md., upon "The Aim of the Public Schools," by Rev. S. L. Whitmore of Adamstown, Md., has been published in pamphlet form. The author has our thanks for a copy.

—There are three practices in the Church fast growing into custom, which are in violation of the Constitution. As they increase in practice their effects become more damaging and demoralizing. This all law-abiding ones will see and admit.

—The one is that of students of theology frequently receiving, and, at times, accepting calls before they are through with their studies or licensed to preach. It is damaging to both students and vacant congregations. Besides, having received or accepted a call, virtually ties the hands of both the institutions and the Classes, in the examinations and the granting of licensure.

—The second is that of vacant congregations inviting a number of ministers to preach for them as supplies when in fact they are candidates, and selecting one from the number and voting for him as pastor. Very often this leads to division and dissatisfaction. Each supply has made his friends, and the result is a unanimous choice is not made. The Constitution clearly says, only one candidate can be before the congregation at a time and his case must be settled before another is invited or presented.

—The third is that ministers in many cases resign their charges and accept calls to others and remove from the one to the other before the relation has been dissolved by Classis. This makes the act of Classis a mere formality. A minister, in the spirit of the Constitution, should first ask permission of his Classis to resign and accept another call, and there may be good reasons for his not leaving his field, this the Classis ought to have the opportunity to pass upon. And more especially a minister receiving call to a new field should have his call passed upon and confirmed or not, before he removes to it and begins his labors there. With a minister removed and already at work in a new charge, it is too late for the Classis to exercise its full prerogative in the case.

—We simply hint at these. Should they run on of what use is the Constitution, what need is there for Church law? It is certainly better to be law-abiding and law-observing. Then much of disorder, embarrassment, and injury to the Church will be avoided. Ignorance will not excuse, since the law is written and every one promises to obey it.

—During the past week two who figured prominently in the late civil war, the one in the naval and the other in the military arm of the service, met their last enemy and surrendered to him. Admiral David Dixon Porter died at Washington, D. C., on the 13th inst., in the 78th year of his age, and General William Tecumseh Sherman, in New York City, on the 14th inst, in the 72d year of his age. Both had distinguished himself in the war and won for themselves the highest honors in the gift of the nation, and go to their graves amid the mourning of their countrymen who now enjoy the blessings that came from the severe lesson the God of nations taught it. The former was buried with military honors on the 16th inst., in the Arlington Cemetery, Washington, and the latter on the 19th inst in the cemetery at St. Louis.

—Quite a number of the friends of the MESSENGER are interesting themselves in its behalf and are engaged in efforts to secure subscribers for it. They have our thanks for the same. One writes us that an effort is to be made in their congregation and the consistory is to aid them in the work. Say what you will, if the church paper is not taken and read largely in a congregation it is the fault of the pastor. He does not speak of it to them and their duty to take and read it, nor urge it upon them and make an effort to get them to subscribe. The consequence is the people know nothing about it, and it is impossible for the publisher to reach them since he does not know them. In these days of the Church no pastor can do his whole duty if he neglects to see that his people are readers of the church paper. It is an ally he cannot afford to do without, if he would be a workman that needeth not be ashamed.

—We wish to leave no stone unturned to secure more subscribers for the MESSENGER. We have called upon pastors and consistories to appoint some active persons in their congregations to undertake the work. But few, few indeed have been the responses. This is strange, particularly when we distinctly declare we do not ask them to do the work without recompense. We now appeal to our lady readers to take up this most important work. Will not the lady member who reads this, undertake the canvass of her congregation and secure all the new subscribers possible? Write us for sample copies; distribute them and then follow up the work of getting such as have received them to subscribe. When writing for samples, inquire for terms and commission, all of which we will most cheerfully give. Let us see what the other side of the house can do?

—Why will pastors hold on to members that have removed beyond their charges into other places where there are congregations? What is there in numbers after all? It is not the quantity that counts; it is the quality. Better have one hundred true and faithful, active and godly members, than two hundred, the one hundred being only members in name and a greater part of them miles upon miles away, doing nothing for themselves or the Church. Better dismiss them to the congregation of the place in which they reside, and then they will have a church home and be active in it. With their membership still at the place they last resided, they are dead branches, and none are to blame more for their being in such a lifeless, do-less condition than the pastor out of whose bounds they have gone. Missions in cities and large towns often suffer or drag out a lingering existence, just for the reason that members holding their membership at other places are not thus transferred. Those that encourage such conduct are not doing what they could to extend the Church they say they love and in whose behalf they labor.

—Chief Justice Blechley, of Georgia, recently gave a decision to the effect that a congregation that fails to pay its pastor's salary should be made to do so, even though it be necessary to sell the church-building and site in order to raise the money for that purpose. He says:

> "If any debt ought to be paid, it is one contracted for the health of souls—for pious ministrations and holding services. If any class of debtors ought to pay, as matter of moral as well as legal duty, the good people of a Christian church are that class. No church can have any higher obligation resting upon it than that of being just. * * * The law grants exemption of property to families, but none to private corporations or collective bodies, lay or ecclesiastical. These must pay their debts if they can. All their property, legal and equitable, is subject. We think a Court may well constrain this church to do justice. In contemplation of law, justice is not only a cardinal but the pontifical virtue. It is certainly an energetic measure to sell the church to pay the preacher, nor would it be allowable to do so if other means of satisfying the debt were within reach."

—An Episcopal paper has the following sensible words to say about what is become so common in the Church:

> "Booming.—It is better to worship in a plain church free from debt, with all expenses honestly paid by out-and-out Christian giving and self-denial, than to rejoice in a sumptuous structure, a big debt, and fairs, festivals, raffles, and other scandals wherewith to pay the incubus off. It is better for the Church and for souls, to present a handful of candidates thoroughly instructed in the Catholic Faith, than two or more railfulls gathered up haphazard and presented to the bishop by a rector who has hardly gained a speaking acquaintance with most of them."

Poetry.

LENTEN LYRICS.

BY REV. WM. AUGUSTUS WHITE.

Learn of Lent to watch and pray,
Let thy foot stand right to-day;
Holy vigils constant keep,
O'er thy past transgressions weep;
Cast the idle world aside,
Come and with the Lord abide.

Learn of Lent, our tears and sighs
Bring a blessing from the skies;
Purple garb 'tis meet to wear,
Jesus' cross and shame we share;
While in humble posture bent,
We our wicked ways repent.

Learn of Lent, in patient love
Fix thy soul on things above;
Soon the cares and pains of earth
Turn to gloom its cheer and mirth;
Sacred joy alone shall last,
With no dreary shade o'ercast.

Learn of Lent, at Jesus feet,
Listen to His precepts sweet;
Hear and heed His gentle voice,
Make His loving rule thy choice;
Then shall this our fast be blest,
Life and Lent bring endless rest.

Life is Lent; its joyous days
Come and go like Sabbath rays;
Long the vigil we must keep,
While in anguish oft we weep,
Waiting for the Easter light,
Which shall change our faith to sight.

Life is Lent; its tender ties
Bide with bitter memories;
Broken vows and loved ones lost,
Heart and bark by tempests tost,
Billows dark upon the main;
When shall morning break again!

Life is Lent; O! use it well;
Blest the secret, silent spell,
That our thoughtful moments bear;
Spirit watch and earnest prayer;
These are better things than mirth,
Binding down the soul to earth.

Child of God, repent to-day;
Cast not yet the cross away;
Hold thy life in sweet content,
Free from gloom and merriment;
Waiting for that Easter light,
Which shall change our faith to sight.

—Standard of the Cross and the Church.

Communications.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A CONFESSION WHICH IS A DELUSION.

We quote from an Episcopal paper the following "Extract from Bishop Whitehead's Address at his last Diocesan Convention at Pittsburgh:"

> "There has been lately made a most earnest appeal from our brethren in McKean county, asking that something may be done for the retention of the multitudes of Swedes within this Church, where for many reasons, they rightly belong. I am told that there are ten thousand of them in McKean county alone, and if it were possible to send them one of their own countrymen in Holy Orders, multitudes of them could be brought into communion with the Church. They will not mix with other congregations, nor give up their own language in divine worship. It is thought that some money can be raised amongst the church people in that neighborhood, and surely there are laymen and congregations in the diocese who would be interested in such a movement, and give special offerings for at least a year or two towards such a work. Many of these Swedes are now holding influential positions in our towns, and are rapidly increasing in wealth and numbers."

The paragraph does not concern us in the Reformed Church directly, but indirectly it does. It answers the purpose of an illustration of wide application. The Swedes spoken of, because they are Swedes, do not know themselves as Episcopalians, nor have they ever been in any sense members of the Anglo Catholic Church, as Episcopalians delight to call their denomination. They are simply Lutherans; and that is what they almost to a man would claim to be if asked the question.

Yet this Episcopal bishop says with apparent sincerity: "There has been lately made a most earnest appeal from our brethren in McKean county, asking that something may be done for the retention of the multitudes of Swedes within this Church, where for many reasons they rightfully belong." One might justly ask, How can there be a "retention" of these people in a Church of which they have never been members, and how can "they rightly belong" to a denomination with whose faith as such they are not in accord and under whose authority they have never come? The claim is made, however, as though there could be no doubt about it, and that by sensible people. Surely it is a very strange thing, and how can we account for it?

At the bottom of it lies a confusion of which both English and American Protestantism have become largely possessed. It is a confusion that implies, and carries with it, a reversal of the conception which all Protestantism had of itself for more than three hundred years from its origin onward. Distinctions were made on the line of doctrine, of confessional faith, having its influence on the whole scope of Christian life. The Reformation had its beginning in Christian doctrine, and in the re-assertion of the Christian faith according to the word of God. The appeal to the nations was made on this basis. And it was grandly successful, as we all know. Church history has been written, by all authorities worth quoting, on this line, and it could be written on no other, because it had its development on this, and on no other, line.

The confusion of which we have spoken manifests itself by the attempt of large sections of both English and American Protestantism to break with history on this point, both as to fact and as to record. The new movement proposes to shift distinctions from doctrine and faith as fundamental, to forms of government as fundamental. The cry is in that direction, loud and widespread. Many are carried along by it without stopping to do some thinking for themselves. Think of Luther, Zwingli, Calvin, standing up in the presence of Christendom and making the burden of their plea some one or other form of Church government! To state the case is to stamp it with absurdity. Everybody knows that they did not do it, and if they had done it there would have been no Reformation worth mention, and their names would have been long since forgotten.

We are here confronted with the same tendency which, as a matter of fact, had so much to do in obstructing and weakening the development of free Christian life and energies in the centuries succeeding the great ecumenical councils. There was too much government then; and the tendency to which we refer is to have too much government now. The old Roman Republic went to pieces on that rock. It spread its authority over heterogeneous races and civilizations. It pushed the idea of its own form of government into the foreground, and sought to enforce it. The races and the civilizations proved to be too much for it. It went to wreck and ruin. Later on the Roman Church came to adopt the same mistaken policy, and the outcome was the Reformation of the sixteenth century. involving the luminous assertion of the right and power of the Christian doctrine and faith, present in the Scriptures, the great confessions, and the Christian consciousness, as superior to any form of Church government. There was a guide-post set up then, by the accumulated forces of history, which ought to point out the way for centuries to come.

And yet over in England and here in the United States we are in the presence of ideas, methods and policies, actively pressed, whose success would be substantially a repetition of the old mistake. The quotation at the head of this article is in point. The Swedes there referred to are of the Lutheran faith, and rather strictly so. But that does not appear to be of sufficient account to need mention. In their fatherland it so happened that they were under the ecclesiastical government of bishops, and hence the conclusion is drawn that "for many reasons they rightly belong" now to the Protestant Episcopal Church. "Many reasons" is a convenient phrase; the reason we have indicated is really the only one on which the claim is based.

In the application of the misconception some Christian bodies are aggressors, and others, necessarily, victims. The Reformed Church in the United States has been victim ever so often in the past, and from appearances will continue to be for an indefinite period in the future. It has suffered much in this way from without. The greater evil, however, that could befal it would be this: if it became a conscious and willing party to the confusion of fundamentals which we have described.

We have spoken of this confusion as a delusion. Such we conceive it to be. No array of respectable, learned, or pious defenders can change its character. Such people can only make it more dangerous, if it be a confusion which is a delusion. We think it runs into the face of all history as history has asserted itself. Its tendency is to eliminate the real fundamentals and set up in their place a make-believe fundamental. What is the faith? will become a minor, irrelevant question, comparatively. What form of government has your Church? will become the substantial question. Can any one fail to see where that would land us? WYOMING.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

LETTER NO. II.

My Dear Sisters: At the close of my first letter, I said that we are ready for the main question. We have already seen that the primary question is not one of your ability, nor yet of your Christianity as such, but simply this: "What is your position, according to the revealed will of God, as Christian Women?"

At the outset it is well to remember that as God is one, so His revelation is also one. It will not do, therefore, to take a Scripture passage here and another there to attempt to prove a preconceived opinion on this question. Much of the discussion, even in the MESSENGER, has been of this character. It reminds one of a certain Baptist minister in Indiana, who, after preaching a series of sermons on texts that seemed to him to teach Calvin's theory of predestination, turned around and preached another series on texts that seemed to him to teach the opposite or Arminian theory, and then left the whole matter to each hearer's judgment in the case. From Genesis to Revelation the Scriptures must teach the same thing on this or any other question. There is no confusion in the Book; there may be a good deal in the reader. What St. Paul says upon our subject can be nothing new even in principle, much less contradictory to anything previously revealed.

Let us begin, therefore, with the creation of woman, for here already we must find her position determined, both in her relation to God and to man. Her creation must necessarily be the fountain head of our knowledge of her position, for we can not conceive that God willed to create Eve without having the place she was to occupy in the world in view at the same time. This is true of the whole creation. Every creature of God in the very fact of its creation has its God-ordained place and sphere. The creature and its place belong together. One without the other were meaningless, if not impossible. The creature itself, if it could be rightly read, were sufficient revelation of its sphere and meaning in the world without the necessity of any after observation of its phenomena.

How much more easy, then, ought it to be to determine the position of both man and woman, when God, in so many words, at the time of their creation declared the purpose for which they were created. We read: "And God said, 'Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." "So God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him; male and female created He them." And again: "And the Lord God said, 'It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him a helpmeet for him.'"

Several things lie on the surface of these passages. The purpose for which God created man (including woman) was that he might image forth his Creator, and as such have dominion over the lower creation; that he was not to be merely God's representative to the lower creation in the capacity of a gardener and herdsman, but that his own kind was to be multiplied, and that in such multiplication he was not to cease to image forth the oneness of God in that the person to be brought into being was to be his helpmeet or asisstant. His assistant, however, not merely, as some hold, in the capacity of wife and the mother of his children. That view makes woman, indeed, an inferior being. Eve was to participate with Adam in the image of God, and to share his dominion over the lower creation. Only in such a way could the two be really one. The one passage shows us their relation to God and to the lower creation, the other shows their relation to each other. The one reveals their oneness, the other their difference. And this determines the position of both for all time.

I say for all time. For sin, though it degrades both the man and the woman and brings disharmony into their relations both to God and to each other, does not destroy either relation as determined in their creation. Neither does Christianity destroy them, though it ennobles man and woman and brings to them a more enduring harmony in their twofold relations, because such relation is grounded and established in the second Adam, the Lord from heaven. Only when He, the true Bridegroom, shall have perfected the Church, the true Bride, shall the sons and daughters of Adam and Eve cease to marry and to be given in marriage, or the fiat of her creation cease to make woman the helpmeet of man.

Seeing, then, that God has established an unalterable difference between husband and wife, or man and woman, let us try to understand the underlying basis and nature of this difference. In the first passage quoted above: "God said, 'Let us,'" etc., two things are clearly manifest—the oneness of the Godhead and the difference in the Persons. The words us, our image, our likeness, unmistakably indicate such a difference.

It is also very evident that this oneness of the Godhead and difference in the Persons are imaged in man, for without it man could not be the true image of God. The very language tells us this. Please observe the change from the singular to the plural in both cases.

The nature of the difference between Adam and Eve must depend, then, upon the nature of the difference in the Persons of the Godhead. Far be it from me to pretend to be wise beyond that which is written. I shall not attempt an explanation of the full nature of this difference. But what is of chief importance to us in the present discussion is clearly revealed to us in the Word, so that there is no need for speculation, nor any occasion to tread on forbidden ground.

In the recorded teaching of our Saviour there is frequent reference made by Him to the relation which exists between the Father and Him. The sum of this teaching is expressed in His two sayings: "I and my Father are one." "My Father is greater than I." There can be but one interpretation to this if we believe in the divinity of Christ and at the same time hold that there is but one God. And that is, that while the Father and the Son are one in essence, or being, sovereignty or headship belongs to the Father only. This sovereignty of the Father is often mentioned and always implied in the New Testament. A few quotations will answer here. "I came down from heaven not to do mine own will, but the will of Him that sent me." "All power is given to me in heaven and in earth." "When He saith, All things are put under Him, it is manifest that He is excepted which did put all things under Him."

And it is just this sovereignty of the Father that is imaged in man which makes him the head of the woman and constitutes the nature of the difference between them. And here is where the inspired Paul grounds his teaching in reference to this whole matter. "But I would have you know that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God."

What this headship of man involves in the way of determining the position of woman naturally claims our attention next.

Your Brother in Christ, N.

For the Reformed Church Messenger.

ZWINGLI AND LUTHER—THEIR RELATION TO EACH OTHER AND THEIR INFLUENCE.

III.

Conclusion.

In an age like that of the Reformation, when contests were raging on all sides and men apparently lost their bearing, it cannot be expected to find system and order; these had to come afterwards. It was a period of confusion, and it may perhaps not be fair to judge that age and that work by the present. One thing is sure, these men, the great actors in this stirring age were human, and their fallibility appears all along the way. Neither did they act at random. There are reasons why Luther denied in extreme and even violent language the freedom of the human will, "in order that he might assert the activity of God and man's absolute dependence upon Him." So on the part of Zwingle, his view of sin. "He did not accept the doctrine of original sin, as set forth by Augustine, maintaining a position similar to that of the Greek fathers, that misery, but not guilt attached to man in consequence of the fall." . . . "Zwingle seems to have shocked the religious sentiments of the German reformers, not only by his clear denial of the Latin view of original sin, but by his conception of the salvability of the heathen and his doctrine of the sacraments." All due regard must be had for these men, their early training, the circumstances surrounding them, the conditions as well as the positions which they were made to occupy. They were noble men, but were human. With the light they had they worked, and much of their work, for our age, would not be accepted. Take this as the closing part. "The following specimens of Luther's biblical criticism, were their source unknown, would appear to some like the destructive attacks of modern rationalists. In regard to the Pentateuch, Luther thought it a matter of indifference whether or not it was written by Moses. The Book of Kings he spoke of as excellent—a hundred times better than the Chronicles. Jeremiah, as a prophet, was much inferior to Isaiah. None of the discourses of the prophets were regularly committed to writing at the time, but were collected subsequently by their disciples and hearers, and thus the complete collection was formed. In the Gospel of St. Luke the Saviour's passion is best described; but the Gospel of St. John is the true, pure gospel, the chief of the gospels, because it contains the greatest portion of Christ's sayings, it is far preferable to the other gospels, 'the unique, tender, true, main gospel.' Even the Epistles of St. Paul are higher in authority than the Gospels of St. Matthew, St. Mark and St. Luke, for they deal with faith in Christ and how it justifies, while the latter are mainly occupied with His works and miracles. In a word, St. John's Gospel with St. Paul's Epistles, especially those to the Romans, Galatians and Ephesians, and also the First Epistles of St. John and St. Peter, these contain and teach all that is necessary to know, even if one were never to see any other books. Luther did not regard the Epistle to the Hebrews, nor that of St. James to be of apostolic origin, and the latter he characterized as an epistle of straw, with no trace of the gospel in it. He estimated very lightly the Epistle of St. Jude and thought it was a copy of the Second Epistle of St. Peter. He could detect no trace in the Book of Revelation of its having been inspired by the Holy Ghost. . . In harmony also with Luther's attitude towards Scripture was his estimate of miracles. They had, to his mind, a very subordinate value as evidence of the truths of Christ's teaching. 'External miracles,' he said, 'are the apples and nuts which God gave to the childish world as playthings; we no longer have need of them.'" Allen's Con. of Ch. Thought, pp. 285, 286.

"The idea of Deity in Zwingle's thought is that of a being whose indwelling life constitutes the essence and reality of all things, who is not only infinite wisdom but infinite love. The creation had its origin in the divine love; humanity was called into existence that it might rejoice in God. . . Man is born with the capacity to know and to possess God. His spirit, by its very nature, goes out to God. . . Hence revelation becomes part of the organic process of things—a living, actual, present process, whose results are not exclusively recorded in Scripture. In one sense the Bible is the Word of God, but in a higher sense the Word of God is a personal force stirring within the soul, speaking with supreme authority and constituting the standard by which the written letter of the book is to be criticised and judged. Hence Zwingle more than others among the reformers, recognized the traces of historic growth in the different parts of the Scripture. Luther's principle, that the Bible is essentially the mirror of devout experience, misled him more than once, into grave errors. Zwingle approaches the book with no anxiety about reconciling discrepancies. He expects to find there things which belong to a lower as well as a higher stage of spiritual development. But the Word of God has spoken not only in the Bible, but always and everywhere, wherever there is any knowledge of that which is good and true. Heathen writers, like Plato, Pliny and Seneca, have uttered truths under the inspiration of the revealing word." Allen, pp. 288, 289.

This whole history is intensely interesting, and must be so especially to the Reformed branch of this great, far-reaching movement. It clearly shows that the widest and deepest stream is found in this branch, that it carried in its bosom that free and independent spirit which culminated for us in our free institutions and the independence of the Church. All honor to the noble men, the heroes and martyrs "who died in the faith and now live with Him for evermore." May the Protestant Church remain true to her inherited birthright, and the Reformed, especially, prize this great inheritance coming to the people from the former ages, and see that they prove themselves worthy of it. S.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

FRANKLIN AND MARSHALL ALUMNI ASSOCIATION OF PHILADELPHIA.

(Published by request of the Executive Committee.)

Mr. President and Fellow Alumni: One year ago the Alumnus whom I now have the honor to salute as the presiding officer of this joyous reunion of the sons of Franklin and Marshall, favored us with a ringing speech on the importance of the practical demands which in all spheres of life are made on educated men. I thank him for that speech.

Recognizing the soundness of the principle that the symmetrical development and thorough discipline of our intellectual and moral powers is a good worthy of standing as its own end, you nevertheless laid stress on the proposition that educational culture in order to be complete must fit the student for active service, whether in the State or in the Church.

Permit me, Mr. President, to follow you in that line of thought this evening, not to supplement your speech, for that speech calls for no supplementation, but to carry out the sound principle which you brought to the front.

As regards the tone and end of higher education there is the possibility of error in two directions. Higher education, as we all are aware, may be supported and pursued for the purpose of gaining fame, political distinction or wealth. Then the curriculum of a college and the six or seven years which a young man devotes to the study of mathematics, Latin, Greek, philosophy, natural science, history and the like, are valued, not for their intrinsic worth, but chiefly as a means for the attainment of some end other and lower than education and culture. Such a conception of higher education is equivalent to an abuse of the human mind. Knowledge and intellectual discipline are appreciated because by knowledge and discipline men can manage more effectually to get property and enjoy the superficial and transient pleasures of our earthly life.

Those among us who have from time to time been emphasizing education for its own sake, have in view such a degrading conception of the value of disciplined intellect. As compared with gold and silver, houses and lands, as compared with fame or political preferment, man posesses a dignity which commands supreme regard. Next to the triune God, the grandest thing in the universe is human personality. The lofty sentiment of the great German philosopher, Kant, has often been quoted. Two things, he said, often filled him with wonder: the starry heavens above and the moral law within. I may add: the moral law within is mightier and more magnificent than the natural law above by which the stars move in their silent courses. Certainly there can be no two opinions on the abuse of personality. To develop and train persons, to unfold mind, to acquire knowledge, to search for truth and form character for any end lower than personality implies a total misconception of the value of a college curriculum and inverts the moral order of the world. As this false tendency has become a strong current and in some sections has gained ascendency in our practical age, there is a loud call to emphasize in opposition to this demoralizing sprit, the undoubted truth that man is his own end, and that the great purpose of training pursued in our higher institutions of learning is to cultivate, develop and perfect the genuine manhood of man.

There is, however, an opposite false tendency possible which we must not overlook. Holy Writ says: No man liveth unto himself. No individual as an individual is his own end. No class of men may justly have supreme regard to the class of which they are members. All men are members one of another. They are bound together as integral parts of the community and of the State by social ties, by links and bands of natural law, especially of moral and religious law, which makes every man in a high and noble sense the servant of his fellow-man.

The foundation principle of Christian civilization and of all true culture we have in the Old Testament truth, re-affirmed, unfolded and enlarged by Jesus Christ. Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart. There is no single proposition which approaches so nearly to being an expression of the whole truth concerning the Godhead as this brief sentence of the Apostle John: God is love. That man alone can stand erect and move with inspiration and freedom in all social relations, who seeks to make sincere response to this fundamental obligation.

But He who affirmed this foundation principle subjoined to it another of equal moral necessity. He says: The second is like unto it: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. The deep, broad basis of human life is love: love active in two essential directions, active toward God, active toward man. It may be said on the one hand, that if there be in the heart no love of God, there can be no true love of man. On the other hand, however, it may also be said: If there be in the heart no genuine love of man, the true love of God is wanting. For the love of God expresses itself with equal necessity in both directions: in worship, reverence and obedience toward God, and in respect for fellow-men, in the unselfish service for the good of my neighbor. If the divinely-ordained law of social life be devotion to the well-being of my neighbor, then certainly no principle less divine may underlie and govern all departments of higher education.

Higher education lends itself to the service of ends that live on its own high level. Education builds up men that men may build up their fellows. It aims to develop intellect, to cultivate moral strength, and above all to beget reverence for divine truth to the end that knowledge and morality and religion may become the common possession of an ever-widening circle of society, embracing high and low, rich and poor, whether Jew, Christian or pagan. The law of love is restive under the restraint of any artificial limitation. A man is man whether sitting on a throne or dwelling in a dug-out, whether he be a judge in the highest court or a hod-carrier. Personality has a dignity higher than the noblest animal, more sublime than the starry heavens, whether a man wears the ermine or is clothed in rags.

It is the office of higher education to open the eye of the soul to truth within no less than to truth without, to the superior excellence and grandeur of the moral world no less than to the beautiful and terrible phenomena of nature. And in the degree that education fulfills its twofold office, that is, in proportion that it sees in man in the education and culture of mind an end intrinsically good, higher and better than wealth or individual aggrandizement, and at the same time does not live only for the pleasures of knowledge or for the moral elevation of a given circle of man, but trains this circle to live and work in the service of our neighbor, so that all ranks and classes may be lifted up out of the mire of ignorance and wickedness, and become sharers of the blessings of a noble manhood;—in the degree that higher education respects its office in these two directions it fulfills its mission and lays just claim to hearty support.

Such practical energy, such a far-reaching scope, is worthy of man, worthy of cultured mind, worthy of liberal education. To serve man is to rule man. The devotion of love commands the devotion of love. The ideal Man humbled Himself in the service of His foes. When higher education lifts up the degraded and enriches the poor with culture, it dignifies itself. When the educated lawyer by pleading the cause of justice in lower and higher courts, accumulates money, be it much or little, he honors himself, he crowns his education with an unfading chaplet, when he uses silver and gold to strengthen and enlarge the power for good of the institutions of learning. The merchant, the banker, the physician, the teacher, the preacher of the Gospel; whoever can use the power of words, or have influence in society, or knows the law which says, it is better to give than to receive, or can give direction to the currents of social life, each and all glorify higher education when with cheerful mind and firm will they work together in building up Franklin and Marshall College.

Mr. President and fellow-Alumni, I congratulate you on this fifth re-union of the sons of our Alma Mater in the city of Philadelphia. That was a good thought, and it sprang up in a good mind, the thought which became the seed of this branch organization. Blessings on the tongue that first spoke the word which has bloomed into the inspiring fruitage which opens before our delighted eyes this evening. That word gave an impulse not only to the Alumni in Philadelphia and its environments, but it has gone beyond these limits. At least two other plants of the same sort have sprung up, one in western Pennsylvania, the other embracing southern Pennsylvania and Maryland and Virginia. Nor has the reproductive energy of that first living word been exhausted.

Mr. President and fellow-Alumni, I commend the practical life we have been living around this festive board. Who despises these palatable viands? Certainly, Mr. President, you do not. You have too much sound practical judgment for that. I also commend the practice of good speaking, some jocose and some grave, some very logical and some not quite so much, which has been greeting our ears this evening. Practice makes perfect. We shall all be better speakers after this banquet has ended.

And what is to be said of the Glee Club? Certainly, you, Mr. President, and I, and we all, have been lifted up by the harmonious volume of masculine voices which have been resounding in this hall. I congratulate the Club on the energy, perseverance and diligence with which they have been practicing in order to attain that degree of practical perfection of which we are all witnesses.

But we must not pause here. There is work to be done, much more work in the service of Franklin and Marshall. Where is the man who conceived the practical thought and first spoke the practical word of which this gathering and this practical good cheer is the outcome? Let him stand up and utter another practical word; let him tell us in clear, incisive speech of the work we have to do in honorable service for our Alma Mater. Let him propose some mode of effective organization by which we may succeed in putting up a building for Professor John B. Kieffer's beautiful, excellent and increasing library, or by which we may forward an additional professorship. Should we not have the chair of English Literature fully endowed?

Let that Alumnus, or let that circle of Alumni, who put into the soil of Philadelphia the seed of this Association, of this annual re-union, plant another seed, a mighty seed sui generis Why not sow that seed to-night? Sow it objectively and subjectively; sow it theoretically and practically? It will soon sprout in this rich soil of Philadelphia and eastern Pennsylvania; and when the fruit is ripe we shall sit down to a banqnet more satisfying than Hotel Bellevue ever spread before the sons of Franklin and Marshall.

EM'L. V. GERHART.

Theological Seminary, Feb. 6, 1891.

Missions.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE SYNOD OF THE UNITED CHURCH OF CHRIST IN JAPAN.

We beg to call the attention of the readers of the MESSENGER to the very entertaining account given below by Bro. Schneder of some doings of the Synod of the "Church of Christ in Japan," in the adoption of the Apostles' Creed, with a brief preface, as a Confession of Faith Other papers have announced the general fact, but Bro. Schneder has given the most detailed account of the proceedings we have seen. We would call attention to the prominent part taken, and accorded to the Bancho church of Tokio, in answer to whose petition the motion to adopt the Apostles' Creed as its Confession was made This is the congregation which was organized by our own Bro. Moore when he resided in Tokio.

S. N. CALLENDER. Secretary.

In the early part of December, there met in Tokyo one of the most notable religious gatherings in the history of Christianity in Japan. It was a special meeting of the Synod of the United Church of Christ in Japan. The Synod was called for the purpose of considering a new Constitution and Confession of Faith. When the United Church was organized, nearly fourteen years ago, the Constitution then adopted was regarded as only temporary; and the Westminster Confession and Shorter Catechism, the Heidelberg Catechism, and the Canons of the Synod of Dort, taken collectively, were adopted as the temporary Confession of Faith. But it has been felt for several years, that this temporary basis should give place to something better adapted to the peculiar needs of the Japanese Church. Hence in May of 1889, a Committee consisting of two missionaries and four leading Japanese pastors, was appointed to draw up a new Constitution, and to propose a new Creed or Confession of Faith. To consider the work of this Committee, the Synod met.

The Synod opened with an attendance of eighty-five members.

The Constitution presented by the Committee referred to above, was a brief one, but excellently wrought out, it being mainly the work of a missionary who has given much attention to the subject of church polity. As a Creed, the Committee proposed for adoptioa the newly revised Articles of Faith of the Presbyterian Church of England. The following was the language of the Committee in recommending this Creed: "Face to face with Buddhism and Confucianism, the United Church of Christ in Japan, requires a statement of doctrine especially suited to its own environment, and the preparation of such a Confession of Faith is a work not to be forgotten in the future. But from such a work the Committee shrinks, agreeing that the best service within its power, is the selection from among the various existing revisions, of one that on the whole may commend itself to the judgment of the Church. After careful consideration, it finally decided to recommend the Articles now before the Presbyterian Church of England for adoption."

Immediately after the regular business of Synod began, a motion was made and carried, to take up first the Articles of Faith. Then a petition from Bancho Church, which you will recognize as the one which Bro. Moore was instrumental in organizing, was read, asking that the Apostles' Creed be substituted for the Creed proposed by the Committee. Rev. Inagaki, the respected pastor of the First Church of Yokohama, (the oldest and largest in Japan) rose and made a motion that, in accordance with the request of the petition, the Apostles' Creed be adopted as the Creed of the United Church of Christ in Japan, sustaining his motion by a calm but long and forcible speech. He explained that he fully believed the Creed proposed by the Committee, and that he revered the Creeds which have hitherto constituted the Confession of the United Church, but he argued that there were points in the proposed Creed about which there was honest difference of opinion among true believers in Christ, and that such should not have laid upon them a Creed which they could not accept, if at all, only with mental reservations. He desired a short and simple Creed which could be universally accepted by all who believe in Jesus Christ. He believed that the Japanese Church could not make a full and detailed Creed truly its own by merely adopting it ready-made. But that such a Creed had to be the outgrowth of the Church's own history and life; and for the Church to be under a Creed not fully its own he considered unwise. He also believed that the adoption of the Apostles' Creed only would leave the way open for further union with other Christian bodies in Japan. He was opposed to building a wall of non-essentials around the United Church.

Rev. Inagaki's motion and speech were followed by the most tremendous storm of discussion I have yet heard. It lasted for two days and a half. The opposition to the motion was strong and decided. Some of the Japanese brethren and a number of the missionaries used all their powers of eloquence and persuasion to avert the result they feared. Some of the older missionaries warned and plead. But at the end of the first day it was already apparent that the motion would likely command the necessary two-thirds vote. Still even the strongest advocates of the motion were loath to adopt a Creed for which the Synod could not vote unanimously, and consequently during the second day, compromise was in the air. Varions futile efforts were made. Finally several missionaries and native brethren united privately in an effort to frame some brief statement of essential doctrines in addition to the Apostles' Creed. On the morning of the third day, the following preamble was offerred, and after a half day's discussion adopted:

"The Lord Jesus Christ, whom we adore as God, the only begotten Son of God, for us men and for our salvation became man and suffered. For the sake of His perfect sacrifice for sin, he who is in Him by faith, is pardoned and accounted righteous; and faith in Him working by love purifies the heart. The Holy Spirit, who with the Father and the Son is worshipped and glorified, reveal Jesus Christ to the soul; and without His grace man being dead in sin cannot enter the kingdom of God. By Him were the prophets and Apostles, and holy men of old inspired; and He speaking in the Scripture of the Old and New Testaments, is the supreme and infallible Judge in all matters of faith and living. From these Holy Scriptures the Church drew its Confession; and we holding the faith once delivered to the saints, join in that confession with praise and thanksgiving. [Here follows the Apostles' Creed.]

After the adoption of the preamble, the vote on the whole Confession was immediately taken. The whole Synod stood up in an affirmative vote. The President then led in most earnest prayer, during which all hearts were moved and many eyes were bedimmed with tears.

The action thus taken is the most advanced step yet taken by any Christian body in Japan, in the direction of a really automatic Japanese Church. The earnest discussions on the part of the native brethren, as well as the whole procedure of the Synod, were encouraging indications that Christianity has taken root in Japan. The hearts of some missionaries who have done most for Japan, were pained by the action, and by some things that were said in the heat of debate; but we must all remember that, so far as the outward direction of affairs is concerned, in Japan the native brethren must increase while the foreign missionary must decrease. And altogether it is very encouraging that it should be so.

Next came the Constitution. The first point was the name of the Church. The word "United" was stricken out; and the official title now is "Church of Christ in Japan," or in Japanese, "Nihon Kirisuto Kyokwai." It is not the Church of Christ in Japan, for the Japanese language has no article; and the presumption which would be implied in the use of the word "the" is not contained in the official name.

Another point which evoked long and earnest discussion, was infant baptism. Many of the Japanese brethren advocated freedom in this matter, and therefore moved that all reference to the subject, whether direct or indirect, be expunged from the proposed Constitution. The missionaries fought hard and long for the point, and with them were a good number of Japanese brethren. But they were outvoted, and all that can be said of the Constitution as it now stands, is that it contains an implication in favor of infant baptism, but states nothing explicitly.

To refer to all the other points that called forth any considerable discussion during the two weeks session of the Synod would extend my already long letter unduly. I only add that the "Church of Christ in Japan" has taken a step which ought to make it the most acceptable, the most beloved Church to the Japanese people. It has made itself emphatically a Japanese Church, and the barrier of race difference has been brushed aside as completely as possible.

D. H. SCHNEDER.

Sendai, Japan, Jan. 7, 1891.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

HOW CAN I HELP?

The Young People's Department of the Women's National Indian Association always rejoices to hear the question, "How can I help?" Lately it has been asked so much that one answer will perhaps meet many of the cases, and also let some of the boys and girls, who have not yet thought about helping Indians, see what chances there are for their active work. Each one who reads this can do something. Will you?

These are the ways:

1. Give money towards the salaries of missionaries and for the building of their cottages and chapels; send to the stations boxes containing clothing, games, toys, bits of ribbons and materials for fancy work, scrap-books, picture cards, etc.

2. Furnish means so that the Home Building

Department can carry on its work of loaning from $300 to $400 to bright Indian couples to build their homes on the 160 acres of their own land, to which Government gives them a title, and send other small sums to meet emergencies with.

3. Aid some young Indians, men or women, to become a preacher, missionary, doctor, skilled nurse, lawyer, civil engineer, or for usefulness in some business.

4. Send reading matter to individual Indians and to schools. Many Indians would enjoy the weekly visit of "The Youth's Companion," and "Harper's Young People," or the monthly delight of "Wide Awake," "St. Nicholas," etc.

The Indian children are not so unlike you after all, in spite of their red skin and different surroundings and training.

5. Help to build hospitals. No people suffer more when ill than the Indians, for they are so ignorant of the care of sickness, and, worse yet, they have no place for the sick. Many Indian children suffer and die who might be saved. You all, I know, think it hard to be sick, even with a good bed, pretty room, skilled physician and nurse, and kind, attentive friends. Pity, then, these neglected ones, who frequently lie on the ground in rude tepees, suffering from the ignorant treatment of their "medicine men."

We want to build hospitals at various points, where not only the sick can be cared for, but where Indian girls can be trained in nursing.

6. Take "The Indian's Friend," our little monthly paper: price, thirty cents a year. All Young Ladies' Guilds, Home Mission Bands, King's Daughters, Christian Endeavor Societies and other organizations ought to have it, because they can thus learn quickly and in a most interesting manner, both the needs of the Indians and what we are doing to meet these.

In some of these ways, then, you can help. Don't hesitate to send your "mite;" it means a great deal just now, and the whole work is carried on by the "mites" of many. Any gifts of money or enquiries about the work, should be sent to the chairman of the YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT of the Women's National Indian Association, MISS MARIE E. IVES.

P. O. Box 1065, New Haven, Conn.

The Family.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE YOUNG PROPHETESS:

A TALE OF THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE.

BY REV. R. LEIGHTON GERHART.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE DESCENT OF THE VULTURE.

The camp was astir early. After eating a light breakfast, purchased for him at his own expense by Martin, Otho sought Serena. He found her surrounded by a group of girls and boys busily laying plans for the day. It was plain that her fair face, self-confidence and ready wit were gaining her marked ascendency over her companions, though the position she was to hold never occurred to the boy. There was little he could do for her, and declining the invitation of John of Cologne to remain with them, he mounted his horse and set out to find Madeleine. After several hours search, he caught sight of her. She was leading a little boy by the hand, while close behind her followed a woman of coarse and forbidding aspect. Twice, before the boy reached her, he saw Madeleine turn to reply to a remark addressed her by this creature, but without pausing a moment in her walk. There was an anxious look in her gentle face and her step was hurried, as though she desired to put as much space as possible between herself and her would-be companion.

"Come with me, sweet one," called the latter in a wheedling tone. "I know what will please you. Come rest by the road-side."

"I pray you in all kindness, leave me. I cannot tarry," at the same time, with a quick motion of her disengaged hand making the sign of the cross on her bosom.

"La, how pert we are! Do you not know your friends? I will lead you to your fortune,—ay, a good fortune! Much is in store for you, if you but follow me," and stretching out a brown and filthy hand the woman seized Madeleine by the skirt of her long pilgrim's cloak, to detain her.

Flushing with sudden anger, in tones almost fiercely indignant, the girl repelled the attempt.

"Release me, woman," she cried, "how dare you lay your hands upon me!"

At this juncture, Otho, who had been hurrying forward, leaped from his horse at her very side. The intruder paused, scowled up at him, then, seeing from the expression of his determined face, boy as he was, that her stay was fruitless, burst into a harsh, discordant laugh, and, retreating, hid herself in the crowd of children that followed.

"I am rejoiced to see you,—I, — Oh, this woman hath sorely vexed me!" murmured the frightened girl, stretching out her hand to Otho.

"I have been searching for you," returned the latter, taking her hand. "Who is this creature? Would that I had been here sooner!"

"I know not who she is," was the answer. "But there are many such, and I dread them! I dread them!" and the girl's delicate frame trembled as with mingled repugnance and fear. "They entice the children away; ay, fairly drag them off. Some return, robbed of the very garments they wore. Think of it! Some come not back; at least, those who knew them have never seen them again. Oh, it is fearful! And some that do return, oh, they tell fearful tales!"

It was only too true. Mingling with the children were hundreds of depraved men and women, who, in hopes of enriching themselves by robbery, or to satisfy their vicious and degraded inclinations, had been attracted to the Crusade. They wrought terrible havoc amongst the children, and did much to bring them into disrepute with the people through whose lands their route lay.

Naturally kind and generous, Otho's feelings were deeply moved by this story of wrong. He felt at once that some organization was needed for aid and protection; a feeling that deepened as daily new forms of suffering and distress came to light. Unaccustomed to exposure or privations of any kind, many were taken sick. Others, less vigorous than their comrades, could not keep up with the march, and straggling behind, became the easy prey of every heartless wretch. Seeing this, Otho began to devote himself to those in need of assistance. Gradually he was able to gather around him a number of the strongest and oldest of the youth in the vast company, who, directed by him, formed themselves into squads of relief and defense. They took their stations at different points in the extended column, or moved freely from one place to another as the occasion required. Some like himself were mounted, and attended, and these did special service. The good effects of this effort were soon seen.

He had been thus engaged for nearly a fortnight when an event occurred, which threatened to bring all his hopes and plans forever to an end.

The army was within a few days march of the celebrated city of Constance, following a course that lay at the base of a range of mountains, known as the Rauhe, or Swabian Alps, when little John Crevecour, the child whom we saw with Madeleine, was taken ill. For several days Otho carried him on one of the mules. But he became so weak at last that this could no longer be done, and one morning, towards noon, he was laid gently down by the road-side under the shade of a tree. It was evident that the child was dying, and heart-broken with grief, his head resting in her lap, Madeleine bent over him. In his delirium he began to babble in tender, loving tones of his pet bird, and of his playmates, or in lucid intervals, aware that he was not at home, he would beg in most piteous accents to be carried to his mother. It may have been several hours past noon, and the rear of the army was already ascending a hill in the distance, when all felt that the angel of death was hovering near. Three of Otho's comrades were with him; and with uncovered heads they stood listening in dread silence to the faint, irregular breathing of the sufferer.

At this sorrowful moment, issuing from a narrow defile in the mountains, appeared a knight in complete armor, accompanied by his esquire, and followed by a score of men-at-arms with spears and cross-bows.

"What have we here?" cried the knight harshly, reining in his war-horse by the side of the sorrow-stricken group. "By the cross of St. Andrew, as fine a covey of birds as ever fowler netted. Why travel further, McCallum?" this last was spoken to one of the men-at-arms, whose square face and angular, though muscular frame betrayed his Scotch ancestry.

"None, Sir William, if ye still hold to your purpose," returned the latter.

"By the Holy Rood! we change not our purpose so lightly." Then addressing Madeleine, he demanded,

"What ails yonder brat?"

"He is dying, sir knight," replied the maiden, turning her pale and tear-stained face on the intruder.

"Why, God wot, let him die, then," and he laughed as he spoke. "Come thou to me, damsel."

"Sir knight," spoke Otho, stepping forward, "speak not so harshly. Pass on your way; by what right dost thou disturb us here?"

"By right of mine own pleasure, braggart," and the speaker flushed angrily.

"Come thou to me," again addressing Madeleine, "and if thou knowest what is good for thee, come speedily."

"Hold!" rejoined Otho, stepping more directly in front of the stranger. "We are Crusaders, bound for the Holy Land, and you lay your hand on us at your soul's peril. We march under the shield of the cross, you see we wear."

"Crusader or villain, sign of the cross or sign of the arch-fiend himself, what care I?" roared Sir William. "Ho, there, McCallum! Seize the wench. Why bandy words further?"

The man addressed flung himself heavily from his horse, and walking as rapidly as his armor permitted, approached Madeleine, but he paused in doubt when Otho, swinging his staff in a threatening manner, boldly advanced to meet him. Seeing this, the knight shouted:

"Beat the braggart out of the way with the butt of your spear. Dost thou halt for a boy?"

The fellow raised his weapon at once, but underestimating the skill and strength of his antagonist, let fall a careless blow. It was easily warded, and in answer Otho's staff descended with such swift and crushing force on his helmet, that he staggered back, for the moment blinded.

At this unlooked for result, the knight spurred

Copyrighted by Chas. G. Fisher, 1890.

forward, and coming up behind the boy, raised his hand, covered with its heavy steel gauntlet, and in a fury of rage dealt him a blow that crushed him like a reed, bleeding and senseless to the earth.

"Disarm and bind the villains," he roared to his men.

Without weapons, save their staffs, and few in number, the boys were incapable of defence, and in a few moments lay bound and helpless on the ground.

At the first sign of conflict Madeleine rose and attempted to speak, but in the confusion received no attention. Taking advantage of the momentary quiet, succeeding the struggle, she approached Sir William and addressed him. Her face was deadly pale, but though greatly agitated, she shed no tears.

"Sir knight, you have wrought causeless ill this day. It is even as this youth hath said," pointing to Otho, who had now so far recovered as to be able to sit erect, "we march under shield of the holy cross. If you care not for that, then by your oath of knighthood, which binds you by the most holy bonds—which binds you to protect the defenceless, not ill-use them; to right the wrongs of the oppressed, not do violence to those who have done you no wrong—by your oath of knighthood, I pray you in all Christian charity, release my companions."

"That we will, fair damsel, but all in good time, all in good time," interrupted the man in a mocking tone, smiling grimly as he spoke.

"I thank you for that assurance," returned the girl, with a look of relief. "My companions are not basely born, sir knight. You have stricken Otho von Hieldrich, son of Baron von Hieldrich, of Heilbrun, whom, mayhap, you know."

"Ay, and that right well; we are indebted to him for many a favor, and will requite him—will requite him," but this was said so harshly, that Madeleine perceived at once that her information had weakened rather than strengthened her cause.

She was about to continue her expostulations, when the knight, abruptly wheeling his horse, shouted: "We tarry too long! Mount the beggars behind you! Set the wench on the mule!" referring to the animal that had carried the sick boy, "then for the castle!"

Madeleine was about to speak, but it was useless. Seizing her roughly, McCallum set her on the mule.

"Handle me not so roughly, sirrah; I am a lady born," she said, but her lip quivered, and it was only by a strong effort that she refrained from weeping. Controlling herself as the ruffian turned to mount his own beast, she said, with a faint attempt at authority:

"Now bring the child to me, I will carry him in my arms."

"McCallum stared at her in rude surprise, then exclaimed:

"What?"

"It would only weary you to bear the child, bring him to me."

"Bring the brat to thee? Nay, nay, we cumber not ourselves with such cattle."

Not until that moment did it occur to Madeleine that the dying boy was to be abandoned. Horrified at the thought, she broke out with passionate entreaty:

"Oh! if you have any touch of pity in your heart, bring me the child! I will care for him! he shall not vex you! For the love of Heaven, leave not a dying child alone in this terrible wood!—no hand to soothe! none to guard! Oh! for the love of the Virgin, do not so cruel a deed!"

But the knight and his band, had already formed themselves in the order of march; and without deigning other reply than a short, coarse laugh, the Scotchman seized the reins of the mule and started to join the ranks.

"Hold, sirrah! I will bring him," cried the almost distracted girl, motioning to dismount.

Forcing her rudely back in her saddle, the man said brutally:

"Try that once more, my pretty fool, and I'll tie thee fast, hand and foot."

"Oh!" moaned Madeleine, in tones of exquisite pathos, "have pity! have mercy! were you never a child? Did no one love you? Have you no little ones? Have mercy! have pity on me!"

With his hand on the rein, the man stared at her: his face softened, and abruptly quitting her side, he walked to the spot where little John lay. She saw him gaze at the childish form an instant, then stir the body once or twice with his foot.

"The brat's dead," he called.

Madeleine slipped from the saddle at once, and running to the spot, sank on her knees by the side of the boy. She felt his heart, his hands, his face; the eyes were set; there was no pulse of life; little John Crevacour's crusade was over.

Convinced of this, Madeleine kissed the little face tenderly, straightened the limbs, folded the hands over the still bosom, gave the curly head an easy position, then rising, said calmly, though with sadness:

"I am ready now."

Glancing back a few minutes later, she caught sight of the little form lying in all its loneliness at the foot of the great tree, and then a turn in the road hid him from her sight forever—and it was well. Wheeling high in air, without flutter of wing, sweeping in grand gyrations through the heavens, a great bird was seen—then another—then another. They were vultures—birds to whom the scent of death is the fragrance of life. In the perfect repose of perfect motion, they circled nearer—nearer—nearer; then began to descend. There was no sound but the sweep of their pinions, as with a few lazy flaps of their great black wings they prepared to light. The sunlight lay still and warm on the fields, and the leaves nestled softly, but there was the silence of the death-chamber there, and it was well.

To be Continued.

Youth's Department.

GOOD ENOUGH.

Dear boys, I want to give you
  A motto safe and good;
'Twill make your lives successful,
  If you heed it as you should.
Obey it in the spirit,
  Obey it in the letter—
Don't say a thing is "good enough"
  Till it can be no better.

And whether at your lessons,
  Or at your daily work,
Don't be a half-way dabbler—
  Don't slip and slide and shirk,
And think it doesn't matter
  That such talk is "trash" and "stuff"—
For until your work is perfect,
  It is never "good enough."

If your work is in the school-room,
  Make every lesson tell;
No matter what you mean to be,
  Build your foundation well.
Every knotty point and problem
  That you bravely answer now
Will increase your skill to labor
  With the pen or with the plow.

If you sweep a store or stable,
  Be sure you go behind
Every box and bale and counter;
  It will pay, you'll always find,
To be careful, patient, thorough,
  Though the work be hard and rough;
And when you've done your very best,
  'Twill then be "good enough."

So you'd better take my motto,
  If you ever mean to work
To any station higher
  Than a stable boy or clerk.
It will make you independent,
  It will make you no man's debtor;
Then never say "it's good enough"
  Till it can be no better.

—Golden Days.

NOT GOOD ENOUGH.

Nothing is good enough that is not as good as it can be. The verdict "good enough," says a well known writer, which in boyhood passes the defective task, will become "bad enough" when the habit of inaccuracy has spread itself over the life.

"You have planed that board well, have you, Frank?" asked a carpenter of an apprentice.

"O, it will do," replied the boy. "It don't need to be very well planed for the use to be made of it. Nobody will see it."

"It will not do if it is not planed as neatly and smoothly as possible," replied the carpenter, who had the reputation of being the best and most conscientious workman in the city.

"I suppose I could make it smoother," said the boy.

"Then do it. 'Good enough' has but one meaning in my shop, and that is 'perfect.' If a thing is not perfect it is not good enough for me."

"You haven't made things look very neat and orderly here in the back part of the store," said a merchant to a young clerk.

"Well, I thought it was good enough for back there where things cannot be seen very plainly, and where customers seldom go."

"'That won't do," said the merchant, sharply, and then added, in a kinder tone, "You must get ideas of that kind out of your head, my boy, if you hope to succeed in life. That kind of 'good enough' isn't much better than 'bad enough.'"

The girls who don't sweep in the corners or dust under things, and the boys who dispose of tasks as speedily as possible, declaring that things will "do" if they are not well done, are the boys and girls who are very likely to make failures in life because the habit of inaccuracy has become a part of their characters.

The old adage, "What is worth doing at all is worth doing well," is as true as it was when first spoken, and will always be true.—Youth's Companion.

Pleasantries.

"I gather," said the Boston lady, "from a conversation of my nephew, that firemen are in the habit of using rubber hose at their labors." "Yes." "That, I presume is so that they won't get their feet wet;" and the Boston lady returned to her book with an air of entire satisfaction over having solved a difficult problem.——Washington Post.

A class in natural history was called up for recitation. The teacher talked to them a while about the relations of friendship between man and animals; then asked a girl:

"Do animals really possess the sentiment of affection?"

"Yes, almost always," said the little girl.

"And now," said the teacher, turning to a little boy, "tell me what animal has the greatest fondness for man?"

"Woman," said the boy.

NOTICE.

☞ Editorial Correspondence address to THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters pertaining to subscriptions and other business, address REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ No notice taken of anonymous communications.

For Terms, see page 11.

THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER,
907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1891.

SOME time ago the New York Churchman referred to the fact that there were so many of the clergy in the Episcopal Church, who were not engaged in the active duties of the ministry. Quite naturally such a remark was painful to some of its readers, and one of them, a pious layman, suggests that the statement of such facts ought not to appear in the paper. But the editor did not think so, and affirms that they ought to be faced, and if possible, satisfactorily explained. He says that the "extraordinary number of 662 out of 4,163 of the clergy, or something over 15 per cent. of the whole number do not appear to be engaged in any sort of regular clerical work." We do not pretend to explain this anomaly, but we would not be surprised, if some, at least, of the 600 are pushed out of the field by younger men who are pushing themselves into the Episcopal Church from other denominations, where they were needed, and in most cases could be more useful, if faithful, than anywhere else.

ANGLICANISM.

"It is the glory of the Church of England and her daughter Churches," says the Churchman of New York, "that by no merit of theirs, they hold a position to which all other Churches must come, and from which the conquest of the world for Christ may be hopefully expected." That is an impression which is either openly expressed, or lies slumbering in the minds of other churchmen, high or low, in regard to their own particular denomination. It is, however, as we look at it, a vain delusion, or, at best, a premature judgment. First let us wait and see what kind of a Church or temple Christ is building for His followers of every name and denomination. One thing may be regarded as certain, which is, that it will not be exactly national, racial, Anglican, Grecian, Latin, or even Germanic, but universal or catholic, just as catholic or universal as the human race or humanity, which is something higher and mcre comprehensive than Celtic, Romanic, Teutonic or Anglican. For such a Church all true Christians are laboring, and to that it must come in the end.

THE HOLY MOUNT.

Some time near the close of the winter, in the year of our Lord, 29, John the Baptist was beheaded. During the spring following Jesus fed the 5000, walked on the sea, and delivered His memorable discourse at Capernaum on the Bread of Life. During the summer He passed through the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, and then over the Jordan into the Decapolis, seeking everywhere to find the scattered sheep of Israel, to prepare them for the kingdom of heaven. By this time His work in Galilee was practically finished; and He went northward, towards Mount Hermon, where He was transfigured on one of its summits. This was the acme of His human life, the crowning point of His work in Galilee. As by man came the resurrection of the dead so it may also be said that by man came those stupendous miracles which Christ performed in an obscure part of the world, in Galilee, as a result of the union of the human and divine in His person. He had attained to such a degree of power and strength in His human life, that He was prepared for His translation as an individual to heaven. He was in part already glorified in His body, on the Mount, and stood as it were at the very gate of the spiritual world. Had Adam retained his integrity and holiness, his growth and that of his descendants in spiritual strength would have been similar to that of Christ, and from many a holy mount they would have been continually going up to heaven in chariots of fire. But they had all sinned and fallen down, down, down, lower and lower. Christ, therefore, did that for them which they could not do of themselves—raised humanity in Himself up again to the very gates of Paradise on high. Christ, however, did not at this time enter those gates, nor go back with Moses and Elijah into the supernatural world as He might have done. His work for fallen man was not yet complete; He must die for their redemption, and rise again, so that He might not go there alone but carry with Him a world of penitent sinners to the right hand of God. Accordingly He must come down from the mount, descend into the dark vale of His humiliation, and then He would be prepared to ascend to a still higher, brighter and holier mount of glorification, carrying with Him captivity captive—that is, us poor sinners.

CHRIST INCREASING.

The first period of Christ's public life extends (according to S. J. Andrews, who is good authority on this subject,) from His baptism in the summer of the year, A. D. 26, to the imprisonment of John the Baptist, A. D. 28, embracing a period most likely of a year and a half. Here again it is remarkable that the evangelists have recorded so little comparatively of the outward life of Christ or His public ministry. After His baptism and temptations in the wilderness He went to Cana with a few of His disciples, where He converted water into wine, in the year 27. In the spring following He attended the Passover at Jerusalem, and held His celebrated conversation with Nicodemus. During the summer He remained along the Jordan, teaching and preaching, until the close of the year, when He went back again through Samaria to Galilee. In harmony with John's work, He preached repentance and the near approach of the Kingdom of Heaven, but He performed only a few miracles: one at Cana and some at Jerusalem, and we have no account of His sermons or discourses. Here again, we would like to know more of what He said and did, and meet with one hiatus after another. If we ask the reason why, our best answer is that such was His Father's good pleasure. His time had not come to do more than He did. He was strictly obedient to His Father's will, and did nothing except as He was specially prompted by the Holy Ghost. God had sent John to do a certain work, and Christ always obedient to the divine order of things, fell in with it for the time being, made disciples by baptism, and preached predominantly, we may believe, in the style of the Baptist. It was for Him as a man a preparation for future work and activity. He still continued to increase in wisdom, in spiritual, if not in physical stature, and in favor with God and man. He spent part of His time, no doubt, in retirement from the world, and much of it, too, in prayer, in view of His great work on earth which He had come to fulfill, and all this in communion with the Father and the Spirit. As He went up from the Jordan into the wilderness, it is said that He was full of the Holy Ghost; and when He left His first sphere of labor along the Jordan, it is said "He returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee." [Luke 4:14.] If the record of this part of His life is brief, His baptism,—His temptations, His conversation with the ruler of the Jews at Jerusalem, and His miracles,—become only so much the more interesting, and worthy of our reverential study. The lesson for us is obedience and submission to the will of the Father in Heaven,—not to run unless we feel and know that we are called. The work of the Christian here on earth is in many respects similar to that of Christ. It involves preparation or increase on the one hand, and fulfilment on the other. We are all actors on a public stage, and as Thomas A'Kempis says, retirement in private should always precede our appearance in public. As Christ grew in grace, so must we; as His increase is not only the norm, or example, but the source of all spiritual growth.

GERMAN SCIENCE.

It is a remarkable fact that at a recent meeting of distinguished professors of Chemistry in Philadelphia, representing colleges in all parts of the country, our own included, the German language was freely used in conversation. Of the hundred and fifty savants present nearly if not quite every one could speak it with the utmost propriety, as we are informed, and at their receptions they seemed to prefer it. This implies that they had been students at German Universities, where they had prepared themselves for the studies of their special departments. A long time ago Dr. Anthon availed himself freely of the labors of German scholars in the preparation of his valuable editions of the old classic authors, and of late we have heard a great deal about German philosophy and theology in this country as well as in Great Britain. Now it seems it has been discovered that Germany has scientists as well as philosophers who can instruct others. It is just what might be expected from a country that produced a Leibnitz, an Encke and a Liebig. Its Universities had a full supply of professors, each one of whom devotes himself to a special department of study for his life-time, and this he fully masters and enlarges by his own independent investigations. England is felt in every part of the world by her laws, commerce and colonies: Germany is coming to be quite as cosmopolitan by its thought, its learning and books. Its additions to the sciences are very valuable and reliable, but much of its philosophy and theology needs to be distilled through an American or English alembic.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

"H. M. K." AND THE WOMAN QUESTION.

In reading the last issue of your paper, January 29th, the communication by "H. M. K." greatly interested me. I think he is quite too "comfortable" in the society of those who think, talk and write as he thinks, talks and writes. And the spectacles through which he sees the subject in hand should be laid aside as unsuitable, they are far too narrow. Through broader, clearer glasses, he might read that "Eve was created for Adam," not as "an helpmeet," but as "a help" meet for Adam, that is, worthy of him.

God must have loved Adam very tenderly, this first man created in "His own image," after "His own likeness." And surely "His first best gift" must have been worthy of him.

Reading between the lines, one might imagine the creed of "H. M. K." to be, that woman's subjection, limitation and suffering were instituted at the creation, inaugurated at the curse, and there is no escape.

We all know how civilization and knowledge have advanced within fifty, yes, thirty years. It is unprecedented. Think of the great change that has been wrought in the condition of women since the days of St. Paul. A change so great we scarcely know how to meet it. There must be first many experiments, mistakes, failures. It is not until truth is reduced to general principles, and then imparted into fragments, that it really benefits the masses. One thing we are sure of, that all true and lasting reform is from God, and primarily through the Church; and it follows, of course, that the nearer to heaven our agencies are, the greater the reform. I believe that woman has always had more influence in the world than man has; and I am satisfied that there is in her, not only a vast amount of undeveloped, unused talent, but a wealth of position and intellectual and spiritual attainment which, if it could be reached, would make the world far wiser and better than it is now. When a woman is possessed of an earnest purpose and thorough consecration, and is ready to do with all her might what her hands find to do of needful work, then the right work comes to her and she falls into her true place, and realizes then her powers and uses. Achievement must and will come; it is inevitable. Then, allow woman everything that can advance and develop her surely and truly. Women in general care very little who is President, Governor or Representative; not many want to vote, they have the making and perfecting of the primary relations of husband, son and brother; all other relations are subsequent, consequent. In my experience of educated, cultivated women (while they see and deplore existing evils in the Church and State), not one is ambitious to hold office in either. Why force the question? Why oblige women to take a stand? Women, as physicians, are indispensable in this age, and if best, she will go into the pulpit. The future is a great land.

If St. Paul could walk the earth in these nineteenth century days, the yet unwritten, new commandment might read like this: "Go ye women into all the world and teach and preach the Gospel that ye know so well!" E. W. F.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

ORPHANS' HOME COLUMN.

BY REV. T. M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

One girl was admitted at the special meeting of the Board held February 13th.

Total amount of Christmas contributions received, $3868 69. The Board feels truly grateful and the friends of the Home have cause to rejoice that the gifts of the people for the support of the fatherless were so liberal. We have no debt, and nearly $1000 in the treasury to be used for current expenses. With careful management this amount, with the few contributions that may still be received, will see the family nicely through the winter.

At the special meeting of the Board and the Ladies' Committee (held February 13th) it was decided to locate the new building about twenty-five feet east and with its front line a little to the north of the front line of the present building. The new building to be about 52x83 feet in dimensions and to be as high as the present building. A building committee, consisting of Messrs. L. Kræmer, J. T. Reber, Dr. J. Z. Gerhard and T. M. Yundt, was appointed, which shall procure detailed drawings and specifications of the proposed building, and advertise for bids for its erection. It is to be expected that these bids will be received in time to be opened at the regular quarterly meeting of the Board to be held the last week in March, or the first week in April.

Taking advantage of the pleasant weather, and confident that the much needed new building was coming our boys, with the assistance of the farmer and under the direction of the superintendent, have already hauled a large amount of mountain stone for the necessary foundation and cellar walls. This work will be more vigorously pushed now, if the weather permits; and we hope to be able with the assistance of a little hired help, to let the contract in spring stating that the cellar is already dug and the necessary stones on the ground.

Last week in giving the names of the Ladies' Committee, the name of Mrs. Anna M. Eyreman, of Easton, was omitted. She served as an active member for several years, and is now an honorary member still doing good service in the cause.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE LUTHERAN CHURCH REVIEW.

The editor of this Review is Rev. H. E. Jacobs, D.D., of the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Mt. Airy, Pa. It has reached its tenth volume. It has recently made an impression upon the English reading theological public by articles of the scholarly editor, which are the result of independent research in liturgical history. Going back to the Urkunde he discovers the fact that the compilers of the Book of Common Prayer are far more largely indebted to the German liturgies than was generally supposed. We were always under the impression that our own Bucer had more to do with that work than is acknowledged by Episcopalians generally. But Dr. Jacobs makes it appear that our English brethren are even more indebted to them for what is regarded as their pride and glory than to us. Whether interested in liturgies or not, any one will derive much benefit from the controversy going on between the editor of the Lutheran Church Review and Prebendary Burbridge of Somerset, England.

In the January number we have No. 4 of a series of articles by Rev. W. J. Mann, D. D., in which he gives the public an account of the theology of Albrecht Ritschl. We regard this contribution of Dr. Mann as perhaps the most valuable work done for some time in our theological periodical literature. Little is known of Ritschl in this country. Most of our information regarding him is from partial or incompetent reporters. More, certainly, should be known of a man whose teaching has become a power in the land of theological thought and lore. No one is more capable of performing the task of furnishing us the needed information than Dr. Mann. He has placed the theological public under great obligations, and at the same time has done himself infinite credit by the candid and unprejudiced spirit in which the service has been performed. He has certainly proved himself the Christian gentleman as well as the scholar which he is everywhere known to be. Not a few of our readers will be glad to see the following extract:

"Having brought our delineation of the most essential features of Ritschl's theological system to an end, we have a good conscience as to the manner we pursued in fulfilling our task. Differing, as we frequently took occasion to indicate, de toto cœlo from his views on most important points, we have honestly endeavored to present the striking peculiarity of his theological thought and total apperception of Christianity sine ira atque studio. Though space was not given elaborately to enter upon all the detailed argumentation wherewith, often using exceedingly prolix, heavy, and apparently inconsistent language and again and again repeating himself, he attempts to support his assertions and positions, we entertain no doubt that our readers could not escape the conviction that here was presented to them a strikingly original comprehension of Christianity, which, supported as it is by a thorough-going acquaintance with the whole range of Christian theological literature of all periods of the history of the Church, could not but make a deep impression upon the contemporaneous mind of theological Germany. Since the days of Schleiermacher no German theologian has given so strong an impulse to dogmatical disquisition as Ritschl did. D. F. Strauss created a transient sensation by his attempt to demonstrate that Christianity was in the midst of its progress of disintegration. Ritschl strikes the mind with a plan of reconstruction of Christianity, which, whatever its defects are, affords new proof to what a wonderful extent that same Christianity, after having for two thousand years moved the world as an irresistible element of mental and social fermentation, incites, through its religious depth and its ethical vitality, the thinking mind and presents new sides to meditative contemplation. Painfully aware of the fact that Ritschl on most essential points deviates from doctrinal positions Apostles and all the best leading minds throughout the history of the church had unequivocally taken, and that he therein is influenced by the superficial and often sentimental religionism of our times, we are glad to find that he is very far from treating the mysteries of our holy religion in a frivolous and offensive manner.

* * * * * *

"But in spite of these grave charges we are willing to admit that Ritschl recognizes Christ as the only true mediator between God and us, and Christianity as the only and the perfect agency and power to raise the human race upon a higher religious and ethical platform; that he is far from the superficiality of the shallow, moralizing rationalism of a bygone phase of theology, and just as far from the heartless and headless infidelity and self-sufficiency of the polished, but cynic materialism of many of the representatives of modern culture, and that he has given new impulses to the theological thought of the times. Undeniably he has viewed Christianity under new angles and has directed the thinking and searching mind to some of its elements and principles which, possibly to some extent, have escaped the closer attention of those who, with more respect for the Word of God and the theological thought of former generations and with a more profound appreciation of the fundamental truths of Christianity, are going on in the good old ways. The influence which Ritschl since a number of years exercises, especially upon the younger generation of theologians and the present theology of Germany, and which apparently is becoming more extensive and intensive, makes it necessary to take notice of this new feature of theological literature and take position in relation to it also in this country." W. M. R.

AMOUNT OF SLEEP REQUIRED.

The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage is credited with the following: There is not one man or woman in 10,000 who can afford to do without seven or eight hours's sleep. All those stories written about great men and women who slept only three or four hours a night make very interesting reading; but I tell you, my readers, no man or woman ever yet kept healthy in body and mind for a number of years with less than seven hours' sleep.

Americans need more sleep than they are getting. This lack makes them so nervous and the insane asylum so populous. If you can get to bed early, then rise early. If you cannot get to bed till late, then rise late. It may be as Christian for one man to rise at eight as it is for another to rise at five.

I counsel my readers to get up when they are rested, but let the rousing bell be rung at least thirty minutes before your public appearance. Physicians say that a sudden jump out of bed gives irregular motion to the pulse. It takes hours to get over a too sudden rising. Give us time after you call us to roll over, gaze at the world full in the face and look before we leap.

Poetry.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

GOD EVERYWHERE.

LILLIE B. SHOEMAKER.

We gaze into the clear blue sky,
And lo, God's glory meets our eye;
The sun sends down its gentle rays
To brighten all our darkest days,
The moon and stars shed forth their light
As silent watches of the night;
Oh, who that sees the heavens so fair,
But knows that God is present there.

In trees and fields, so bright and green,
In pretty flowers wherever seen,
In summer's fruit and golden grain,
In flood, in storm, in quiet rain,
In lightning's flash, in thunder's roar,
In winter's snow, in frost so hoar,
In everything we see or hear,
We surely know that God is near.

Yea, "Heaven is His throne," He said,
"On earth is the foundation laid."
He knows the host of stars by name,
He made, upholds, and guards the same.
The sea and ocean are His own,
He made all things, and He alone,
And watches them with tender care,
For God is present everywhere.

Selections.

The good begun by thee shall onward flow.—Wilcox.

To be guilty without repentance, is to be wretched indeed.

The test of every religious, political, or educational system is the man that it forms.—Amiel.

What you do, do at once—you never will rue it.
If your burden is heavy, then bend your back to it.
It won't grow the lighter, because you eschew it;
What you do, do at once—you never will rue it.

Every human being is intended to have a character of his own, to be what no other is, to do what no other can do.—Channing.

No evil dooms us hopelessly except the evil we love and desire to continue in, and make no effort to escape from.—George Eliot.

If faith produce no works, I see
That faith is not a living tree.
Thus faith and works together grow;
No separate life they e'er can know—
They're soul and body, hand and heart.
What God hath joined let no man part.
—More.

It is astonishing how soon the whole conscience begins to unravel if a single stitch is dropped; one little sin indulged makes a hole you could put your head through.—Charles Buxton.

Hours of seeming idleness may be richer in fruitage than if busily employed, when the heart is at variance with surroundings. Work in the treadmill of routine, without effort conducive to higher ends, when the motive power is at a low level, is unprofitable.—Mrs. Mary C. Billings.

Turn, turn, my wheel! All life is brief;
What now is bud will soon be leaf,
  What now is leaf will soon decay!
The wind blows east, the wind blows west;
The blue eggs in the robin's nest
Will soon have wings and beak and breast,
  And flutter and fly away.
—Keramos.

Science and Art.

It is stated that primary batteries are no longer used for telegraphic service at the Central Telegraphic Office in Berlin; storage batteries charged by the dynamo electric machines of a lighting station being substituted as a supply of operating current.—Electrical Review.

In experiments during the past year celluloid has proven an excellent sheathing for ships, in place of copper, over which it has some advantages. Another new application of a valuable material is the use of the lately cheapened aluminum for dental plates, which is better than rubber, and cheaper and stronger than gold.

A firm in Munich has made a carriage which is propelled by gas generated from benzine or analogous material. The motor, which is not visible from the outside, is placed in the rear of a three-wheeled carriage over the main axle, and the benzine used is carried in a closed copper receptacle secured under the seat, from which it passes, drop by drop, to the generator. The speed is regulated by a lever. Ten miles an hour can be made. —Boston Journal.

Items of Interest.

Oregon and Washington are becoming great hop-growing States. The yield last season was large.

The King of Siam will send six youths from his country to the United States to be educated as physicians.

The Protestant Christian baptisms in Japan in 1889 numbered 5,342, of which 5,007 were of adult converts. These were received into the churches of the twenty-six different Protestant Missionary Societies at work in that country.

The cold weather in Europe has been destructive. The market gardeners around Paris are in despair. Their crops are totally ruined. The price of vegetables in Paris makes them such a luxury that the rich alone can afford them.

The Sunday-school part of Dr. Talmage's new church has been completed at a cost of $75,000, and was recently occupied. It will accommodate about fifteen hundred children. The whole church, when finished, will cost $350,000. A heavy mortgage indebtedness will be upon it.

The Shawmut Congregational Church of Boston, Mass., of which the Rev. W. E. Griffis, D.D., is pastor, during the past year has supported a missionary in Turkey, Miss Emily Wheeler, at a salary of $500; an evangelist in Japan, the Rev. Keizo Koyano, at $756; a Japanese student at Edinburgh, Scotland, at $200; and contributed $500 toward completing the edifice of the native Japanese Church in Japan, of which the Rev. J. T. Yokoi is pastor, in addition to their regular and miscellaneous contributions to standard and local charities and missions.

Hints and Recipes.

A housewife whose table linen always does her good service mends it with flax embroidery cotton of a number to correspond with the quality of the cloth. Under the ragged edges of the tear she bastes a piece of stiff paper, and makes a network of fine stitches back and forth over its edges, carrying the stitches about an inch beyond the edges of the cut. One skillful in embroidery can even darn in the pattern of the cloth. Thin places and breaks in line may be run with the flax or embroidery floss, and towels should be mended in the same way.—Daughters of America.

DUTCH APPLE CAKE.—Mix one pint of flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder and a half teaspoonful of salt. Put in one-fourth of a cupful of butter. Then add one well-beaten egg and a scant cupful of milk. Spread this dough a half inch thick in a shallow pan. Pare, core, and cut into eighths, six or eight large apples; lay them closely in this dough, allowing the sharp edges to penetrate a little. Sprinkle sugar over the top, and bake about twenty minutes in a moderate oven. It may be eaten cold, but we think it delicious right from the oven with lemon sauce.

Farm and Garden.

HOW TO GET BUTTER COWS.—Speaking in defense of the Jerseys, and especially of the great gain as the result of feeding and care, a prominent dairyman says he has no doubt that almost any cow of strong constitution and good form, yielding 30 quarts a day, may be trained in two years, by a treatment addressed to encourage her appetite for large amounts of condensed food, to triple the natural yield of butter; and a large milking breed may by similar training and breeding for butter, and not for milk, for five or six generations, eventually become a race of butter yielders. But these large milkers of poor milk, undeveloped by further breeding, will never become profitable butter cows on ordinary dairy rations.

TRIAL OF STRAWBERRIES.—The Wisconsin Experiment Station made a trial of several of the newer varieties of strawberries, by setting twelve to twenty-four plants of a variety in the spring of 1889, on enriched light clay loam, the plants two feet apart, in rows three and one-half feet apart; runners were permitted but blossoms were picked off the same year. The following varieties were found the best for the market nearly in the order in which they are named, and the list will be interesting to compare with the results in other localities. Those marked with a star have imperfect stamens and require a fertilizer: Warfield No. 2, Haverland*, Jesse*, Wilson, Sharpless, Burt, Eureka*, Gipsy*, Gandy, Welch, Downing, Cumberland, Bubach 5*, Cloud*, Carmichael*. Gipsy was the earliest, and Gandy, Welch and Carmichael were the latest.

Books and Periodicals.

Any of the books here noticed can be had through our Publication House, 907 Arch Street.

THE PEOPLE'S BIBLE. Discourses upon Holy Scripture, by Joseph Parker, D.D., London. The Proverbs, now ready. Octavo, 456 pp, cloth, $1.50. New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

As each new volume of Dr. Parker's "People's Bible" is laid upon our table we are astonished at the fruitfulness of his mind, at his versatility of thought and exegetical learning. He wields a masterly pen whether his subject be historical, poetical or moral. In the light of his fervent, eloquent treatment the Proverbs are read with new meanings. He re-translates many passages and gives a meaning to words and phrases which are not apparent to the general reader. His expositions are marked with vigor of thought and clearness of style, his applications are practical and forcible, and the theme of his chapters are peculiarly striking. The Proverb of the Ant becomes a "Secular Sermon on Foresight." "False Weights" represents "the Lord watching on both sides of the counter,"—a good short sermon on commercial honesty. There is also an interesting chapter on the proverbs of the Hindoo, the African, the Prussian, the Chinese, the Spanish, the Italian, the Scotch and others. Ministers will find this volume very helpful and furnish them with good subjects for pulpit treatment.

THE ANDOVER REVIEW. February, 1891. The opening article, "Papal Infallibility in the Light of History," sets forth some of the historic difficulties which must first be cleared away before the dogma of papal infallibility can be honestly accepted. It is an able presentation of the question, and the arguments brought forward admit of no refutation. The paper on "The Ideal College Education" yields somewhat to modern anti-classical pressures, for whilst the writer would hold on to Latin, he would drop the Greek as a required study and substitute for it the English and English literature. "Alexander Smith" is placed in a favorable light, "The Malthusian Idea" is vigorously attacked, and "The Theology of a Sacred Day" finds a place in the purest and most intelligent theism for the notion of a divine rest. The editorial note, "What shall we do with the Old Testament?" is sure to enlist attention.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. Yearly subscription, $4.00; single numbers, 35 cents.

TABLE TALK for February contains a good list of contents. It contains more than any preceding issue, of questions from perplexed housewives, and answers by the editor, Mrs. S. T. Rorer, who gives a "Menu for an Evening Wedding," "Menu for a Six O'clock Dinner," "Bouillon for Teas, Receptions, etc." "A list of necessary Kitchen Utensils," "Cheese Straws."

10 cents a number, $1.00 a year. Table Talk Publishing Co., 1617 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A portrait of Talleyrand in his youth is the frontispiece of the February CENTURY, in which is given extracts from the Talleyrand Memoirs. Contents:—The Georgia Cracker in the Cotton Mills, Californiana, Fremont in the Conquest of California, The Faith Doctor, Sister Dolorosa, Colonel Carter of Cartersville, Penelope's Swains, Balaam and his Master, The Anglo-Saxon in the Southern Hemisphere, Working Man in Australia, Topics of the Time.

The February WIDE AWAKE contains—Life at Frontier Forts, A Fish Army, Aunt Dolly's Two Robbers, A Hungry Boy, Diamonds and Toads, Margaret Sidney's Peppers, and Through the Dark Continent.

Wide Awake is $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Boston, Mass.

THE MEDICAL BULLETIN: A Monthly Journal of Medicine and Surgery. Edited by John V. Shoemaker, A. M., M.D. Contents for February—Original Communications; Abstracts; Therapeutic Notes; Editorials; Correspondence; Medical News and Miscellany; Book Reviews; and Commercial News.

Terms—$1 a year in advance. F. A. Davis, Publisher, Philadelphia, Pa., U. S. A.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE. The number of The Living Age for February 14 contains—Finland, Madeleine's Story, Labor Colonies in Germany, Lord Houghton, Winter in the Country of the Passion Play, An Adventure—Quite in the Dark, Ladies' Whist. Poetry—Oceanus Hyemalis, To 1890, A Protest and a Confession, "But is it there the heaven you sing." Miscellany.

$8.00 per year. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

LITERARY NOTE.

A Suggestion for Tableaux. A very successful tableaux-entertainment was recently given in New York, the subjects being taken from illustrations in the current magazines. The idea is a simple one, and if the subjects are well chosen it can be made very interesting. The Century Company has prepared a list of suitable pictures with suggestions for any one who wishes to get up the entertainment. They will send it free on request.

Marriages.

At the residence of the bride's parents, Mt. Pleasant, Pa., on December 25, 1890, by Rev. C. R. Ferner, Mr. Edmund F. Rinehart to Miss Olive S. Hauger, both of Mt, Pleasant, Pa.

At the same place, and by the same, at the bride's home, December 30, 1890, Mr. Samuel Schenk to Miss Katie Treber, both of Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

At the same place, and by the same, at the bride's home on January 15, 1891, Mr. Richardson Stahl to Mrs, Jennie S. Weaver, both of Mt. Pteasant, Pa.

Deaths.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than two hundred and fifty words.

DIED.—On the 8th of January, in St. Clair, Pa., Mrs. Catherine Deihl, aged 90 years, 1 month and 15 days.

This Christian mother was born in Bavaria, along the Rhine. She was one of twelve children, and came to this country with her husband in 1832. They left New York and came to St. Clair, and settled down for life in the place called "Crow Hollow." After the death of her husband she invested what she had of her savings in coal property, which was soon lost through misfortune. This did not take from her her Christian faith, but rather made her stand firm until her death.

She was a faithful member of the Reformed church, but for many years she could not attend services on account of her infirmities. But whenever the Lord's table was spread, this mother was remembered by the pastor and people, who made their way to her home, and administered unto her the spiritual elements which brought much comfort to her. She was the mother of ten children, six of whom have preceded her to the eternal home. She leaves four children, forty-four grandchildren, seventy-six great grandchildren, to mourn her loss.

The funeral took place on Sunday morning at her home, where many friends gathered to pay to her the last tribute of respect. The sermon was preached by the pastor from the comforting words found in 2 Timothy 4:7, 8, after which the interment was made in the Pottsville cemetery, where she was laid beside her husband, who had been resting there for forty years.
T. J. BOWER.

DIED.—July 11th, 1890, at Cheney, Kansas, Mrs. Alice Black, nee Berrier.

Mrs. Black was born December 13th, 1857; was catechised, baptized and confirmed by the Rev. P. S. Davis in Chambersburg, Franklin county, Pa., at the age of thirteen years. She was a dutiful child, a good wife, a kind neighbor, and an affectionate mother. Her death was very sudden and unlooked for. She had gone to bed in her usual health except that she complained of being very tired. In the night her husband was awakened to find her in spasms. Help was summoned and everything done to relieve her suffering. Lockjaw set in, however, and it was not long till her soul had gone to meet its Maker.

She was an earnest Christian woman, and one who carried her religion into her daily life. She leaves a father, mother, brother, sister, husband, and six small children to mourn her loss. She was buried in the Cheney Cemetery the evening after she died. The funeral services were held at the Reformed church on Sunday, the 20th, Prof. Kemp officiating.
S. R. M.

DIED.—On January 9, 1891, at Rebersburg, Centre county, Pa., Reuben Moyer, aged 82 years, 1 month and 12 days.

Father Moyer was reared in the Reformed church and remained within her fold up to the time of his death. Well laden with years, he frequently expressed his desire to be from home out of the body and to be at home with the Lord. To this heavenly home he was quietly and silently summoned in the hour of which Milton says:

"Midnight brought on the dusky hour
Friendliest to sleep and silence."

B.

EXCITEMENT IN ROCHESTER.

The Commotion Caused by the Statement of a Physician.

An unusual article from the Rochester N. Y., Democrat and Chronicle, was recently republished in this paper and was a subject of much comment. That the article caused even more commotion in Rochester, the following from the same paper shows:

Dr. J. B. Henion, who is well known not only in Rochester but in nearly every part of America, sent an extended article to this paper, a few days since which was duly published, detailing his remarkable experience and rescue from what seemed to be certain death. It would be impossible to enumerate the personal enquiries which have been made at our office as to the validity of the article, but they have been so numerous that further investigation of the subject was deemed necessary.

With this end in view a representative of this paper called on Dr. Henion, at his residence, when the following interview occurred: "That article of yours, Doctor, has created quite a whirlwind. Are the statements about the terrible condition you were in, and the way you were rescued such as you can sustain?"

"Every one of them and many additional ones. I was brought so low by neglecting the first and most simple symptoms. I did not think I was sick. It is true I had frequent headaches; felt tired most of the time; could eat nothing one day and was ravenous the next; felt dull pains and my stomach was out of order, but I did not think it meant anything serious.

"The medical profession has been treating symptoms instead of diseases for years, and it is high time it ceased. The symptoms I have just mentioned or any unusual action or irritation of the water channels indicate the approach of kidney disease more than a cough announces the coming of consumption. We do not treat the cough, but try to help the lungs. We should not waste our time trying to relieve the headache, pains about the body or other symptoms, but go directly to the kidneys, the source of most of these ailments."

"This, then, is what you meant when you said that more than one-half the deaths which occur arise from Bright's disease, is it Doctor?"

"Precisely. Thousands of diseases are torturing people to-day, which in reality are Bright's disease in some of its many forms. It is a Hydra-headed monster, and the slightest symptoms should strike terror to every one who has them. I can look back and recall hundreds of deaths which physicians declared at the time were caused by paralysis, apoplexy, heart disease, pneumonia, malarial fever and other common complaints which I see now were caused by Bright's disease."

"And did all these cases have simple symptoms at first?"

"Every one of them, and might have been cured as I was by the timely use of the same remedy. I am getting my eyes thoroughly opened in this matter and think I am helping others to see the facts and their possible danger also."

Mr. Warner, who was visited at his establishment on N. St. Paul street, spoke very earnestly:

"It is true that Bright's disease had increased wonderfully, and we find, by reliable statistics, that from '70 to '80 its growth was over 250 per cent. Look at the prominent men it has carried off, and is taking off every year, for while many are dying apparently of paralysis and apoplexy, they are really victims of kidney disorder, which causes heart disease, paralysis, apoplexy, etc. Nearly every week the papers record the death of some prominent man from this scourge. Recently, however, the increase has been checked and I attribute this to the general use of my remedy."

"Do you think many people are afflicted with it to-day who do not realize it, Mr. Warner?"

"A prominent professor in a New Orleans medical college was lecturing before his class on the subject of Bright's disease. He had various fluids under microscopic analysis and was showing the students what the indications of this terrible malady were. 'And now, gentlemen,' he said, 'as we have seen the unhealthy indications, I will show you how it appears in a state of perfect health,' and he submitted his own fluid to the usual test. As he watched the results his countenance suddenly changed—his color and command both left him and in a trembling voice he said: 'Gentlemen, I have made a painful discovery; I have Bright's disease of the kidneys;' and in less than a year he was dead. The slightest indications of any kidney difficulty should be enough to strike terror to any one."

"You know of Dr. Henion's case?"

"Yes, I have both read and heard of it."

"It is very wonderful is it not?"

"No more so than a great many others that have come to my notice as having been cured by the same means."

"You believe then that Bright's disease can be cured."

"I know it can. I know it from my own and the experience of thousands of prominent persons who were given up to die by both their physicians and friends."

"You speak of your own experience, what was it?"

"A fearful one. I had felt languid and unfitted for business for years. But I did not know what ailed me. When, however, I found it was kidney difficulty I thought there was little hope and so did the doctors. I have since learned that one of the physicians of this city pointed me out to a gentleman on the street one day, saying: 'there goes a man who will be dead within a year.' I believe his words would have proved true if I had not fortunately used the remedy now known as Warner's Safe Cure."

"Did you make a chemical analysis of the case of Mr. H. H. Warner some three years ago, Doctor? was asked Dr. S. A. Lattimore, one of the analysts of the State Board of Health."

"Yes, sir."

"What did this analysis show you?"

"A serious disease of the kidneys."

"Did you think Mr. Warner could recover?"

"No, sir, I did not think it possible."

"Do you know anything about the remedy which cured him?"

"I have chemically analyzed it and find it pure and harmless."

The standing of Dr. Henion, Mr. Warner and Dr. Lattimore in the community is beyond question, and the statements they make cannot for a moment be doubted. Dr. Henion's experience shows that Bright's disease of the kidneys is one of the most deceptive and dangerous of all diseases, that it is exceedingly common, but that it can be cured if taken in time.

SUPPLIES

FOR

EASTER.

We offer a New Service for EASTER—with Music—entitled,

"All Hail! Our Risen Lord."

Arranged and composed by Rev. J. Cal. Leinbach and Ferd. K. Hill, organist of Trinity Reformed church, Sunbury, Pa.

Price—100 Copies,	$4 00
" " postpaid,	4 50
Single copy,	5

Also,

"Alleluia, Christ is Risen,"

By the same, at same rates.

Also Service No. 2, with music.

100 Copies,	$4 00
" " postpaid,	4 50
Single Copy, "	5

Service No. 1.

100 Copies,	$2 02
" " postpaid,	2 25
Single Copy, "	5
Four Services, "	15

Services of other Publishers,
Sample Copies, 5 Cents.

Confirmation Tract with Certificate, Rev. A. C. Whitmer, postpaid,	$ 8
Golden Censer, Rev. H. Harbaugh, D. D. A Book for Young Church Members, with Lithograph Certificate. Roan Emb.,	75
" " Gilt,	1 00
Imit. Turkey,	1 50
Real Turkey,	2 25
Postpaid.
Easter Eggs, illustrated book, Postpaid.	60

EASTER CARDS IN QUANTITY.

We also can furnish in quantities for Sunday-schools:

Eggs (Wooden), per 100, $2.00

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia

Business Department.

TERMS:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage free. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.

No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrearages are paid.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made before the date transpires.

When the address of a paper is to be changed, the OLD and the NEW should be given.

☞ Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

☞ We do make mistakes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

☞ Remittances should be made payable by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, or Registered Letter to the order of THE REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE ALMANAC

FOR THE

Reformed Church in the United States

—TWENTY-EIGHTH ISSUE—

FOR 1891.

We are ready now to receive orders for our Almanac for 1891, at the following rates:

100 Copies, per express,	$5.00
50 " "	2.75
12 " "	.75
1 Copy, Postpaid,	.12

When to be sent by mail 18 cents per dozen must be added for postage.

Also,

WESTERN ALMANAC

At the same prices as above.

GERMAN ALMANAC.

12 Copies, 90 cts.
Postage, 18 cts.
Single Copies, Postpaid, 12 cts.

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK.

IN OLDEN DAYS BEYOND THE SEA.

Translated from the German, to which are added Introductory and Closing Parts,

BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

An interesting book, giving a thrilling account of the trials and persecutions of those who were true to their faith in "olden days beyond the sea." Pages 305. Illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of retail price, $1 25.

Address,

Reformed Church Publication House,
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK,

"In Olden Days Beyond the Sea,"

AND

THE MESSENGER.

To any one sending us two new subscribers for THE MESSENGER and $4.00, we will send a copy of the above book postpaid.

To an old subscriber for THE MESSENGER, remitting $2.75, we will give credit for a year's subscription and send a copy of the above book, postpaid.

Address

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

Miscellaneous.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

DEDICATION OF SALEM'S REFORMED CHURCH, LAVANSVILLE, SOMERSET CO., PA.

It was a pleasure and privilege to spend Sunday, February 8th, 1891, with the congregation at Lavansville, Somerset county, Pa. It was the day on which the new church was consecrated to the service of the Triune God. For a long time the necessity for a new building at this place was recognized. But there it rested, until in God's providence, the people began to move forward last summer, and now a very beautiful little gem of a church adorns the site where the old church had so long been standing.

It is a neat frame structure of prevailingly Gothic style of architecture, with a short but attractive spire surmounting a tower on the right hand corner of the building. I did not get the exact dimensions, but should say that seating room for 300 persons would be afforded by the main room. Every window, being memorial, calls to mind some one to memory dear, or esteemed in honor. These all are of most beautiful design in leaded cathedral glass, each with some emblem and other adorning, varying from the others and yet all in delightful harmony with the walls of the church, which had been made a soft brown by coloring the last coat of plaster with metallic brown. The floor is carpeted with a small figured red and black ingrain, and the ceiling is finished in natural Southern pine, very fine in its grain. Altogether the church makes a very good impression from without and is most inviting from within.

This has been a winter of wet Sundays in Somerset county and many fears were expressed by the good members at Lavansville that this Sunday would prove no exception to the general record of dampness. And indeed Saturday promised a wetter Sunday than usual. We counted the last Sundays back, and looked at the clouds when they broke the least bit, and prophesied the possibilities of a fair day. For you know that everybody wants a nice day for a dedication. So many people have promised to come, and a wet day drives away people so easily, that the interested ones are to be pardoned if they are overanxious for the morrow. The columns have been added, and every time there is such a result as to make the workers want a good day. Indeed for some time back a spirit of retrenchment has forced itself upon the building committee. The work demanded a few improvements and the cost did run up, but then the old stoves, too small of course, were blackened up and put in place. The old chandelier was refreshed with a coat of new bronze. The intention was to put in one of those nice reflectors, but the old one had to do. And everybody agreed a new organ would be the proper thing, but the cost must be kept down, so the old one was used. And yet there was a shortage, so that a wet Sunday would be almost a calamity. This explains why everybody looked at the clouds all day Saturday, and why all the hopeful prophets saw in every broken cloud the promise of a nice day.

Services began Friday evening, when Rev. E. H. Menges, of the Ev. Lutheran church at Lavansville, preached. On Saturday evening, Rev. J. S. Wagner, of the New Centreville Reformed church, preached. Up to the close of the evening service there was rain. But the attendance was good. That was comforting. Sunday morning opened grey, and it stayed about grey all day, but it did not rain. A freeze during the night had hardened the much detested mud, and by church time a good attendance had gathered.

Rev. J. M. Schick, of Greenville, Pa., preached the dedicatory sermon, and after the sermon the people said what they would do to clear up the balance due; and God gave them hearts willing for the work, and, would you believe it? they actually wiped out the whole debt due, and provided for new organ, chandelier, stoves, and more besides, before they began to show the least signs of tiring. And then they congratulated one another because they had done the good work to the extent that they could dedicate the beautiful church free from every encumbrance, and provided for the other necessaries. And as I looked and saw their glad faces I wondered why people are often so very slow to do the deeds and give the gifts that actually make their hearts run over with happiness. Strange isn't it? But so it was, and it was a happy people who joined with Pastor King in the dedicatory services.

Of all the glad hearts of that day and service the gladdest of all must have been that of Rev. Hiram King, of Somerset, Pa., the pastor of the congregation. For this seems to have been a delightful ending of a little more than four years activity in church building and renovating. It was I believe just four years this very month when he gathered the Shanksville congregation of the charge around him and reconsecrated the newly renovated church to God's service. Then followed the fine church at Somerset, and the year after the one at Glade, and now the last needed in the charge, this one we joined in dedicating on Sunday, February 8th, 1891. Well, if he was glad he had the right to be, for he had been useful, and pastor and people may now enjoy the blessing God has in store for them that honor Him with their substance.

J. M. S.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

OUR CHURCH IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

During the recent visit of the Franklin and Marshall Glee Club to the capital city, a member of the club, who is also one of the college foot ball eleven, in referring to Grace Mission, said, "I tell you boys, the 'team-play' of that congregation is first-class!" To a thoughtful observer, but a single glance was necessary to appreciate the weight of meaning and of truth in the athlete's pithy remark. In the pastor, the Rev. A. T. G. Apple, our church has a jewel; he is the right man in the right place. An officer in the mission said, "We are proud of our pastor, we love him; we wouldn't exchange him for any other we ever knew." And the spirit of the people attested the sincerity of the good brother's remark; for in the same place in which a short time ago existed disintegration and spiritual frigidity, now can be seen harmony, aggress veness and the soul of sociability. The Sunday-school is growing, the Missionary Society is active and interesting, and the membership is increasing. The atmosphere of the place is changed with progress and consecration.

The thought is suggested, "How much larger would have been our numbers, how much greater our influence, and how much increased and farther-reaching our possibilities, had our entire denomination, at all times, been imbued with an energy similar to that seen in the Washington mission?"

An answer to the question, by way of comparing what we are now to what we might be, would certainly be discouraging in the extreme. We, however, desire no clouds in our picture, and to procure so happy a consummation, increased future activity must atone for past neglect. A second opportunity for aggrandizement in this direction can be found right in the city of Washington. Grace Mission is situated in the north-western section of the city. Over in the north-eastern quarter, it is said, is the nucleus for another congregation. Of such vital importance is this vacant field that the people of Grace Mission say that, were they self-supporting, they'd willingly give their annual apportionment for the support of a new worker in the north-west.

Will the Reformed church take the hint? Washing is really a strategic point. The city is growing rapidly. The classes of people gathering there are of the best. It soon will be not only a social but a literary center as well, as evidenced by the establishment of various denominational universities in the city. Members of our faith, from time to time, settle in the capital, and many of them are lost into other denominations, solely because the Reformed church has been negligent in the care of her children. The matter is certainly worth consideration on the part of the Board of Home Missions.

UNVEILING OF A PICTURE IN TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH, COLUMBIA, PA.

A frequent remark made by attendants at Trinity Reformed church was that the chancel wall was too bare. The criticism was just, but like all good things this portion of the remodeling of the church required time. The architect's plans called for ample decorations for that end of the church, namely a suitable ornament for the chancel and the wall spaces on both sides. When the remodeling of the church was undertaken about two years ago, the pastor, Rev. J. H. Pannebecker, announced one Sunday that on a certain evening of the week the young girls of the congregation were invited to meet at the parsonage for the purpose of organizing a society to work for the improving of the church building. Thirteen responded, who were organized by the pastor's wife under the name of the W. W. Society. Under the energetic direction of their leader they set to work with a will, and as they were very successful in raising money, they proposed to take up some specific object for which to work. They applied to the building committee and were given the wall in the rear of the chancel. As this wall abuts against the parsonage no window could be placed there, so it was determined to put in a painting instead.

The selection of a subject and an artist was placed into the hands of the pastor and the architect. These selected as the subject the Ascension of Christ, and after much thought, the venerable George Seiling of Reading, Pa., as the artist. Early last fall the contract was made.

That no mistake was made in the selection of the artist every connoisseur will admit. The canvass measures 18 feet by 8½ feet, filling the entire space above the altar beneath the arch. The picture is a general adaptation of the figure of our Lord in Raphael's great masterpiece of the transfiguration to the ascension. The figure is colossal, measuring six feet. Its pose is graceful. The outstretched hands suggest benediction and upward flight and the cross. The gaping wounds in hands and feet are marks of suffering while the face speaks volumes of victory, peace and joy. The face is a truly marvelous work. It is a masterly combination of deep, tender sympathy with strength of character. While it is most tender it is at the same time most manly. The Jewish features are there and yet the face belongs to all races of mankind. The eyes especially show the hand of the genius. No one can see them without being impressed that they have a deep concern for him. They pour forth sincerest love. The garments are of subdued purple and aurora yellow in graceful folds. Warm summer clouds are to the right and left as well as underneath, while a deep blue sky of infinite depth opens limitless space above, through this

Continued on Page 13

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

N. B. Be sure to get only

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION
25 CTS. 25 CTS.

INFANTILE SKIN AND SCALP DISEASES CURED BY Cuticura

EVERY HUMOR OF THE SKIN AND SCALP of infancy and childhood, whether torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, scaly, crusted, pimply or blotchy, with loss of hair, and every impurity of the blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, is speedily, permanently and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. Parents, save your children years of mental and physical suffering. Begin now. Delays are dangerous. Cures made in childhood are permanent.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston, Mass.

Send for "How to Cure Skin and Blood Diseases."

Baby's Skin and Scalp preserved and beautified by CUTICURA SOAP.

Kidney pains, backache, and muscular rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

PARSONS' PILLS

Make New, Rich Blood!

These pills were a wonderful discovery. No others like them in the world. Will positively cure or relieve all manner of disease. The information around each box is worth ten times the cost of a box of pills Find out about them, and you will always be thankful. ONE PILL A DOSE. They expel all impurities from the blood. Delicate women find great benefit from using them. Illustrated pamphlet free. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cts. in stamps; five boxes $1.00. DR. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., 22 Custom House St., Boston, Mass.

MONEY can be earned at our NEW line of work, rapidly and honorably, by those of either sex, young or old, and in their own localities, wherever they live. Any one can do the work. Easy to learn. We furnish everything. We start you. No risk. You can devote your spare moments, or all your time to the work. This is an entirely new lead, and brings wonderful success to every worker. Beginners are earning from $25 to $50 per week and upwards, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you the employment and teach you FREE. No space to explain here. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

VanHouten's Cocoa
"BEST & GOES FARTHEST."
The purest, most soluble—the original cocoa. Invented, patented and made in Holland. Delicate, stimulating, nutritious, much better for the nerves than tea and coffee. Ask for VAN HOUTEN'S, take no other. [61

ELY'S CREAM BALM
Applied into Nostrils is Quickly Absorbed, Cleanses the Head, Heals the Sores and Cures
CATARRH
Restores Taste and Smell, quickly Relieves Cold in Head and Headache. 50c. at Druggists. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St. N.Y

THE CURE FOR
CATARRH
COLD IN HEAD
HAYFEVER
DEAFNESS
HEADACHE
ELY'S CREAM BALM
TRADEMARK
50c

BEECHAM'S PILLS
Cure SICK HEADACHE.
25 Cents a Box.
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE of 16,600f.
QUINA-
LAROCHE'S
INVIGORATING TONIC,
CONTAINING
Peruvian Bark, and Pure Catalan Wine.
Endorsed by the Medical Faculty of Paris, as the Best Remedy for
LOSS of APPETITE, FEVER and AGUE, MALARIA, NEURALGIA and INDIGESTION.

KINA
QUINA LAROCHE

An experience of 25 years in experimental analysis, together with the valuable aid extended by the Academy of Medicine in Paris, has enabled M. Laroche to extract the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark (a result not before attained), and to concentrate them in an elixir, which possesses in the highest degree its restorative and invigorating qualities, free from the disagreeable bitterness of other remedies.
22 rue Drouot, Paris.
E. FOUGERA & CO., Agents for U. S.,
30 North William street, N. Y.
LAROCHE

BLATCHLEY WOOD FORCE PUMP
Cheapest and most efficient. A Complete Fire Department on your premises. Write for descriptive circular. CHAS. G. BLATCHLEY, Philada.

streams welcoming light from the celestial world.

The above description is not in the least overdrawn; it fails altogether to do the work justice. The picture could not be otherwise than a work of rare merit from the long time and far reaching reputation of Mr. Seiling, whose handiwork adorns some of the costliest churches in the large cities. Mrs. Pannebecker and the W. W. Society deserve great credit for their work of love, and the community is under tribute to Trinity church for a work of art which will become famous when its merits become known.

To the right and left of the chancel are large tablets containing the Apostles' Creed and the Lord's Prayer, replacing the same as they were on the wall previous to the remodeling.

The chancel picture was unveiled at the morning service on Sunday, the 8th inst. At that service the church was packed to its utmost capacity. At 10.30 A. M. the choir began to sing "How lovely is Zion," and the pastor entered the chancel. The order of service was the usual morning service to the end of the morning prayer. The pastor, standing at the lectern announced the special feature of the service, the unveiling of the painting, and read a history of the work. He paid a glowing tribute to the energy of the society who by their industry had secured the means required to procure the work. He explained why the particular subject had been selected, and gave an account of the artist and his manner of working. At the close of this introduction, the congregation was asked to rise and sing an Ascension hymn. When the closing lines,

"Lift up your heads, ye heavenly gates!
Ye everlasting doors, give way!"

fell from the lips of the expectant worshipers the veil glided gracefully to the floor and the magnificent work was before the eyes of the people.

The services closed with a brief sermon on the high art in the Christian religion, the offerings of the people, prayer, hymn, and benediction. Many lingered a long time to feast their eyes. Streams of people poured into the church the greater part of the day. At the evening service the church was again crowded. Everybody seemed happy, the members of the church in their possession of an art treasure and their friends over the evident prosperity of Trinity Reformed church.—Columbia Daily News.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

CORNER-STONE LAYING.

Faith Mission of the Second Reformed church, Reading, Pa., Rev. C. F. McCauley, D.D., pastor, Rev. Rufus W. Miller, assistant, laid its corner-stone on Sunday, February 8th, 3 30 P. M.

Rev. H. Mosser delivered an appropriate address. Rev. Dr. B. Bausman, and Revs. J. W. Steinmetz, C. S. Gerhard and L. K. Derr took part in the exercises. Rev. Rufus W. Miller, in the absence of Dr. McCauley (absent because of inclement weather), laid the corner-stone according to the Directory of Worship. Fully 1500 were present.

Faith Mission is an outgrowth of the John Ermentrout Mission Sunday-school, held for many years in a public schoolhouse. The building is being erected by the Second church, under the supervision of a committee—J. H. Stein, B. F. Ruth, P. M. Ermentrout, Geo. F. Baer, John E. Bubp, Wm. T. Hain. The location is an excellent one, in the southern part of the city, Bingaman street, near Fourth street, in the midst of a large laboring population. The lot is 44 feet along Bingaman street, and 116 and 137 feet in depth. The structure will be one story and built of pressed brick, with brown stone trimmings. The entrance will be from Bingaman street, through the main building as well as through the tower. The tower will be 75 feet high and beautifully ornamented. The main building will be 36 feet in height to the cone of the roof. The main auditorium will be 48 by 32 feet 10 inches. A room, fronting the auditorium, to be used as a reading-room and Bible class room, will be so arranged that when occasion requires it may be thrown open, thus making the auditorium 65x32. The pulpit will be at the northern end of the building. A primary room will be in the rear of the main room, and will be 20 by 32 feet in size, attached and communicating with the main auditorium. The design of the building is neat and handsome. L. H. Focht, of Reading, is the architect and builder. The lot and building will cost some $10,000.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A POSTSCRIPT.

I feel very sorry that the name of the architect does not appear in my article on St. Andrew's church, Reading, Pa., and I am anxious to make amends for an unintentional oversight.

The name of the architect is Mr. J. W. B. Fry, of Philadelphia, who is also an active member of the Church of the Strangers of our Zion, and for that reason I deplore the omission. The Scriptures exhort us: "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

It has been my good pleasure to see several churches built according to the elegant plans of Mr. Fry, and they prove, beyond a doubt, that he thoroughly understands his business. St. Andrew's church will be a permanent testimonial to his ability as an architect. Pastors and consistories, who may think of building, should consult him first.

A. R. BARTHOLOMEW.
Pottsville, Pa.

RESOLUTIONS IN REFERENCE TO THE SABBATH.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted at the Cumberland Valley Sabbath Association, which assembled at Carlisle last week:

WHEREAS, The sanctification of the Lord's day is a duty that Christian patriots owe to God and their country as one of the bulwarks of civil and religious liberty.

WHEREAS, There is a growing tendency especially on the part of corporations to break down the barriers set by our fathers against the profanation of the Lord's day by encouraging all manner of secular pursuits and worldly pastimes, therefore

Resolved, That we as the representatives of Evangelical Christian congregations of all denominations in the Cumberland Valley assembled in convention in Carlisle, this 10th day of February, 1891, do solemnly and emphatically protest against any and every effort on the part of individual societies and corporations that tends to rob the Sabbath of its proper sanctity as a divine institution intended to promote the physical, moral and spiritual welfare of mankind.

Resolved, That to this end we respectfully request the Senate and House of Representatives at Harrisburg not to pass the bills now pending before those bodies, giving barbers, newspapers, apothecaries and confectioners special privileges on the Lord's day to do secular business and make money where no real object of charity or necessity is likely to be promoted thereby.

Resolved, That we especially object to the efforts being made to give to jurors instead of magistrates power to decide what are acts of charity and necessity.

Resolved, That we protest against the desecration of the Lord's day under the form of camp meetings when the gates are kept open and where railroad trains are run preventing Sabbath rest on the part of employes and where thousands who would otherwise attend upon the regular services of God's house are encouraged to engage in scenes of worldly pastime and dissipation.

Resolved, That the efforts being made in certain quarters to continue the meeting at Williams Grove over the Lord's Day is likely to result in the running of special excursion trains and other forms of Sabbath demoralization, therefore we earnestly protest against the proposed change in regard to the time and manner of holding the meetings of the Assembly aforesaid unless the gates are closed on the Lord's Day.

Resolved, That inasmuch as Postmaster General Wanamaker has signified his willingness to put an end to the Sunday mail service whenever a majority of the people express a desire to have it done, we therefore urge all Christian and patriotic people to petition for its abrogation in every community where such service is conducted on the Lord's Day.

Resolved, That the officers of this association be requested to furnish forms of petitions to be sent to our state and national legislatures, after being adopted by our respective congregations at the earliest practicable date, protesting against anti-Sabbath legislation referred to above, and the opening of the World's fair at Chicago on the Lord's Day.

Resolved, That we name the first Sabbath on next April or a Sabbath as near that as possible as a suitable time when every minister of every church in the Cumberland Valley shall preach to his people on the Sabbath, its proper observance, etc.

The chairman of the committee presenting the above was Rev. A. H. Kremer, D.D., and Rev. C. Cort, secretary.

Church News.

☞Stated Clerks of Classes and Pastors will oblige us by sending such Items of News as will be of interest to the Church.

OUR OWN CHURCH.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Shenandoah.—Rev. M. H. Brensinger has accepted a call to this place.

Butler.—Rev. D. N. Harnish, pastor. At the January communion in the new church fifteen persons were added to the church—one on renewal, three by certificate, and eleven by confirmation. These make twenty-seven accessions since October, 1890.

Johnstown.—Rev. W. H. Bates, of Johnstown, Pa., has made another lecturing tour, having visited Sunbury, New Berlin, Mifflinburg, Catawissa, Bloomsburg, and Millersburg, from January 28th to February 6th. The places were visited in the order named. At Sunbury an admission fee of 25 cents was asked. The proceeds were mutually divided. A large and very select audience greeted him there. At the other places the lecture was free, collections were lifted which were for the church building fund. At New Berlin and Mifflinburg many were obliged to stand throughout the lecture. But it remained for Catawissa, Bloomsburg and Millersburg to outdo themselves. There were more people out than the churches afforded seating and standing room. At Millersburg the public schools were closed at 3 P.M., and the children filled the church, and gave close attention for over two hours. In the evening the church was crowded, and nearly as many turned

Continued on Page 14.

Cleveland's Baking Powder
Is Absolutely the Best,
Because—All the ingredients used stated on the label:
"The ingredients used in Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder are accurately stated on the label."—A. M. Comey, Ph.D., Prof. of Chemistry, Tufts College.

Tutt's Pills
CURE CONSTIPATION.
To enjoy health one should have regular evacuations every twenty four hours. The evils, both mental and physical, resulting from HABITUAL CONSTIPATION
are many and serious. For the cure of this common trouble, Tutt's Liver Pills have gained a popularity unparalleled. Elegantly sugar coated.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Mention this paper.
Books
New Books every week. Catalogue, 132 pages, free; not sold by Dealers; prices too low; buy of the Publisher, JOHN B. ALDEN, 393 Pearl St., New York.

OUR NEW CROCHET BOOK No. 2. 50 PATTERNS SENT FOR 10 CENTS.
Send 5 cents for new TIDY PATTERN
or 60c. for full set of 12 Tidies from London and Paris, including Crochet Book No. 2. A spool of our Twilled Lace Thread, Best in the World, for 10c.
GLASGO LACE THREAD CO., Glasgo, Conn.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.
BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:
JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

For Gas
BAILEY'S
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass
REFLECTORS,
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free.
A. J. WEIDENER, 36 South 2d St. Philada.
For Oil
ALSO CHANDELIERS for OIL and ELECTRICITY

CHOICE CARPETINGS
IN ALL GRADES,
AT POPULAR PRICES.
A full line of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and Standard Domestic and Imported Carpets.
☞ We request only an OPPORTUNITY to show you our stock.
IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE.
NEW STORE,
1217 Market Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

CARPET buyers had better purchase of J. & J. DOBSON, 809 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, in order to receive full value for their money. They retail Carpets of their own make, which are reliable in every way.

☞Send stamp for Catalogue. (Name goods desired.)
BABY CARRIAGES 100 styles. Automatic Brake on all, Free. Adjustable, Reclining and Invalid Wheel Chairs. Factory Prices.
LUBURG MFG.CO. 145 N. 8th St. Philada.

WE MAIL FREE to any address a sample vial of RUBIFOAM for the Teeth. Deliciously flavored.
E. W. HOYT & CO., Lowell, Mass.

away. Sunday, February 1st, Rev. Bates preached in the Reformed church, Lewisburg, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Irwin Hendricks, who, by telegram, on Saturday previous, was summoned to see a sick sister in Reading, Pa.

West Millville.—The Holy Communion was held in each of the four congregations of Red Bank charge, of which Rev. R. F. Gass is pastor, as follows: At Zion, January 18th, offerings, $6.63; at Temple, January 25th, offerings, $4 19; at Nevin, February 1st, offerings, $5.65. and at Trinity, February 8th, offerings, $15.21. Total offerings, $31.68.

Three additions were made to the Trinity congregation, one by confirmation and two by reprofession. These services were well attended and more than usual interest manifested.

Reading. — Brotherhood Recognition Meeting. A recognition meeting is rather a happy name given to a meeting for the reception of a new chapter. Such was the style of a meeting given on Thursday evening, February 5th, by Chapter No. 1, Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, to the new chapter lately organized in Calvary Reformed church, Rev. J. I. Good, D.D., pastor. The meeting was held in the lecture room of the church, and was attended by some fifty young men. Addresses were given by Revs. H. Y. Stoner, Stanley L. Krebs, Jas. I. Good and Rufus W. Miller. The address of greeting was given by the President of Chapter No. 1, W. B. Price. The meeting was a success, socially as well as spiritually, and all went away more determined than ever to spread Christ's Kingdom among young men.

Cressona.—On Thursday evening, January 30th, a number of the St. Mark's congregation, laden with good things, tendered their pastor, Rev. Calvin E. Bartholomew, and his wife a pleasant surprise. Among the presents was a receipt for a car of coal, which was deposited in the bin the next morning, and a neat sum of money. The Sextette furnished music for the occasion, and all enjoyed a pleasant time.

Schuylkill Haven.—On Friday and Saturday evenings the Metamora Hall was well filled to witness the rendition of "Among Fair Women by Tennyson" and "Under the Mistletoe Bough," by the members of the St. John's Reformed Sunday-school and church. The proceeds were devoted to the organ fund of the church.

Reading.—Olivet, Rev. H. Y. Stoner, pastor. This congregation dedicated its new church on the 15th inst. Rev. O. H. Strunck preached the sermon.

Bethlehem.—St Paul's, Rev. A. Lobach, pastor. The handsome new church of this congregation was dedicated on the 15th inst. Rev. A. J. G Dubbs, D.D., preached in the morning, Rev. E. V. Gerhart, D.D., in the afternoon, and Rev. N. C. Schaeffer, Ph.D., in the evening.

Mont Alto.—At our winter communion as well as the one late in the fall, there were encouraging additions by confirmation—in all since last reported, twelve. Of these, one was an elderly lady received on her sick bed, and has since, in full faith, passed to the church above. Another, a young man of twenty-one years, was confirmed and received the communion in the University Hospital at Baltimore shortly before his triumphant departure for the general assembly on high.

MARYLAND.

Baltimore.—St. Paul's, Rev. Warren J. Johnson, pastor. At the communion held January 25th, five additional members were received. St. Paul's Chapter No. 25, has instituted a half-hour devotional service each Sunday evening before the regular service. The lecture room of the church is filled each evening. The young men alternate in leading these meetings, giving a course of talks on "Nights of the Bible."

WEST VIRGINIA.

Martinsburg.—At the annual meeting of the Missionary Society of the Reformed congregation of this city, Wednesday evening, February 4th, the following officers were elected: H. L. Doll, president, (re-elected); T. E. Bentz, vice-president; W. L. Jones, secretary; Miss E. A. Rauch, treasurer (re-elected); the officers, together with the pastor, Mrs. M. M. Blessing, Mrs. James B. Fisher, and Mrs. C. H. Quenzel, constitute the executive committee.

This Society held its seventh anniversary on Sunday, 8th inst. There was a large attendance both morning and evening. The services were worshipful and heartily rendered. The address was delivered by Rev. T. J. Barkley, of Gettysburg, Pa., and was an able, interesting and profitable development of his subject, "The True Spirit of Mission Work. The total receipts for the year were $112 89, and the disbursements $89.15. In addition the offering at the service was $12.63.

The evening service was greatly enjoyed as was also the sermon by Rev. Barkley, who chose for his theme, "The Word of God, the True Seed of Life."

Rev. G. G. Everhart, of Shepherdstown, and Mr. Getzendanner, drove up from Kearneysville Sunday evening to attend the services in the Reformed church. They remained over night with Rev. Barkley at the Reformed parsonage, returning in the morning.

The altar cloth lately placed in the Reformed church by the Ladies' Mite Society of the congregation, is very much admired. It is the joint work of Mrs. Geo. W. Feidt and Mrs. J. T. Pauling. The letters were designed by Mr. Rearick.

OHIO.

Petersburg.—Springfield Charge, Rev. B. Howard Roth, pastor. On Sunday, January 4th, a series of meetings was begun in the Salem congregation of this charge, which continued for one week. The audience increased every evening, and all seemed to be deeply interested in the same. Services were also held on Saturday evening, January 17th, at which the auditorium was again filled with eager listeners. The communion services were held on Sunday, January 18th, at which time fourteen were received into full membership—seven of whom received adult baptism.

On Sunday evening, January 18, meetings were begun in the Springfield congregation and closed with the Holy Communion on the following Sunday. More than ordinary interest was manifested during all these meetings. During them twenty persons were added to the membersbip. Three of them were baptized. Thus thirty-four persons were added to our number, of whom seventeen are heads of families.

The Giver of all has richly blessed the people and to Him all the praise is ascribed.

A SITUATION OPEN.

A good, sober and industrious baker could find a good opening for a paying business in a thriving town on the Pennsylvania R. R. Full information can be had by addressing Rev. J. David Miller, Box 71, Marysville, Pa.

BEECHAM'S PILLS act like magic on a weak stomach.

If Pennsylvania ever gets a secret ballot it will tell on the majorities.

Grayness, baldness, dandruff, and all diseases of the scalp, and falling of the hair can be cured by using Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Restorer.

The John Boyle O'Reilly fund now totals up to $181,000.

All that we can say as to the merits of Dobbins' Electric Soap, pales into nothingness before the story it will tell you itself, of its own perfect quality, if you will give it one trial. Don't take imitation. There are lots of them.

A good habit to get into is that of the vest pocket voter.

DESERVING OF CONFIDENCE.

There is no article which so richly deserves the entire confidence ot the community as BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Those suffering from Asthmatic and Bronchial Diseases, Coughs, and Colds should try them. They are universally considered superior to all other articles used for similar purposes. The late Henry Ward Beecher said of them: "I have never changed my mind respecting them from the first, except I think yet better of that which I began by thinking well of. I have also commended them to my friends, and they have proved extremely serviceable."

ANNUAL STATEMENT, 1890.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, in its statement for the year ending December 31, 1890 shows that the business of that successful company continues to grow at a phenomenal rate, the figures presented being unusually large. The assets of the company on the above date were $147,154,961, invested as follows: Real estate and bonds and mortgage loans, $76,529,231; United States bonds and other securities, $51,311,631; loans on collateral securities, $8,624,400; cash on hand and in banks at interest, $3,556,441, and accrued interest, etc., $7,133,256. The new business done by the company in 1890 exceeds all previous records, and compared with the previous year, the several items named show the following increase: In assets, $10,753,633; in reserve on policies and surplus, $10,554,091; in receipts, $3,859,759; in payments to policy holders, $1,772,591; in risks assumed (4,611 policies), $9,383,502; in risks in force (23 745 policies), $72,276.931. During 1890 the total new risks assumed amounted to the extraordinary sum of $160,985,986, making the total amount of insurance in force $638,226,865. The payments to policy holders reached $16,973,200, while the total receipts of the company for the year were $34,978, 778. To successfully handle the finances of this vast business requires great skill and tact, not only in keeping the moneys properly employed, but in protecting the interests of hundreds of thousands of policy holders. The company's reserve on policies at 4 per cent. is $136,668 368, and its liabilities other than reserve are $505,359, while the surpulus is $9,981,233. Since 1844 the risks assumed by the company have grown from $34 681,420 to $160 985,986 for a single year; total risks outstanding from $351,789,285 in 1884 to $638,226,865 in 1890; payments to policy holders from $13,923,062 per annum to $16,973,200; receipts from $19,095.318 to $34,978.778, and assets from $103 876,178 to $147,154 961. The Board of Trustees consists of 36 well-known business men, and the president of the company is Richard A. McCurdy. The General Agent at Philadelphia is William H. Lambert.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. Sold by druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind Twenty-five cents a bottle.

VIRGINIA FARMS FREE CATALOGUE
R. B. CHAFFIN & CO. RICHMOND, VA.

BEATTY PIANOS (new) $145. ORGANS $35.
DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, N. J.

By All Odds

The most generally useful medicine is Ayer's Pills. As a remedy for the various diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, these Pills have no equal. Their sugar-coating causes them not only to be easy and pleasant to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity in all climates and for any reasonable length of time. The best family medicine, Ayer's Pills are, also, unsurpassed for the use of travelers, soldiers, sailors, campers, and pioneers. In some of the most critical cases, when all other remedies have failed, prove effective.

Ayer's Pills

"In the summer of 1864 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. C. Luce, Late Lieut. 56th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry.

"Ayer's Pills are

The Best

I have ever used for headaches, and they act like a charm in relieving any disagreeable sensation in the stomach after eating." —Mrs. M. J. Ferguson, Pullens, Va.

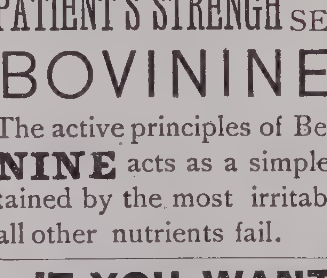
"I was a sufferer for years from dyspepsia and liver troubles, and found no permanent relief until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. They have effected a complete cure."—George W. Mooney, Walla Walla, W. T.

Ayer's Pills,

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

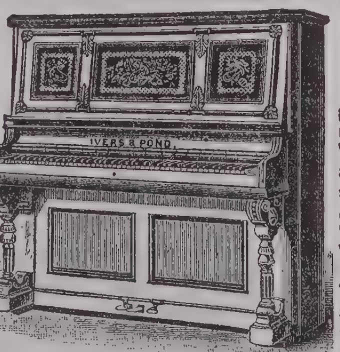


BOVININE

A CONDENSED FOOD

A FEW DROPS —OF— BOVININE TAKEN ETERY HOUR IN MILK WILL SUSTAIN THE PATIENT'S STRENGH WHILE DIETING IN SEVERE CASES OF TYPHOID FEVER.

BOVININE is indispensable in all cases of typhoid fever, especially during convalescence. The active principles of Beef concentrated contained in BOVININE acts as a simple and effective nourishment, and is retained by the most irritable stomach, and will sustain life when all other nutrients fail.



IF YOU WANT A PIANO

Write us. We will SEND our

100-PAGE CATALOGUE FREE,

giving valuable information. We make it easy to deal with us WHEREVER YOU LIVE. Our prices are MOST REASONABLE for strictly FIRST-CLASS PIANOS. WE

SELL ON EASY PAYMENTS.

We take OLD PIANOS in Exchange, EVEN THOUGH YOU LIVE TWO THOUSAND MILES AWAY. We guarantee satisfaction, or Piano to be returned to us AT OUR EXPENSE for RAILWAY FREIGHTS BOTH WAYS.

IVERS & POND PIANO CO., 183 Tremont St., BOSTON, MASS.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE
For Wakefulness,
Hysteria, and other diseases of the nervous system.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

RESOLUTIONS.

At the monthly meeting of the Missionary Society of the Reformed Church held February 1, 1891, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, In view of the loss we have sustained by the decease of one of our number, Mrs. Anna Louise Voight and of the still heavier loss sustained by those who were nearest and dearest to her. Therefore be it

Resolved, That it is but a just tribute to the memory of the departed to say that in regretting her removal from our midst we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our respect and regard.

Resolved, That we sincerely condole with the family of the departed on the dispensation with which it has pleased divine Providence to afflict them and commend them for consolation to Him who orders all things for the best and whose chastistisements are meant in all mercy.

Resolved, That this heartfelt testimonial of our sympathy and sorrow be forwarded to the family of the departed and to the Mt. Pleasant Journal and the REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER.

Shed not for her the bitter tear,
  Nor give the heart to vain regret,
'Tis but the casket that lies here,
  The gem that filled it sparkles yet
    Sheltered and safe from sorrow.

HENRY BAUGHMAN,
MISS ANNIE BETHEL, Committee.
MISS BLANCHE HOKE,

THE ORIGIN OF DISEASES.

"As to the origin of diseases that must be obvious." This was written over two thousand years ago, but now, after twenty-two centuries of experiment and investigation, the origin of diseases is not obvious at all. Not knowing the cause, it should seem difficult to find the proper drug to administer. As we have no time to await the result of other centuries of scientific research, why not try a remedy which is not a drug, but a vitalizer, inhaled into the lungs, absorbed into the blood, and which, reaching every organ of the body, gives strength to resist and repel the disease? Such a remedy is Compound Oxygen. We have hundreds of testimonials.

Our brochure of 200 pages contains a mass of evidence, testimonials, and interesting reading matter even for well persons. Sent free. It gives the history of Compound Oxygen, its nature and results, with records of cases pronounced incurable, but still they were cured by our Compound Oxygen Treatment. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

Acknowledgments.

Receipts for Foreign Missions January 1st to 31st, 1891.

Jan. 1—	Pennsylvania, Henry Shell, treas Ref S S, Myerstown, additional,		$ 78
	Maryland, Rev A E Schade, Baltimore, from 4th German Ref St John's ch,		10 17
	Pennsylvania, D B Mauger, treasurer Gosh Classis,
	Ref Miss Soc, Zionsville cong,	20 00
	Trinity Zion's Ref cong, Pottstown, Union Thanksgiving collection,	26 41	46 41
" 2—	Montana, From "Your Co-Pilgrim," Butte, Montana, per Rev C Hartman, Fort Wayne, Ind,		50 00
" 3—	Maryland, Rev U Henry Heilman, treas Maryland Cl,
	Silver Run chge, Rev J G Noss,	6 32
	Zwingli Miss Soc, Grace ch, Washington, D C, Rev Appel,	10 00
	Rev and Mrs T G Appel, personal,	5 00
	Christ ch, Baltimore, Rev A M Schmidt,	5 00
	Mission Soc, Middletown chge, Rev T F Hoffmeier,	16 36	42 68
" 5—	Pennsylvania, Rev T O Stem, treas East Penna Cl,
	St John's Ref ch, Nazareth, Pa,	12 72
	Rev M A Smith,	2 28
	Rittersville cong,	8 47	23 47
	Virginia, M B Schmidt, Woodstock,		20 00
	Indiana, Rev M G I Stern, from a friend in Evg Ref St John's ch, Indianapolis,	10 00
	From a lady member, special for Rev M Oshikawa's Miss, Sendai, Japan,	10 00	20 00
	Michigan, Rev I Matzinger, Saltzburg, Bay City Miss cong,		1 50
" 6—	Pennsylvania, per Miss Mary J Emig, Emigsville, York Co, for support of "Plucky Japanese Youth," as follows, from
	Mrs Fanny M Emig [illegible].00, Mr and Mrs A R D[illegible], Walla Walla, Washington, [illegible].00,	20 00
	Miss Bell M Emig, 5.00, Miss Mary J Emig, 5.00,	10 00	30 00
	Rev Geo W Williard, DD, Collegeville, Christmas gift from self and wife,		10 00
	Ohio, Rev C Baum, Lima, Lima Ref ch, 5.00, Mission Band, 15.00,		20 00
" 8—	Pennsylvania, Ella Bressler, treas W M Soc, St John's Ref ch, McEwensville, for support of "Obano Yumeyo San," Girls' school,		60 00
" 10—	Ohio, John A Keller, Bradner, Wood county,		5 00
	Rev F O Zech, DD, Cincinnati, Miss col, Evang Ref Salem ch,		50 00
	West Virginia, Rev J A Hoffheins, Martinsburg, part of a Christmas offering of S S,		12 37
	Ohio, Mrs Rev W H Shultz, Leavittsburg,		5 00
	Pennsyvania, Rev F W Berleman, Mrs H Dickel, Ref Salem ch,		5 00
	Rev J I Good, D D, Reading, Calvary Ref ch,		8 00
	Pennsylvan, Rev J David Miller, treas Carlisle Cl,
	Duncannon chge, Christ ch, 7 00, Trinity ch, 7.15,	14 15
	Sulphur Spring ch, do cong,	6 00
	Landisburg chge, Lebanon, 2.93, Trinity, 10.00,	12 93	33 08
" 14—	Wisconsin, Rev C T Martin, Franklin, contributed by Julius Wickersburg, Binghampton, 5.00, Ernest Strassberger, do, 5 00,		10 00
	Pennsylvania, Rev M Diefenderfer, treas Lehigh Cl,
	Lehighton cong, 6.12, Salem cong, Allentown, S S, 15.88,	22 00
	Salem cong, Ladies' Sewing Circle,	10 00	32 00
	Maryland, Paul C Hauser, Baltimore, German Ref Immanuel S S,		8 01
	Ohio, Rev J I Swander, Fremont, Ladies' For Miss Soc,		10 00
	Do, Adam Oswald, Youngstown,		10 00
" 15—	Pennsylvania, Jacob K Funck, Esq., treas Lebanon Cl,
	W C M Soc, meeting in Annville, Thanksgiving Day,	7 08
	Rev O P Steckel, St Mark's, Lebanon,	27 77
	First Ref S S, Rev. Dr Klopp, Lebanon,	79 26	114 11
	Illinois, Rev D N Frantz, Grove City, Christmas offering, Mt Zion charge, Christian Co,		10 00
	North Carolina, Rev C B Heller, from Bethel Ref S S, East Rowan charge, proceeds of missionary sale,		7 50
" 16—	Pennsylvania, Rev G H Johnston, DD, from the Church of the Strangers, Philadelphia,		15 00
	Ohio, Abr Schneck, New Knoxville, O, from a friend,		3 00
	P S Schory, supt Waynesburgh, O, S S, special coll,		12 68
	Rev J D Neff, Newark, O, personal offering,		5 00
	Pennsylvania, Frank M Hobson, Esq, treas Trinity Ref ch, Collegeville,		32 16
" 19—	Do, Rev B F Bausman, Arendtsville, Pa, from Bender's ch Miss Soc,		15 00
" 20—	Virginia, Mr Samuel M Lantz, Edenburgh, from Edenburgh charge, for Girls' school		10 00
	Ohio, Adam Foltz, Malvern, Carroll Co, from Salem Ref S S, Waynesburg, O, chge,		12 60
	Pennsylvania, C A Shultz, York, treas Zion's Cl, Zion's Ref cong,		4 55
	Maryland, Rev B Bachman, Baltimore, from Mrs Meister, 2.50, Mrs. Gotthardt, 3 00, 5th Ev Ger Ref St Paul's ch, 6.28,		11 78
" 21—	Pennsylvania, A friend, Schwencksville,		5 00
	Do, Rev A E Dahlman, Philadelphia, Emanuel Ref cong, 20.00, Mrs F Lentz, 5.00,		25 00
	Ohio, Rev J A Klahr, supt Ref S S, Bloomville,		25 00
	Pennsylvania, Rev A Houtz, treasurer Wyoming Cl, Pa,
	Christmas offering, George W Gulden, Dorrance, Luzerne county,	10 00
	Ladies' Miss Soc, McEwensvilel, Pa,	5 00	15 00
	Rev C B Weaver, from Hamilton Ref Miss Soc, Scioto, Monroe Co,		15 00
	From the Brinker legacy, 6 months' interest,		40 25
	From a friend in Littlestown cong, Pa, per Dr Callender,		13 80
	Virginia, Women's Miss Soc, Mt Crawford, do,		18 51
	Pennsylvania, Rev A M Keifer, Greenville, from the S S of Greenville cong, 10.00, a lady member of Greenville cong, 5.00,		15 00
	Rev J B Forster, Bridesburg, Emanuel S S, 5.00, Emanuel cong, 4.00, Mrs Kohrer, 1.00,		10 00
" 24—	New York, Rev J F Busche, DD, from Mrs Reem,	20 00
	G Augustin, 20.00, Miss Louisa Lutz, 3.00,	23 00	43 00
	Pennsylvania, Rev Frank E Lauffer, Salina, from Miss cong,		2 00
	North Carolina, Rev C B Heller, from Grace Ref S S of East Rowan chge, N C, proceeds of missionary sale,		6 50
	Pennsylvania, Rev F A Rupley, DD, Martinsburg, treas Juniata Cl,
	Greenfield chge, Claysburg Miss Soc, 10.00, Greenfield Miss Soc, 10.00,	20 00
	Altoona Christ ch S S, 30.00, Sulphur Spring, including Grace Miss Soc, 20 00,	50 00
	Martinsburg chge, 29.00, St Clairsville Trinity Miss Soc, 10.00,	39 00	109 00
	Rev Robt C Bowling, treas Clarion Cl, from Curllsville chge (Rev D B Lady) 31 00, ($5 for Girls' School,)	31 00
	Eddyville Miss Soc, St John's chge, Rev S T Wagner,	12 00	43 00
" 28—	Chas H Gutelius, Mifflinburg, for Girls' School,		5 00
	Ohio, Rev H Rust, DD, per C G Gross, treas General Synod,		15 80
	Rev Joseph A Keller, Hartville, Ohio, from S S scholars, Carl Ream, 2.07, Maud Ream, 2.05,		4 12
	Rev David Winter, Prospect, O, Zion Ref ch,		3 85
" 29—	Nebraska, Rev F Hullhurst, Yutan, from St Peter's Ladies' Soc,		10 00
	Pennsylvania, Dr Isaac Lefevre, treas 2d Ref cong, Harrisburg,		4 38
	H J Ruby, treas Miss Soc, Ref Ch of the Strangers, W Phila,		10 00

JOS L. LEMBERGER, Treasurer.
Lebanon, Pa.,

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK

RICHARD A. McCURDY, PRESIDENT,

Statement for the year ending December 31st, 1890.

Assets,		$147,154,961 20
Reserve on Policies at 4%,		$136,668,368 00
Liabilities other than Reserve,		505,359 82
Surplus,		9,981,233 38
Receipts from all sources,		34,978,778 69
Payments to Policy-Holders,		16,973,200 05
Risks assumed,	49,188 policies,	160,985,985 58
Risks in force,	206,055 policies,	638,226,865 24

THE ASSETS ARE INVESTED AS FOLLOWS:

Real Estate and Bond & Mortgage Loans,	$76,529,231 72
United States Bonds and other Securities,	51,311,631 54
Loans on Collateral Securities,	8,624,400 00
Cash in Banks and Trust Companies at interest,	3,556,441 59
Interest accrued, Premiums deferred, etc.,	7,133,256 35
	$147,154,961 20

I have carefully examined the foregoing statement and find the same to be correct.
A. N. WATERHOUSE, Auditor.

From the Surplus above stated a dividend will be apportioned as usual.

The business for 1890 shows INCREASE over that of 1889, as follows:

In Assets,		$10,753,633 18
In Reserve on Policies and Surplus,		10,554,091 94
In Receipts,		3,859,759 07
In Payments to Policy-holders,		1,772,591 67
In Risks assumed,	4,611 policies,	9,383,502 21
In Risks in force,	23,745 policies,	72,276,931 32

Year.	Risks Assumed.	Risks Outstanding.	Payments to Policy-Holders.	Receipts.	Assets.
1884	$34,681,420	$351,789,285	$13,923,062 19	$19,095,318 41	$103,876,178 51
1885	46,507,139	368,981,441	14,402,049 90	20,214,954 28	108,908,967 51
1886	56,832,719	393,809,203	13,129,103 74	21,137,176 67	114,181,963 24
1887	69,457,468	427,628,933	14,128,423 60	23,119 922 46	118,806,851 88
1888	103,214,261	482,125,184	14,727,550 22	26,215,932 52	126,082,153 56
1889	151,602,483	565,949,934	15,200,608 38	31,119,019 62	136,401.328 02
1890	160,985,986	638,226,865	16,973,200 05	34,978,778 69	147,154,961 20

New York, January 28th, 1891.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

SAMUEL E. SPROULLS.
LUCIUS ROBINSON.
SAMUEL D. BABCOCK.
GEORGE S. COE.
RICHARD A. McCURDY.
JAMES C. HOLDEN.
HERMANN C. VON POST.
ALEXANDER H. RICE.
LEWIS MAY.
OLIVER HARRIMAN.
HENRY W. SMITH.
ROBERT OLYPHANT.
GEORGE F. BAKER.
JOS. THOMPSON.
DUDLEY OLCOTT.
FREDERIC CROMWELL.
JULIEN T. DAVIES.
ROBERT SEWELL.
S. VAN RENSSELAER CRUGER.
CHARLES R. HENDERSON.
GEORGE BLISS.
RUFUS W. PECKHAM.
J. HOBART HERRICK.
WM. P. DIXON.
ROBERT A. GRANNISS.
HENRY H. ROGERS.
JNO. W. AUCHINCLOSS.
THEODORE MORFORD.
WILLIAM BABCOCK.
PRESTON B. PLUMB.
STUYVESANT FISH.
AUGUSTUS D. JUILLIARD.
CHARLES E. MILLER.
JAMES W. HUSTED.
WALTER R. GILLETTE.
JAMES E. GRANNISS.

ROBERT A. GRANNISS, VICE-PRESIDENT.

WALTER R. GILLETTE, General Manager. ISAAC F. LLOYD, 2d Vice-President.
WILLIAM J. EASTON, Secretary. FREDERICK SCHROEDER, Assistant Sec'y.
ARCHIBALD N. WATERHOUSE, Auditor.

EMORY McCLINTOCK, LLD., F. I. A., Actuary.
JOHN TATLOCK, JR., Assistant Actuary. CHARLES B. PERRY, 2d Assistant Actuary.

FREDERIC CROMWELL, Treasurer.
JOHN A. FONDA, Assistant Treasurer. WILLIAM P. SANDS Cashier.
EDWARD P. HOLDEN, Assistant Cashier.

WILLIAM G. DAVIES, General Solicitor. WILLIAM W. RICHARDS, Comptroller.

MEDICAL DIRECTORS:
GUSTAVUS S. WINSTON, M.D. E. J. MARSH, M.D. GRANVILLE M. WHITE, M.D.

WM. H. LAMBERT,
GENERAL AGENT,
MUTUAL LIFE BUILDING, Tenth and Chestnut Streets,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

AT OUR EXPENSE.

"If you want a piano" is the catch line of an advertisment in another column The advertisers to whom it calls attention are exhibiting a degree of enterprise that is not often associated with methods in vogue with piano dealers. The offer to give full information, to sell on easy payments, to take old pianos in exchange, to send a new piano "at our expense, for railway freights both ways," seems almost too liberal to be trusted. But when the offer is made by so well-known and reliable a firm as the Ives & Pond Piano Co., 183 Tremont St., Boston, there is no excuse left for doubt or delay. "If you want a piano" you should send to them for one of their 100 page catalogues, which gives full information. The catalogues can be had free on application.

Good Sense CORSET WAISTS
Give better satisfaction than any other. Are the best substitute for corsets.

STAMMERING.
CURE GUARANTEED. French-German Method. Write for testimonials. ECK'S SCHOOL, 837 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

POSTAL NOTES
Received for DEWEY'S System of Sign Words. TIME, LABOR, SPACE saved in making.
Much labor saved in writing PREACHER'S NOTES
And great FACILITY acquired in TEACHER'S NOTES
By using these signs for abbreviating STUDENT'S NOTES
Inclose 50 Cts. NOW.
Box 1027. W. W. DEWEY, Cadillac, Mich

USE FERRY'S SEEDS
BECAUSE THEY ARE
THE BEST.
D. M. FERRY & Co's
Illustrated, Descriptive and Priced
SEED ANNUAL
For 1891 will be mailed FREE to all applicants, and to last season's customers. It is better than ever.
Every person using Garden, Flower or Field Seeds, should send for it. Address
D. M. FERRY & CO.
DETROIT, MICH.
Largest Seedsmen in the world

BAXTER C. SWAN
MANUFACTURER OF
CHURCH, HALL AND LODGE
FURNITURE
IN GREAT VARIETY.
Pews and Chapel Seatings, Pulpits, Pulpit Chairs, Communion and Altar Tables, S. S. Teachers' Desks, &c.
Write for information to
244 & 246 South Second St.
PHILADELPHIA, PA., U.S.A.

THE PENN MUTUAL LIFE
Insurance Company issues all approved forms of contracts adapted to every legitimate need, for protection, for investment, and for both; for long or short periods, at the lowest, sure rates.
Its policies are squarely reciprocal, free from ambiguity and objectionable features, absolutely NON-FORFEITABLE and INCONTESTABLE. Send for rates, etc. Home Office, 921 Chestnut St., Phila

AMERICAN
Fire Insurance Company,
NOS. 308 and 310 WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA

"SPECIAL"

CLEARING SALE

FOR CHANGE OF PLANS.

Our Entire Stock of

English Clothing will be Closed Out At Half Value.

E. O. THOMPSON,
SPECIAL CLOTHIER AND IMPORTER,
1338 Chestnut Street.
(Opposite the Mint.)

CLINTON H. MENEELY BELL COMPANY,
TROY, N. Y. Manufacture a Superior Grade of
CHURCH CHIME PEAL AND SCHOOL BELLS

Best quality Bells for Churches, Chimes, Schools, etc. Fully warranted. Write for Prices. BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY, VAN DUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY,
BALTIMORE, MD.
Best quality Copper and Tin BELLS for Churches, Schools, &c.
Also CHIMES AND BELLS.
Price and terms free. Name this paper.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N.Y., Bells
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others.

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO.
CINCINNATI, O., sole makers of the "Blymyer"
Church, School and Fire Alarm Bells.
Catalogue with over 2200 testimonials.

RIGGS & BROTHER,
Branch Store, 1005 Walnut St., Phila
Ladies' 14-Carat Gold Watches, $25.
" 14-Carat filled case " 18.
Boys' Silver Watches, $7.00.
Watches and Clocks repaired.

400,000 The largest circulation of any periodical in the world. "The Phila. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies free. CURTIS PUB. CO., Phila., Pa.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS

Over 200,000 ESTEY ORGANS are singing their own praises the world over, as the most reliable organ made for tone, durability and fine finish. The ESTEY PIANO is as thoroughly and carefully made and guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has. If you want a first-class Piano that is sure to please you buy an ESTEY. Lowest prices for cash, or on easy monthly payments.

ESTEY, BRUCE & CO. 18 N. Seventh St. Philadelphia, Pa.

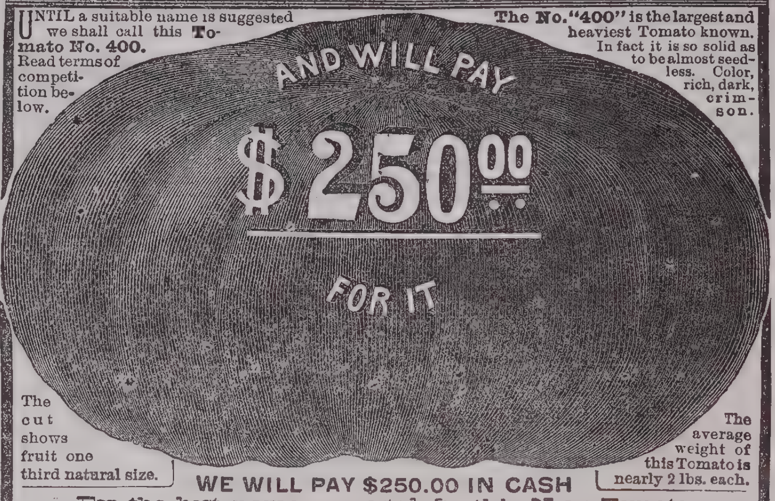
Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER ABSOLUTELY PURE

WE WANT A NAME FOR THIS NEW TOMATO

UNTIL a suitable name is suggested we shall call this Tomato No. 400. Read terms of competition below.

The No. "400" is the largest and heaviest Tomato known. In fact it is so solid as to be almost seedless. Color, rich, dark, crimson.



The cut shows fruit one third natural size.

The average weight of this Tomato is nearly 2 lbs. each.

WE WILL PAY $250.00 IN CASH

For the best name suggested for this New Tomato.

Purchasers are entitled to send in a name for each and every packet they buy. The names can be sent in any time before October 1st, 1891, and will be considered by a disinterested committee of three, who shall award the prize. Full directions for entering the names for competition given on every packet of seed.

Price of New Tomato No. "400," 25 cts. per packet, free by mail.

☞ With every order for a packet or more, we will also send free our magnificent New Catalogue of "EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN" for 1891, (the value alone of which is 25 cts.), on condition that you will state where you saw this advertisement. ☜

PETER HENDERSON & Co. 35 & 37 CORTLANDT ST. NEW YORK.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S NEW GUIDE

Is a handsome Book, 124 pages, complete, original. Describes and illustrates ROSES, HARDY PLANTS, POPULAR FLOWERS, SUMMER BULBS, FLOWER and VEGETABLE SEEDS. If you want much or little send to day for a copy—FREE.

A BOOK TO HELP WITH FLOWERS

We send orders by mail postpaid to all post offices and guarantee safe arrival and satisfaction. THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., WEST GROVE, PA.

Over 350,000 acres of Choice Farm Lands Failure of crops never known. Best all-the year climate in the world. Soil adapted to all kinds of farming. Plenty of water. Low prices, and unusually liberal terms. C. E. SIMMONS, Land Com., C. & N. W. R'y, Chicago, Ill.

CONFESSIONS of a NUN, by Sister Agatha

A work of startling realism. Cl. $1; paper 50c

JORDAN BROS, Publishers, 211 N. 9th St., Phila., Pa.

THIS BRIGHT NEW 1891

needs the brightest and best of music. The 2,000,000 readers of this ad. are all invited to provide themselves with music or music books from our complete and varied stock.

☞ Send freely for lists and information.

SOME OF OUR NEWEST BOOKS.

SONGS OF IRELAND. $1.00. Choice, revised collection of very favorite songs. 66 songs. 144 pages.

POTTER'S RESPONSES AND SENTENCES. 75 cts.; $6.75 doz. A timely and good collection, which will be welcomed by many choirs. More than 50 short pieces, with a number of Glorias, Chants, &c.

PRAYER AND PRAISE. Cantata. Ballard. A good and easy cantata, for a Choir or Chorus. 50 cents; $4.50 per doz.

MASONIC ODE. Fithian. A new, most convenient book of easy and good music, perfectly fitted for the masonic ritual. Much needed. 60 cts.; $6 doz.

COMIC AND MINSTREL SONGS. $1.00. 46 merry songs, well calculated to make time pass cheerfully.

BANNER FOLIO. Violin and Piano. Winner. Large number of popular melodies, skilfully arranged for Violin, with Piano accompaniment. $1.00.

MANDOLIN AND PIANO DUETS. Winner. About 75 popular airs for Mandolin and Piano. $1.00.

Any Book mailed, post-paid, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY, Boston
J. E. DITSON & Co., 1228 Chestnut St., Phila.

ARCHITECTURE

CHAS. W. BOLTON, 1510 Chestnut St., Phila

Sketches of Churches, Public Buildings, Dwellings, etc., furnished gratis. Then, if desired, drawings and specifications will be prepared for a reasonable consideration.

DEAFNESS & HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Tubular Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Successful when all remedies fail. Sold only by F. HISCOX, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

DO NOT STAMMER.

OFFICE OF POSTMASTER-GEN., WASHINGTON, D. C.
Dear Sir: I know Mr. Edwin S. Johnston, of whom you write, and have knowledge of the fact that he has produced wonderful cures of stammering.

Yours most truly, JOHN WANAMAKER.

Send for 54-page pamphlet to E. S. JOHNSTON'S Institute, N. E. Cor. 11th and Spring Garden Sts. Phila., Pa.

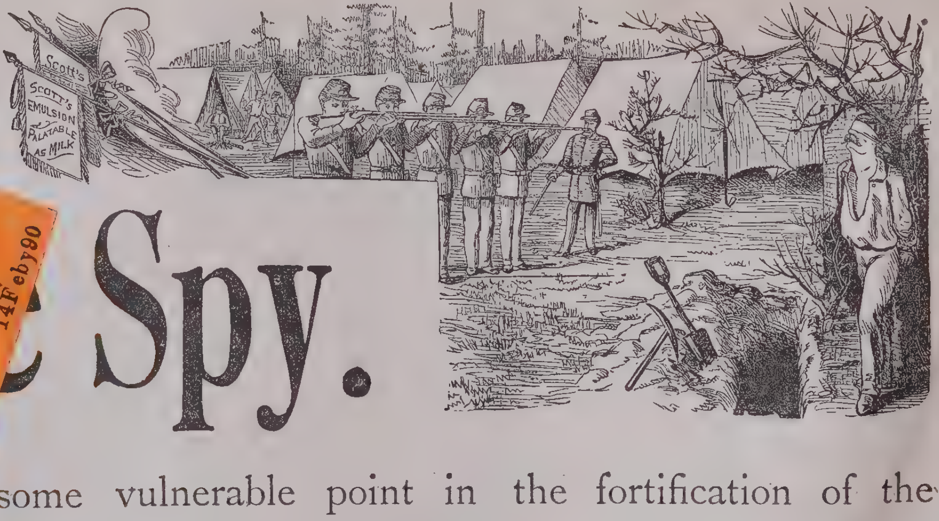
Shoot the Spy.



Scott's
SCOTT'S EMULSION PALATABLE AS MILK

Dr A H Strickler
14Feby90

A cough or cold is a spy which has stealthily come inside the lines of health and is there to discover some vulnerable point in the fortification of the constitution which is guarding your well-being. That point discovered the spy reports it to the enemy on the outside. The enemy is the changeable winter climate. If the cold gets in, look out for an attack at the weak point. To avoid this, shoot the spy, kill the cold, using SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda as the weapon. It is an expert cold slayer, and fortifies the system against Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases (specially in Children). Especially helpful for children to prevent their taking cold. Palatable as Milk.

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. All Druggists.

Reformed Church Messenger.

"AS THE TRUTH IS IN JESUS."

VOL. LIX.—NO. 9. PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, FERRUARY 26, 1891. WHOLE NO. 2929.

Entered at the Post-Office, Philadelphia, as second-class matter.

The Reformed Church Messenger.
ISSUED WEEKLY
IN THE INTERESTS OF THE
REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES
BY THE
REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE,
CHAS. G. FISHER, Proprietor,
Office: 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(For Terms, see page 11.)

Editorial Notes.

—Elsewhere will be found a few of the replies we have received in response to our wish to know who has been receiving the MESSENGER for a long term of years. They will be read with interest. In our next issue we will give a few more.

—"All Hail Our Risen Lord!"—the new Easter, service has already had quite a sale. A number of large orders have been received for it, without seeing a sample copy. It was ordered upon the strength of the satisfactory character of previous ones prepared by Messrs. Leinbach and Hill. All could well afford to do the same. It promises to have a large sale.

—From the few contributions that have been received for the fund from which to send the MESSENGER to worthy persons unable to pay for it, we have been pleased to send it so far to four persons. It is not a great number. But it is a beginning and that number of families are able to read their church paper, and no doubt will be greatly benefited by its weekly visits to their homes. The number can be greatly increased by more contributions to the fund. Shall we have them? The Lutheran Observer announced last week that one congregation sent thirty dollars towards the Observer's fund. Cannot some of our congregations or individual members do the same? We feel certain they can?

—We are in receipt of the Fifth Annual Report of the Enoch Pratt Free Library, Baltimore city, of which Hon. Lewis H. Steiner is Librarian. It is an interesting pamphlet of twenty-one pages. The Library has now besides the Central Library, five branches. The number of books upon the shelves of the Central Library is 59,666, upon those of the branches, 33,677; making a total of 93,343. The number added during 1890 is 12,273. During the same year 592,936 books and periodicals were taken out of the six libraries, the books being three times the number of periodicals. The expenses of the year were $43,731.37. The admirable working of this Library is undoubtedly due to the energies of the Librarian and his assistants, there being fifty employees in all. No estimate can be made of the amount of good done through the beneficence of the founder of this Free Library.

—Announcement is made of a concert by Franklin and Marshall Glee and Mandolin Clubs in Association Hall, 15th and Chestnut streets, this city, on Tuesday evening, March 17th, at 8 P. M. The concert will be given for the benefit of the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital, Cherry street below 18th. This a deserving institution and its lady managers deserve the encouragement and support of the people of this city, since its doors are open to all who may apply for admission into it for treatment. It is hoped and expected also that the Alumni and friends of Franklin and Marshall College will by their presence at the first appearance of the Clubs of the College in our city encourage the effort thus made to popularize the College itself. The Clubs have been greeted by large audiences in other cities and their performances have been pronounced to be of a high order, indeed superior to those of some of the noted college clubs in the country. Let there be a general move among the Alumni and friends of the College and the friends of the Hospital to give them a warm greeting and a full house on that evening. Tickets: General admission, 50 cents, admission and reserved seats, $1.00. Tickets and chart of Hall will be at 907 Arch street, after March 10th.

—There are times in the life of every pastor which call forth the deepest gratitude of his heart. The life of every earnest and faithful pastor is truly a chequered one. He has his times of joy and his times of sorrow. In both, though so opposite, the affections of those to whom he ministers are drawn towards him. In his joys they rejoice with him, in his sorrows they mourn with him. In the latter their sympathies are excited to a great degree and they make his sorrows theirs and help him to endure them by their many acts of kindness and their deep solicitude for his welfare. All this was exhibited to a striking degree on the part of the people served by Rev. E. H. Dieffenbacher of Pleasant Unity, Pa., in the sorrow that recently came upon him and his children in the death of the wife and mother. The bereaved pastor cannot find language sufficient to express his high appreciation of and great gratitude for the numerous acts of kindness shown and deep sympathies expressed by his people. The congregation generously bore all the expenses of burial, and some of its officers offered to accompany the pastor a part or whole of the way to Lock Haven, the place of burial. In addition to all this, they have offered him a vacation till Easter. It is pleasing to record such kindness and generosity that cannot help but lighten the sorrow and draw pastor and people closer together. We need not say it is pleasing to us to note such acts, and it is with a thankful and grateful heart that the pastor has received them.

—There is perhaps no more important and deserving object to which the charity of the Church can be devoted than the cause of Beneficiary Education. By means of funds available the Boards of Education are enabled to assist worthy young men in preparing themselves for the Holy Ministry. For these funds they must rely mainly upon contributions from the Church. Invariably the amount thus received falls short of the demand. The consequence is a number of worthy young men apply in vain for assistance. The demand seems to be for more laborers in the widening field, and it should not be the case that when young men are willing to offer themselves for the work, the Church is not ready with open hands to accept them and provide funds for their support whilst preparing for it. At times the Boards take young men under their care and vote them appropriations in faith and expect that the monies will be forthcoming to meet them. They do so for the best and in this they should not be found fault with. And it is not known that they are. When appeals are made to the benevolent to send contributions to the treasurer so that the young men may receive the appropriations granted them, they should be heeded and that generously.

—The above is prompted by the fact that the Board of Education of the Eastern Synod, of which the writer is treasurer, stands greatly in need of funds to meet appropriations already granted and to vote others to a number of young men that have applied to it for assistance. Whilst a number of the Classes regularly assess their congregations for the support of the beneficiaries under their care, there are some of the Classes within the bounds of the Synod who do not make any assessments, or at least very light ones, and thus do not call upon their congregations for any or very large contributions to this cause. These congregations and many individuals throughout the bounds of Synod could easily contribute to this object and thus help it forward. Will such take the matter into serious consideration and send to the treasurer their contributions? Let those who would remember the Church and her objects of benevolence in their last wills and testaments, not forget the Beneficiary cause and establish a fund which may yield an annual income sufficient to educate one or more young men for the ministry. "He that hath ears to hear let him hear."

—Association Local Centre, (Fifteenth and Chestnut streets) this city, under the auspices of The American Society for the Extension of University Teaching, announces a course of two lectures on the "Literary Study of the Bible," by R. G. Moulton, A.M., of Cambridge University, Eng., in Holy Trinity church, Nineteenth and Walnut streets, on March 19th and 21st, at 3.30 P M.; also the same course at Temple College, Berks street above 11th, on March 16th and 23d, at 8 P M. The announcement says: "The idea of these lectures rests upon the belief that besides its more sacred uses, the English Bible is the natural source to which English people should go for their training in literature that the Bible is, in fact, the supreme English Classic. The lectures will illustrate how to study single verses, or complete poems, or whole books of Scripture, from the literary side." Members of the American Society will be admitted to these lectures upon presentation of their membership tickets. Tickets for either course, 75 cents, which are to be had at 1602 Chestnut street. Prof. Moulton will also deliver a course of six lectures during the month of March upon "Milton's Paradise Lost." Tickets for this course are $1.00; reserved seats for the course $1 00 extra. These can be had of Geo. N. Cummings, Secretary, office of the Y. M. C. A., 15th and Chestnut streets.

Poetry.

"OTHER SHEEP I HAVE."

John x. 16.

Hark! 'tis the Lord who calls;
Saved one, He speaks to thee:
I shed My precious blood
That thou might'st rescued be;
And now, rejoicing in My love,
Thou'rt journeying to the home above.

But "other sheep I have,"
Who're wandering from the fold;
And how to enter in
They never have been told:
Oh, canst thou leave them still to roam?
Wilt thou not seek to lead them home?

Thousands of precious souls,
In regions far away,
For want of what thou hast
Are dying day by day.
Wilt thou not take the Living Bread,
And let these starving ones be fed?

'Neath Satan's galling yoke
They struggle all in vain;
Oh! must they still in sin
And ignorance remain?
Canst thou their silent plea withstand,
And not stretch out thy helping hand?

Think, think what it would be
If thou wert in their place,
With none at hand to care
Or undertake thy case.
What if without one pitying eye
Thy soul had thus been left to die!

What if thou ne'er hadst known
Of My redeeming love,
And so no peace were thine,
Nor hope of joys above!
Oh, think of what thou owest Me;
Then surely thou "constrained" wilt be.

My Saviour and my Lord,
Before Thy feet I fall:
Unworthy is the gift,
But oh, accept my all.
Send me wherever Thou dost choose,
And deign Thyself my life to use.

—C. P. C. in China's Millions.

Communications.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A MARKED CHANGE.

In the year 1863 the General Synod of the Reformed Church in the United States was organized in Grace Church, Pittsburgh, Pa. Though a delegate, we were then a young minister, lately entered into the ranks. It was an event of large account in our life, for although we had a knowledge of the state of things in our Church, as we could obtain that in various ways, we there saw and heard the leading men, representatives of different shades of opinion, who gave direction and expression to the tendencies then at work. Some of them we had known as our own teachers in college and seminary, and others we had met on occasions; others again we then met for the first time. Never before, however, had we seen them together, and heard them in earnest, though courteous, contention. Of names then and since prominent in the Church there occur to us those of Rev. Drs. Nevin, Harbaugh, Gerhart, Bomberger, Zacharias, Williard, Fisher, Gehr, Schneck, Apple, Higbee, Moses Kieffer, Ruetenik, Russell and others.

That Synod had that in it which was characteristic also of other Synods, both General and District, which we had the pleasure to attend from that time on for a number of years. Certain individuals stood out with marked prominence. Long, set speeches were made. A quick interest was felt by the delegates. The congregation turned out to listen. The Church at large awaited with anxiety the result of whatever action was taken. Reporters of local papers felt the impulse and were diffuse in reports of whatever was said and done. There was great vitality in those meetings. History was making itself rapidly. The tone then given to the Reformed Church, the adjustment of position reached in those synodical sessions, are now, and will no doubt continue to be for a long time, controlling forces in her life, and remain part of her permanent heritage. Synods were Synods in those days; not this one or that one only, but many of them, all through what has been characteristically called the heroic period of the Reformed Church in this country. There was plenty of human frailty present, but there was also at hand the elements of great wisdom, power and devotion.

Synodical meetings now-a-days are different. They do not arrest the same attention. The old interest is wanting. Speeches are shorter, and rarely thought out in advance; and if perchance they get to be long, they are also likely to be tiresome. Individuals do not stand out so prominently. Leadership is temporary, governed by the shifting items of importance which claim attention. There are men of prominence and ability present, but there is no special call upon them to come to the front in the proceedings; and if they do, they do average work, as there is little demand for any other. Routine duties have multiplied greatly; they take up more than one-half the time of the sessions of our Classes and synods. Practical matters engage our attention, but practical matters are mostly local, or, if general, they have become formal, old—things taken as a matter of course. They are important, certainly, just like it is important to earn our daily bread, and with about the same modicum of opportunity and inspiration to do that which lies beyond the ordinary.

Shall we complain of the changed state of things? Have we become a mediocre race intellectually, theologically, philosophically? Are great subjects of no interest to the present generation? Have our ideals become low and shrunken, or have they vanished altogether? Are we more of the earth, earthy? Is there no longer room for great men among us? Has that which might engage their attention and be worthy of their best efforts ceased to exist? Whoever chooses to think after this manner is at liberty to do so. For our part, however, we shall not keep him company. We think that the present is rich in possession and preparation, and the future richer yet in promise.

We live in changed times ecclesiastically so far as the Reformed Church is concerned. As a Church we lead a comparatively even life, undisturbed by sharp antagonisms and aroused feelings, the result in large measure of the theological plowing and harrowing of a former day. Ours is a period of quiet development and growth. Men differ on methods and details: they agree on main questions in so far as they project themselves to common attention.

It is interesting to notice how our Lutheran and Presbyterian friends are just now going through processes corresponding in some respects to those through which our Church went thirty years ago. Each has its own line of questions agitating it, and with each, also, these questions are fundamental, not simply in imagination but in fact. While the discussion lasts and the points remain unsettled, great interest will attach to the meetings of their Synods, councils and assemblies. Men will stand out as leaders. Crowds will gather to hear well-known speakers. Action taken will be closely watched. In these respects the parallelism with our past history, of which we have spoken, is complete, and enables us to form a more unbiassed and comprehensive judgment of men and measures than we could at the time. The controversies of our sister Churches to-day are a mirror of many things which obtained among us when we had our controversies, and in that respect they are quite worthy of study apart from their inherent merits.

WYOMING.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

LETTER NO. III.

My Dear Sisters: From what was stated in my last to be the underlying basis and nature of the headship of the man over the woman, certain things naturally follow. Whether the sovereignty of Adam involved the office of prophet and priest before the fall may be an open question, but we know that it does so since. For that can not be true sovereignty which does not carry with it the authority to determine what is right and wrong for those within the sphere in which it is to be exercised, and at the same time to shield them against perils from without. And in the covenant of redemption such authority naturally involves the necessity to declare the will of God to those who know it not and do it not, and to make atonement for the sins of the disobedient.

It takes but little observation to see that sovereignty in this sense has been present both in the family and the nation throughout the history of mankind. If sin and death had not entered into the world Adam would have been the sovereign as well as he is the father of the whole human race for all time. No son of his should ever have ceased to hold the relation of son, though he in turn were a husband and father. The same is true of his daughters, though these became wives and mothers. At the same time, it must be evident to you that the law of the relation between husband and wife, or man and woman, should have continued to be the same, for each subsequent family is but a reproduction of the original. The death of Adam ended his sovereignty over the race, but did not end the law of sovereignty; just as the death of Adam did not end the law of his office as high priest, but only his occupancy of it. As families multiplied the need of Adam's lapsed sovereignty was naturally felt. Hence the demands for kings and rulers of nations. And as a nation is but an aggregation of families the sovereignty of the ruler must be of like kind with that of the family. The ideal king, therefore, was not simply the ruler, but also the prophet and priest of his people.

The same truth underlies the covenant God made with Abraham. God binds Himself to be his God and through him also the God of all those represented in him. Abraham dies, but the promise of God does not die with him; for it is actualized in and through the head of each subsequent family, and afterwards also in the nation at large through the prophets, priests and kings.

That the sovereignty of the man as husband and father constitutes him the prophet and priest of his family is manifest throughout the Scriptures. The thirtieth chapter of the Book of Numbers shows us how the husband and father has power to make void the sacred vows of his wife and daughters.

Noah preserved his whole family for the new world, even though the irreverent Ham was among them. Lot would have been a shield even to his Sodomitic sons-in-law, had his warning not seemed to them as one that mocked. The father's blessing is as the blessing of God, and his reproof as the reproof of God, for he stands in God's stead. But you may say Christianity has changed all this. No; if this threefold office of the dead Adam is perpetuated in the families of his race, how much more true is it that the same is perpetuated in the families of the Christian Church, the Head and Life of which is the everliving and glorified Christ? In this sense it is also true that He came not to destroy the law, but to fulfill it. For, however these offices were separated during the greater part of the history of the Jews under the law, their true relation is shown in Christ who in one Person, as you have been taught in the catechism, is our Chief Prophet and Teacher, our only High Priest and our eternal King. How could the Church be really one with Him if what He is to her were not manifest in her? Hence we find the same law in force so far as the present question is concerned, only it is now more clearly revealed.

Peter tells the "men and brethren" who listened to his pentecostal sermon: "The promise is to you and to your children." You see the law of the Abrahamic covenant is not made void, but the more firmly established in the promised Seed of Abraham.

The prayers and alms of Cornelius bring the Word of salvation to his whole household. The faith of the keeper of the prison at Philippi saved him and his house. The husband may be false to his position and the wife may believe, but this does not destroy his sovereignty: "Likewise, ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands; that, if any obey not the word, they also may without the word be won by the conversation of the wives, while they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear." 1 Peter 3: 1–2. I need scarcely tell you that the word conversation here does not mean teaching Christianity by word or mouth so much as by living it.

As Christians you are also anointed by the Holy Ghost, and thus are partakers of the threefold office in common with all other Christians, but you can lawfully use such power only within the limitations of your God-ordained sphere. God is not the author of confusion, and His laws do not contradict each other. He does not make man your sovereign by one law and your subject by another. The moment you stand alongside of your husband or father in the family, you do not represent Christ the Head to either, but they do to you. And the saying of Christ is true here also: "He that despiseth you despiseth Me, and he that despiseth Me despiseth Him that sent Me." For wherever He has appointed His representative it is perilous to ignore him. Korah could swing a smoking censer as well as Aaron, and could probably speak more eloquently than Moses, but it was a fearful thing and a fatal mistake to attempt to do either in the name of the Lord without His sanction.

If you, then, as Christian women, can not be the representatives of Christ in His threefold office to your husbands and fathers in the family, how can you lawfully be such in the congregation which is an aggregation of families? If prohibition holds in the lesser sphere, is it void in the greater?

In view of what has now been said, can you possibly conceive that Paul grounded his exhortation on anything but on this representative position of man when he wrote to Timothy: "Let the women learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence?" Can you further conceive that he means to give expression to anything but an unalterable law when he writes to the church at Ephesus: "Wives submit yourselves unto your own husbands as unto the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the Head of the Church: and he is the Saviour of the body. Therefore, as the Church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives to their own husbands in everything." Can the Church ever elect a better part than to sit at the feet of her Lord, like Mary of Bethany, in silence and learn of Him? Can you think the reversal of this order possible? So "learn in silence" in the presence of him who represents her Lord both in the family and the congregation.

It seems, alas, that the reversal of this order is deemed not only possible, but desirable, by a few of you in our Church. There would probably be fewer still if some of the Aarons and Hurs did not mistake the hands they are to lift up for the discomfiture of the enemies of Israel. But you may say that man, whether as husband, father or clergyman, is imperfect, and therefore can not perfectly represent Christ to those who sit at His feet. True, but Christ in him is perfect, and the law of the relation in which he stands to you is so also, as in every other law of God. But by what revealed law of God do you justify yourself in attempting to take his place?

It is hardly necessary to refer to the classic passage of Paul on this question (1 Cor. 14: 34–37), especially as my friend, "H. M. K.," lately gave us a good interpretation of it in the Messenger. I only wish to direct attention to the test he lays down in the last verse. "If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord." That is, he evidently means to say, I have received the things which I write from the Lord, and if any one claims to speak by the Spirit of the Lord, he must necessarily recognize this fact, as the Spirit of the Lord cannot contradict the Lord, or the necessary inference is, the spirit that is in him is not of God. The Saviour used the same argument before him: "He that is of God heareth God's words." The logical conclusion is that if it is now lawful for women to teach in the churches, either the law of Christ can be altered at will by those members of His Body who choose to do so, or there has never been such a law, and Paul is an impostor in saying there is.

No, my dear sisters, you may rest assured that the spirit which is at the bottom of this whole movement of the so-called emancipation of woman comes from without the Body of Christ, not from within. For those who have the Spirit of the Master will also manifest the disposition of the Master, who, even in the greatest temptation of His life, with unfathomable humility, knew no law but that of His Father: "Not as I will but as Thou wilt." Of old already we have these apples of gold graven in pictures of silver: "Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." Your Brother in Christ, N.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

AGED MINISTERS.

In a late number of the Messenger, Wyoming inquires: "Should aged, but able and efficient pastors retire, or be retired from active service on account of their age?" We answer, certainly not. We further answer, that very rarely indeed is any one retired by the people if he is an able and efficient pastor. In nearly every instance where an aged minister possessing good health is compelled to retire, it will be found on inquiry that other causes than age have contributed to bring about the unpleasant results. Henry Ward Beecher was not driven out of the pulpit. Dr. Nevin kept his place easily. No one expects to see Spurgeon retire from the ministry, and a hundred other examples could easily be cited to show that age does not necessarily compel one to quit the ministry. May not the reason for the trouble be other than that suggested by Wyoming? In every profession there are men who fail to keep up with the times. Men who forget to read,—fossils, so to speak. Clergymen are especially apt to drift into a state of carelessness, since they are not called upon to face opponents as lawyers are. When old age comes, it frequently comes to pass that they are disqualified for work mentally rather than physically. It must be acknowledged, also, that old men are apt to imagine themselves qualified for certain lines of work when the contrary is true. Such, indeed, is the case with some of the able and efficient pastors to which reference is had in Wyoming's article.

Some time ago the writer met an "aged and efficient" pastor. Much as the gray hairs called for honor and reverence it was almost impossible to accord either. The egotism and antiquated thought expressed by the good old man would certainly have placed him in disfavor with any congregation seeking a pastor. Ministers, like other professional men, must be amenable to the laws of polite society. They are expected to be active, wide-awake and progressive. In short, youthful appearance is not the only qualification a congregation expects of its pastor. It is safe to say that the man who keeps abreast of the times will never lack employment, aged though he be. It is, of course, an unpleasant reflection that old age holds out no allurements to men in any calling.

The minister of the gospel who has served his Master faithfully should not be compelled to die in want and poverty. Ungrateful, indeed, is that denomination which will leave its aged pastor come to want. Is the Reformed Church ungrateful? If so, no wonder that our good old men impelled by "anxious forebodings" pretend the brightness and vigor of youth when the troubles of old age call them to quietude Cannot we provide for these patriarchs? I ask the question as a layman, not as a minister.

Pennsylvanian.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

OUR DEBT OF GRATITUDE.

There are three things which we ought to rightly know and remember well. They are: First, our misery as a consequence of sin; secondly, our deliverance from sin and misery, brought about by our redemption in Christ Jesus; and thirdly, how to express our gratitude for such a deliverance. A correct knowledge of these three things is of supreme importance to us. Our Catechism teaches us that such knowledge is necessary in order to enjoy the comforts of redemption.

Our redemption in Jesus Christ is something that is not merited; it is the free gift of God. Any other gift which we receive, no matter who bestowed it, creates a feeling of gratitude within us, and our own sense of propriety prompts us to express such gratitude in one way or another. It seems very natural, therefore, that the greatest of all gifts,—our only Saviour and Deliverer,—should arouse our deepest feelings of gratitude.

Thankfulness or gratitude, then, is a most important element in our holy religion and religious life. It is our indebtedness to God. It is no ordinary debt, but a special one. We pay it not as though we were giving for value received, for that we could never do, but we aim at imitating God who gives freely. We are prompted in our action by the precept: "freely ye have received, freely give." We give ourselves "as living sacrifices of thankfulness." It is the best we can do to cancel our indebtedness, and we feel assured that God is well pleased with such sacrifices.

There are different ways of paying this debt. One is by prayers, by which we mean not simply petitions, but generous, hearty thanksgivings. Another method is found in deeds of kindness, when we endeavor to fulfil the "royal law," as St. James called it, "Love thy neighbor as thyself;" or, as expressed by our Lord Himself, "whoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward." For if this apparently one of the least deeds of kindness, had the promise of a reward, certainly greater ones will fare no worse.

The fulfilling of the royal law, then, belongs to each and all as an important duty in the line of gratitude. We have only partly consecrated ourselves to the service of God if we fall short in the discharge of this much required duty. Neither is it proper for us to imagine this to involve only temporal welfare with respect to our fellow-men. Temporal comforts certainly are implied therein, but spiritual improvements and advancements equally as well, if not even more. It is an act of kindness, as well as a sense of duty, to so bring out the good qualities of Christian manhood and womanhood as by way of example to induce others to glorify their Father which is in heaven.

Our attitude towards our fellow-men should not be prompted, however, because of the promised reward, but for the better reason, because our love for them constrained us. We feel prompted that activity in this line of duty harmonizes well with what we mean by paying our debt of gratitude. All right-minded Christians will know this to be their bounden duty. Once rightly understood, appreciated and made the subject of prayer and earnest Christian endeavor, it will work a wonderful change for the better.

What is all the support of the missionary cause and other objects of benevolence but God's people engaged in paying their debt of gratitude? He who gives much (in proportion to his ability) loves much. His heart goes out from him, as it were, in generous gifts because God's inestimable love to man constrains him. Men and women thus moved need not be appealed to to give; the fact made known to them that their gifts are needed and applied to worthy objects suffices. The response is a matter of course.

We are coming to this by-and-by, it may be by a rather slow pace, but we are coming all the same. Every year brings better and more encouraging results. It is unfortunate that our Mission Boards, Orphans' Homes, etc., are obliged to appeal for help to carry forward the specific work which has been undertaken by the Church, but it is also gratifying to know that matters are taking a different turn. We cannot but notice that whilst some sections of our Church, or some congregations, or individuals barely, if at all, heed the most urgent appeals made to them for help; others again need but a mere announcement, specification or reminder, and their offerings come in abundance. The generosity manifested towards our Orphans' Homes during the late Christmas season is worthy of special comment. Need we hesitate for a moment to predict similar results during the Easter-tide in response to what the Bi-Synodic Board of Missions is now doing in the way of giving information as to what is needed by our worthy missionary churches? We say, God speed those of His people who are cultivating the spirit of liberal giving, and may He keep those who are still moved rather by blind necessity than from any sense of gratitude that they, too, may speedily come to possess the spirit of a free, spontaneous generosity!

In proportion as this spirit lays hold of our people will the benevolent resources of our Church respond and become a very tower of strength for our denominational life.

S. M. R.

When you send your prayers, be sure to direct them to the care of the Redeemer, and then they will never miscarry.—Henry.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A POPULAR ADJECTIVE.

Perhaps this letter will be considered by its readers somewhat amazing on account of its sanguine plainness. Probably its mission may consist in interesting those who are wont to complain that many truthful expositions of error and superstition, which are frequently interwoven with certain forms of religion, are made obscure by scholastic expression. As a lay member of the Reformed Church, the writer desires to address his fellow-members without any apology for reasoning from the Reformed stand-point.

In every department of life we are confronted by the popular adjective—special. Our National Government seems to have frequent occasion to create special offices to be filled by special individuals. The State authorities must make special provisions for special purposes; and the result is,—special taxes and burdens, special groans and murmurings.

Society has special rules which can only be observed by special individuals. In fact, it would require a special catalogue, that knows no limit, to record the particularities that are deemed necessary to supplant the ordinary and regular means of doing things successfully.

In the Church, as well as in the secular departments of life, there are certain inconsistent spirits who credit certain potential results as a sure consequence of special occasions, the characteristics of which are attributable to human ingenuity rather than the office of either common or special grace. Three persons (whose teaching and preaching is inconsistent with the doctrine adhered to by their own Church, and conflicts with the sentiment of the hymns they sing,) have imbibed the special spirit of accomplishing wonders by going about the particular business in such a way as to cause one to be surprised that they have not yet concluded that a special Bible is especially wanting.

Now we do not ignore the word, special. It has its rightful place in the dictionary and its true meaning when rightfully used in relation to the services and occasions in the Church. The meaning of the word special, consistently applied, is a true expression of that which is extraordinary in truth and reality.

For instance, we love the special occasions in the Church as regulated by the Church Year, when observed with sincere devotion and a heart-felt gratitude to Him who is the author of all our benefits. But how often these dear occasions are robbed of precious and spiritual effects by special human efforts to render them entertaining and pleasing in such a manner as to elicit the popular verdict from the world,—a grand success. We are not in love with those special occasions which are designed to test the virtue of human ingenuity rather than glorify the Head of the Church; for, on such occasions, ears are tickled and religious dyspeptics are created. The tendency is to discourage rather than encourage regular church-going, for it is lamentably true that those, who complain that church-going is monotonous, are always conspicuous by their presence on special occasions; they are ready to denounce the pastor if he fails to see them when present once in, perhaps three months, and adopt the pretext of a slighted member upon which they finally excuse themselves from church attendance and contributing to the pastor's support. Is it not true that such are the ones who crave for dainties that afford no spiritual nourishment but rather impair their miniature capacity for spiritual things? It is to be feared, therefore, that when an entire week is to be occupied by church fairs for the purpose of "sales-crying" appeals to mammon in lieu of the prospective gratification of the carnal desires, or the experiment of lottery systems to pay a church debt or vouchsafe the purchase of an organ; or an exhibition of characters and costumes during the Christmas season, that Baal is worshipped and there is a dangerous tendency toward spiritual retrograde which the pastor must keenly feel when he preaches on the regular Sabbath to many empty pews.

It is indisputably true that the special occasions and the efforts of the Church, in general, are made especially special by human agencies. Her defects must be remedied by human efforts, or her insufficiencies supplied by human strength. Let us, for a moment, glance at the position of the pastor who bows submissively to the special ideas of these new religious systemizers.

The parson must be a special man. If he is not, he must be improved by the process of a fiery furnace with a temperature of white heat. His general ability must be special so that his attractions and general demeanor will endear him to everybody and be especially remarkable. He must be a special society man and at the same time a special Christian and faultless preacher. Of course, he is never all this despite his special efforts. When he prepares his sermon he must select a special text, which must be announced through the papers so as to read especially peculiar and arouse special curiosity in the community to hear the sermon on the common Sabbath. But, alas! very often when the Sunday is over, the pastor is despondent, under the pressure of a grievance because of his special failure.

When we apply the word special to everything, it loses its meaning. When everything is special nothing can be extraordinary. There is no merit, no praiseworthy quality in human strength, which is utilized for the purpose of attracting large audiences by the excitement of mere curiosity and entertaining them by sensational preaching. If we sow sensation we will reap sensation, and sometimes the reaping is so sensational that the pastor is forced to the conclusion that his work, among his people, is finished; and he accordingly tenders his resignation, which is cheerfully accepted. Why is it that our gray-haired ministers are not wanted? They are full of the Holy Ghost and cannot labor without Christ. That which the world calls special qualifications they view with disdain. They have never conceived the idea of fishing for men by human magnetism; but by preaching of the Word. May not this be the reason why our pious, good old fathers in Israel must stand back for inexperienced young men to take their places? Our Church needs the active labors of the young and old; and it is more than a shame that so many charges remain vacant until there is a prospect of calling a young man, while able and earnest ministers with years of experience are without charges.

It resolves itself into this: the plainness and simplicity of the Word are ignored by a certain class of church members, and the large additions to the church, through the instrumentality of human devices, deserve only to be compared to a house built on a sandy foundation.

Political parties, anxious to achieve success in gaining and maintaining power and distinction, often resort to the injudicious use of money as a means of conducting a telling campaign; and many a voter deposits his ballot for money and not the candidate, whose qualifications enittle him to an unprejudiced support. How much of reality is there in a victory thus won? The main object is the glory of the party, whether or not it pertains to the welfare of the nation.

W. H. MADER.

Union Deposit, Pa.

To be Continued.

The whispers of conscience are as loud within the soul as the brazen tongue of the floating fog bell which gives warning of danger.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

ORPHANS' HOME COLUMN.

BY REV. T. M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

Ground for the new building was broken Thursday, February 19th.

First Sunday in Lent. Appropriate to the occasion the sermon in the morning was about Christ fasting in the wilderness and His temptation. In the afternoon, after Sunday-school, it being a bright, pleasant day, the Superintendent, with about fifty children, went to the top of the mountain, south of the Home. It is a very long, steep, rugged climb. The occasion was improved and in fact, the trip was made to impress a few lessons gleaned from the morning's discourse. The children, under the clear, blue sky, in the bracing February air, sang a number of familiar hymns, which, as we were afterward told, were heard down in the valley. The scene was inspiring. Before us lay the wide-extending Lebanon Valley, than which there can hardly be a more beautiful one, dotted with farm-houses and numerous villages. In the distance like a huge wall on the opposite side of the valley stretched the Blue Mountains. So Moses viewed the promised land from the Mount. So also the tempter showed unto the Saviour the kingdoms of the world.

Before starting away from home the request was made that all the children should stay together, so that none might get lost On the way down the mountain, however, little Daniel wandered off and lost himself in the bushes. A faint cry in the distance as of one in distress, arrested our attention. It was Daniel, who, upon hearing our answer to his call came crying through the brush, greatly relieved that he was again with the party. The sheep that will wander away may get lost, but their voices are known and their cry for help will not go unanswered.

It is not always pleasant to be the subject of experiments, and especially is this the case where the experimenter is a novice at his trade or profession. The Orphan's Home family is the subject of many experiments which are not always soothing to the spirit or wholesome for the digestion. In accordance with our system of industrial training the boys and girls do a large part of the work here. Among other things they bake the bread which the family eats. This is industrial training practically applied. It is a grand opportunity for those who are learning to bake, and as a rule our boys and girls succeed very well, but there are times when those who have to eat the bread would rather get it from the bakery.

Missions.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

CHRISTMAS IN SENDAI.

Dear Friends: In many things our Christmas letter this year can only be a repetition of what I wrote you last year. The celebration of Christmas in the Miyagi Jagokko has become an established custom and little by little it grows more a holyday than a holiday with us.

This year for the first time, we had a morning service, as well as the evening service, with the tree in the evening. For myself, I enjoyed the morning the more, as it was exclusively a service of worship. Of course I don't want you to think that element missing from the evening service, but a tree is always more or less distracting.

The kind intentions of our home friends to help us in our Christmas work, for the most part miscarried this year, no "boxes" having yet arrived. One box from the friends in western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio, arrived in good time, for our share of whose contents we are duly grateful. The service of Scripture and song, kindly sent us by the Publication House was received Christmas Eve, too late to be used this year, but is carefully laid away to be used next year.

Having nothing else, we arranged our service, finding "Hymns and Carols" a perfect mine of good things, ready for our use. The girls entered fully into the spirit of the service. One of them contributed a well-written essay on the theme, "The Christ Child, not the Christmas-tree, the source of our rejoicing."

In connection with our work this year, we trimmed three trees and sent gifts to one Sunday-school in addition. A number of our girls have had part in organizing Sunday-schools in different parts of the city and of course we feel, at such times, like doing something for them as wtll as our own. In this work the dry goods received from home proved very acceptable. Immediately after receiving the goods all the girls were set to making undergarments, quilts, etc., and I think quite a number of our poor are wearing their first flannels this winter.

While we were at breakfast Christmas morning, a number of persons came to thank us for the garments that had found their way to them, each being the happy possessor of a new shirt, a pair of socks or sleeves. It may strike you as a strange thing to give any one a pair of sleeves, but the natives wear them under the long, bag-like sleeves of their kimono, which, when the arm is raised or extended, leaves the arm uncovered almost to the shoulder. They also wear a sort of legging reaching from the ankle to the knee. These garments can be made from a very small piece of cloth, and yet add much to their comfort. Providence has been especially good to the poor this winter. Before Christmas there had been scarcely any cold weather, but since then it has been cold enough and very windy.

In the street above us the natives are celebrating the New Year in their usual fashion. For a week before Christmas they were constructing booths along both sides of the street, nearly its entire length, and now the display is at its height. The display is highly characteristic of the life of the people, much of which rarely comes under our notice except at such times. There is the street cake-baker, who allows each child to bake its own cake (the things they make don't look much like cakes, however). Stall after stall of wooden shoes, ungainly toys, coarse china and quite a good deal of bronze and lacquer-work and some pretty cabinet work. There are also several theatres and a swimming-tank. This last is the most reprehensible feature of all, being highly immoral and ruinous to life. Last year three women (the swimmers are females) died from the effects of the exposure.

Through this street the people wander in crowds all day, and from the sounds that disturbed my sleep, I should judge all night as well. In our daily intercourse with our pupils and teachers, we are often led to think the Christianization of the country is near at hand, but when we pass through the street, particularly on such occasions, it requires a strong faith to see a Christian Japan in the remotest future.

Yesterday all Japan was out calling on its friends, and everywhere found the same sort of refreshments. It is quite convenient to have these things fixed by the rule of polite society; it saves all trouble of competition or rivalry. By the gate on either side are arranged the small pine trees, sometimes accompanied by bamboo. From the top of the gate hangs a curtain of straw rope and paper cut in strings. Within the house are large white rice cakes, two or three according to the wealth of the house, piled one upon another on a table, and candy, fish and tea are served to all who call. Among those who have partially adopted foreign customs, coffee and cake and wine are served, and at the very wealthiest places the table furnishes viands not very different from those served by American ladies to New Year callers.

New Year is a proper time for reflections, but as most of us like to indulge in our own, rather than read those of others, I shall refrain from anything of that sort here, but I beg the privilege of urging all to make renewed efforts for the support and extension of the work we have undertaken for the Japanese. We are much interested in and pleased with the idea of the "Missionary Guardian." We beg each member of our Church to do all he or she can to make its influence felt. If we realize the fullness of joy the Christian has in his Redeemer, can we count aught too much to do to make that Redeemer known to those who know Him not? How can we say we rejoice in the light of the Son of Righteousness, if we do nothing or but little to diffuse that light among those who still sit in darkness?

I want to tell the women of the Church, they who have come so nobly to the front in this work, what a source of strength and comfort their action has been to us. It is a new phase of communion with saints. It makes me feel that we are not alone, but only a part of the great body of women in the Church of our choice, who are working and praying for the same end; it encourages me to feel that what a few of us could not do, all of us working and praying together can.

Miss Havergal, in an address to the Y. W. C. A. at Plymouth in 1878, sums up all things concerning us in these words: "1. All things are of God. 2. All things are by Jesus Christ. 3. All things are for your sakes. 4. All things are yours." If we can but realize the fullness of this, and that "all things" means all things in its fullest sense, I am sure the work for Japanese women, which is one of all things will not seem too hard, or even hard at all to do. Shall we not work this coming year in such a whole-hearted way, Christian friends, that the next may find us further on the way towards the realization of a Christian civilization for Japan than to-day? Let us each answer to her own conscience and to God, trusting Him in all things. Sincerely yours,

Lizzie R. Poorbaugh.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION.

The Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions will hold a conference at Cleveland, Ohio, to begin at 8 P.M., Thursday, February 26th, and to close Sunday night, March 1st.

The object of the coming convention is to bring the Foreign Missionary Societies and the Student Volunteer movement into more direct contact.

It is confidently expected that at least 400 representative students from the United States and Canada, representing 100 men's and women's colleges will be present. A score or more secretaries, representing leading denominational Missionary Boards will come. Returned missionaries from all parts of the world have been invited. It can already be announced that missionaries from South America, Mexico, Japan, India, China, Syria, Persia and Africa will make brief addresses and counsel men and women looking forward to their respective fields of labor.

Humanly speaking, this convention bids fair of being one of the most significant ever held in the history of Missions.

Max Wood Moorhead.

The Family.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE YOUNG PROPHETESS:

A TALE OF THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE.

BY REV. R. LEIGHTON GERHART.

CHAPTER IX.

UNDER THE EARTH.

After a long and tedious ride up the rude mountain path, through gloomy defiles and dense forests, the castle was reached. It was in a desolate place. From the stagnant waters of the moat came the discordant croakings of countless frogs, and the shrill piping of innumerable lizards, while the voices of myriad insects rose drowsily but continuously from the solemn depths of the dark forests. The despondency that weighed upon Otho's heart deepened as the horse on which he was being carried clattered over the draw-bridge into the court-yard of the castle. Yet weary with travel, faint and sore from the cruel blow he had received, it was not without some sense of relief that he saw his destination reached. He longed for a word with Madeleine, but could not get an opportunity to speak to her until he found himself, with his comrades, in the long, low dining-hall of the castle. Here the little party was once more united, huddled together in an obscure corner of the room. With the exception of Madeleine, the arms of all were bound. Seating themselves on a rough oaken bench standing against the wall, they began to converse in low tones.

"Do not grieve, Madeleine," Otho whispered. To his surprise, the girl turned on him a face full of confidence and peace.

"My fear is gone," she murmured, "God is leading us, and of a certainty I know He will deliver us."

To this the boy could find no reply, but—

"Ay, we will escape, I doubt little."

"Already a word of hope hath come to me," whispered the girl.

"What mean you? From whom?"

"Hist!" she cautioned, for in his astonishment Otho elevated his voice.

"Did you not see the good monk?"

"A monk in a den of robbers like this?"

"Ay, while I stood in the court-yard, he came to the men-at-arms as they dismounted, and I heard him inquire who we were, from whence we came, and why taken. I heard not all that was said, but he presently drew near and said to me: "Have no fear, daughter, no harm shall befall thee."

"The Virgin be praised!" murmured the boy.

Presently the girl whispered again:

"Otho!"

"What is it, gentle Madeleine?"

Her face fairly shone as she replied:

"I have a blessed relic."

"A blessed relic!" reiterated he, and in answer to her own bright look a flush of pleasure overspread his face.

"Ay, a piece of the Holy Cross."

Otho gazed at her in wonder, reverently saying:

"Then surely no harm can come to thee."

Upon this, she slipped her hand into her bosom and drew out a golden locket. Pressing a spring, the lid flew open, disclosing a fragment of dark-colored wood; it was about three-quarters of an inch long, greatly decayed and somewhat worm-eaten. She kissed the wood devoutly, and then placing it against her companion's lips, he kissed it also. Then, motioning to the other boys, she told them of her treasure, and lifting it to their lips, they one after another kissed it. After this all were greatly comforted, and began to talk in undertones of their capture, and of little John Crevacour. The news Madeleine gave of his death afforded all great relief.

All this while, great commotion reigned in the hall. The room was thronged with men in armor, laborers and servants. Some lounged on the benches set against the wall discussing the events of the day, while others paced to and fro or stood in groups laughing and talking. Some were bringing in great trenchers of smoking meat, boiled and roasted, large platters of bread, huge tankards of beer and flagons of wine, with pewter plates and horn drinking cups. These were placed on a long table that occupied the middle of the hall. At a given signal, all seated themselves and began to eat, Sir William taking the head of the table.

In the midst of the meal, entering from the extreme end of the apartment, Otho observed a monk in the habit of the order of St. Francis,—a coarse woolen tunic, brown in color, and girt about the waist with a stout rope of hemp. His head was shorn, and following the example of the great founder of his order, he wore neither shoes nor sandals. Sir William bluffly invited him to the table, but courteously declining, he passed slowly along one side, speaking a few kindly words to the men, and then came directly toward the Crusaders. His face was singularly fair, and when he smiled, which was frequently, there was something suggestive of radiance in it. The expression of his countenance was lofty and dignified, though exceedingly gentle and placid, wholly wanting the signs of penance and sorrow so frequently seen on the faces of the most devout of the priestly order in that day. He held himself erect as he walked, and his graceful carriage betokened one familiar with the society of the great. His voice was melodious, and his whole manner so pervaded by the power of a pure and gracious spirit, that the captives were drawn toward him even before he spoke. He asked their names and parentage, the purpose of the Crusade, of which he seemed not to have heard. As he listened to Madeleine's glowing and enthusiastic words, he smiled, but spoke no word of advice. Observing, finally, that Sir William had finished his meal, he bade the children not lose heart, and walked directly to the side of the knight. The conversation at once became animated; the monk, it could be seen, pleading, arguing, entreating for some one, the captives felt for themselves—making intercessions which, with many impulsive shakes of the head and spasmodic gesticulations of his huge arms, the knight stubbornly and with growing anger refused. The latter at length rose from his chair in great heat, struck the table a blow with his clenched fist, and elevating his voice till it rang through the apartment like a trumpet, cried:

"Words enough! words enough! You have tried me too far! I have brought them to my castle to serve me here—to be my slaves if it suits my pleasure; and here, saint or sinner, prince or peasant, by my good right hand they remain. Neither you, sir friar, nor any other driveling monk shall wheedle me from my purpose. Hark you!" and clenching his fist, he shook it in the friar's face, "with all your prayers and penances, I do suspect you of breeding discontent and doubt of their manner of life among my men. Have a care! have a care! or by all the saints in the calendar, I will strip you of your ragged coat, and whip you naked from my castle gate." And fairly shaking with passion, he turned and strode rapidly up and down the hall.

The monk stood for a moment or two, as though doubting whether to reply, his face flushed with indignation at the contemptuous words applied to him. Then evidently feeling that any answer would still further imperil the cause of the children, he silently left the room. Sir William continued his walk several minutes—soldiers and servants shrinking away from his path as if fearful of being even caught sight of at such a time—and then approaching the little group, he said to them:

"Mark you!" raising his hand and shaking his finger, "Here I have brought you to serve me at my bidding. Serve you shall. Think not to trifle with me. Escape, and I'll follow you wherever you go and drag you back. Do my bidding—obey—and you will be cared for. Be sullen, frown, hesitate, and I'll scourge you to the bone. Here!" calling to one of his servants, "unbind the beggars; give them food, and then show them their kennel."

Many instances are recorded of outrages similar to this having been perpetrated. As the army marched on its way, the brutal lords of the land descended from their strongholds, seized the children who appeared adapted to their purpose, and carried them off to life-long servitude. As is well known, there was at this time little law in the land. Every one of the nobles and powerful barons ruled his own little territory, exercising absolute sway over the people inhabiting it, and waging war against his neighbors almost as freely as though he were an independent sovereign. The wickedness of many of these men was so great that one is filled with amazement at the thought of their being permitted to live so long in a Christian country. Sir William De Boef was no worse than others of his rank and station.

The night was rapidly creeping on toward morning, when Otho was roused from sleep by the creaking of the door leading into the room where he and his comrades were. Madeleine had been separated from them and taken he knew not where. Through a narrow window in the thick wall opposite his couch, the light of the moon entered, partially dispelling the darkness; so he had no difficulty in observing what transpired. The door swung slowly back on its hinges, and the dark form of a man entered. The sound of his footsteps could scarcely be heard, his breathing was suppressed, and he stooped forward as if to avoid observation as much as possible. He paused after entering, to survey the apartment, and then began creeping softly toward the row of rude pallets, on one of which Otho lay. Suspicious of foul play, the boy's heart beat violently, and he began to consider the best course to pursue. Before he could form a plan, he felt the hand of the mysterious visitor laid upon his couch, and then saw his dark form bending over him as if to scan his face. He was about to fling himself from his couch, when to his inexpressible relief he recognized the monk.

"Otho," he whispered, recognizing the lad, and seeing that his eyes were open.

"Father," responded the boy, in the same low tone, addressing him by the affectionate name given priests in the Catholic Church.

"If you would escape from this place it must be done now. Where are your comrades?"

"In the beds next to me."

"Any others in the room?"

"Two of the servants over yonder," indicating with his hand the opposite side of the room.

"Rise at once, and be ready to follow. Hist!"

With this, he crept steadily forward, and proceeded in like manner to rouse the other boys. One, suddenly waking and seeing a dark figure bending over him, gave a quick, low cry of alarm. The monk at once crouched down under the shadow of the bed, to escape detection, should the servants waken. Several minutes passed in breathless silence, when satisfied that the alarm had not been taken, he signalled the boys to follow, and crept from the room. Once outside, he paused to satisfy himself of the presence of the entire party, and then sped rapidly down the long entry, directing his steps by the light of a horn-lantern, burning faintly in the distance. The lantern was placed near the threshold of a closed door, and beside it lay a bundle of pine fagots, and a bag or pouch filled, as the boys afterwards learned, with food. The monk tapped lightly on the door. The signal was expected, for the door immediately opened, and Otho saw the frightened face of a woman appear. Recognizing the monk, the face vanished, and a moment later Madeleine was pushed into the hall. This was quickly done, and the door immediately and stealthily closed. The poor girl, though evidently not taken by surprise, was in a state of intense excitement; her face was pale as ivory and her gentle eyes distended to their utmost. Otho at once stepped to her side and took hold of her hand; it was as cold as ice, but the soft fingers closed with a firm pressure on his own.

---

Copyrighted by Chas. G. Fisher, 1890.

"Fear not, gentle Madeleine," he whispered.

"Nay, nay, I am not afraid," she replied. "God is with us," and she made the sign of the cross on her bosom. But even while speaking, two great tears welled from her eyes and rolled glistening down her cheeks.

"Follow me, quickly," whispered the monk; "we dare not tarry here," and giving the bundle of pine-knots to one of the lads and the bag of provisions to another, he seized the lantern and at once led the way. A few yards further on, he turned sharply to the right, and began to descend a flight of stone steps.

This brought them to a lower corridor, running parallel with the first; pursuing this, though in an opposite direction, they again descended a flight of stone steps, reaching a small, square room; in the sides of this apartment were set a number of heavy iron doors with small grated openings, like windows, near the top. They were dungeons, and a feeling of dread made the Crusaders pause for a moment.

"Do not be alarmed," said their guide, speaking in an ordinary tone; and going to one of the doors, exactly resembling the others, save that it wanted the grated window at the top, he took down a huge iron key, hanging by a hook in the wall. Inserting this in the lock, after repeated efforts he succeeded in shooting the bolt. Grasping an iron ring, serving the purpose of a nob, he attempted to pull the door open, but the hinges were bound with rust, and it refused to budge. Exerting himself more strongly, he made a second attempt, and again failed. Placing his foot against the stone lintel, and grasping the ring with both hands, he bent all his strength to the task, but without success.

"We must get this door open, or we are lost," he cried, the perspiration streaming down his face.

"If we had a rope to fasten it to the ring, we could all pull," suggested Otho.

"Ha!" ejaculated their guide in a tone of relief, and immediately began to undo the long and heavy hempen cord bound about his waist. Hastily but securely attaching this to the door, he passed the end to the boys. Then again laying hold of the ring with both hands, and bracing himself firmly against the lintel, he gave the word, when all exerted themselves in a strong, steady pull. The door refused to yield at first: then, emitting a harsh, grating noise, it turned slowly on its rusty hinges. To the surprise of the Crusaders, they found themselves standing at the entrance of a rude gallery, cut through the solid rock. It was scarce three feet wide, and so low that none could enter it without stooping. As the heavy door swung open, a strong breath of cold, damp air struck their faces.

"Come," called the monk, swinging the lantern, "this will lead us to safety."

But the boys shrank back, doubt and dismay in their countenances.

"Fear not! fear not!" cried their guide. "Think you that I, a servant of the blessed Christ, would betray you. Trust me, my children, this will lead to safety."

Thus reassured, the now pale and half terrified group entered the gallery. Leaving the door open behind him, the monk trod confidently on. For a hundred yards they proceeded, then stopped abruptly, for opening at their very feet yawned a seemingly fathomless gulf, a cavern whose blackness of darkness the faint rays of the lantern were powerless to illumine.

(To be Continued.)

Youth's Department.

GREAT LESSONS BY LITTLE TEACHERS.

"Dear little singing-bird, out in the tree,
Singing so lightly, and seeming so free,
What is the lesson you're teaching to me?"
"Trust and sing, trust and sing;
Keep all day on the wing;
And when night-shadows gather, just sing;
Trust and sing."

"Dear little honey-bee, searching for sweet,
Loaden with pollen your deft little feet,
Have you some lessons for troubled souls meet?"
"Trust and try, trust and try;
'Tis the drones that must die;
So, morning and evening, just try,
Trust and try."

"Dear little lily bell, spotless and white,
Rooted in earth, and yet drinking heaven's light,
How keep my heart like you, pure and bright?"
"Trust and love, trust and love;
Keep your eyes fixed above:
And through shower and sunshine still love,
Trust and love."

"Dear meek forget me not, tender and true,
Love is thy beaming eye, hope is thy hue,
What is the lesson to mortals from you?"
"Trust and pray, trust and pray;
From thyself look away;
And though tempest may threaten, still pray,
Trust and pray."

Praying and loving, and working and singing,
How heaven's chimes through the earth are kept ringing
By flower and song-bird and dear busy bee!
O heart that Christ died for! why not then, but thee.

—Well Spring.

MAY'S MISTAKE.

Everybody loved Aunt Rose. She had won all hearts by her merry ways and charming stories. She was always ready to give Jack riddles, tell Harry Indian tales, listen to Sue's school trials, or help May with her lessons. One morning she heard Harry say, "I wonder what it is to be a real Christian?"

"Nonsense! Don't bother yourself about it!" cried Jack. "Time enough."

"Maybe not," said Harry.

"Why, you don't expect to die yet," exclaimed Jack.

"Don't know; Jim Saunders died young. I'd like to love Jesus now," said Harry.

"Bother! I don't want to hear about it," declared Jack. "I wouldn't be such a Christian as our May. To tell you the truth, Harry, I thought it would be a good thing once, but May has put me out of the notion."

"O, Jack, I am sure May tries to do right."

"It is the kind of right I don't like," persisted Jack. "She reads her Bible, and prays, and goes round with tracts, and teaches Sunday-schools, and 'talks good' to me; but when it comes to helping me with my lessons or games, she's cross as a bear! You know it well enough, Harry."

Aunt Rose was grieved at this talk, and resolved to watch May's conduct with her brothers.

She found May in great trouble one day.

"Jack will not listen to a word of advice. I am afraid he never thinks about his soul," she said.

"Perhaps he don't tell all his thoughts," said Aunt Rose. "Suppose, May, you try a different way with him; let precept go for a while, and try example. Show the pleasant side of your religion. For instance when Jack brings you a book to cover, or a riddle to praise, give up your own pleasure to enter into his. You will thus show the spirit of the Saviour."

"I never thought of all this before," said May.

May thanked Aunt Rose, and asked Jesus to make her wise to win her brother.

Before long, Jack was glad to say that May had turned out another kind of a Christian, and that it was a fellow's own fault if she did not do him good."

A CHILD'S VICTORY.

A coal cart was delivering an order in Clinton place the other day, and the horse made two or three great efforts to back the heavy loaded cart to the spot desired, and then became obstinate. The driver began to beat the animal, and this quickly collected a crowd. He was a big fellow, with a fierce look in his eye, and the onlookers were chary about interfering, knowing what would follow. "I pity the horse, but I don't want to get into a row," remarked one.

"I am satisfied that I can do him up with the gloves on, but he wouldn't fight that way," added a second.

"I'm not in the least afraid to tackle him," put in a young man with a long neck, "but, about the time I get him down, along would come a policeman and arrest us both."

The driver was beating the horse, and nothing was being done about it, when a little girl eight years old approached and said:

"Please, mister."

"Well, what yer want?"

"If you'll only stop, I'll get all the children around here, and we'll carry every bit of that coal to the manhole, and let you rest while we're doing it."

The man stood up and looked around in a defiant way; but meeting with nothing but pleasant looks he began to give in, and after a moment he smiled and said:

"Mebbe he didn't deserve it, but I'm out of sorts to-day. There goes the whip, and perhaps a lift on the wheels will help him."

The crowd swarmed around the cart, a hundred hands helped to push, and the old horse had the cart to the spot with one effort.—N. Y. Snn.

Pleasantries.

Wool: "How do you go to work to tell the age of a hen?" Van Pelt: "By the teeth." Wool: "A hen hasn't any teeth, you idiot!" Van Pelt: "No; but I have.—Harper's Bazar.

City Girl (on the farm): "Isn't that red cow over there a Jersey, uncle?" Uncle Hayseed: "No indeed. What makes you think that's a Jersey cow?" City Girl: "Well she doesn't seem to care about the mosquitoes and flies as much as the other cows do. She seems to be used to them."—Life.

NOTICE.

☞ Editorial Correspondence address to The Reformed Church Messenger, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters pertaining to subscriptions and other business, address Reformed Church Publication House, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ No notice taken of anonymous communications.

For Terms, see page 11.

THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER,
907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1891.

MEN are usually, although not exclusively, tempted through their lower or sensual nature. It is their weak point, which often throws them open to the tempter before their higher or spiritual nature has had time to arouse itself to think or reflect. That was the misfortune of Adam and Eve in Paradise. Christ likewise had such a psychic nature, which was just as sensitive as in the case of other men, most probably even more so; and this explains the reason why He could be tempted and be a sufferer. During the last few mouths of His life, ending with His death, His sufferings must have been of the most intense character. His own language and words show conclusively that this was the truth. But in His experience the case was the converse of that of our first parents in Eden, and of men generally. His higher, spiritual nature ruled and predominated over the lower. His hour as it approached became darker and darker, increasing more and more in its terrible aspects. But He also looked on the scene spread out before Him with the eye of faith and the highest reason, not only with the eye of sense. He could see beyond the dark valley before Him the fruits of His sufferings in the future glories of His reign, when after being lifted up He should draw all men unto Him. Therefore, He could endure the cross, despising the shame, for the joy that was set before Him.

CHRIST AND MARTYRS.

The question is sometimes asked why Christ suffered so much in His soul and body, whilst martyrs afterwards walked to the stake without fear and rejoiced amidst the burning flames? The philosophy of faith as well as the scriptures answers that question without any serious difficulty. The time had not come for such triumphs nor sufferings and pain. Christ had not been glorified, the Spirit had not been poured out, and the old dispensation had not yet finished its course. Besides, a sacrifice had to be offered up for the sins of the world, and that involved the utmost limit of suffering and sorrow. But when Christ ascended up on high and was glorified, He acquired all authority and power for Himself and others, by which His followers, the martyrs and others, could smile at death, sing hymns in dark dungeons, and endure all things for His sake. That power remains in His people to this day. It had to be secured, however, by the increase of Christ and then by His sufferings, His death and His resurrection.

DR. BRIGGS.

The Christian Intelligencer of New York in a brief article enuciates no less than elven vagaries in Dr. Briggs' recent Inaugural Address. Most readers would regard them as of a much more serious character than such a charitable term would seem to indicate (if they are correctly reported.) and would wonder how the authorities of Union Theological Seminary could allow such a professor to occupy a chair in their Institution. But as in other cases so here, there are no doubt two sides, and it seems to us that when the reputation of a distinguished scholar is assailed, it would be better to be more explicit. We select only one of the points here assumed, one at least that does not seem to us to be whimsical or vagrant in character. Thus the editor says that Dr. Briggs "denies universal salvation, and in the same breath affirms the salvation of the race of man." This, as we suppose, he regards as a palpable contradiction, just as the Indepeudent insinuated sometime ago. Evidently he understands, by the race of man the entire complex of the individual, that ever belonged to it, in which sense the term is nothing more than an abstraction of the mind. But modern science has shown that a race of plants, animals, or men is a reality, an actual power in force that holds it together, determines its specific form or character. Individuals may perish altogether, but the race remains. We may even destroy as many bricks as we choose in a pile, and yet the pile remains. In the same way many millions of men may perish forever, but the race may remain as vigorous as ever, or even more so, and advance, as we know it does, to a still higher degree of moral perfection. Some of our Indian races may have been entirely obliterated, but most of them—perhaps the fittest—are still surviving, and under Christian influences are becoming braver and better every day. Accordingly, it is perfectly correct and orthodox to say that the human race, as such, will be saved. It has already been ransomed and redeemed, and through the theanthropic life of Christ including man's sovereignty over nature it is being raised to the high destiny for which it was originally intended. The truth here affirmed is not a mere matter of words, but involves other points of truth upon which we all ought to be orthodox. Upon this point at least, Dr. Briggs is probably more oxthodox and scriptural than some of his critics.

In a trial sermon which we preached before Classis prior to our licensure years ago, we said the same thing about the salvation of our race, and although we had distinctly stated that many would be lost we were charged by one or two brethren, who wished to be very orthodox, with having preached universalism. From this we inferred that ministers ought to be careful and explicit in the use of language when they preach; and the same remark applies to theological professors when they teach, although we take it for granted that such a scholar and writer as Dr. Briggs always makes use of correct language. Misconceptions and misrepresentations of the sense of Scripture have always abounded, and it is not strange that some of its best interpreters are treated in the same way. But if theologians ought to be careful when they write for the public, it is also true that religious papers, esteeming themselves orthodox but perhaps behind the times, should also be careful not to give utterance to a harsh judgment that may not harmonize either with Scripture or true orthodoxy.

DR. BRIGGS AND HIS INAUGURAL.

A number of years ago, when our Church was in the midst of its theological controversy, the late Rev. Dr. C. P. Krauth, met one of our ministers, and accosted him, "Well, how are you getting along in your Church?" Our minister replied, "Badly enough; we are tossed with contention and controversy." "Glad to hear it," replied the Rev. Dr. Noting the surprise of our man, he continued, "It shows you are not dead, but full of life and vigor." It would really seem that our Presbyterian brethren are coming to be suitable subjects for a similar congratulation. Not yet, by any means, having reached the conclusion of a very warm, not to say hot contention on the subject of Revision, their righteous souls are vexed by the fact that another very large apple of discord has been hurled into their midst by Dr. Briggs in his inaugural, on taking the chair of Old Testament Exegesis in the Union Theological Seminary. Dr. Briggs does not believe in the verbal inspiration, or in the inerrancy of the Bible. And the heresy scenters, in full cry and with distended nostrils are after him, led on by the outsider, The Independent.

We beg these nervous brethren to calm their fretted souls. You are not living in the seventeenth century, but in the nineteenth. You have been holding fast to stakes that were set two hundred and fifty years ago, and seem oblivious of the fact that meanwhile the world has been moving, and the theological world too; that there is a universe of unquarried gold in the mine of the Holy Bible, as rich as was ever taken out, and coined into doctrine; that there are characteristics of, and contents in the volume of inspiration, which were unknown to the Fathers of two or three centuries ago.

We of the Reformed Church are deeply interested in the controversies now agitating the Presbyterian Church. We know what controsy means. "We've been there." We have been watching the British Church, and noticed its deliverance elicited by the trial of Dr. Dodds and others, and we supposed that it had occurred to their fellow Presbyterians on this side, that they too would have to answer the same questions. Some of the papers intimate the possibility of an issue being taken, when the General Assembly comes to confirm Dr. Briggs' election to his chair. We would like to have the General Assembly pass upon these questions. We would like it to say whether or not Dr. A. A. Hodge was right when he said "It is impossible to draw a line between a word and its meaning." Then we would know whether there can be a translation of the Bible which can be regarded as inspired. Whether our English version can rightly be regarded as inspired—or whether we must institute a new search for the original manuscripts, long supposed to be lost? We would like to know whether the Holy Ghost hypnotized the inspired writer, and thus made him an automation, or whether he was inspired in his full conscious personality? For then we will know whether there is a human element in the Bible; whether it is a gnostic affair, or a divine-human revelation, as we have heretofore regarded it. For if it has its human side, then we can account for any human imperfections which may be discovered, and how even human errors, not touching the essence of the revelation might have crept in. If on the other hand the inspired writers were hypnotized, now that the original manuscripts, whose words were inspired are hopelessly lost, we have no inspired word of God—we have no supreme rule of faith and life.

It makes all the difference in the world, whether an inspired thought can be separated from its original word so as to be expressed, inspiration and all, in a synonymous word or words in another language or not.

Synodical Editors.

(Elected by the Synods.)

Eastern, ...	Rev. Jonathan H. Pannebecker.
Pittsburgh, ...	" David B. Lady.
Potomac, ...	" J. Spangler Kieffer, D. D.

THE FUTILITY OF PESSIMISM.

Some one lately told us of a certain valetudinarian who, on being interrogated in regard to the state of his health, growled in reply, "Don't ask me how I am,—I'm always worse." This somewhat savage invalid may justly be regarded as a type, representing the pessimist and the pessimistic view of human life. This expression, "Always worse!", might very suitably be adopted by the pessimist as a motto. With him, things are "always worse;" they are worse now than they used to be, and they are going to be worse hereafter than they are now. The world is in a bad way,—don't ask it how it is. It is diseased, and there is no remedy; it is in danger, and no deliverance is discernible. Pessimists there always have been, and doubtless always will be. But this particular age, from whatever cause, seems to have more than its fair allowance of them. They are everywhere in the land; they are found in every community and in every company. They would seem to belong to that class of desirable possessions, which, to use the common phrase, "no well regulated family can afford to be without."

Let us not be unjust to the pessimist. There is indeed much truth in the view which he takes of man, of nature and of human life. He sees the evil; and it is of the greatest importance that the evil should be seen; let us be thankful to the man that points it out to us, provided only that the evil which he points out be real, and not imaginary. Do not deceive yourselves; hide not your faces from the existing and enormous evil; shut not your eyes to ugly and unwelcome facts; do not cry "Peace, peace!" when there is no peace; be willing to know the worst; probe the disease to the bottom,—this is the wholesome lesson which the pessimist teaches, this is the salutary truth which he stands for. And, if he stood for nothing more than this, or, rather, if this were not all that he does actually stand for, there would be little fault to find with him. But this is substantially all. The average pessimist is simply a seer of evil; a seer of evil existing and a foreboder of evil to come. He is a believer that things are "always worse." He is one who has a genius for the discovery of diseases, and who, in addition to the quick recognition of maladies actual and obvious, possesses the power of discerning many that are invisible and undiscoverable to any other vision than his own. There are pessimists who are such only in name; pessimists in theory, but optimists in practice; seeing the evil and groaning over it with seemingly genuine pessimistic groans, but meanwhile laboring with might and main to remedy it. Of such we do not speak; we are speaking of the average and familiar pessimist, whose groanings and complainings are not, as a rule, accompanied by any strenuous and beneficent exertion.

Dickens somewhere speaks of certain characters as being good "up to a certain point." This may be said of the pessimist. He is thoroughly sound and salutary up to a certain point; so far, that is, as he is a recognizer and indicator of actually existing maladies and wrongs. Perhaps the most of us would be the better for a dash of pessimism in our dispositions. Especially is this needed by some, as a corrective of their optimism; only a few drops of pessimism, that is all they need. The pessimist is wrong because he has too much. He errs by excess; or, rather, in fact, by defect. He does not go far enough. He stops at the introduction; his vision ceases just where it ought to become clearer and fuller. He sees the evil, but not the corrective; perceives the difficulty, but is blind to the way out: observes the danger, but knows nothing of the deliverance; recognizes the malady, but is oblivious of the medicine that is powerful to cure it. He is as a physician who should consider his professional duty as ending with the diagnosing of the disease, whereas, rightly understood, it may be considered to be then just beginning.

If there were nothing else to condemn pessimism, its futility would condemn it as false. That cannot be true which is so utterly futile. We are in the habit of condemning and rejecting things because of their incapability and ineffectiveness. Barrenness and impotence cannot co-exist with reality and truth. The truth, whatever it may be, is powerful; by that sign it is known; and whoever gets hold of the truth is made powerful thereby. There is no futility in it. It is full of energy and power; it is the very spirit of accomplishment and conquest. It quickens and inspires men. The truth makes men strong and free. It puts a sword in a man's hand, strength in his arm, and courage in his heart. The holder and herald of the truth is an awakener and an enabler of men. They catch courage and hope from him. He cheers them, strengthens them, and leads them on. We do not find that pessimism does this. There is no vigor, no power, no inspiration in it. The pessimist does—nothing, except to proclaim the gloomy and disheartening message that things are "always worse." His "views" are like a millstone round the neck. He makes men weak and weary. He is a disabling and paralyzing force, if that can at all be called a force which paralyzes and disables. And this is the condemnation of pessimism, the futility of it; this is the proof that it is false,—its utter incompetence to enable and inspire men, and lead them on to achievement and conquest.

To the Christian, pessimism ought to be an alien and abhorrent thing. It is not for the child of God. We are saved by hope, and not by despair. We go from strength to strength. From better to better is our motto, and not from worse to worse. We belong to One who has looked evil in the face, and heard the last word it has to say; who knows the world's disease, and heals it: who has wrestled with Death, and utterly destroyed its power. For the Christian there is always a better time coming. "The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

J. S. K.

FROM OUR OLDEST READERS.

Rev. Father R. Duenger of Ashland, Pa., says:

"I have been a subscriber and reader of the Messenger since the year 1835, when it was a small paper of only four pages, published at Chambersburg. In all these years the Messenger has been a welcome guest in my family, and the reading of it has been always a source of instruction and edification to me in my younger days, and is the more so now in my declining years, in its enlarged size with its valuable and interesting communications and editorials, and not only to myself but to my family also."

Hon. Lewis H. Steiner, M. D., Librarian of Enoch Pratt Free Library, Baltimore, Md., with no little pride, says:

"I find that as father and son, we have been subscribers since the first issue of the Magazine of the German Reformed Church, Nov. 1827, through the Messenger, Jan. 1832, down to the present date."

J. Dehoff of Baltimore, Md., writes:

"December 2d, 1840, I subscribed for the Messenger. The following week, Wednesday, Dec. 9th, I received the first copy. Have been a regular subscriber since that time, and received the paper regularly, except years ago, occasionally a copy failed to come to hand, and during the interruption after the burning of Chambersburg. As to the merits, &c., of the Messenger, in my opinion and judgment it never was as interesting and as useful as it is now under the present arrangement."

George J. Leonard of Russellville, Ind., with a hand trembling with age, writes:

"I first read it in North Carolina before I came to Indiana. I left North Carolina on the 1st day of September, 1835. I think I commenced reading it again in 1837, and have read it all the time ever since."

Hon. I. F. Yost of Boyertown, Pa., now in his 76th year, sends the following:

"In 1840 I was elected a deacon in the Reformed congregation of Limerick, Montgomery county, Pa., of which Rev. Henry S. Bassler was the pastor, when I subscribed for the paper, and have continued it ever since without any discontinuance, and would not be without it in the house if it cost $10,00 a year, for it keeps me informed of all matters of interest in the Church of which every member should be well informed. If our members would get and read their church paper and become informed of the wants of our Church they would become more interested and our progress would be much faster in the future. If our pastors would exert themselves, as I think they should, in circulating our church paper, we could raise much more money for extending our Church, as every member should take pride in helping to extend the doctrine of our beloved Church to endless posterity."

Daniel B. Seibert of Clearspring, Md., writes:

"I have been a reader of the Magazine published at York, Pa., from the time of the issue of the first number. My father was then a subscriber to it, and from the Magazine to the Messenger until he died, and I have been a regular subscriber from about the year 1856."

Mrs. Rev. P. Ruhl of Akron, O., writes:

"To the best of my recollection I have been a reader of the Messenger since it was first published. As a girl in my father's house, Rev. J. W. Hamm, and for the past of forty years in my own home. It is needless to add that I esteem the paper highly. Its continued perusal for years and years speaks for itself. I hope it will continue its good work as the years roll on and wishing it the greatest prosperity."

Rev. A. R. Bartholomew of Pottsville, Pa., writes:

"Elder George K. Hoffman, a very dear member of Trinity church, has been a reader of the Messenger for a period of fifty-two years. He enjoys its pages, and will remain an ardent reader until his eyelids close in death."

D. Hoffman of Reading, now in his eightieth year, says:

"I have had the Messenger about fifty years as near as I can tell, and am always glad to see it come. Would not do without it."

Geo. J. Welker, Esq., son of the late Judge Welker of Sunbury, Pa., in remitting his mother's subscription for another year, says:

"The Messenger has been taken since the first publication, by my father until his death in 1874, and since then by my mother."

Mr. Welker has our thanks for a copy of the Messenger dated May 16, 1838.

Pastor U. H. Heilman of Emmitsburg, Md., writes:

"Miss Lydia Krise has been a subscriber and reader of the Messenger from the beginning, that is, when it was a Magazine. Through my influence she has presented the first eight volumes to our Historical Society at Lancaster, Pa. The volumes are in an excellent condition."

Rev. J. Dotterer, Madisonburg, Pa., says:

"Mrs. M. Keller of Boalsburg, Centre county, Pa., has been a reader of the Messenger from the time it was first published. She was then only nineteen years of age. She says she has found it a warm friend and a great comfort in times of trouble."

Rev. C. Cort of Greencastle, Pa., writes:

"Mr. John Frantz has been a continuous subscriber and reader of the Messenger since the second year of its publication, and I think my father, Elder Joseph Cort of Irwin, Pa., has taken it from the beginning."

Rev. Jacob Hassler of Fort Loudon, Pa., says:

"He has been a reader of the Messrnger since 1835, his father having taken the Magazine. He has been a contributor to its columns for forty-two years."

Mrs. Jennie (Hassler) Ohmer of Dayton, O., writes:

"I learned my A B C's in the Messenger and off our 'ten plate stove.' And ever since I could read have been reading the Children's Department, and never fail to read it up to date. Have been going to Sunday-school since I was four years old. My earliest and first recollections have been of the 'dear old Messenger.' To me it is a dear old friend. May it continue to prosper."

Poetry.

PRUNING AND CHASTENING.

PHEBE CARY.

Crooked and dwarfed the tree must stay,
Nor lift its green head to the day,
Till useless growths are lopped away.

And thus doth human nature do;
Till it hath careful pruning too,
It can not grow up straight and true.

For, but for chastening severe,
No soul could ever tell how near
God comes to whom He loveth here.

* * * * * *

And thus, by way not understood,
Out of each dark vicissitude
God brings us compensating good.

For faith is perfected by fears,
And souls renew their youth with years,
And love looks into heaven through tears.

Selections.

Lowliness of heart is real dignity, and humility is the brightest jewel in a Christian's crown.—Bond.

The fairest and finest impression of the Bible is to have it well printed on the reader's heart.—Dr. Arrowsmith.

Oh, strengthen me, that, while I stand
  Firm on the Rock, and strong in Thee,
I may stretch out a loving hand
  To wrestlers with the troubled sea.

When sometimes God gives tardily, He commends His gifts; He does not deny them. God withholds for a time, that thou mayest learn to desire great things greatly.—Augustine.

The crowd of cares, the weightiest cross,
  Seem trifles less than light;
Earth looks so little and so low,
  When faith shines full and bright.
—Frederick Wm. Faber.

You may have a rough voyage through life, but you have nothing to fear while you keep unbelief below, faith on deck, and Christ at the helm of your little bark.

All common things, each day's events,
  That with the hour begin and end,
Our pleasures and our discontents,
  Are rounds by which we may ascend.
—Henry W. Longfellow.

If it costs much to be a zealous and successful Christian, it will cost infinitely more to live and die an impenitent sinner. Bible religion costs self denial; sin costs self destruction.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D.

  The one who drifts,
  And seldom lifts,
A burden from the dust,
  Can never know
  The heartfelt glow
That yonder reapers must.

Some men admire the heights of mountain, the huge waves of the sea, the steep fall of rivers, the compass of the ocean, and the circuit of the stars, and pass by themselves without admiration.—St. Augustine.

Thy church lifts up to Thee her cry;
  Hear Thou her fervent prayer;
Give her Thy banner lifted high,
  Through all the world to bear.

Then triumph unto triumph add,
  Till the great conflict end;
Till o'er the earth, redeemed and glad,
  Thy reign of love extend.
—Ray Palmer, D.D.

Science and Art.

The sun is 92,500,000 miles from the earth; the latter receives only one two thousand millionth of the solar heat; the nearest fixed star is 16,000,000,000 miles distant, and it takes three years for light to reach the earth.

It is stated in commercial journals that there has of late been a marked tendency on the part of insurance companies to reduce the rates on insurance where the electric light is used, because it has been demonstrated beyond question that the electric light is much safer than either artificial or natural gas.—Inventive Age.

Items of Interest.

Baron Hirsch has given $2,400,000 for the benefit of the Hebrew immigrants in this country.

The Rev. Henry C. Swentzel, of St. Luke's church, Scranton, Pa., has been elected Missionary Bishop of Japan by the Council of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church.

The Revision Committee of the Presbyterian church has been in session since last Wednesday morning at the Church of the Covenant, Washington. All the 25 members are present.

Union Theological Seminary, New York, has 161 students: Two Fellows, four graduates, forty-four Seniors, sixty Middle Class, and Junior, fifty-one. Union had in 1886, 125; 1887, 136; 1888, 132; 1889, 134; 1890, 164, and 1891, 161.

The will of the late Jeremiah Loof was probated at Philadelphia. It is a peculiar document. Eighty thousand dollars is left in trust for his family, provided they shall lead godly lives, avoid the use of tobacco and liquors in any form, including cider.

The installation of Dr. Austin Scott, President of Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J., took place recently. Speeches were made by Governor Abbett for the Trustees; the Rev. Dr. Doolittle for the faculty; John H. Raven for the students; the Hon. Courtlandt Parker for the alumni, and President Scott.

The new Queen of the Sandwich Islands, it is said, is honest, has the courage of her convictions, and has great executive ability. Her husband, John O. Dominis, though an American, has absolutely no influence. The Queen is a woman of handsome appearance, a great musician, and has composed a number of attractive songs.

Negotiations which have been in progress between the United States and Brazil have resulted in the signing of an agreement, under the reciprocity clause of the new Tariff law, by Secretary Blaine and Senor Mendonca, the Brazilian Minister. The agreement has been approved by President Harrison, who has issued a proclamation announcing the fact.

According to Hoffman's Catholic Directory for 1891, there are now 8,778 priests of the Roman Catholic church in this country, 7,631 churches, 2,841 stations and 1,750 chapels. The Catholic population is reported at 8,579,966. There are 213 orphan asylums, with 24,572 inmates, 39 theological seminaries with 1,711 students, 123 colleges, 624 academies, and 3,277 parochial schools with 665,328 children in attendance.

At the eighth annual meeting of the Indian Rights Association, in Philadelphia, Bishop Hare said people had an exaggerated idea of the number of Indians engaged in the recent uprising, while, in fact, it was comparatively insignificant. He did not think that at any time more than 750 warriors confronted the Government, and when the newspapers mentioned "thousands," they should have included women and children.

Hints and Recipes.

Honey Apple-Cake Fingers.—Soak two cupfuls of dried apples for a night. Next morning mince the fruit as fine as possible and simmer for two hours in two cups of honey. Cool and pour the mixture into the basin with a cupful of caster sugar, half a cupful of milk, the same of butter (previously melted), a teaspoonful each of cloves and cinnamon, the grated rind of half a lemon, three cupfuls of flour (best Viennese), two eggs well whisked and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Line a tin with buttered paper and bake. The mixture should be half an inch thick and served cut in fingers and dusted with caster sugar.

The Egg a Remedy for Dysentery.—The egg is considered one of the best remedies for dysentery; beaten up lightly, with or without sugar, and swallowed at a gulp, it tends, by its emollient qualities, to lessen the inflammation of the stomach and intestines, and by forming a transient coating on these organs, to enable nature to resume her healthful sway over a diseased body. Two, or at most three eggs per day would be all that is required in ordinary cases; and since eggs are not merely medicine, but food as well, the lighter the diet otherwise, and the quieter the patient is kept, the more certain and rapid is the recovery.

Farm and Garden.

Recent experiments in treating the black wart or black knot of the plum have been made with linseed oil, turpentine and kerosene, applied with a small brush as soon as the warts begin to appear. All these remedies have been found effectual, but in some cases injury was done to the trees by the excessive use of turpentine and kerosene. The trees should be examined at least three times during summer, and in each case just enough of the liquid should be applied to saturate the warts.

To get rid of large stumps get a straight tree twenty-five to thirty feet and eighteen to twelve inches through at the butt. Any length or size can be used, according to the power desired. Next get a strong chain, the stronger the better. Attach a good yoke of cattle to the small end of the lever and draw it to the stump. Now pass your big chain around a large root and the lever at the same time, about three feet from the butt. Fasten the chain tightly and start the team, driving on a circle. See how easily the stump will twist. A small stump will come out whole, but large ones will usually split in two or three pieces. These can be piled and burned clean after drying a short time. I have used one to clear several acres of large stumps, and it did the business and left the stump in good shape to dry.

Books and Periodicals.

Any of the books here noticed can be had through our Publication House, 907 Arch Street.

Evidence of a Future State, from Reason and Revelation. By Rev. Luther A. Fox, D.D., Professor of Philosophy in Roanoke College. Publishers Lutheran Publication Society, Philadelphia.

This work is a contribution to our growing literature on Eschatology. The author exhibits a wide range of reading, which he has brought to the service of his work in a clear scholarly manner. The first eleven chapters comprise the positive proofs of his thesis, and the following seven are mainly defensive or against skepticism. He subjects the denial of immortality to a severe philosophical criticism, with marked ability. It is a book worthy of a place in the library, and of the careful study by those who would keep abreast of modern thought on this deeply interesting subject.

Sermons in Candles. Two Lectures. By Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. 18mo, pp. 170. American Tract Society, 1510 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Price, $1.00.

These two lectures of Mr. Spurgeon indicate his aptness in taking of the things of life and teaching valuable lessons through them. The book is one of illustrations and will be a help to others.

Easter Joy. An Easter Exercise for Sunday-schools by S. W. Straub & Co., 243 State street, Chicago. It contains songs, Scripture readings, recitations, etc. Price only five cents.

All Hail! An Easter Service for Sunday-school, with a beautiful title page in colors. 5 cents each, postpaid; $4 per hundred. By the S. Brainard's Sons Co., 145 and 147 Wabash ave., Chicago.

The Quiver for March is an excellent number. Some of its principal stories are—Waiting to be Claimed, Imperfect Workers, White Violets, The Shield, the Sword and the Battle," and Bye-Path Meadow; or, The Pitfalls of Life."

The Cassell Publishing Co., New York, 15 cents a number; $1.50 a year in advance.

The Musical Messenger is the title of a new monthly magazine, sheet-music size, 32 pp., price $1 per year, published by Fillmore Bros., Cincinnati, Ohio., and New York. The first sixteen pages of the February number are filled with interesting reading on musical topics, and the balance with new music.

Littell's Living Age. The number of The Living Age for February 21 contains—Statesmen of Europe, Italy, Leisure Hour; Messer Antonio's Revenge, Murray's Magazine; The Letters and Journals of Lady Mary Coke, Edinburgh Review; The Sham Fight at Ruddiford, Macmillan's Magazine; Concerning Inns and Taverns, All the Year Round; The Applications of Geometry to Practical Life, Nature; A Crisis in the City, Chambers' Journal; A Tour in Burmah, Murray's Magazine; The Responsibility of Reading, Good Words; A Musical Village in Yorkshire, Leisure Hour. Poetry.

$8.00 per year. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

Marriages.

At the home of the bride, in Schellsburg, Pa., February 5th, 1891, by Rev. James B. Stonesifer, Mr. Albert G. Fickes, of Fishertown, Bedford Co., Pa., to Miss Eva Hershberger.

At Bellefonte, Pa., February 3, 1891, by Rev. A. A. Black, assisted by Rev. Dr. Laurie, Harry W. Dinges to V. Keturah Walton, the former of Centre Hall, Pa., and the latter of Bellefonte, Pa.

At the Reformed Parsonage, St. Thomas, Pa., January 27th, 1891, by the Rev. J. F. Mackley, Mr. Samuel H. Keller to Miss Effie Viola Sellers, both of St. Thomas, Pa.

On December 18, 1890, by Rev. T. F. Hoffmeier, Mr. Luther C. Ahalt to Miss Macy C. Beachley.

December 24, 1890, by the same, Mr. Charles M. Shank to Miss Anna D. Keller.

January 1st, 1891, by the same, Mr. Henry P. Long to Miss Minnie Florence Routzahn.

January 13th, 1891, by the same, Mr. Samuel L. Crone to Miss Simmie E. Keller, all of Middletown Valley, Frederick county, Md.

Deaths.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than two hundred and fifty words.

DIED.—Jeremiah Aulenbach, one of the oldest members of the St. Mark's church, Cressona, Pa., who, for a long time, had been in an enfeebled condition, as the result of a stroke of apoplexy received last spring, had a second attack on Sunday night, December 21st, 1890, and died at 11.30 o'clock.

Mr. Aulenbach was born near Bernville, Berks county, and was the son of Jacob and Elizabeth Aulenbach, now deceased. At his death he was sixty-four years, ten months and twenty six days old. He was confirmed in the First Reformed church at Reading, Pa., and has since then been a member of our church. He was married to Eliza Minnig, and the fruits of their union were seven children, of whom three sons, viz., Albert, Frank and John, with their mother, still survive.

The funeral took place on Wednesday morning, December 24th, at ten o'clock, with services in the English and German languages in the St. Mark's church. The pastor, Rev. Calvin E. Bartholomew, conducted the former, and his predecessor, Rev. J. Alvin Reber of Lehighton, the latter. The text, which was chosen by the deceased from Psalm 28: 6, 7, was the same upon which both sermons were based. The chair usually occupied by Mr. Aulenbach at service was draped, and beside the coffin rested a beautiful floral pillow from the Sunday-school. Both choirs were present, and each sang a hymn selected by him. The pall bearers were Michael Rupert, Edward Beck, Frank Kantner, Moses Kleckner, James Marburger and Moses Shappel.

After the services the funeral proceeded to the Presbyterian Cemetery at Pottsville, where the remains were interred.

Mr. Aulenbach was for many years an active member of the St. Mark's church and Sunday-school; and besides being a teacher in the infant department, held the office of elder since the organization of the church. He contributed liberally to her support, and was always interested in her welfare. He was one of the most earnest in the construction of their house of worship, and also in clearing the debt which rested upon it, until a short time ago.

A few days before his death he expressed a desire to be present at early service on Christmas, but God had greater joy in store for him, and he was called home to receive his reward: to be with his Maker and his Saviour.

By his death there will be a vacancy not easily filled. As he was known and beloved by all, all will miss him. In the church, the Sunday-school, and in the consistory, in his home, as well as among his fellow-townsmen, all will miss "Grandpap" Aulenbach, as he was called; but the remembrance of his life will ever remain. Truly, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

A. L. B.

RESOLUTIONS.

At the annual meeting of the Consistory of the St. Mark's Reformed church, held Tuesday evening, January 6th, 1891, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst, by the hand of death, our esteemed brother and elder, Jeremiah Aulenbach, therefore,

Resolved, That we bow with grief and sorrow, yet in humble submission to this dispensation of Divine Providence, realizing that in his death the church has lost a devout worshipper, and the family an indulgent father and a loving husband; but feel assured that what may seem to us a sad loss is to him eternal gain, and that that which he did, will be spoken of as a memorial to him. Further,

Resolved, That these resolutions be recorded on the minutes of the Consistory, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and that they be published in the following papers: REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER, Reformed Church Record, Hausfreund (German), Miner's Journal, Daily Republican, and Evening Chronicle.

Signed, Charles W. Reed, John Dieter, Sr., James Marburger, Lewis S. Berger, William K. Moyer, Jonas West, John J. Beck, Members of Consistory.

CALVIN E. BARTHOLOMEW,
Pastor.

At the regular meeting of the St. Mark's Reformed Sunday-school Association, held Sunday, December 28, 1890, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, has called from our midst to a higher life, our beloved fellow-teacher and co worker in the enhancing of the kingdom of the Lord Jesns, Brother Jeremiah Aulenbach, and,

WHEREAS, We the members of the St. Mark's Reformed Sunday-school Association deem it fitting to record our appreciatien of his services, therefore we are

Resolved, That during his life Brother Aulenbach has been a faithful member of this Association and Church, and has cheerfully lent a helping hand whenever an opportunity was offered, and that in his death we lose a valuable assistant, who was beloved by all. Further,

Resolved, That while we deeply mourn his loss, we bow in humble submission to Him "who doeth all things well," and with the friends and relatives extend our heartfelt sympathy to the grief-stricken widow and sons, and pray that their affliction may only draw them nearer to Him "who loveth whom He chasteneth." And,

Resolved, That these resolutions be recorded on the minutes of the Association, a copy sent to the bereaved widow, and also that they be published in the church and county papers.

Signed,
WILLIAM K. MOYER,
MINA C. BARTOLET,
ARTHUR L. BRASEFIELD,
Committee.

DIED.—Daniel Lutz was born in Union county, Pa., March 19, 1827, and died at Zion, Centre county, Pa., January 10th, 1891, aged 63 years, 9 months, and 21 days.

The deceased was a life-long member of the Reformed church, and at the time of his death an elder in Zion's Reformed church, Zion, Centre county, Pa. He was a plain, honest and unassuming man, whose greatest joy was to do that which lay in the path of his duty. He always enjoyed comparatively good health of body and mind until the day of his decease, when, as in the twinkling of an eye, he fell a victim of heart disease.

M. O. NOLL.

DIED.—On Friday, January 2d, 1891, at Shepherdstown, W. Va., Dr. John Reynolds, in the 74th year of his age.

Dr. Reynolds was born in Shepherdstown, and for nearly fifty years practiced medicine in this place. He was married in 1854 to Miss Kate Witherow, who survives him, as also one son, Dr. Allen Reynolds, and one daughter, Nellie, wife of Mr. J. Frank Legge. The funeral services were held on Monday morning in the Reformed church, conducted by the pastor. An affectionate and earnest tribute to the life and character of the deceased was delivered by Rev. J. C. Bowman, of Hanover, Pa. The remains were interred in Elmwood Cemetery.

G. G. E.

DIED.—At his residence, in Mt. Crawford, Va., December 22d, 1890, Mr. John Carpenter, In the 84th year of his age.

Mr. Carpenter was for many years a highly respected and influential citizen of Rockingham county, Va. He was a Christian, and for many years was an elder in the Reformed church, adorning his profession with an upright walk and godly conversation. He was a prominent and supporting pillar in his church, and his removal will be keenly felt. For several years past the infirmities of age confined him to his wheel chair, but his interest in affairs, and especially those relating to the well-being of the church, was keen and appreciative. His was a cheery, pious, old age, and he sank at last rather under the weight of years than by disease. His end was peace.

DIED.—At Christy Park, a suburb of McKeesport, Pa., December 27, 1890, Geo. Wm. Wolfensberger, aged 37 years, 9 months and 21 days.

Mr. Wolfensberger was born near Hagerstown, Md. During his early manhood he was brought under the pastoral care and training of Rev. Dr. Kieffer, the efficiency of which told through all his after years. He grew to be a man of true Christian habit, and in all the several spheres of active life, sought to discharge his duties in good faith and to good purpose. He seemed never to forget that he was a Christian, and to this he would bear witness as in the eyes of all men. And so it was that he could always be relied upon for good and abundant work, whether in his own home, in the employ of others, or in the work of the church.

For a number of years he was a resident of Martinsburg, W. Va., and an employe of the C. V. R. R. During this time he was a consistent and active member of the Reformed congregation, interested in its welfare, as in that of the church generally. When less than a year ago he removed to Christy Park with his family, with the hope of bettering his prospects in life, we felt his loss and regretted his departure, Pastor Darbaker speaks well of him whilst he was a member of his congregation.

But his stay was not long. On Monday, December 29, his lifeless body was brought to Martinsburg, and on Tuesday, after service in the church, laid away in Greenhill cemetery. Death came quietly, but he was prepared for it, and dying he entered into rest.

For those who remain and do mourn his loss, a widowed wife and mother with her four children, we pray the watchful care and loving-kindness of Him that has given promise to be a Father to the fatherless and judge of the widow.

DIED.—At Mechanicstown, Md., January 22d, 1891, of hemorrhage, Mrs. Margaret Maxwell, wife of Rev. N. E. Gilds, deceased, aged 64 years, 9 months and 21 days.

Mrs. Gilds was the only daughter of Lieutenant Portlock, of the U. S. Navy, and was born at Norfolk, Va., April 1st, 1826. On April 7th, 1846, she was united in holy wedlock with Rev. N. E. Gilds, of the Reformed church at Point-of-Rocks, Md., by Rev. M. L. Shuford.

The result of this union was one daughter and three sons. The daughter and two sons remain to mourn their loss, but they mourn not as those who have no hope.

May the consolation and comforts of the Gospel of Christ sustain and keep them in this hour of bereavement.

G. A. W.

SUPPLIES
FOR EASTER.

We offer a New Service for EASTER—with Music—entitled,

"All Hail Our Risen Lord!"

Arranged and composed by Rev. J. Cal. Leinbach and Ferd. K. Hill, organist of Trinity Reformed church, Sunbury, Pa.

Price—100 Copies,	$4 00
" " postpaid,	4 50
Single copy,	5

Also,

"Alleluia, Christ is Risen,"

By the same, at same rates.

Also Service No. 2, with music.

100 Copies,	$4 00
" " postpaid,	4 50
Single Copy, "	5

Service No. 1.

100 Copies,	$2 02
" " postpaid,	2 25
Single Copy, "	5
Four Services, "	15

Services of other Publishers,
Sample Copies, 5 Cents.

Confirmation Tract with Certificate, Rev. A. C. Whitmer, postpaid,		$ 8
Golden Censer, Rev. H. Harbaugh, D. D. A Book for Young Church Members, with Lithograph Certificate.	Roan Emb.,	75
	" " Gilt,	1 00
	Imit. Turkey,	1 50
	Real Turkey,	2 25
	Postpaid.
Easter Eggs, illustrated book, Postpaid.		60

EASTER CARDS IN QUANTITY.

We also can furnish in quantities for Sunday-schools;

Eggs (Wooden), per 100, $2.00

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia

Mention this paper.

Books

New Books every week. Catalogue, 132 pages, free; not sold by Dealers; prices too low; buy of the Publisher, JOHN B. ALDEN, 393 Pearl St., New York.

Business Department.

TERMS:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage free. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.

No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrearages are paid.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made before the date transpires.

When the address of a paper is to be changed, the OLD and the NEW should be given.

☞Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

☞We do make mistakes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

☞Remittances should be made payable by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, or Registered Letter to the order of THE REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHAS. G. FISHER.

THE ALMANAC
FOR THE
Reformed Church in the United States
—TWENTY-EIGHTH ISSUE—
FOR 1891.

We are ready now to receive orders for our Almanac for 1891, at the following rates:

100	Copies, per	express,	$5.00
50	"	"	2.75
12	"	"	.75
1	Copy, Postpaid,		.12

When to be sent by mail 18 cents per dozen must be added for postage.

Also,
WESTERN ALMANAC
At the same prices as above.

GERMAN ALMANAC.

12 Copies,	90 cts.
Postage, 18 cts.
Single Copies, Postpaid,	12 cts.

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK.

IN OLDEN DAYS
BEYOND THE SEA.

Translated from the German, to which are added Introductory and Closing Parts,
BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

An interesting book, giving a thrilling account of the trials and persecutions of those who were true to their faith in "olden days beyond the sea." Pages 305. Illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of retail price, $1.25.

Address,

Reformed Church Publication House,
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK,
"In Olden Days Beyond the Sea,"
AND
THE MESSENGER.

To any one sending us two new subscribers for THE MESSENGER and $4.00, we will send a copy of the above book postpaid.

To an old subscriber for THE MESSENGER, remitting $2.75, we will give credit for a year's subscription and send a copy of the above book, postpaid.

Address

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

Miscellaneous.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

ENDOWMENT CONVENTION IN THE PITTSBURGH SYNOD.

It gives us great pleasure to inform the readers of the MESSENGER that another convention in the interests of Pittsburgh Synod's Professorship in the Theological Seminary has been held—this time in the Fairview charge, of which Rev. H. S. Garner is pastor, on February 10—13. Of the Synodical committee, Revs. D. B. Lady of Clarion Classis, and the writer, of Allegheny Classis, were present. Revs. D. G. Klein of the Sugar Creek charge, and Dr. P. C. Prugh of Butler, were also present, making in all with the pastor, five speakers.

Bro. Garner's charge consists of two congregations, one at Millerstown and the other at Fairview—both in the oil region of Butler county. Neither congregation is very large, and times are not so prosperous in that community as they were some ten or twelve years ago. In spiritual matters however, and in general church work, the people are by no means lagging behind. Though the growth now may be slow, resulting from the collapse of the great oil boom of several years ago—yet there is growth, and it is sure and permanent.

Four sessions of the convention were held in each church. The brethren, Klein and Prugh, with the pastor, rendered the committee valuable assistance by their interesting and instructive addresses. The weather was all that we could wish, and large audiences greeted the speakers at every session. In this respect, and one other, that of collections, which shall be mentioned farther on, this convention eclipsed the other two. Contributions and subscriptions to the endowment fund were received in sums ranging from twenty-five cents up to twenty dollars. An episode, worthy of note, during the convention was the celebration of the birthday of Mary Vida, daughter of Pastor Garner. The litile girl became one year old, and contributed one dollar to the Seminary Professorship. We feel sure that the convention was a success in every particular. A handsome sum, by cash and pledges, was realized, which will be further increased by the pastor's canvas among some whom the committee could not see.

Perhaps too much cannot be said in praise of the pastor of this charge, as regards his efforts for the success of this convention among his people. He saw, what too many do not yet see, viz., that these conventions result in good for the charges as well as for the main object of them. The convention is educational in a pre-eminent degree. Moreover it is of such a character as to make the people proud of their church and its history, more and more interested in her work at large, and as a natural consequence, more interested and helpful in the work at home. Bro. Garner was anxious to have the convention in his charge because he believed it would be an incentive to his people even in the lines of local church work, besides the good that would be accomplished for the Seminary. And we may state that before the convention was over, he had reason to congratulate himself on his belief.

It is the intention of the committee to meet all traveling and other expenses incurred in holding these conventions, by collections, taken up at each session, so that every cent of every contribution may go directly into the Endowment fund. And to the honor of this Fairview charge, be it said, the collections amounted to more than double the expense incurred—so our expense fund is growing too alongside of the endowment fund.

The committee feels more than ever encouraged since this convention. It was with many fears and misgivings that we prepared for the first one at Curllsville. We knew that the Potomac Synod had succeeded in this way, but different locality and different occupations might demand different methods. But now with three successful conventions as things of the past, we are sure we are on the right road. And furthermore we are ready to push the work in this way just as fast as practicable.

We believe that the teaching force in the Seminary should be increased. In his article which recently appeared in the columns of the MESSENGER, "X. Y. Z." advocates a different doctrine. Among the many things this article caused us to wonder over, was where the writer of it was, and why he didn't raise his pen against it, when, in the fall of 1884, each one of the three Synods voted to endow a professorship in the Seminary. If the Seminary needed more teachers then, it needs more now, yea, the need is greater now than then. If "X. Y. Z." wants to wage war against raising money to endow more professorships in the Seminary, let him do it along another line than that of there being no need for more. We have the inclination, but not the time, to give "X. Y. Z's" article the criticism it deserves. Neither does it belong to this brief account of our third endowment convention. Suffice it to say here, that there is only one sentence in the whole article that breathes a sentiment loyal to the wants and growth of our church today, and obedient to the resolutions of her eastern Synods, especially as far as the Pittsburgh Synod is concerned. It is the last sentence of the third paragraph from the end.

E. S. HASSLER.

Turtle Creek, Pa., Feb. 16, 1891.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

DEDICATION OF OLIVET REFORMED CHURCH, READING, PA.

"Olivet," the ninth Reformed church in Reading, Pa., was dedicated on Sunday, February 15th, at 3.30 P.M. The day was all that could be desired for the occasion, and the church, although in the extreme north of the city's territory, was densely packed from pulpit to doors, and at least 250 who could not as much as enter the hallways were turned away. In the pulpit recess were seated Rev. B. Bausman, D.D., Revs. H. Mosser, J. W. Steinmetz, C. S. Gerhard, R. W. Miller, O. H. Strunk and H. Y. Stoner.

Rev. Mosser, of the First church, of which Olivet is a mission, opened the services, which consisted of Scripture passages read antiphonally, interspersed with singing and followed with prayer. Rev. Gerhard, of St. Stephen's, read the 84th Psalm, following with the Apostles' Creed. The pastor, Rev. Stoner, consecrated the building to the worship of the Triune God, and the dedication sermon was preached by Rev. O. H. Strunk, of St. John's Reformed church, Schuylkill Haven, on Is. 60 : 13. In his usual brilliant style he referred briefly to the history and character of the early church, dwelling thereafter principally on the propriety of building beautiful the houses of worship in which souls are to be born into the kingdom of God. The whole discourse abounded in beautiful language and wealth of illustration, demonstrating clearly that the adornment of the sanctuary of the Lord could not easily be too elaborate. Many of the apt illustrations were beautiful lessons for the Christian hearers.

Rev. B. Bausman, D.D., led in prayer, after which the offerings, together with the dedication subscriptions, were received, amounting to about $425. After the singing of a hymn the services were closed by Rev. Rufus W. Miller, of the Second church, who pronounced the benediction.

Olivet Reformed congregation is the outgrowth of a Sunday-school organized in 1880, which was changed in 1888 from a union to Reformed, and placed under the care of the First Reformed church. Regular preaching being desired by the people, they applied for the services of a minister, when they were requested to call on Prof. H. Y. Stoner, then a theological student, whose services they procured on February 16, 1890. On May 1st they joined individuals of the First church in calling him as a regular pastor, being then a licentiate. The call was accepted and on June 7th a congregation was organized numbering 36 members. July 7th ground was broken. September 7th the corner-stone was laid. On October 12th the first communion was held and seven members were added. A class of about 15 will be confirmed on Easter.

The ground, valued $1200, was donated by Mrs. D. R. Althouse, a member. The Sunday-school has contributed about $375. The Aid Society, organized five months ago, $115. Members and liberal Christian friends have raised the subscriptions and cash to about $4,000.

The building is 44 by 54 feet, sandstone base, brick superstructure, with tower 75 feet high. There are two entrances, with lecture room between, and gallery immediately above. The interior is finished in ash, yellow and white pine woods. The ceiling is tinted sky-blue, with rafters and panneling stained light cherry. Walls tinted terra cotta. The pulpit furniture, altar, reading-desk, pulpit, chancel and choir rails are ash. Stained glass memorial and presentation windows throughout. Seating capacity, 400. Cost, including ground, $7,400.

Services were held in the morning at 10 o'clock by Rev. R. W. Miller, who preached on Gal. 6: 10. He set forth in a forcible manner the duty of the Christian and his influence upon his fellow-man in properly directed efforts to bring him to Christ.

Rev. H. Mosser presched at 7 P.M. on Isa. 55 : 1, to a large and appreciative audience, setting forth clearly that salvation is free, and spoke of the means through which we receive sustenance for spiritual life and growth.

Rev. C. S. Gerhard preached on Monday evening, on Luke 12: 32. Having been the pastor and teacher of Olivet's shepherd, his discourse was listened to with special interest, and the many words of encouragement and Christian advice were received with joy, and the recounting of God's promises to give the kingdom to the little flock will surely result in frequent prayer for their continual fulfilment.

Tuesday evening the pastor preached on Acts 9: 6, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

On Thursday evening the pastor was installed by a committee of the city pastors, with Rev. H. Mosser as chairman.

S.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

DISTRICT CONVENTION OF THE BROTHERHOOD OF ANDREW AND PHILIP.

The first Classical or District Convention of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip was held in St. Paul's Reformed church, Lancaster, Pa., Thursday afternoon and evening, February 12th, 1891. The plan was advanced by Chapter 23 of New Holland, Pa., and with this idea in view, invited Chapters 5 of Columbia and 33 of Lancaster, to unite with them in the celebrating of their first anniversary, October 21, 1890. At that time the plan was thoroughly discussed, and meeting with much favor, a committee was appointed to arrange for the above convention.

These are the only chapters organized in Lancaster Classis. They have a membership of about 75, and fully fifty were in attendance upon one or the other of the sessions.

The convention was called to order at

Continued on Page 13

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

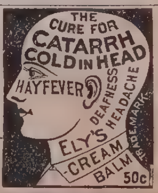
Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

MELLIN'S
FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS.
TRADE ORA ET LABORA MARK.
FOOD
THE ONLY
Perfect Substitute for Mother's Milk.
INVALUABLE
IN CHOLERA INFANTUM AND TEETHING.
A quickly assimilated Food for DYSPEPTICS, CONSUMPTIVES, CONVALESCENTS.
A PERFECT NUTRIENT in all wasting diseases.
REQUIRES NO COOKING. KEEPS IN ALL CLIMATES.
SEND for our book, "The Care and Feeding of Infants," mailed free to any address.
DOLIBER-GOODALE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
"Largest Sale in the World"
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [62

Snug little fortunes have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bonn, Toledo, Ohio. See cut. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time. Big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and wonderful. Particulars free.
H. Hallett & Co., Box 880 Portland, Maine

Rubifoam
FOR THE TEETH
Deliciously Flavored
25¢
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS



ELY'S CREAM BALM
Applied into Nostrils is Quickly Absorbed, Cleanses the Head, Heals the Sores and Cures
CATARRH
Restores Taste and Smell, quickly Relieves Cold in Head and Headache. 50c. at Druggists.
ELY BROS., 56 Warren St. N. Y

HAIR
—ON—
Ladies' Faces
Destroyed forever. No pain, scar, shock, or injury by the Electric Needle by
DR J. VAN DYCK,
Electro Surgeon,
1106 WALNUT ST, Phila.,
and 502 PENN AVE.,
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Never fails. Book free. Call or write.

KINA
DEPOT GENERAL A PARIS
QUINA LAROCHE

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE of 16,600f.
QUINA-
LAROCHE'S
INVIGORATING TONIC,
CONTAINING
Peruvian Bark, and Pure Catalan Wine.
Endorsed by the Medical Faculty of Paris, as the Best Remedy for LOSS of APPETITE,
FEVER and AGUE;
MALARIA, NEURALGIA
and INDIGESTION.
An experience of 25 years in experimental analysis, together with the valuable aid extended by the Academy of Medicine in Paris, has enabled M. Laroche to extract the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark (a result not before attained), and to concentrate them in an elixir, which possesses in the highest degree its restorative and invigorating qualities, free from the disagreeable bitterness of other remedies.
22 rue Drouot, Paris.
E. FOUGERA & CO., Agents for U. S.,
30 North William street, N. Y.
LAROCHE

BLATCHLEY WOOD FORCE PUMP
Cheapest and most efficient. A Complete Fire Department on your premises. Write for descriptive circular. CHAS. G. BLATCHLEY, Philada.

CHURCH, HALL AND LODGE
Furniture. Pulpits, Chairs, Pews, etc.
BAXTER C. SWAN, 244 & 246 S. 2d St., Phila, Pa.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.
Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and indorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your Grocers ought to have it on Sale Ask him for it. D. S. WILTBERGER, Prop., 232 N. 2d St. Phila., Pa.

2.30 o'clock, by Rev. J. W. Meminger, of Chapter 33, Rev. J. H. Pannebecker, Chapter 5, led in prayer.

A permanent organization was effected by electing L. S. Faust, Chapter 33, as president, and H. H. White, Chapter 23, as secretary.

The address of welcome was delivered by D. H. Fouse, Chapter 33, and responded to by H. M. Hall, Chapter 5, on behalf of the visiting brethren in a speech teeming with earnestness and good wishes for beneficial results of the first District Convention.

Rev. J. Stewart Hartman, Chapter 23, then addressed the Convention on the "Rule of Service." The church exists for two objects, the gathering in, and the sending out. Souls are to be saved but for the future of the church they must be trained to save others. To do this effectively, organization is necessary. The world is a field to be cultivated; the church is a force to enter that field, and to perform that work there must be no idlers. Every mouth should be ready to speak, every hand to work, and every foot to walk for our Lord. The work of the world is performed on business or systematic principles. The church is in need of the same principle. Its work can be more readily accomplished through system. Thorough organization supplemented by the faithful observance of this rule, will do the work. Sympathy and comfort must be extended when necsssary, and invitations must be sent forth. There is work for all, then let our motto be, "Every man to his work."

The subject was taken up in a general discussion by Rev. Pannebecker, Rev. Rufus W. Miller, Chapter 1, Rev. Meminger, J. N. Naly, Chapter 17, Greensburg, Pa., Peter Roye, Chapter 5, and J. C. Henninger, Chapter 23.

An address on the "Rule of Prayer" was delivered by Rev. J. H. Pannebecker, Chapter 5. Prayer is the Christian's power; to have assurance that we are accepted when we come before the throne of God; to ask in Christ's name for that which we need in soul and body. What can be compared with this? Taking it for granted that men pray, and that there is this assurance in prayer, this rule is the Brotherhood's peculiar charm. Prayer for each other gives us courage to approach the world in the performance of the other rule—that of Service. It is our strongest arm. Brothers we should revive the assurance that we pray for each other, perhaps at every meeting. We are often, in praying, the direct instruments by which God answers our prayers. Men are prone to forget, or else do not feel, the force of prayer. Through prayer God will help us to approach the world, and show us how to act before the world. The two rules work into each other, they stand or fall together.

The subject was further discussed by Rev. Miller.

Conference on Chapter Work followed. The first topic for discussion was, "Best Methods of Reaching Young Men." Discussion was opened by Charles F. Bair, Chapter 23. Show them our appreciation and our interest in their welfare. Come into personal contact with them frequently. Invite them to church, Sunday-school and prayer-meeting, and when they come make them welcome and show them such attention as that they will return. Subject was discussed by Rev. D. W. Gerhard, Rev. Hartman, Rev. Meminger, and Rev. Pannebecker.

The second topic, "How to Make Chapter Meetings interesting," was opened by President Faust. The most interesting meetings are those to which all come prepared to make good reports. Discuss topics of vital importance and interest to all. The subject was discussed by Rev. Hartman and J. C. Henninger, Chapter 23 Sherman Steel, Paul Gerhard, C. H. Faust, Rev. Meminger and W. L. Jacoby, Chapter 33; Rev. Pannebecker, H. M. Hall and Peter Roye, Chapter 5; and Rev. Miller, Chapter 1.

The third topic, "Advisability of Holding District Conventions," was opened by Rev. Pannebecker in form of a motion to hold a District Convention annually. After considerable discussion it was so decided, almost unanimously.

The committee of arrangements was reappointed. The members are—Rev. J. Stewart Hartman, Charles F. Bair, Chapter 23; H. M. Hall, Peter Roye, Chapter 5; Charles H. Fr and Charles E. Gast, Chapter 33.

At 7.15 P.M. a devotional meeting was held, conducted by the lay members of the convention. It was a pleasant feature, giving evidence of the earnestness of the young men and showing what they can do. The president was the leader. The music was well rendered under the leadership of Mr. Sorber, Chapter 33. W. L. Jacoby, Chapter 33, and Franklin Ruezer, 23, took active part.

The evening session was opened at 7.30 o'clock with music. Rev. J. H. Pannebecker read the Scripture lesson from John xii. and offered prayer.

The convention was then addressed by Rev. E. V. Gerhard, D.D., of Lancaster, Pa., on "Efficient Work for Young Men." He said—You are a body of young men joined in the service of Christ. Believers in Christ, and as such you can say you have the spirit of Christ, for it is by the spirit we make progress. The turning point of efficient activity is faith. First faith in Christ, who called you into His service. To believe in Christ is to see Him with the eye of the soul, to lay hold on Him with the hand of the Spirit, to to dwell in Him and He in you. This is not all. You need confidence in yourself; you are baptized in Christ as His members. Do not raise the question if. That may do for persons not joined to Him. Service for man and perverseness of sin is against natural man. As members of Christ and possessing the Spirit it becomes you to believe in yourself as a member of Christ. If so, you are a power in and for Him. There is such a thing as false humility, and it is just as unbecoming a Christian as to be proud. Have the same confidence in yourself as a member of Christ, that you have in your eye to see, and in your hands to work. Have confidence in the young men with whom you are working, even if not members of the church. Outsiders as a rule are not devils, but men formed in the image of God, fallen and subject to sin. The law of sin may be deep in many, but personality is deeper. You have an ally in every man's heart, so long as he is not reprobate. If confidence in yourself as a Christian lifts you up, then it is defection. All that you have and are is of Christ. First work in confidence in Christ, then in confidence in yourself as His child, and finally in confidence in men, good or bad. That deepest in man is the living image of God, though it may be broken and false yet it is there. Never give up so long as the object is Christ's.

Rev. Rufus W. Miller, of Reading, Pa., addressed the convention on the "Organization, Aim and Prospects of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip." The organization was the outgrowth of practical experience and a felt want. Organization does not create life, but life organization. In organization the church shows forth her life. The Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip has two principles of right to exist. Emphasis on Service and Prayer. Personal work is required of all; we believe in enlisting the activities of all. We desire the least machinery necessary to make progress in this capacity. Chapters exist only in chapter meetings to emphasize personal work. We emphasize the necessity of the use of every means of grace. There is a tendency on the part of many church members to absent themselves from the services of the sanctuary. This calls loudly to us for some remedy. Those who best fulfil the rule of service are those who are found regularly in attendance upon church services; this means something for the development of Christian life. There is to every man his work, but it is often undervalued. Christ is our pattern and guide. Realize the fact that God has answered the prayers of His people in affording us greater opportunities for work; opportunities such as the church has never before had. Personal activity for the salvation of men has come to light as never before. God has called the Christian Church to organize for the work that must be done to solve the problem of the day, and to meet the forces of evil arrayed against the Church. The Brotherhood aims to bring together young men in this work, because young men have a social nature, and by uniting the young men we can reach in this work we can provide a way for the bringing in of other young men.

Let us rejoice that the opportunities for marvelous advance along every line of Church work is ours and the making of us agencies for the spread of Christ's kingdom. The prospects are brilliant; with such opportunities it could not be otherwise. Opportunity brings responsibilities. Members of the church can look joyfully for the future life of the Brotherhood. God will bless us, as long as there is work for us to do, and when that work is done let it die. God has given us strength and confidence will bring us opportunities. Who knows what the result of our labors and prayers will be? Who knows but that we may save all our kindred. God grant that we may use our opportunities more faithfully.

An opportunity was afforded for three minute talks. Dr. J. S. Stahr said—I am here, with you young men, this evening to show that I feel interested in the purpose of your meeting and to enjoy the evening with you. I believe in three things:—

First. In young men, and that there is work for them to do. They are coming to the front. Of old they were expected to keep quiet until they were at least thirty years of age. All this is changed and today in every profession some young men are prominent.

Second. That young men need to be led. That is by counsel and assistance. Under the guidance of the pastor young men can find work to do.

Third. To do this work preparation is necessary. A personal consecration to Christ is necessary. Come in faith to Him for help. Study the tastes and tendencies of young men. This is an age of infidelity. Post yourselves on all questions involving your work. Post yourselves on the result of all evil that you may meet the requirements of the hour.

After the singing of "God be with you till we meet again," the benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. W. Meminger.

Possibly the most pleasant part of the programme was the delightful and elegant tea furnished and served by the ladies of St. Paul's church in the Sunday-school room. These ladies certainly know how to make use of their culinary training.

J. S. H.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

DEDICATION OF ST. PAUL'S REFORMED CHURCH, BETHLEHEM, PA.

Sunday, 15th inst., was a glad day not only to the hearts of the members of St. Paul's Reformed congregation, Bethlehem, but to the many members of the sister congregations and friends of other churches in the Bethlehems and vicinity, the occasion being the consecration of the new and beautiful house of worship, corner of High and North streets The morning services commenced at 10 o'clock and were opened by the pastor, Rev. A. Lobach. Rev. A. J. G. Dubbs, D.D., of Allentown, preached in the German language on the words "Press on to Jesus, and touch Him." The music was by the choir, of which Mr. I. E. Bartholomew is organist. Solo—"Nearer my God to Thee," (Holden), by Mrs. Laura Hess, was beautifully rendered. The attendance was large.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the services were opened by Rev. N. C. Schaeffer, Ph.D., Principal of Keystone State Normal School, Kutztown. The dedicatory sermon was preached by the Rev. E. V. Gerhart, D.D., LL.D., President of the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church, at Lancaster, in the English language, on the subject, "The Present and Future Blessings of God to Man."

Continued on Page 14.

Cleveland's Baking Powder
Is Absolutely the Best,
Because—
"It does not contain any adulteration whatever."—
Prof. Morton, President of Stevens Institute of Technology.

Bermuda Bottled.
"You must go to Bermuda. If you do not I will not be responsible for the consequences." "But, doctor, I can afford neither the time nor the money." "Well, if that is impossible, try
SCOTT'S EMULSION
OF PURE NORWEGIAN COD LIVER OIL.
I sometimes call it Bermuda Bottled, and many cases of
CONSUMPTION,
Bronchitis, Cough or Severe Cold
I have CURED with it; and the advantage is that the most sensitive stomach can take it. Another thing which commends it is the stimulating properties of the Hypophosphites which it contains. You will find it for sale at your Druggist's but see you get the original SCOTT'S EMULSION."

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.
W. BAKER & CO.'S
Breakfast Cocoa

from which the excess of oil has been removed,
Is absolutely pure and it is soluble.
No Chemicals
are used in its preparation. It has more than three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, EASILY DIGESTED, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as for persons in health.
Sold by Grocers everywhere.
W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

THE WONDERFUL LUBURG CHAIR
100 STYLES.
BABY COACHES
COMBINING 5 ARTICLES OF FURNITURE.
50 CHANGES
INVALID SUPPLIES AND WHEEL CHAIRS
We retail at the lowest wholesale factory prices, and ship goods to be paid for on delivery. Send stamp for Catalogue. Name goods desired.
Automatic Brake on all Coaches FREE
WHEEL CHAIRS TO HIRE.
SPECIAL FREE DELIVERY.
LUBURG MFG. CO., 145 N. 8th St., Philada., Pa.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

For Gas
For Oil
BAILEY'S
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass
REFLECTORS,
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free.
A. J. WEIDENER, 36 South 2d St. Philada.
ALSO CHANDELIERS for OIL and ELECTRICITY

CHOICE CARPETINGS
IN ALL GRADES,
AT POPULAR PRICES.
A full line of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and Standard Domestic and Imported Carpets.
☞ We request only an OPPORTUNITY to show you our stock.
IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE.
NEW STORE,
1217 Market Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

CARPET buyers had better purchase of J. & J. DOBSON, 809 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, in order to receive full value for their money. They retail Carpets of their own make, which are reliable in every way.

400,000 The largest circulation of any periodical in the world. "The Phila. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies free. CURTIS PUB. CO., Phila., Pa.

In the evening at 7.30 o'clock the services were opened by Rev. A. Lobach, the pastor. The Rev. N. C. Schaeffer, Ph.D., of Kutztown, preached in the English language on "The Power of the Cross." Dr. F. A. Garis, of West Bethlehem, sang a solo of the beautiful and inspiring hymn, by Phœbe Carey, "One sweetly solemn thought," etc.

The music at all of the services was well rendered. The audiences were large, and the collections from friends amounted to over $125 during the day. Rev. N. Z. Snyder, of the First Reformed church of South Bethlehem, was present and assisted at the afternoon ceremonies, and Rev. D. F. Brendle, D.D., of Bethlehem, at the evening services. He read the list of names of persons who kindly donated gifts to the church, as follows: Windows, Samuel Yarger, O. A. Richards, William Loos, Esq., (2), Thomas Diehl, James Kemerer, George Weber, Mrs. Laura Hess, Mr. and Mrs. William Lehr, Cohen Loos; pulpit bible, Helen May Richards; book marks, Mrs. Carrie Boehler; pulpit, altar, pulpit chairs, chancel chairs, reading desk, baptismal font, by the pastor and his mother; carpet for auditorium, Ladies' Aid Society; gas fixtures, Robert P. Ross.

Church News.

☞ Stated Clerks of Classes and Pastors will oblige us by sending such Items of News as will be of interest to the Church.

OUR OWN CHURCH.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Greenville. — Rev. A. M. Keifer, the popular pastor of the Reformed church in this place, had his 29th birthday anniversary celebrated by his congregation on Friday evening, 13th inst. The older portion of the congregation proceeded to the parsonage, where the pastor was waiting for the appearance of the Sunday-school teachers, who had appointed a meeting, to be held there that evening. It was a sight to see the face of Pastor Keifer as he received the visitors. To say he was surprised draws the picture only mildly. Then the spokesman of the party, Rev. J. M. Schick, in a few remarks presented Rev. Keifer, in the name of the the congregation, a purse of $29, a dollar for each year of his life, together with congratulations of the people. Mr. Keifer responded as well as he could, and it is fair to him to say that he did as well as he could under the circumstances. After this the people circulated among themselves, and in general good will the evening was passing, when the door bell rang, and Rev. Keifer was greeted with another surprise. This time the young people's society of the congregation took advantage of the pastor's birthday and gave him a popular pounding. In they came and each with a pound of something, and deposited it on the table of the dining room until that article of furniture was pretty well filled with good things, representing the good will and congratulation of the young folks of the congregation. This took Mr. Keifer still more than even the former surprise. So great was this second surprise that he could not even make a speech when the giving was over; but he knows how highly his people esteem him, and the occasion will go far to making him feel that his work here is not lacking appreciation.

—A lecture will be delivered in Zion's Reformed church, in this place, March 13, 8 P.M, under the auspices of the Young Christian Workers, by Rev. Prof. J. H. Dubbs. D.D., subject, "Rough Diamonds, or Curious People that I Have Met."—Greenville Argus.

Philadelphia.—St. Mark's church, Rev. G. A. Scheer, pastor. The fifteenth anniversary of St. Mark's church took place on Sunday, the 15th inst. The church had taken on its usual festive appearance. The weather being all that could be desired, the congregations were large both in the morning and evening. Rev. Ph. Vollmer of St. Paul's church, delivered an elegant sermon in the morning from the text 1 Timothy 3:15. His theme was —"The Church of God, a pillar of truth; because it supports the truth." 1. In its pure doctrine; 2. In its holy walk (or conversation); 3. In its solemn protest against untruth and immorality; 4. In its suffering and dying.

The evening service was devoted to a reunion of former catechumens. Rev. John H. Sechler, pastor of First church, delivered an instructive and eloquent sermon from the text Acts 9:6, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me do." He showed—1. Who asked this question? 2. What it implied; 3. That it was a personal question; 4. That it was an earnest question; 5. That it was a present question. This congregation has prospered, under God's blessing, and by hard self-denying work. As a sign of this may be mentioned the Sabbath school with a membership of over 1000, and an average attendance of nearly 800 during the last year. That the pastor still continues in the love of his people was again proven by a purse of $145, which was handed to him in the pulpit by the President of the Consistory, George Schwinn, for which he again wishes to say, "Ganzlichen Dank meins Lieben in Jesu."

Lancaster.—Messrs. Geo. P. Stem, G. E. Limbert, and F. A. Rupley, Jr., of the Theological Seminary, Lancaster, Pa., attended the Inter-Seminary Missionary Alliance, which met in Priuceton, N. J., last week.

Lebanon.—Rev. D. E. Klopp, D.D,, and family recently took possession of the new parsonage erected by First church of Lebanon, located on the corner of Chestnut and Spring streets. It is a handsome and comfortable building, On Wednesday afternoon and evening of the 18th inst., an informal reception was given by Dr. Klopp to his people. A pleasant time was had.

MARYLAND.

Frederick.—Recently one of the most delightful social gatherings met in the lecture rooms of the Evangelical Reformed church, Frederick. It was given by the Young People's Guild. It was a congregational gathering. Nearly the entire church, with a communion list of seven hundred, with the Sunday-school scholars and baptized youth of this influential denomination, to the number of nearly one thousand, attended this reception of the Guild, to partake of the social festivities. Ice cream and other refreshments were served to almost nine hundred. Not only those living in the town, but a large number of the country members were present. It was a thoroughly social occasion. A happier crowd could not be brought together. Young and old, little children, gray-haired grandsires seemed to vie with each other as to who could enjoy the occasion most fully. The highest credit is due to the Guild for their management of the affair. The Evangelical Reformed congregation is the largest Christian church in this place. It is one among the largest of any denomination in the state. It is efficiently organized for church work. It embraces much of the wealth of this community. But it is not confined to the rich. Its people reach all classes of a religious community. Prof. G. E. Smith, the musical director in all the public services, is a most accomplished singer and organ player. Dr. E. R. Eschbach, the pastor, is a scholar, a gentleman, an able preacher and a faithful pastor. Happy the church that has such a minister. Happy the pastor who has such a parish, such a Guild and such helpers in the Sunday-school and all church work.

ILLINOIS.

Orangeville Charge.—Rev. George P. Hartzell, pastor. The members of the Orangeville and Belleview congregations and friends of this charge showed their appreciation of the services of their pastor by giving him and family a splendid donation on the 10th of January. They brought grain to feed the horse for some months to come, and the larder was also well filled with articles useful in the household. The pastor's wife received $10 in silver. The money value of the donation was $50.

OHIO.

Galion.—Rev. C. Hassel has accepted a call from this place. He will remove to his new field April 1st.

MISSOURI.

St. Louis.—Rev. W. F. Horstmeier, pastor. The new church of Salem's congregation in this city was dedicated on the 1st inst. Rev. H. A. Muehlmeier, D.D., of Sheboygan, Wis., preached the sermon. In the evening Rev. F. W. Marcus, of Galion, O., preached. The church is a fine one and will seat about 800 persons. The organ is also a fine one. The mission and its pastor deserve great credit for their perseverance and success.

"THE SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST."

Almost any man of fifty, in our time, has led a life more crowded with events than the more than nine centuries of Methusaleh. Within the last half century most of the inventions that have revolutionized the the world have appeared, with, perhaps, the exception of the steam engine and its application to different modes of conveyance. A middle-aged man can remember when the canal boat was considered a luxurious conveyance, and the journey from Philadelphia to New York required several days. The telegraph was not known, and the wonderful inventions of Edison and others not even dreamed of. But this picture has its dark side. With all the labor-saving appliances and inventions, there is none to relieve the mind. Its activity is increased to meet the demands made upon it. Methusaleh, at the age of forty or fifty, with over nine hundred years of life before him, and the consciousness that a trifling sum, placed at compound interest, would enable him to spend his last days in comfort and even in affluence, could afford to lose an hour, or even a day or two. But now, "time is money," and money is everything. Neither mind nor body can bear the strain, and disease is the result. This is the penalty we pay for our high state of civilization. But is nothing to be done to restore and revitalize us?

If you wish to investigate this subject, send for our brochure of 200 pages. It gives the result of 20 years of study and experience, and is a carefully-written work. There is collected, also, a mass of evidence, irrefutable and convincing. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St. Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St. San Francisco, Cal.

Spring Humors

Spring Humors, whether itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, whether of the skin, scalp, or blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, are now speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the Cuticura Remedies when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. The almost miraculous cures daily effected by them prove this. No statement is made regarding them not warranted by the strongest evidence. They are, in truth, the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies of modern times. They are absolutely pure, and agreeable to the most sensitive, and may be used on the youngest infant and most delicate invalid with gratifying and unfailing success. CUTICURA, the great skin cure, instantly allays the most intense itching, burning, and inflammation, permits rest and sleep, soothes and heals raw and irritated surfaces, clears the skin and scalp of crusts and scales, and restores the hair. CUTICURA SOAP, the only medicated toilet soap, is indispensable in cleansing diseased surfaces. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new blood and skin purifier, and greatest of humor remedies, cleanses the blood of all impurities, and thus removes the cause. Hence, the Cuticura Remedies cure every humor of the Spring, from the simplest facial blemishes to the worst case of scrofula. Sale greater than the combined sales of all other blood and skin remedies.

☞ "HOW TO CURE DISEASES OF THE SKIN AND BLOOD" mailed free to any address, 64 pages, 300 Diseases, 50 Illustrations, 100 testimonials. A book of priceless value to every sufferer.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c. CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Boston.

Pimply, Blotchy Skin, red, rough, and oily skin and hands, painful finger-ends with shapeless nails, are prevented and cured by Cuticura Soap, incomparably the greatest of skin purifiers and beautifiers, while rivalling in delicacy and surpassing in purity the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only medicated toilet soap, and the only preventive and cure of inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples. blackheads, rough, red, and oily skin, and simple humors of infants and children. Sale greater than the combined sale of all other skin soaps. Sold everywhere.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT Established 1810

—UNLIKE ANY OTHER.—

Positively Cures Diphtheria, Croup, Asthma, Bronchitis, Colds, Tonsilitis, Hoarseness, Coughs, Whooping Cough, Catarrh, Influenza, Cholera Morbus, Diarrhœa, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Toothache, Nervous Headache, Sciatica, Lame Back, Soreness in Body or Limbs, Stiff Joints and Sprains.

AS MUCH FOR INTERNAL AS FOR EXTERNAL USE.

It is marvelous how many different complaints it will cure. Its strong point lies in the fact that it acts quickly. Healing all Cuts, Burns and Bruises like Magic. Relieving all manner of Cramps and Chills.

ORIGINATED BY AN OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN

All who buy direct from us, and request it, shall receive a certificate that the money shall be refunded if not satisfied. Retail price by mail 35 cts.; 6 bottles, $2.00. Express and duty prepaid to any part of United States or Canada. ☞ Valuable pamphlet sent free. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

GENERATION AFTER GENERATION HAVE USED AND BLESSED IT.

FOR DIABETES

Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

DR. E. J. WILLIAMSON, St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have tested its qualities in cases of Diabetes, with marked beneficial results, and am well pleased with the remedial qualities of the preparation."

For Reformed Church Messenger.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The quarterly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Philadelphia Classis was held on Tuesday, February 10th, at the first Reformed Church, Tenth and Wallace Streets, Phila.

The usual devotional exercises were conducted by the vice-president, Miss Lilian E. Gerhart, in the absence of the president. After the secretary's and treasurer's reports were approved, the reports of delegates were received. An amendment to the constitution was made, making the amended article read thus: "The voting membership shall consist of two delegtes from each church within the bounds of the Classis, who shall bring credentials from the Auxiliary Society, Consistory or pastor of the congregation. Each Auxiliary Society sending the delegated members shall be requested to pay two dollars per year for the same.

Ninety two dollars were given to the Church-bullding Fund, and five dollars were sent to the Girls' School at Sendai. A card for one hundred dollars in payments of ten dollars each was taken for the Messiah Mission, Phila., and two payments paid with an extra donation of two dollars and ninety-five cents.

The afternoon session was opened with prayer by Rev. E. C. Hibshman, of Trappe, Pa., with singing by the congregation, and reading of the Scriptures. Rev. J. H. Sechler, pastor of the church, delivered an address of welcome to the ladies and their friends.

Mrs. M. S. Wheeler of the Methodist Church, addressed the society on the subject of Missions. She spoke of the degraded condition of the women of India, and urged the women of America to send them aid, by giving their lives or their means.

Miss May Royer, of Trape, Pa., sang a beautiful solo, after which Rev. C. H. Coon, of Trinity Church, Philadelphia, gave an address in which he spoke of the great need of unity in purpose, and of more earnestness in our work. At the request of the ladies, this was followed by a solo by Rev. Coon, entitled, "Throw Out the Life line."

A letter from Ishikawa, a Japanese girl educated at Sendai by the Missionary Society of First Church, was read by Miss Bevin.

Whilst the collection was being lifted which amounted to nine dollars and twelve cents, the young ladies of First Church sang a beautiful missionary quartette.

The attendance, strange to say, was not so good as usual, and we regret that more churches were not represented. The next meeting, however, we expect to be a full one, as it is held in connection with the Classis at Collegeville, Pa., during the early part of June.

SPECIAL MEETING OF JUNIATA CLASSIS.

Juniata Classis met in special session in the Emanuel Reformed Church at Huntingdon on the 14th inst. at 1 30 P.M. President Musser called Classis to order. In the absence of the stated clerk, Rev. Lloyd E. Coblentz, of Altoona was appointed stated clerk, pro tem. The following ministers and elders were present: Revs. H. F. Long, C. U. Heilman, W. A. Long, C. J. Musser, Robert O'Boyle, Lloyd E. Coblentz and J. B. Stonesifer. Elders—Judge Forman, John R. Lefford, William Koontz, S. B. Isenberg and George L. Freet.

A communication from Rev. C. J. Musser to the joint consistory of the Huntingdon charge was read, announcing his resignation and asking their acceptance of the same. Accompanying this was a communication from the above-named consistory accepting the resignation. Classis then dissolved Rev. Musser's pastoral relation to the Huntingdon charge and dismissed him to Allegheny Classis of Pittsburgh Synod.

A communication from part of the Woodcock Valley charge asking Classis to dissolve the pastoral relation between Rev. H. F. Long and said charge on account of certain reasons referred to in the communication. Also a communication from another part of the charge requesting that Rev. Long be retained as pastor of the charge. Classis appointed a committee to investigate the particulars of the charges in the first communication and to report the same to Classis. Elder S. B. Isenberg, Revs. C. U. Heilman and Robert O'Boyle constitute the committee.

Rev. W. C. Schæffer, of Palatinate College, Myerstown, Pa., was present.

A communication from Rev. J. W. Alspach, asking that the dissolution of his pastoral relation to the Everett charge be dissolved, was read, and being found in order, the request was granted.

By the order of Classis, the following committees of supply for the Huntingdon and Everett charges until regular pastors be secured were appointed:

For Everett charge, S. Z. Beam, D.D., Robert O'Boyle and J. B. Stonesifer. For Huntingdon charge: Revs. C. U. Heilman, Lloyd E. Coblentz and D. S. Dieffenbacher.

Rev. Musser resigned as president of Classis. Rev. Lloyd E. Coblentz was elected to fill his unexpired term. Classis adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

IN MEMORIAM.

DIED.—Monday evening, January 19th, 1891, Mt. Pleasant lost one of its most venerable and respected citizens, and the Reformed church one of its most devoted members in the person of Mrs. A. L. Voight, widow of the Rev. H. E. F. Voigt, late deceased. In the morning of the day of her death, Mrs. Voigt seemed as well as usual, but while at breakfast she was stricken with paralysis, from which she never rallied. A physician was speedily summoned but gave little hope of her recovery. Unconscious from the first, she grew weaker and weaker until about 9 P.M., when she calmly and peacefully passed away without a sign of death. Thus her often expressed desire, that her latter end might come without much suffering, was realized; for to her death was truly only a "Sleep in Jesus."

The funeral services took place Thursday afternoon, in the First Reformed church, and were conducted by the pastor, Rev. C. R. Ferner, assisted by Revs. J. H. Prugh of Pittsburgh, and Dr. Stephens of the Baptist.

There was a large crowd of people present to pay their last respects to such a time honored friend. Six of her grand sons acting as pall-bearers at the house and church, gently carried her remains into the church where she loved so much to be. As the anthem, "He giveth His beloved sleep," rolled softly through the church, the sentiment of the words seemed fully verified in the form of her who was lying in the casket before the altar; so beautiful in death, not a trace of suffering upon her face, as though she was taking a sweet sleep. At her head rested a bank of white lilies and hyacinths, the flowers she loved so well.

Her remains were then taken to St. John's church graveyard and gently placed besides those of her husband who was buried there sixteen years before.

Thus ended one of the most truly Christian lives I have ever known. Her life was a blessing to all who knew her, and her presence in the church was an inspiration.

Mrs. Anna Louise Voigt, nee Cronemeyer, was born at Lippe, Detmold Langen Holtz Hausen, May 1st, 1802 and died January 19th, 1891, aged 88 years, 8 months and 18 days.

She was confirmed a member of the Reformed church in 1815, and in 1820 she was married to Rev. H. E. F. Voigt who six years later came to America as a missionary, leaving his wife to provide for herself and three children for eight years when she and the children followed him and the family settled at Mt. Pleasant Westmoreland county, Pa., where they spent their remaining days. To them three more children were born in this country, of whom two are dead, leaving four children, besides the many grand and great-grandchildren to mourn their loss.

C. R. F.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

PAINLESS. EFFECTUAL.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS

Such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Fullness and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness, and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c.

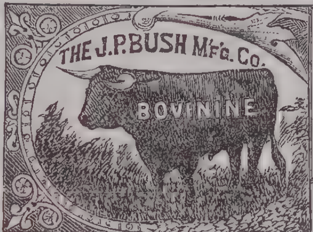
THE FIRST DOSE WILL GIVE RELIEF IN TWENTY MINUTES.

BEECHAM'S PILLS TAKEN AS DIRECTED RESTORE FEMALES TO COMPLETE HEALTH.

For Sick Headache, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Constipation, Disordered Liver, etc.,

they ACT LIKE MAGIC, Strengthening the muscular System, restoring long-lost Complexion, bringing back the keen edge of appetite, and arousing with the ROSEBUD OF HEALTH the whole physical energy of the human frame. One of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is that BEECHAM'S PILLS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE OF ANY PROPRIETARY MEDICINE IN THE WORLD.

Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England. Sold by Druggists generally. B. F. ALLEN CO., 365 and 367 Canal St., New York, Sole Agents for the United States, who (if your druggist does not keep them) WILL MAIL BEECHAM'S PILLS on RECEIPT of PRICE, 25cts. A BOX. (MENTION THIS PAPER.)



BOVININE

A CONDENSED FOOD

CONSUMPTION. "It is by the aid of the digestive organs alone that consumption can be cured. Leave the lungs alone and direct the attention to the organs of nutrition, the stomach and bowels," which will receive BOVININE and return with interest in new blood and tissue the care bestowed upon them. BOVININE is the vital principles of Beef concentrated, a highly condensed raw food, palatable to the most delicate taste, and is indispensable in CONSUMPTION, Pneumonia or Bronchitis, and all wasting diseases. Will sustain life for weeks by injection. Causes feeble infants and their mothers to thrive wonderfully. BOVININE is the only raw food that will not spoil, and is retained by the most irritable stomach; is daily saving life in cases of Phthisis, Typhoid Fever, Diphtheria, Bright's Disease, &c.

BOVININE is Sold by all Druggists.

NOTICE.

The Executive Committee of the Women's Missionary Society of the Eastern Synod will meet at the Palatinate College, Myerstown, Pa., Thursday, Feb. 26, 9.30 A.M. All members are urged to be present. Agreeable to Mrs. Schaeffer's request all members will please notify her of their intention to be present.

MARY G. HEITSHU, 512 East King St.,
Feb. 17, 1891. Lancaster, Pa.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cures sick headache.

"BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES."

For Bronchial, Asthmatic and Pulmonary complaints, "BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" have remarkable curative properties. 25c. a box.

SUPPLIES FOR THE ARMY.

The contract for supplying baking powder to the U. S. Army, bids for which were recently opened in New York, has been awarded to the Cleveland Baking Powder Co. Before the award was made the different baking powders offered were submitted to a thorough analysis, with the sanction of Commissary-General DuBary, so that the result is a high tribute to the merit of the Cleveland Baking Powder.

The Sultan of Turkey is studying the German language.

Those who use Dobbins' Electric Soap each week, (and their name is legion) save their clothes and strength, and let the soap do the work. Did you ever try it? If not, do so next Monday sure. Ask your grocer for it.

Birds as a rule, it is said, will disappear from this year's Easter bonnets.

Nothing adds so much to a person's appearance as a fine thick head of hair of even color, and to assure this use only Hall's Hair Renewer.

Intelligent Readers will notice that are not "warranted to cure" all classes of diseases, but only such as result from a disordered liver, viz:

Tutt's Pills

Vertigo, Headache, Dyspepsia, Fevers, Costiveness, Bilious Colic, Flatulence, etc.

For these they are not warranted infallible, but are as nearly so as it is possible to make a remedy. Price, 25cts.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

AMERICAN FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

Office, Company's Building,

308 and 310 WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

A.D. 1810

CASH CAPITAL,..........................$500,000.00
Reserve for Reinsurance and all other claims,..........................1,994,685.25
Surplus over all Liabilities,...... 455,708.82

TOTAL ASSETS, JAN. 1, 1891.
$2,950,394.07.

THOS H. MONTGOMERY, President.
CHAS. P. PEROT, Vice-President.
RICHARD MARIS, Secretary,
JAMES B. YOUNG, Actuary.

DIRECTORS.

Thos. H. Montgomery, Alexander Biddle,
John T. Lewis, Charles P. Perot,
Israel Morris, Joseph E. Gillingham,
Pemberton S. Hutchinson, Samuel Welsh,
Chas. S. Whelen.

The PENN MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO. Issues all approved forms of contracts adapted to every legitimate need, at the lowest, sure rates. Send for rates, etc. Home Office, 921 Chestnut Street, Philada.

JOHN I. BLAIR (Blairstown, N. J.).
DE WITT C. BLAIR. OLIVER C. EWART.
JAMES A. BLAIR. CLINTON L. BLAIR.

BLAIR & CO.,

BANKERS,

No. 10 WALL STREET.

MUNICIPAL BONDS.

WE OWN AND OFFER THE FOLLOWING:

$ 25,000	Plattsmouth City, Neb., 20 Year 6s.
25,000	Pueblo, Colorado, School District 5s.
87,000	Dallas, Texas, Gold 30 Year 5s.
200,000	Omaha, Nebraska, 20 Year 4½s.
200,000	Seattle, Washington, 20 Year 5s.
20,000	Butte, Montana, 10-20 Year 6s.
20 000	El Paso, Texas, 15-30 Year 6s.
20,000	Sandusky, Ohio, 5 Year 4½s.
25,000	Newark, Ohio, 6 Year 5s.
50,000	Muskegon, Mich., 23 Year 5s.
50,000	Washington County, Neb., 20 Year 5s.
10,000	Salem, Oregon, School District 6s.
10,000	Polk County, Oregon, School District 7s.

Further particulars on application in person or by letter.

The bond department is in charge of Mr. Edgar L. Marston.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER.

BLACK GRENADINES

Like many other Midsummer dress materials, Grenadines nowadays make their appearance and form part of the activity of the period, months before they used to be called into service.

This is partly owing, no doubt, to the fact that the Winter travel southward has caused an earlier demand, and partly to the fact that the dressmaking departments are not, at this time of the season so overcrowded with business as later; and ladies avail of this fact to have their dresses made up in advance of their wants. Whatever the reasons for the demand may he—we are prepared to meet it with a stock superb in every way, in styles and variety of assortment, and in thorough reliability as to quality and wear. The latter qualification in these goods is most important, though not as generally recognized by the trade as it should be, for the reason that, while it is easy to arrange for goods that look well, it is extremely difficult to have the goods properly made as to real wear. A Grenadine to be perfectly satisfactory in wear, first of all things must not slip; we have by long study and experiment overcome this constant danger and the goods we have now made to our special order may be depended upon in this important particular. ~~The next Requisite is color~~ and finish; only in all silk, or part silk and wool material can the unapproachable black, which distinguishes our goods, be obtained.

To day on our counters can be found all the newest and choicest styles of Grenadines.

Including:

Plain Grenadines,
Satin Stripe Grenadines,
Polka Dot Grenadines,
Satin Barred Grenadines,
Silk Border Grenadines,
Brocades, Figures,
Spots and Checks,

in every line, and most of them to be seen only on our counters.

Prices commence as low as 75 Cents Per Yard.
Then
$1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, and up to $3.50.

Strawbridge
& Clothier,
EIGHTH & MARKET STS.,
PHILADELPHIA, PA

WOULD YOU LIKE
A NICE GARDEN?

If so, raise PERFECT VEGETABLES with POWELL'S SOLUBLE PHOSPHATES For GARDENS

Which are clean and inodorous. Put up in suitable quantities for small and large gardens. No trouble to use. Not expensive For sale by general stores, Druggists and Seedsmen. An interesting circular telling how to make a good garden, sent Free.
W. S. POWELL & CO.
Chemical Fertilizer Mfrs.
Baltimore. Md.

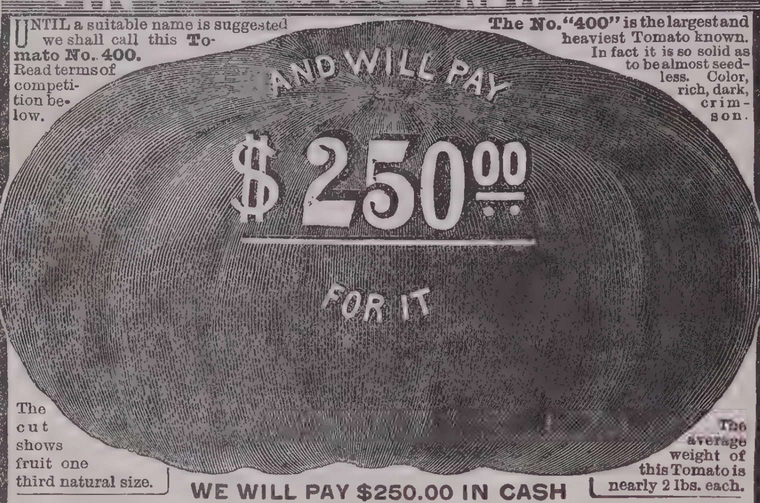
Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER ABSOLUTELY PURE

WE WANT A NAME FOR THIS NEW TOMATO

UNTIL a suitable name is suggested we shall call this Tomato No. 400. Read terms of competition below.

The No. "400" is the largest and heaviest Tomato known. In fact it is so solid as to be almost seedless. Color, rich, dark, crimson.



The cut shows fruit one third natural size.

The average weight of this Tomato is nearly 2 lbs. each.

WE WILL PAY $250.00 IN CASH

For the best name suggested for this New Tomato.

Purchasers are entitled to send in a name for each and every packet they buy. The names can be sent in any time before October 1st, 1891, and will be considered by a disinterested committee of three, who shall award the prize. Full directions for entering the names for competition given on every packet of seed.

Price of New Tomato No. "400," 25 cts. per packet, free by mail.

☞ With every order for a packet or more, we will also send free our magnificent New Catalogue of "EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN" for 1891, (the value alone of which is 25 cts.), on condition that you will state where you saw this advertisement. ☜

PETER HENDERSON & Co. 35 & 37 CORTLANDT ST. NEW YORK.

Over 350,000 Acres

Of CHOICE FARM LANDS in rich Agricultural region. Failure in crops never known. Best all-the-year climate in the world. Plenty of water. Churches, schools and social advantages. Soil adapted to all kinds of farming. For sale at very low prices, and on unusually liberal terms. A Guide, with maps, prices, terms, and required information, will be mailed Free of charge on application.

C. E. SIMMONS,
Land Commissioner C. & N. W. R'y., CHICAGO ILL.

TRY DREER'S GARDEN SEEDS,

PLANTS, BULBS, and Requisites.
They are THE BEST at THE LOWEST PRICES.
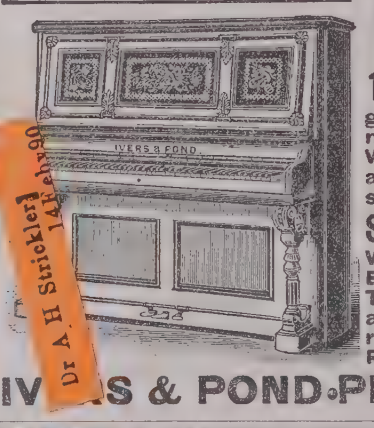
DREER'S GARDEN CALENDAR for 1891 full of garden topics, mailed for 6c. postage. Abridged edition Free.
HENRY A DREER, 714 Chestnut Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

IF YOU WANT A PIANO



Dr A H Strickler] 14Feby90

Write us. We will SEND our

100-PAGE CATALOGUE FREE,

giving valuable information. We make it easy to deal with us WHEREVER YOU LIVE. Our prices are MOST REASONABLE for strictly FIRST-CLASS PIANOS. WE

SELL ON EASY PAYMENTS.

We take OLD PIANOS in Exchange, EVEN THOUGH YOU LIVE TWO THOUSAND MILES AWAY. We guarantee satisfaction, or Piano to be returned to us AT OUR EXPENSE for RAILWAY FREIGHTS BOTH WAYS.

IVERS & POND PIANO CO., 183 Tremont St., BOSTON, MASS.

DEAFNESS & HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Tubular Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Successful when all remedies fail. Sold only by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum. M. C.. 181 Pearl St.. N. Y.

CONFESSIONS of a NUN, by Sister Agatha

A work of startling realism. Cl. $1; paper 50c
JORDAN BROS., Publishers, 211 N. 9th St., Phila., Pa.

ARCHITECTURE

CHAS. W. BOLTON, 1510 Chestnut St., Phila

Sketches of Churches, Public Buildings, Dwellings, etc., furnished gratis. Then, if desired, drawings and specifications will be prepared for a reasonable consideration.

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE TRUST CO.

Capital paid up $1,500,000 — Surplus over $100,000

DENVER, COLORADO.

First Mortgage Loans and Gold Debentures.

Loans fully guaranteed. Safe as Government Bonds.
Philadelphia Office, Room 302 Bullitt Building,
ROBT. FORESMAN, Manager.

SPRING OVERCOATS
NEW AND NOVEL
"EXCELLENCE"
AT $12.00.
E. O. THOMPSON,
1338 Chestnut Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Breath of Spring is in the Air.

Time to practice EASTER MUSIC, is it not?

Send for our Fine List of Carols, Anthems, &c., or for Easter Allelulias (5 cts., 50 cts. doz.) Rosabel, or Our Easter Offering (15 cts., $1 44 doz.), a Cantata by Lewis.

MUSICAL SOCIETIES

should wind up the season by practicing such Cantatas as Don Munio ($1.50, $13.50 doz.), Wreck of Hesperus (35 cts., $2.40 doz.), 91st Psalm (60 cts., $5.40 doz.), Ballard. (Send for our List of 150 Cantatas.)

FAIRS and EXHIBITIONS

are made successful by introducing easy Cantatas, like Dairy Maid's Supper (20 cts., $1.80 doz.), Lewis, or Garden of Singing Flowers (40 cts., $3 60 doz.), or Rainbow Festival (20 cts., $1.80 doz.), Lewis.

BOYS and GIRLS

who sing will be delighted to take part in the brilliant flower cantata, New Flora's Festival (40 cts., $3 60 doz.), New Flower Queen (60 cts., $5.40 doz.), Kingdom of Mother Goose (25 cts., $2.18 doz.), Gipsy Queen (60 cts., $5 40 doz.) Send for Lists.

Much attractive Exhibition Music is found in School Collections.

Children's School Songs (35 cts., $3.60 doz.), Golden Boat (50 cts), charming action songs by Mrs. L. O. Chant, First Steps in Song Reading (30 cts., $3 doz.)

Any Book mailed, post-paid, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY, Boston
J. E. DITSON & Co., 1228 Chestnut St. Phila.

Sensible Mothers BUY THE "GOOD SENSE" Corset Waist for themselves and their growing children.

DO NOT STAMMER.

Mr. T. P. Causly, Law School, St. Louis, Md., writes: "I appreciate the benefit I derived from your treatment, and feel that the cure is a lasting one in my case"

Send for 54-page pamphlet to E. S. JOHNSTON'S Institute, N. E. Cor. 11th and Spring Garden Sts. Phila., Pa.

BIBLE-READING CHRISTIANS AND Sunday-School Workers will be glad to obtain a comprehensive insight into the contents of the Bible. On receipts of 21 cts., should you fail to find it at your book store, we will send you Books of the Bible Analyzed, by Rev. Schultze. It is warmly recommended as an indispensable aid to Bible reading and study. H. T. FRUEAUFF, Easton, Pa. For sale at Wanamaker's. The trade supplied by The J. B. Lippincott Co.

LIFE AND REMINISCENCES OF
GENERAL SHERMAN

By a distinguished author. Contributions furnished specially for book by prominent soldiers and statesmen. Agents Wanted. Will out sell everything. Send 35c. instantly for outfit. We guarantee best book and best terms. Buy no other. R. H. WOODWARD & Co., Balto, Md

---

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS

Over 200,000 ESTEY ORGANS are singing their own praises the world over, as the most reliable organ made for tone, durability and fine finish. The ESTEY PIANO is as thoroughly and carefully made and guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has. If you want a first-class Piano that is sure to please you buy an ESTEY. Lowest prices for cash, or on easy monthly payments.

ESTEY, BRUCE & CO. 18 N. Seventh St. Philadelphia, Pa.

CLINTON H. MENEELY BELL COMPANY,
TROY, N. Y. Manufacture a Superior Grade of
CHURCH CHIME PEAL AND SCHOOL BELLS

Best quality Bells for Churches, Chimes, Schools, etc. Fully warranted. Write for Prices. BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY. VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY,
BALTIMORE, MD.
Best quality Copper and Tin BELLS for Churches, Schools, &c.
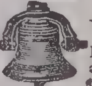
Also CHIMES AND BELLS.
Price and terms free. Name this paper.



MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N.Y., Bells
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half century noted for superiority over all others.

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO.
CINCINNATI, O., sole makers of the "Blymyer" Church, School and Fire Alarm Bells.
Catalogue with over 2200 testimonials.

RIGGS & BROTHER,
Branch Store, 1005 Walnut St., Phila
Ladies' 14-Carat Gold Watches, $25.
" 14-Carat filled case " 18.
Boys' Silver Watches 7.00.
Watches and Clocks repaired.

Reformed Church Messenger.

"AS THE TRUTH IS IN JESUS."

VOL. LIX.—NO. 10. PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, MARCH 5, 1891. WHOLE NO. 2930.

Entered at the Post-Office, Philadelphia, as second-class matter.

The Reformed Church Messenger.
ISSUED WEEKLY
IN THE INTERESTS OF THE
REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES
BY THE
REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE,
CHAS. G. FISHER, Proprietor,
Office: 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(For Terms, see page 11.)

Editorial Notes.

—We are in receipt of the Acts and Proceedings of the Central Synod and the German Synod of the East for 1890. They are from the press of the German Publication House, Cleveland, O.

—The next Seminary Endowment Convention of the Pittsburgh Synod will be held in the Red Bank charge, Clarion county, Pa., Rev. R. F. Gass, pastor, March 9th to 14th. The interests of the Seminary at Lancaster will be presented to three of the four congregations of the charge during the week. The committee having the matter in charge anticipate liberal contributions from Rev. Gass' people towards the endowment of the new professorship. These people are said to have an enviable reputation for generosity and zeal in the service of Christ and His Church.

—Through Rev. Geo. H. Souder, pastor at Bellevue, Ohio, we learn that Rev. Joshua H. Derr is at present quite ill, and has been for some time suffering with dropsy and other ailments. Recently, however, he has been feeling somewhat easier, but in reality is no better. There is little hope of his entire recovery. This intelligence in reference to one who has long and faithfully labored in the service of the Master will be received with deep regret by his many friends throughout the Church. He deserves and needs the prayers of the Church. The Lord comfort and sustain this aged brother in his sufferings and be with him unto the end!

—Rev. W. C. Schaeffer, Ph. D, President of Palatinate College, Myerstown, Pa., announces the formation of Normal Classes in connection with the regular course of study of the College, at the opening of the spring term, March 30th, 1891. Those who would wish either to engage in teaching or to take a full college course would do well to make use of the excellent advantages offered by this institution. Full particulars can be obtained by addressing the President.

—The new Easter service—"All Hail Our Risen Lord," has had an unexpected run. The congregations and Sunday-schools that used the former services prepared by Messrs. Leinbach and Hill will not go amiss in adopting this one.

—The Missionary Guardian for March is out and in the hands of the subscribers. It is an excellent number. The circulation is gradually increasing, but not as fast as its projectors had reason to expect. Pastors and Missionary Societies throughout the Church have not come up to their duty in the matter. Let it be made known to the membership and the result will be that few will refuse to become subscribers. It is due the cause of Missions, as it now challenges our Church, that it finds its way into every Reformed family.

—The attendance at the concert of the Franklin and Marshall College Glee and Mandolin Clubs in Association Hall on Monday evening, March 17th, next, promises to be large and flattering. We repeat the request that the Alumni and friends of the College in the city and vicinity make every exertion to arouse an interest in this effort to bring the College prominently before the public. The beneficiary, the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital, this city, deserves a liberal support.

—Dr. M. U. Gerhard, physician at the Insane Asylum, Harrisburg, Pa., whilst out driving last week, met with a serious accident in being thrown out of his carriage, his head striking the ground, resulting in a slight concussion of the brain. He is rapidly recovering, much to the joy of his many friends. Dr. G. is a brother of the Superintendent of the Asylum, Dr. J. Z. Gerhard, and Revs. C. S. and D. W. Gerhard.

—It is seldom that our engagements will allow us to leave our sanctum for a day or more at a time. We wish it were in our power to desert it oftener than we do. It would afford us great pleasure to visit different portions of the Church and meet the pastors and their flocks. But a day's absence brings two day's work in one upon our return, and, in consequence, one day of rest is followed by one of increased work. "A day off," as the saying is, will be of benefit to any one, particularly when he can afford to take it. In going a day's journey at the present day, it is astonishing how many miles you may travel to and fro, and how many persons and how much you may see. Last Wednesday necessity was upon us to accompany one of our family as far as Washington. Taking the Royal Blue Line, now the popular vestibuled train of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad from New York to Washington, in this city, at 8.15 A M., in the space of three hours and five minutes we reached our destination. The motion of the train was easy, though it rushed swiftly along. The accommodations were all that could be desired and the attention of those in charge of the train from conductor down was the most polite. Upon our arrival at Washington, we at once repaired to the Capitol, and in turn visited the Senate and House of Representatives. From there we went to the White House; then to Corcoran's Art Gallery, and wound up our sight seeing at the National Museum. We would have been pleased to call upon Pastor Apple and learned of his work in that rapidly growing city; upon Rev. J. O. Johnson, to see him in his new position as Vice President of the Ohio National Bank, just organized, at corner of 12th and G streets; upon J. Taylor Motter, Esq., and others, but the day was inclement, snow overhead and slush under foot, and our time was limited. At 5 P.M. we were again upon the Royal Blue Line, speeding through the country, all covered with snow since we passed over it in the morning, and arrived safely at home at 8.20, after an absence of just thirteen hours.

—Upon the ninth page of this issue will be found more good words in behalf of the MESSENGER from some of its oldest readers. The writers of these and those of last week, have our thanks for responding to our wish to know who have been receiving the MESSENGER for a long term of years; and our sincere wish is that they may be permitted to enjoy its visits many more years to come.

—Rev. Joseph N. Santee, D.D., has been pastor of the Cavetown, Md. charge, for forty years. He has for some time felt that it is best for him to give place to a younger man, his physical condition not allowing him to perform the arduous labor the charge requires. He has so notified his consistory, and hard as it is for them to sunder ties by complying with their beloved pastor's request, they will do so. Steps will at once be taken to secure a suitable one to take his place, and with a successor placed over them, the prayers and good wishes of the people Dr. S. has so long served, will attend him in his retirement that is so well deserved.

—Read this issue of the MESSENGER from the first to the last page, and then see if your conclusions will not be, that this is an interesting number and well worth its cost, less than four cents. Several of the communications, it will be noticed, are from laymen, and the questions they discuss are interesting, as they deal with them in a practical way, fully indicating that they know whereof they are writing. Elder Barnhart presents the subject of endowing the Professorship of the Pittsburgh Synod, in a straightforward way to the membership of that Synod in particular and to that of the Church in general. We are glad to see the laymen of the Church letting themselves be heard. The discussion of questions concerning the Church and her interests will be profitable and inspiring, and there is room for more than there has been. Brethren of the pulpit and the pew, lend us your aid, in this way to make the "OLD MESSENGER" more and more interesting and acceptable to its readers!

—The Ministerial Association of the Reformed (Dutch and German) Churches of this city has, through a Committee, of which Rev. James Crawford, D. D., is Chairman, called a Conference between its members and representatives from the Consistories of the Reformed churches, to consider the important subject of the extension of the Church in this city. The Conference will be held in the First Reformed (German) church, 10th and Wallace streets, Monday the 9th inst., 8 P.M. It is to be hoped that there will be a full attendance and that active measures will be inaugurated looking to the carrying forward of the proposed work.

Poetry.

OUR YEARS.

Still they come, and still they go.
When they end we may not know;
What a record they shall show:
Fruitful years,
Moist with tears;
Barren years,
Dry with fears.
Years of active toil and reaping,
Years of patient Sabbath-keeping;
Years of joyful, broadcast giving,
Years of carnal, selfish living:
Years of greed, and treasure-heaping,
Years of turmoil, war and weeping.

Stil they come, and still they go.
When they end we may not know;
What a record they shall show:
Spent for nought,
Have we thought,
Of the hour,
Of His power,
When the Judge with righteous showing,
Every hidden purpose knowing,
To that great Assize inviting,
Where all wrongs receive their righting,
For our honor, for our shaming,
All our deeds shall be proclaiming?

Still they come, and still they go,
When they end we may not know;
What a record they shall show:
Years of grace
To our race,
Lost ones sought,
Saved ones brought;
Jesus' precious life and dying,
Bands of death and hell untying;
In these years of glad releasing,
Some have known the joy of ceasing
From their own unworthy doing,
In His cross their merit viewing.

Still they come, and still they go.
When they end we may not know;
What a record they shall show:
Surely this—
Woe or bliss,
At the end,
Will impend;
For the King Himself descending,
Human rule and rulers rending,
In His right all power assaying,
Over earth one sceptre swaying,
To the pit the wicked sending,
Shall proclaim that time is ending.

—Mrs. Geo. C. Needham.

Communications.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

DISCORDANT VOICES.

We are often amused to notice the different opinions which men of intelligence and position appear to have of the populations which formed the basis of, and whose representatives gave character to, our republic. These opinions, too, as held by these persons, undergo very little change when they make reference to the later history of the country. In this one thing they agree, that they limit the variety of populations, in so far as they need to be taken into the account, to a very small number. Many New England people seem actually to believe that the sole germ which developed into the great republic came over sea in the Mayflower. It is also astonishing how large a part of our population is assumed to be lineally descended from the Pilgrims. Then came the Puritans, who stood, in present popular estimation, on substantially the same basis with the Pilgrims; and these two elements united and often confounded, are held to have been the main body of people and to have furnished the vital spirit which have made the United States the nation it has become. This view is accepted as a truism far and wide, and it underlies as though it were axiomatic, a large part of our literature. And yet it is singular how little thought is required to see, plainly as anything can be seen, the fallacy of any such broad assumption.

At times the scope is widened. We are then told that it was the Puritan in the North and the descendants of the Cavalier in the South, who shared between them the honor of populating the country and of establishing its government; and that it is these two elements which have carried the nation onward in its course of prosperity and liberty. The idea underlying this statement is captivating. It appeals to the imagination. There is poetry in the thought that the Puritan and the Cavalier, who had stood at enmity in England, should in this New World become friends, and make American independence their common cause. They did do this, too, as no one questions; but it does not follow that they were the only ones here who counted in the struggle, or to whom we owe the glory and the prosperity of the land. Yet such is a current assumption. As a sober fact it, of course, could never be established, and it seems almost a pity that, in its character as an assumption, it is likely to meet with rude shocks.

It must not be left out of sight that the two elements, of which we have just now spoken, were both English. They were representatives of one and the same nationality. And the Colonies were English colonies. How natural, therefore, the inference drawn? What a mess of trouble would be spared if only things could be settled by ready-to-hand inferences and by easy assumptions, unmolested by hard facts and the inflexible laws of thinking. Just here comes in the difficulty in the way of the theory of the Puritan in his single glory, and the kindred theory of the Puritan and the Cavalier in their dual glory.

In the November number of Harper's Magazine Prof. Sloane, in an article on Princeton University, incidentally finds occasion to give expression to his view of the substantial and the moulding elements in the history of our nation. He is a Presbyterian, and the Presbyterian Church is not primarily English but Scotch. Professor Sloane tells us that the Scotch element was a factor representing large numbers in the colonies, both in those which became the Middle States and as far South as the Carolinas: and that this element was a distinct and mighty force, from the first, in shaping the character and institutions of our country. He demands large room and conspicuous position for his people in our annals. He intimates that from the beginning they rather led than followed. The Scotch in their generations here stand great and high. And he makes out a good case, which we see no valid reason to question as to its main features.

But right here comes in the amusing thing again. Professor Sloane does not agree with either of the other theories to which reference has been made, and which are so generally current. To begin with, he ignores the Cavalier and whatsoever belongs to him. He allows the descendants of the original Puritans a place of equal honor with that occupied by the descendants of the orginal Scotch settlers. And so we have here a new classification, differing from either of the other two in the essential particular, that, in this one, the Scotchman claims a place, and even waves out of sight one of the other claimants.

However, the author of the article in Harper's Magazine goes a step further. He thinks the Dutch, the descendants of the settlers from Holland, have a just claim to recognition. So also the Quakers. Speaking of the location of Princeton University he says, "a place was chosen in the very heart of the Middle States, as they then were the focus of the Scotch and the Scotch-Irish life, which was destined to transform itself into that pure Americanism which has been in evidence from the days of the Mecklenburg declaration until the present. To this influence was associated a very potent one with neither Scotch nor Scotch-Irish blood,—namely, that of the English Quakers on one side, and of the neighboring Dutch to the north and the northwest on the other." In another place he speaks of "The three great race elements which have combined in our aboriginal and primitive Americanism," by which, as one would infer from the connection, he means the Scotch, the English Puritans, and the Dutch. As we have said, these implications and statements are incidental to an able article on another subject, and in this respect also they are significant.

Cui bono as to this whole matter? Well, to show how conflicting current theories are, and how unwise it is to adopt any one just as it comes to us. We have cited three leading and popular theories. Let us now add, that, separately or combined, they are very far short of the facts, and untrue to that extent.

Wyoming.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

LETTER NO. IV.

My Dear Sisters: So far I have considered the revealed will of God concerning you in your position in the family and the congregation in relation to that of man. I might at once pass on to some other features of the question, if it were not for intimations thrown out of late in some of the periodicals of our Church that certain portions of the Bible teach the opposite of the view here taken.

It might be sufficient to answer to this that the law of God to man is for man, not for Himself. That if He has really made any exceptions in the Bible to the law of man's sovereignty, that does not annul the law itself by which we are to be governed. But it may be well to pay at least some attention to these intimations, lest silence might be misinterpreted.

Much stress has been laid upon the fact that there were prophetesses both in the Old Testament and the New. It is needless to speak here of the various meanings of the word prophet in the Bible. It is sufficient for our present purpose to direct your attention to the fact that in its general sense it means one who is empowered to speak for God, or in God's stead, to man; that such power is grounded on the revelation of the will of God to the prophet, and that such revelation is generally made either by a temporary influence upon him by the Spirit of God, by vision, by dream, by the mediation of angels, etc., or by the Spirit of God dwelling in him permanently. The first kind of revelation makes the prophet only a medium of God's will to man, the second also an interpreter or teacher of that will. Most of the prophets and all the prophetesses mentioned in the Bible belong to the former class, to the latter the chief prophets in the old covenant and the apostles in the new. The power and authority of the former were simply those of messengers, those of the latter were those of ambassadors and stewards.

In the Christian Church, because of the permanent indwelling of the Spirit of God in every Christian, and because of the fullness of the revelation of God in Christ, the specific relations of God through the medium of prophets became less and less necessary, especially after the Gospels were written and distributed among the churches. The preaching of Christ and the teaching of the truth as it is in Him became naturally the chief work of the Church. Hence we have the distinction between prophets and teachers, and the emphasis which is laid on teaching. Christ is constantly spoken of as teaching. Paul calls himself an apostle and teacher. But no woman is ever referred to as a teacher in any of the churches; and simply because teaching in this sense involves the interpretation of the revealed will of God, and those in a lower position cannot interpret law for those in a higher. Your children can not sit as a supreme court to determine for you the nature and meaning of the law by which you are to govern them and to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. True authority does not come from beneath, but from above.

If you are a mother, however, you have, no doubt, often been taught and even rebuked by the Lord through the medium of your child, but that, you see, does not change the law by which the child is always to obey and honor you as parent. So if God has at times seen fit to cause women to see visions and to dream dreams for the guidance and warning of men, that fact also does not alter the law of man's sovereignty over the woman. This is shown in the history of the first prophetess mentioned in the Bible. God seems to have spoken in vision and dream to Miriam, but when she presumed on that account to dispute the position of Moses as the head of the house of Israel, the anger of the Lord was kindled against her and she was smitten with leprosy (Num. 12). Deborah at first impression might seem to be an exception to this rule; but it needs but little observation of the degeneracy of her day to see that God raised her up as a medium through whom to rebuke the princes of her people.

The word of the Lord by His prophet, Isaiah, shows very clearly that the rule of woman is per se an abnormal order of things: "As for my people, children are their oppressors, and women rule over them. O my people, they which lead thee cause thee to err, and destroy the way of thy paths" (Is. 2: 12.) Jezebel, the wife of Ahab, is the only woman mentioned in the Bible who ever ruled over prophet (the Elijahs excepted), priest and king; but I believe her example has never been quoted by those who covet the possession of her prerogatives. May it not be well to bear in mind that "All these things happened unto them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."

But some one has inquired concerning the prophecy of Joel quoted by Peter on the day of Pentecost, whether that does not give woman the right to teach in the congregation. Let us see. This prophecy has reference to the ministration of the Spirit in contrast with that of the Law. Under the Law, though all the people were "baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea," they were not born again of water and the Spirit. All Christians, old and young, male and female, being baptized by one Spirit into one body, are partakers of the Holy Ghost. In this pentecostal age of the covenant, we have the prophecy of Joel fulfilled in that the Holy Ghost is poured upon all flesh comprehended in the Church of Christ, the first fruits of the Spirit. When the age of the Feast of Tabernacles comes, the full ingathering of the harvest then shall be a literal fulfillment of this prophecy, for then shall indeed all flesh be filled with His Spirit, and all shall know Him from the least even to the greatest. But does all this change the law of sovereignty in question? Are the members of the body, though all partakers of the life of the head, not subject to the head? Are the spirits of the prophets not subject to the prophets? And are not the prophets themselves subject to Christ? In my first letter I guarded you against the error of supposing that the mere possession of an endowment of any kind constitutes authority to use it ad libitum.

I deem it needless to refer to other passages of the New Testament that are sometimes wrested to serve a self-projected theory. I wish to turn to another phase of this question.

This sovereignty of the man over the woman is supposed by some persons to necessarily involve the superiority of the one and the inferiority of the other, in being. But the question is not one of being at all; it is simply one of position. The two are one flesh and one blood, and the mere suggestion of such a comparison is not only odious, but it manifests a fundamental error. The will of God in their creation makes them different both in body and soul, but this difference does not involve antagonism between them. It only makes their oneness possible. The difference in the members of the body evidences the same truth. No, the moment we speak of superiority and inferiority, we put asunder what God hath joined together; and great mischief is wrought because of this false view.

But this sovereignty of man is absolutely necessary. Two sovereigns in one family would not more do than two heads on one body, or two kings over one nation. More wars have been caused in the history of mankind in the settlement of the question as to who should be greatest, than from all other causes combined. It is a world of pity that many families have been racked and ruined in attempting to come to a conclusion on the same question which, having been solved by God Himself, should never be regarded as unsettled by man or woman.

But this sovereignty of man, to be true to its ideal, must be grounded in the love of God, not in the love of sovereignty. And the obedience of the woman must likewise be the obedience of love. The love of Christ for the Church and the loving obedience of the Church to Christ are the component parts of the prototype of this blissful union. Forgetting this, man becomes a tyrant, woman a slave—not to man, but to the evil one.

Many persons suppose that the sentence of God upon Eve after the fall ("Thy desire shall be to thy husband and he shall rule over thee") was the expression of a new law determining her position in relation to Adam because she was first in the transgression. We have already seen that her creation fixed her position. Before the fall the rule of Adam and the obedience of Eve, being grounded in the law of love, were probably unconsciously exercised. After the fall, however, the case was different. Eve's fallen human nature made her prone not to obey the law of love; but God nevertheless confronted her with the demands of that law. Her consciousness of Adam's rule was not to change the law governing her position. For the same reason God afterwards confronted the children of Israel with the decalogue. This was no new law, but it was added in this form because of transgression. Christianity enthrones the law of love again in the hearts of the children of God, and so long as you, as Christian women, are true to that law of love you cannot desire to be freed (?) from your God-ordained position. Dissatisfaction here is already rebellion against the law of God. Satan wrought Eve's ruin by making her conscious of the the limitation God placed upon her (and Adam as well and by promising her greater good if she broke through this limitation. And this, you see, is the very essence of the modern gospel of the so-called emancipation of woman. But Satan's promised emancipation is now, as it was then, slavery of the most woeful character. Alas, that he should have assistance in such work within the bosom of the Christian Church! That such leaven should be at work outside of the Church is to be expected; and Christ and the apostles give us to understand that it will do its baneful work also within, but can you and I afford to furnish one thimbleful of meal to help along its activity in our direction?

It would be an easy matter to show, did time permit, that the spirit of the age is "the spirit that worketh in the children of disobedience;" that Socialism, Nihilism, Anarchism and this so-called woman's rights movement are at bottom infidel; that they differ in degree, not in kind; for they all agree that the powers that be, so far as they are affected in their supposed rights, are not ordained of God; that they are slaves under the present order of things, and that it is evidence of advance and enlightened wisdom and virtue to "despise dominion and speak evil of dignities." Fortunate is he or she, who can detect the purpose of the tempter in the voice of the angel, and say in good time with the Master: "Get thee behind me, Satan." This part of the subject, however, claims still further consideration. Your Brother in Christ, N.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A POPULAR ADJECTIVE.

Conclusion.

As money is the invention of man, and its injudicious use the product of corruption, so are many of the special means that are employed in the Church, mere human machinery which is the product of self-dependence, self-righteousness and superstition, resulting in glory and praise to the minister or evangelist, the congregation or some loud singer.

On the particular occasions, the character of which is readily known by the phrase, "special efforts" or "protracted meetings," surprising results are expected and prayed for with an earnestness, it is to be feared, that is special only for its length and loudness. All backsliders are revived, and show special spiritual vigor in consequence of their long rest from active labor. Many are convicted and converted by some miraculous power (that must evidently be in the air), and thus the human process of creating saints, "in the twinkling of an eye," goes on until the community is filled with full-fledged Christians, of mushroom growth, who are distinguished from Reformed people by their experimental religion.

Frequently this is to be accredited to haphazard preaching and the special efforts of men who consider themselves some independent institution invested with power to confer upon self the license and name of preacher. It is only too true, that in some instances regular ordained ministers, who have been carried away by this special movement, sanction and invite the services of these irresponsible men who are popular instruments in operating the machine that receives sinners at one end and turns them out at the other as Christians. These sweeping victories over sin are the outcome of a special occasion lasting only from two to six weeks; but, in this time, if the breeze is favorable, the "wildfire" has spread over the entire community and the revivalists would fain subject the Heidelberg Catechism to cremation to complete and perfect their triumph.

Dear brethren, you who are blessed with the influences of Reformed strongholds or are surrounded by sister churches, who deplore the inevitable results of the extreme measures alluded to, perhaps we have already enabled you to picture the circumstances surrounding a small Reformed congregation which worships in a Union church, where these dramatic performances have been introduced, and, the idea of progressive development in religious culture, according to the slow but sure process of education and growth, is partially if not entirely denounced. It is under circumstances such as these, that the writer is especially grateful for Dr. Nevin's little work entitled, "Anxious Bench," which our persecutors are forced to denominate "Nevin's Famous Bull." By the extreme measure sinners are led to Christ and afterwards are shown the way. First the harvest and afterwards the sowing. First the "anxious bench" and then the catechism, or, perhaps none at all. Or first the Catechism and afterwards some human process, to render the object of instruction what it should be, which however is incompatible with true catechetical training. First conversion, then the means that are intended to lead to it; or, using the most charitable construction,—no sowing, no blade, no ear as the result of gradual development, but the instantaneous appearance and existence of the full corn in the ear. It invariably follows that these seasons of emotional religion are, to Reformed people, seasons of persecutions because the uncharitable adherents to the new measures do not respect the Reformed position. The Reformed are branded by them as a people whose religion consists in morality. And why? We answer, because they stand by their ministering servants; because they faithfully endeavor to perform their confirmation vows and seek to exemplify, in their daily lives, the efficacy and unfailing power of Divine Grace; and lastly, because they have a purer, a nobler and more exalted idea of experimental religion. It is not always wise or prudent to keep silence. When surrounded on all sides, by a self-righteous element, that exerts influences tending towards perversion rather than conversion, and which, in their unlimited sphere, are frequently marshalled for the purpose of converting a pastor's catechumens, it behooves Reformed people to be astir, to know their position well, to defend it and maintain a righteous indignation rather than sanction error by mingling with this emotional element simply because they may worship in a Union Church.

We might point you to Reformed people who worship in a Union Church and practically felt no susceptible difference between the worshiping congregations; but latter-day-ideas of special means have caused a necessary breach of that Union in which both had been blessed with genuine strength. Although the sister congregations has reaped the bitter fruits of its special endeavors to facilitate and improve regular appointed means, inasmuch as the entire charge has been shaken to atoms by the natural and consequent results of reaction, and has been unable to call or maintain a new pastor for a number of years, still, the few remaining faithful ones hope to be reunited, and restored to prosperity by the same measures that prove the cause of their present hopeless condition.

This congregation's experience and present deplorable condition bears striking testimony to the words of a Reformed writer who once said through the columns of the Messenger, "that if the religious life is started in emotional excitement, it naturally follows that its continued growth must be kept up by emotional excitement. We all know the fickleness of human feelings, and the experience of the past proves with measurable certainty the fickleness of Christian character resting upon nothing firmer than the sandy basis of emotional religion."

There is, therefore, a sufficient reason for painful anxiety for those of the Church, who, possessing temperaments that are likely to be overcome by emotional excitement, are consequently in danger of being subjected to misguiding influences. God be thanked for the emotional religion that owes its beginning and growth to the silent influences of the Truth. Let us clap our hands and shout for joy because of the missionary spirit as characteristic of the present special efforts of our Church. There is ample occasion for emotion if the Christian knows and feels the want of the Church. The secret of knowing this consists in a desire to know; and this desire is cheerfully responded to by the Messenger, the oldest organ of the Church, which is ably and wisely designed to acquaint the reader with the doings of the Church and also fit him to brave the storms that arise from "various winds of doctrine." Let us prayerfully hope that the Messenger and the Missionary Guardian may join hands in the interest of the Church at home and abroad; and being thus joined may no brother put them asunder by receiving one and neglecting the other; but may both find their way into every Reformed house to gladden it with messages of love and awaken a greater interest in the cause of missions. There is a genuine religion of feeling when Faith, Hope and Charity fill the heart; but a religion of feeling that is checked or reduced in temperature by an appeal from the Church for missions, is spurious. Let us have more of that religion of feeling, and those special efforts that tend towards immortal results will send sunlight greeting to the benighted. The individual who neglects or despises church literature and thus virtually closes his ears to the appeals of the Church, but yet prays, "Let Thy Kingdom come," acts as inconsistently as those who pray for deliverance from the evils of intemperance after having cast his ballot for rum.

Physical emotion is not the necessary product of spiritual life; but it may be the product of human efforts. It is, therefore, no criterion by which to know that the heart is regenerated. "By their fruits ye shall know them." Men do not gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles. Regeneration is the work of the Holy Spirit which speaks to the soul comforting assurances through the Divine Word. Those who are cleansed and saved will not attribute their salvation to human agency, as though it were a necessary contribution towards the completeness of the Atonement, but to the atonement itself, the efficacy of which is at once appled to all "penitents" who have unwavering faith in it and an implicit trust in Him who made it. In conclusion: we are grateful for the privilege of keeping hands off those special movements by which there is frequently a great influx of members who could not be reached through the Church directly, and the results of which seem, for the time being, to verify the notions of those who practically teach that the Church is lacking in power and must be supplemented by human machinations. The Church needs no supplementing power. It is her mission and hers alone to diffuse light and gather even from the uttermost parts of the earth; and it is by her special efforts that Zion's walls shall ultimately encircle all nations.

There are some who are always haunted by some human ideal plan of prosecuting church work and are ready to foretell the fate of the denomination that ignores it. That there always have been ministers in the Reformed Church who dare to be Daniels is a "peculiarity" in our Reformed Zion, that has proven a heavenly boon; and those who, at the present time, are pressed with the claims of organization that are not in direct co-operation with the ministering servants of the Church, and "dare to stand alone," are the ministers the Church wants and needs. It will not be long until the eyes of many will rest upon and thoughtfully watch the movements of the faithful as they evince unmistaken confidence in the glorious fullness and sufficiency of the Church by their attitude towards that which is solely human. It is not the office of human organizations to keep the Church from falling or strengthening her pillars; but the Church has its heavenly as well as earthly origin for the purpose of spiritualizing the world.

Union Deposit, Pa. W. H. Mader.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE THEOLOGY OF THE DAY.

Upon one occasion when we were in the Theological Seminary, our professor assigned to a fellow-student, as a theme for an essay, "The Relation of Faith to Knowledge." The student for several weeks, bent himself to the mastery of his subject. At length he wrote his essay, read it before his Professor and fellow-students, and concluded his learned elaboration with the remark, "that the more he studied the subject, the more he found that he knew nothing about it." Not a few of the Theologians of to-day are finding themselves we take it, in a somewhat similar predicament with our fellow-students. The more profoundly they study the great cardinal Christian dogmas, the more they find that what in recent years was considered the last word is very far from being such, and the treatment and conclusions which were considered as exhaustive and as establishing the standard of orthodoxy, are anything but exhaustive—are, to say the best of them, only half-truths. The old imagination, to speak figuratively, was, that they knew all about the moon there was to know. Despite the dictum of science, they pronounced it to be a round, flat surface, and proceeded to define its metes and bounds, and any one who questioned their mensuration was not orthodox. But recently their dogmatic slumbers have been disturbed by the proddings of the scientist's sharp stick, and they are awaking to the fact that the moon is a sphere; that there is quite as much of it invisible as visible, and that what is invisible is just as real, just as substantial, as that part which is seen, and that they must apply a spherical, not a plane trigonometry to its measurement—and that a revision and restatement of their astronomy, in this regard, is called for.

This is just precisely the meaning of the agitations, the revisions of confessions, and the construction of new creeds, with which the theological air is now filled. Old standards of orthodoxy are being called in question by their own subscribers. Systems which were discarded as heretical are authenticating their title to a divine commission, by their spiritual fruits. Calvinism is losing caste in the house of its friends, and what it needs is not to attempt to array it in the garb of an age which has transcended it, but clinging to the precious faith which underlies it, leave it among the monuments of the past as a revered testimonial of the truth as apprehended in by-gone days. Arminianism despite its loose and defective theology, has proven itself to be possessed of the vital kernel of the divine life, and it has gathered souls into the Kingdom by thousands and millions.

Now, what does all this mean? This simply, that doctrine, as formulated by the finite understanding, is not of the essence of our holy religion. It cannot, however, be neglected. If we would grow in knowledge, we must grow in doctrine. It need not, however, be a procrustean bed—we need not all be of the same stature. If a man believes in and accepts the Atonement wrought out by Jesus Christ, it is not essential that he understand the rationale of the Atonemement, if he be regenerated by the Spirit of God, it needs not that he comprehends the modus of the divine efficiency. I believe with all my heart in the tri-unity of the Godhead, in the atonement, in regeneration, in the divine sovereignty and in the freedom of the human will, and yet I never saw a dogmatic formulation of these truths, which was fully adequate, to my mind. I believe in these things as facts, and as facts I rest upon them. Why, then, exact an ex animo subscription to an inadequate definition of them?

This we believe to be the trend of theological thought in our day. It is causing commotion, and a disturbance of old landmarks. What will it lead to? It will lead, as we have already plain indications, to falling back upon the facts themselves, of which the dogma is an attempted, but insufficient logical definition. It will lead to the grand enunciation, "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Jesus Christ, the alpha and the omega—the grand living centre, and the concrete facts which inhere in His relation to the Godhead on the one hand, and His relation to man on the other. All this is of the essence of Christianity. And one jot or one tittle cannot be compromised.

This goal reached, and we have the basis of the re-union of Christendom. Strange, and yet perhaps, not so strange after all, that the first decisive step in this direction should be taken by the infant United Church of Japan. At the meeting of its General Assembly last December, the adoption of a confessional standard engaged its attention. The twenty-four articles recently adopted by the English Presbyterian Church, was proposed as its creed. This was favored by one party, the other proposed that the Apostles' Creed only should be adopted. Being nearly equally divided, a compromise was with great unanimity reached, by which the Apostles' Creed with the following preamble was adopted:

> "The Lord Jesus Christ whom we worship as God, the only begotten Son of God, for us men and for our salvation was made man and suffered. He offered up a perfect sacrifice for sin, and all who are one with him by faith are pardoned and accounted righteous; and faith in him working by love purifies the heart. The Holy Ghost, who, with the Father and the Son, is worshiped and glorified, reveals Jesus Christ to the soul, and without his grace man, being dead in sin, cannot enter the kingdom of God. By him the prophets and apostles and holy men of old were inspired, and he speaking in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, is the supreme and infallible Judge in all things pertaining to faith and living. From these Holy Scriptures the ancient Church of Christ drew its Confession, and we, holding the faith once delivered to the saints, join in that Confession with praise and thanksgiving. (Here follows the Apostles' Creed.)"—Presbyterian Banner.

Now why is not this basis broad enough for all the Reformed churches of Presbyterian form of government to stand upon? For our part we would say, whatever a man's doctrinal views may be, if when measured by this standard, they be found blameless, extend to him the right hand of Christian fellowship. May it not yet in God's providence come to pass in this way, and thus fulfill the blessed word of promise, "and a little child shall lead them" (Is. 11 : 6)?

CYRIL.

Missions.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A LETTER FROM JAPAN.

The Christmas boxes have arrived at last. The steamer was late coming in and the cases did not reach us until several weeks after Christmas. This was a disappointment, but we were glad they came before the cold weather was over, as there is a great deal of suffering amongst the poor about us and the flannel and calico are of great service. The boxes were brought to the house just about noon, and as soon as dinner was over a number of the other members of the mission came in and the work of unpacking commenced.

Such an array of dolls, scrap books, flannels, calico, and muslin, as met our astonished eyes! We worked until almost dark and then our visitors returned home to put away their treasures. Before putting mine away I packed two small boxes with dolls, scrap books, cards and tracts, to be sent to sick children in the Charity and Hongo hospitals of Tokyo, where I have long been interested, and where Japanese Christian friends are working. Last winter the number of poor families who came to us for relief became so numerous that we could not help all, so letters were sent to each of the sister churches of Sendai, asking for a committee of two persons from each congregation to be appointed and meet with me to try to form a charitable association. This was done, and two from each congregation were elected to represent the Japanese, and I, the foreigners. We collected a sufficient sum of money to help about thirty needy families for a time, but, as winter drew near it became necessary to get in a larger sum, and at a meeting it was decided to give a charity concert. A large building was rented, good Japanese musicians secured, and both Chinese and Japanese instruments used. Most of the foreigners assisted, and a piano, organ, and violin were borrowed for the occasion. The admission was very cheap, only five and ten cents, so that students, and others who could not pay for high priced tickets, could attend, but, as more than one thousand persons were present, over seventy dollars was realized. After all expenses were paid, we had on hand between fifty and sixty dollars. The committee decided to give a certain amount of rice each week, to the families under their care, and, by careful management, the money has held out until now. At present, there are but a few dollars in the treasury and we must collect again.

About two weeks ago the weather became intensely cold, with snow every few days, and, as I knew the condition of some of the families under our care must be very pitiful, I asked the visiting committee for the names of the very poorest. The names of ten were given and most of them were found in great misery. In one old hut, so full of holes that the rain and snow can drive in on all sides, were three old people, two of whom are almost helpless from age and starvation, both lying on the ground with not a single quilt to cover them, nor a whole garment to protect them from the bitter cold. They felt too ill to go to the hospital for medicine, so a Christian physician kindly went to them. They will probably never be strong again, as they are old, and too much weakened by starvation to have much to build upon. In a house close by was a young man, formerly a vegetable dealer, whose sight is almost gone; he has a young, rather delicate looking, wife, and two tiny children, one three years, and the other only a few months old. The floor of his one room was covered with clean boards, but he had neither food, fuel, nor bedding, and upon inquiry it was ascertained that he, and his family of little ones, have been sleeping on the hard boards with not a quilt to protect them from the biting cold. His goods are probably all at the pawnbroker's shop. A hospital physician examined his eyes and fears they cannot be healed.

In the same house, in an adjoining room, a woman lay dying with no one to care for her but a little girl of nine or ten years. After we had talked with the poor body for a short time, and learned that she had no food, and no one to care for her, we asked her whether she could not get to the hospital, but when she threw back the few garments which covered her, and we saw her emaciated body, we said nothing more about the hospital. Yesterday she died, and we have been searching for relatives to take the child, but can find none, so the little one is with us. When she came in her hair and clothing were alive with vermin, but by clipping the hair short, taking off the old rags, giving the filthy body a warm bath, and clothing it with clean garments, the child was made a very different and much more companionable being, and is now happy with a book, doll, and some wool. If no one claims her we will try to find a comfortable home for the motherless little one.

In another house five blind people are living,—two men and their wives, and a widow woman. When making the rounds I did not discover how truly destitute they were, but last evening when a driving snow set in, I thought it would be well to send them a couple of warm quilts, and was glad to have done so, for the man who carried them returned with a sad tale of distress. The poor people were sitting in the cold, without fire, and the widow woman had no food whatever, and only half a cent to buy with. These are only a few cases out of many, and new ones keep coming, but our funds are getting so low that we dare not take in any more until those now under our care are more comfortable. As I did not wish to use any of the rice money for cotton, and as some eight, or more, quilts were needed at once,—one for each family who had tatami, or mats, to sleep on, and two for those who had no mats, I sold a quantity of unbleached muslin and bought cheap cotton for filling quilts, fifty sen worth being sufficient for one quilt. The muslin was not of as much service as the cotton. The dark calico is excellent for quilts, and I have kept a poor woman employed during the past week making bedding and underwear. She comes to the house so that I can oversee her work.

I have spent the half of almost every day, for a week past, in looking up the poor and in getting them more comfortable, so have not been able to do much but cut out and oversee the making up of the material. Most of the families visited now have a warm futon—quilt—apiece and underwear, so they are no longer so wretchedly cold. Last Friday I went to the hospital with dolls, books, and cards. In one room was a wee baby only a day old, and it was at once honored with an American doll. The baby was held up for inspection, but, as it looked as new born babies do, like a tiny wriggling mass of flannel, with a wee red face peeping out, I could not decide whether it was a particularly handsome baby or not, but was rather inclined to think it quite an attractive bit of humanity. Be that as it may, it was quite an event to present a day old baby born in a hospital, with a doll, and we send its thanks to the kind donor.

In an adjoining room a young mother lay dying. She was pleased with the doll which her little daughter, of some five years, had received, but was too weak to say much. As she seemed to know little, or nothing, of the love of Jesus, we tried to tell her of His love, and how He waits to welcome her to the heavenly home He has prepared for all those who love and trust Him. After singing the sweet hymn, "God is Love," and "There is a Fountain," we said good bye, trusting that the poor, dying soul would find rest and peace in the love of Jesus. To-day we went again to the hospital and learned that her sufferings were over.

Sad and amusing incidents have occurred in connection with the distribution of the gifts from our friends across the water. Two old men who have become almost childish from hardships and age, and who live together, seem very jealous of one another. The doctor ordered medicine for one and when it was given the other held out his hands, much as a child would do, begging that we would give him some too. To one we gave a red flannel shirt, as he needed covering most for the upper part of his body, and to the other a pair of drawers, as he seemed to need that kind of covering most: the one who had the shirt begged for a pair of drawers, also, and the one who had the drawers admired the shirt, and looked longingly at it, so I have decided to give the shirtless one a pair of drawers and the drawerless one a shirt, in order not to have them feel too bad nor quarrel over their garments.

The scrap book sent by a lady eighty years old, and marked "for hospital use," has been given to Kittie Poorbaugh. She speaks Japanese nicely, can explain about the book to the sick, better than I could do, and she seems much pleased with the idea of taking it to the hospital. The one marked "From an Aged Friend," is still in my possession, but when I find a suitable child to give it to, will report. Will, also, send replies to letters pinned on dolls as soon as they are received and ready to mail. A quantity of flannel, muslin, and calico, and numbers of dolls, books, and cards, have been put away for future use. If the donors of these things could see the happy faces of the little ones as they examine their wonderful dolls, or look with delighted eyes at the pretty picture cards and books, or could go with us to the wretched homes of the poor and see shivering bodies clothed in warm flannel garments, the sick covered with quilts such as they would scarcely have dared to dream could be theirs, hear them tell of the warmth of the soft flannel, see with what satisfaction they handle their treasures, and how much happier and more comfortable they are than when lying cold and half naked, all would feel amply repaid for any sacrifices they may have made in contributing these articles. Many thanks to each and all.

Yours in Christian love,

Annie Moore.

90 Higashi San bancho, Sendai, Japan, Jan. 26th, 1891.

The Family.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE YOUNG PROPHETESS:

A TALE OF THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE.

BY REV. R. LEIGHTON GERHART.

CHAPTER X.

A SECRET CHAMBER.

In blank dismay, the captives gazed into the cavern. Thoroughly convinced that he and his friends were betrayed, and enraged at the thought, Otho stepped quickly forward, intending to seize the faithless man and hurl him into the pit, yawning before them. His purpose was instantly divined. Motioning him back with a gesture so commanding that the youth was compelled to obey, the monk said, reproachfully:

"Let there be no violence, my son. Trust me but a moment longer. I am risking my own welfare for yours,—strangers, whom I learned to know but yesterday. This is a cavern: it has an outside entrance through which you can make your escape, as soon as it is safe. The gallery that we have followed, is simply a secret way of entering and leaving the castle, to be used in cases of great emergency. To attempt to pass the gates, would have been folly,—madness. Even by this path, in a place I will show you, it will be necessary for you to hide for a time. Search will be made as soon as your escape is discovered."

"Pardon, father!" pleaded Otho, earnestly, convinced by the manner no less than by the words of their conductor, that his suspicions were groundless. "We have been taken like thieves by those who should have protected and aided us; have been treated as slaves. Pardon our mistrust!"

"Cheerfully, my son," replied the monk, kindly. "I erred in not giving you a hint of the place you must be taken to. But there was scarce time for reflection, and I thought not of mistrust. It is perilous, however, to talk longer here. Even now the servants are waking."

Undoing the bundle of pines, he proceeded to light three or four of the resinous knots. Giving these to the boys, and calling cheerfully on all to follow him, he stepped through the opening, and began to clamber down into the darkness. Otho, leading Madeleine, imitated his example, and was at once followed by the others. He found the descent by no means as precipitous as he anticipated; and after proceeding about twenty feet, he had the satisfaction of planting his feet on the rocky floor of the cavern. Then, in the light of the flaming torches, he beheld a scene of mystic splendor, such as he had never even imagined. On one side, seemingly illimitable in extent, stretched a sheet of still, dark water. The roof above was vaulted, and broken into arches of different sizes by pendant and glistening masses of white stone, that tapering to a point, reached to the very surface of the pool. On the other side, the wall, scintillating as though studded with gems, was broken by numerous entrances, leading into long avenues and mysterious recesses of the mountains. Forgetful of peril, the young people stood gazing at the scene of enchantment till roused by the voice of their guide, who, thinking himself followed, had proceeded some distance in advance.

"Haste! haste, my children!" he cried, "a few steps further and you can rest."

Roused from the spell of wonderment that held them, they hastened to overtake their guide.

"It will be at the risk of capture," he said, as they came up with him, "to leave this cavern till the search has spent its force. In an apartment I will lead you to, you must remain for a time. Yonder is the outside entrance."

"I see the stars! Yonder is their light!" cried Adam Heintzpeter, looking in the direction indicated.

"I see them, too! I see them, too!" responded Carl von Bebel. "Look, Michael! Look, Otho!"

"Yes, we see them," answered the two, "and glad we are."

"Ay," said the monk, "they are paling in the grey light of day. Follow quickly,—tarry no longer, for I must return to the castle before suspicion is aroused of your escape. Now, with caution," he continued, and at once began to clamber up the rugged wall toward the vault of the great cavern: wondering and in silence, the young people followed. Turning a huge rock that rested so close to the wall as to seem part of it, the monk, squeezing his body through a low opening entirely concealed from view by this rock, vanished from sight. But from the hidden chamber into which he had gone, came his voice, sounding hollow and dead:

"Fear not, but come! Here you can rest!"

And one by one, passing behind the great rock, the Crusaders disappeared from view, leaving the vast cavern wrapped in impenetrable gloom. The apartment in which they found themselves, was of an oval shape, perhaps twenty feet in length, and almost wholly free from pendant rocks. The roof was somewhat broken, and looking up, as directed, through a small crevasse, they saw the gleam of a star. Bidding the wondering children wait until he came to lead them out, and cautioning them to waste neither food nor lights, the monk lifted his hands in blessing upon them, and was gone.

"In silence all stood listening to the sound of receding feet, the sense of loneliness deepening upon them. As the last faint echo died away, in a half whisper of awe and fear, Madeleine asked:

"Who is he? Who is this that hath opened a path for us through the mountain?"

"That truly, I know not," answered Heintzpeter.

"A friend, most surely," remarked Von Bebel, "though I ne'er saw him before, that I know of."

"What wond'rous eyes he hath! He seemed to look into my very heart. I was at times afraid," said Michael.

And surely the strange monk had strangely luminous eyes, and a commanding and an impressive way with him.

"It seems like a dream—this wondrous journey that we have taken!" spoke Otho, soberly. "I scarce know whether I wake or sleep. Such a cavern I ne'er heard of."

"A dream! a dream!" cried Madeleine, scarcely waiting for Otho to finish. "It is more like a miracle! Ay, a miracle it is most truly! God hath sent him! We need have no fear. God hath sent him!"

"Think you so?" asked Otho.

"I doubt it not, I doubt it not," was the emphatic reply.

"I doubt it not, either," said Heintzpeter, who liked to agree with Madeleine.

"Nor I," chimed in Michael.

"God does wondrous things. Have you not heard how He sent His angel to the blessed St. Peter, as he lay in prison, and led him out, spite of locks and bars?"

"Did He so, Madeleine?" inquired Otho, in astonishment.

"Ay, that He did," returned the girl," "and many other things more strange and difficult, as the good father in our village hath often preached."

"Tell us, Madeleine; tell us of this deliverance of the most holy St. Peter," begged Michael.

"Ay, tell us the story," joined in the others. And sitting there on the floor of that hidden chamber in the mountains, Madeleine related the event as told in the Bible. This was followed by other stories from the sacred book, with numbers of which the girl was very familiar, though they were almost wholly unknown to her companions. From this to the legends of mediæval saints and the startling appearances of angels in their own day, was an easy transition. Many of the Crusaders claimed, as Madeleine did, to have seen visions, and to have received messages from Heaven through saints and angels; and as the five friends sat side by side in that subterranean chamber talking of these things, and their sense of the nearness of the heavenly world deepened, the thought that they were being guided by an angel in the form of a monk was not slow in coming into their minds.

"Did not the Lord Jesus Himself, in the guise of a priest, appear to Stephen of Cloyes?" exclaimed Otho.

"Did not Nicholas of Cologne behold a vision of a shining cross and hear a heavenly voice?" enthusiastically cried Michael.

"Then, what so strange in the thought that God sent an angel to help us? Are we not being guided by Heaven in our crusade?" came from Von Bebel.

Springing to her feet, Madeleine began pacing the narrow apartment in great excitement, saying: "He is—he is an angel! Oh, what dullards we have been! Saw you not what a shining face he had?"

"And what a heavenly voice!" responded Otho.

"Yes, he has a voice," affirmed Heintzpeter in his slow way; "that I might swear to."

"He is an angel!" cried Madeleine again, her face radiant with joy.

"Yes, that I think, too," said Heintzpeter, "but where are the wings? I see not the wings. An angel should have wings. I see not the wings."

Copyrighted by Chas. G. Fisher, 1890.

But excited by the thought that God had sent a heavenly messenger to guide them, the Crusaders, led by Madeleine, broke enthusiastically into song, their voices ringing through the darkness of the cavern, and waking a hundred echoes from its secret vaults and untrodden recesses.

"Fairest Lord Jesus,
Ruler of all nature,
Thou of Mary and of God the Son!
Thee will I cherish,
Thee will I honor,
Thee my soul's glory, joy and crown."

But the delusion of the captives was destined to be, for the time, at least, dissipated. As the last words of the stanza reverberated through the cavern, suddenly, as if startled by an unexpected but not clearly-distinguished sound, Madeleine cried, "Hist! hist!" and raised her hand to command silence. The girl's manner, far more than her words, produced the desired effect. Fear, inspired by the knowledge of their position, for a time forgotten, struck every heart. The light of joy died from their countenances instantly, and in an attitude of intense suspense, all stood intently listening. Some one, far off in the remote darkness, was calling, and the voice was full of pain. The cry was repeated several times before it was understood, then they heard:

"A light! a light! for the love of Heaven, a light!"

"Do not get one; it may be treachery," said Michael, in an intense whisper, as Otho reached for the torch burning in its niche in the wall.

But again they heard the voice, more near and more distinct:

"Otho! Madeleine! children! a light; for the love of Heaven, a light!"

"It is the monk!" cried Otho; "he is in distress," and seizing the torch, he crept through the opening into the main cavern. Lifting the flaming brand high over his head, he waved it to and fro. For a few minutes nothing was seen, then, coming out of the gloom appeared the figure of a man, walking forward in haste. Repeatedly he stumbled, and once in the obscurity he fell, but soon he gained the wall near Otho, and began to climb upward.

It was indeed the monk—pale, agitated, his garments soiled, and the stains of blood on his face. He panted for breath and tottered with exhaustion, as he entered the hidden asylum.

"I'm pursued!" he gasped. "I'm pursued! I trusted to the sanctity of my order for safety—oh, sacrilegious wretch that he is!—I trusted too far! They sought my life—they sought to murder me when I boldly told them I aided you to escape. Yet I thank God for the courage to face them! Put out the light! put out the light! or we will be discovered! and seizing the torch, he extinguished it by dashing it to the ground.

Almost immediately the hoarse shouts and shrill cries of the pursuers came sounding from the distance to the ears of the terrified group. Urged by a curiosity he cared not to resist, Otho, groping his way, sought the larger cavern—for he had retreated from it when the monk came—and taking his stand behind the huge stone or stalagmite, guarding the entrance in his rear, peered stealthily out for the first signs of the approaching enemy. Scarcely more than an instant did he wait, before he saw in the distance, glancing here and there, a score or more of torches, shining like stars in the gloom. As the lights drew near, the shadowy forms of the pursuers themselves could be clearly discerned, with the occasional gleam of a steel helmet, and the deadly flash of a weapon. The pursuers at length came so near that Otho could understand what they said; and the sense of the danger to which he and his friends were exposed deepened, as he listened to the terrible threats and horrible oaths that continually fell from the lips of the wretches. Then, to his utter surprise and consternation, he beheld one of the party abruptly separate himself from his companions, and, as though thoroughly acquainted with the position of the secret chamber, come directly toward the rock behind which he crouched. Reaching the wall, the man began slowly to ascend it.

(To be Continued.)

HOW TO MAKE LIFE HAPPY.

Take time; it is no use to foam or fret, or do as the angry housekeeper who has got hold of the wrong key, and pushes, shakes and rattles it about the lock until both are broken and the door is still unopened.

The chief secret of comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex us and in cultivating our undergrowth of small pleasures.

Try to regard present vexations as you will regard them a month hence.

Since we cannot get what we like, let us like what we can get.

It is not riches, it is not poverty, it is human nature that is the trouble.

The world is like a looking-glass. Laugh at it and it laughs back; frown at it and it frowns back.

Angry thoughts canker the mind and dispose it to the worst temper in the world—that of fixed malice and revenge. It is while in this temper that most men become criminals.

Youth's Department.

THE BOY WHO HELPS HIS MOTHER.

As I went down the street to-day,
I saw a little lad
Whose face was just the kind of face
To make a person glad.
It was so plump and rosy-cheeked,
So cheerful and so bright,
It made me think of apple time,
And filled me with delight.

I saw him busily at work,
While blithe as blackbird's song,
His merry, mellow whistle rang
The pleasant street along.
"Oh, that's the kind of lad I like!"
I thought as I passed by,
"These busy, cheery, whistling boys
Make grand men by and by."

Just then a playmate came along,
And leaned across the gate,
A plan that promised lots of fun
And frolic to relate.
"The boys are waiting for us now,
So hurry up," he cried.
My little whistler shook his head,
And "Can't come," he replied.

"Can't come? Why not, I'd like to know?
What hinders?" asked the other.
"Why, don't you see?" came the reply,
"I'm busy helping mother.
She's lots to do, and so I like
To help her all I can;
So I've no time for fun just now,"
Said this dear iittle man.

"I like to hear you talk like that,"
I toid the little lad;
"Help mother all you can, and make
Her kind heart light and glad."
It does me good to think of him,
And know that there are others
Who, like this manly little boy,
Take hold and help their mothers.

—Golden Days.

HOW GLENNIE WAS CURED.

There was no use to deny it; Glennie was a very cross boy, He was most always good-natured, but one day he was as "cross as a bear," as his grandma said. He was making her a visit. She tried to please him, but he was not ready to be pleased.

At last she said: "What is the matter with you, Glennie? You are awfully cross. Can't you be a little better natured?"

"No, grandma, because I feel cross. I guess I'll have to whip it out of me." At that, the little fellow took a stick and began to beat himself about the legs and shoulders. Pretty soon he looked up, wearing a smiling face instead of the cross one he had worn all the morning, and said: "There, grandma; it's all gone."

His aunt came into the room not long after, and he said to her: "Auntie, I've met with a change." She told him she was very glad.

I can tell you a better way than Glennie's, when you feel cross or naughty. Just go by yourself, kneel down and ask the Lord Jesus to take the naughty feeling away from you. He will do it every time, if you ask in earnest.

GOOD ENOUGH FOR HOME.

"Lydia, why do you put on that forlorn old dress?" asked Emily Manners of her cousin, after she had spent the night at Lydia's house.

The dress in question was a spotted, faded old summer silk, which only looked the more forlorn for its once fashionable trimmings, now crumpled and faded.

"Oh, anything is good enough for home?" said Lydia, hastily pinning on the soiled collar; and twisting her hair into a knot she went to breakfast.

"Your hair is coming down," said Emily.

"Oh, never mind; its good enough for home," said Lydia, carelessly. Lydia had been visiting at Emily's home, and had always appeared in prettiest morning dressses, and with neat and dainty collars and cuffs; but now that she was back home again she seemed to think that anything would answer, and went about tidy and in soiled finery. At her uncle's she had been pleasant and polite, and had won golden opinions from all; but with her own family her manners were as careless as her dress. She seemed to think that courtesy and kindness were to expensive for home wear, and that anything would do for home.

There are too many people, who, like Lydia, seem to think that anything would do for home; whereas efforts to keep one's self neat, and to treat father, mother, sister, brother and servant kindly and courteously, is as much a duty as to keep from falsehood and stealing.—Ex.

SPEAK KIND WORDS.

"Oh," said a little girl, bursting into tears on hearing of the death of a playmate, "I did not know that was the last time I had to speak kindly to Amy."

The last time they were together she had spoken unkindly to her, and the thoughts of those last unkind words now lay heavy on her heart.

Speak kindly to your father, mother, sister, brother, playmate, teacher, to every one you come in contact with. Cross words are very, very sorrowful to think of.

Pleasantries.

"What are you working at now?" said one young man to another. "Nothing." "It strikes me you ought to have had that done by this time."—Washington Post.

"What is the difference between Queen Victoria and the Mississippi River?" asked Squildig. "About 4,000 miles, I should say," replied McSwilligen. "That answer won't go this time." "What is it then?" "Queen Victoria holds levees, but the Mississippi River makes them let go."—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

NOTICE.

☞ Editorial Correspondence address to The Reformed Church Messenger, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters pertaining to subscriptions and other business, address Reformed Church Publication House, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ No notice taken of anonymous communications.

For Terms, see page 11.

THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER,
907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THURSDAY, MARCH 5, 1891.

For various reasons it seems to be quite fortunate that Mr. Gladstone lives so long and that he still retains the use of his mental faculties. His replies to Huxley, a freethinker, are not among the least of his public services. He is superior to his opponent in learning and quite equal to him in the use of his pen. What he, a layman, says to the great scientist must have great weight in England, where some people think they are starting a new religion, a religion of reason, which, it is affirmed, is something better than Christianity. Mr. Huxley objects to the biblical account of the demons entering into the herd of swine, to which Christ is said to have given His consent. It involved a considerable destruction of property, and His acquiescence in the transaction, it is alleged, made Him a participator in a criminal act. Mr. Huxley takes it for granted that the herdsmen were Gentiles in the pursuit of a lawful occupation, but Mr. Gladstone informs him that this was not the case; that they were renegade Jews, engaged in an illicit business, forbidden by the Jewish law, but on the mountains they may have been lawless in other respects, and it is quite evident that Christ's presence in their country was a rebuke to them. As a result their guilty consciences prevented them from retaliating upon Him. God permitted Satan to afflict Job and the Jews to crucify our Lord, but that involved no participation of His in their crimes and no approbation of their wicked actions. God moves in a mysterious way, and the same is true of Christ, who when He was on earth would accept no testimony from demons, but was accustomed to make short work with them wherever they came into His presence. There was no better way to get them out of Galilee than by letting them go down with the swine to the bottom of the sea.

THE CHURCH UNION.

Recently we received a copy of the Church Union published in New York. It seeks to promote "actual and visible oneness" among all Christian denominations, and has moreover been engaged in this good work for a number of years. We, therefore, perused it carefully. As church unity is discussed from different points of view, we can agree with many things which it says, and also agree to disagree with many other things that are said. In another place we give our readers a few excerpts, which to us have the right ring about them. Manifestly, they prove that we are making some progress in the direction of that unity, in which all Christians shall be one as Christ and the Father are one. In this respect, certainly, an encouraging advance has been made during the last few decades, along all the lines of second, sober, churchly thought. We have some objections, however, to the "Principles of Church Union" in this union paper, not because they are not true in themselves, but because they are lacking in one thing, and that in an important particular. They are based on the Bible as the word of God and on Christ as the Son of God. But they say nothing of the Trinity, Father, the Son and the Spirit, which are one. Of course true faith in Christ involves faith also in the other two persons of the Godhead, but this should always be expressed as it is in the baptismal formula and the apostolic benediction. In the latter the Trinity seems to be based on the Incarnation; in the former the Incarnation on the Trinity. Both views are correct. The two are one and inseparable. We do not see how Christians can come together in the unity of the Spirit on any other principle or foundation. In the course of time the Apostles' Creed grew out of faith in the Trinity in the way of expansion and became its proper interpretation in the Christian Church generally. It contains, as we conceive, all the "principles" that are in any sense vital in the unification of the Christian church. It is a remarkable fact that at the late meeting of the Church of Japan, this old creed was adopted as the basis of union to the exclusion of more modern formula, and that such action was adopted mainly through the influence of Japanese Christians. Who knows that these Oriental brethren may not yet teach us in the Occident some things which we do not know or clearly see.

LAZARUS CAME FORTH.

The raising of Lazarus from the dead was on many accounts the most important and suggestive which Christ had as yet performed. It was the culmination, we may say, of all His previous wonderful works, just as His resurrection was the crown of His earthly life and the explanation of its sublime meaning. A careful reader of Scripture will see that there was progress from the lower to the higher in the character of His works, just as there was progress in His earthly life. The dead raised to life again at Bethany was a much more stupendous fact than the restoration to life of the widow's son at Nain or of the daughter of Jairus at Capernaum. In this more than in any other instance hitherto, Christ displayed the strength and power of His human nature. In other cases He seems to have performed His miracles at once without apparent forethought, just as they came in His way, or as He was moved by the Spirit. On this occasion He waited several days before He came to Bethany, evidently for the purpose of making the miracle just what it was, a savor of life unto His friends and of death to the enemies of God. He had been fully prepared through prayer for what He proposed to do, and He knew that His Father had heard Him; but He went to the grave with all the feelings of a man, a friend and a brother. It is said that He wept. Yet in His apparent weakness, He already possessed the power in His own human will to command Lazarus to come forth. At a distance beyond Jordan He had kept his dead body from corrupting and at the proper time He calls back his soul once more to control the material atoms or force of which his body was composed, doubtless in order to set aside all doubts concerning the reality of the miracle. What more could be asked to show who and what He was? All the world now knows it and rejoices in the knowledge of what He did. This resurrection at Bethany, however, was again only preliminary and preparatory to another and more enduring resurrection, when Christ Himself rose from the dead—to die no more. He thus silenced the Pharisaic sneer, that He could save others, but that Himself He could not save. Then He showed that He could do both, each at the proper time, neither at Satanic dictation. It was in fact His mission first as a man to save Himself from the hostile elements of this world in league with infernal powers, and then with the power which He acquired in this conflict to save others so much the more abundantly. Because He lives who once was dead, others shall live also although they die. Indirectly the miracle at Bethany hastened the death of Christ. It inflamed the malice of His enemies to such a degree, that, although they could not deny the fact, in advance they pronounced on Him the sentence of death in their hearts. Never before had Satan bound any class of men in such chains; but never before did God make the wrath of man to praise Him in promoting His own eternal purpose to save and redeem poor sinners.

INTERESTING EXTRACTS.

Generally, now the sin of sectarianism is confessed, and some of the evils of our denominationalism are recognized. Sectarianism is a sin to be repented of as any other sins. Religious sectarianism is an offence to the Head of the Body.

For any one to believe, or any church or school to teach, that it has the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, is not only absurdly presumptuous, but a great hindrance to the progress of evangelical religion.

Christianity is indebted to every denomination and school, which by emphasizing any important truth has contributed to the clearer knowledge and proof of the same.

The idea of finding in the Bible only what one thinks ought to be in it, is as foreign from the spirit of the early Protestants as was the profane traffic of Tetzel. The doctrines of the Christian faith seem to admit no higher appeal than to common assent, so far as this can be reached, of the mind and heart of the earthly body of Christ, which is His Universal Church.

The attempt to convert the Sacraments of our holy religion into mere "shadows," is to do violence to the prevailing sentiment of all ages in the Christian era. "We acknowledge one baptism for the remission of sins," is the doctrine of baptism proclaimed by Peter, held ever since by the Christian Church; and to-day, I suppose that it is within bounds to say that nine-tenths of the Christian world accept the creed (Council of Chalcedon) which contains this doctrine. And as pertaining to the subject of Church unity, can we expect that nine-tenths of Christendom will relinquish the substance for the "shadow;" or, on the contrary, may we not indulge in the hope that one-tenth will ere long embrace the Scriptural view?—The Church Union.

Synodical Editors.

(Elected by the Synods.)

Eastern, ...	Rev. Jonathan H. Pannebecker.
Pittsburgh, ...	" David B. Lady.
Potomac, ...	" J. Spangler Kieffer, D. D.

NOT BY BREAD ALONE.

Among the many lessons which the season of Lent serves to teach us is this, that man is not to live by bread alone. It was by quoting from the Scripture these words, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," that our Saviour repelled the first one of the three temptations with which Satan assaulted Him in the wilderness. This is not the only instance in which our Lord cast upon earthly bread the disparagement of insufficiency. Rather, it is characteristic of Him to do so. He does it when he says, "Labor not for the meat that perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life;" and when, on another occasion, He says, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of."

And, in the particular instance to which we are referring, what He says in word, that He says also, and more impressively, in act. What an overwhelming disparagement of earthly bread our Saviour's forty days' fast was! When Jesus fasted forty days in the wilderness, eating nothing; when Moses, in the presence of the Lord, for forty days and forty nights, neither ate bread nor drank water; when Elijah ate and drank what God gave him, and, in the strength of that meat, went forty days and forty nights unto Horeb, what is this in each case, except a grand denial of man's absolute dependence on earthly bread?

Not by bread alone! This holds true even in respect of the natural and earthly bread itself. We eat bread, and we are nourished and strengthened by so doing; but where does the nourishing and strengthening power lie? Certainly not in the bread itself, considered simply as such, but in the Word, the Will, the Power of God, which uses bread as a means. The bread is so little in the case that it is almost nothing. This is a great lesson for us to learn, that it is not in reality bread, but God working by means of bread, that nourishes us; that we are daily and hourly supported by "the almighty and everywhere present power of God."

Not by bread alone! Bread stands for much. It means money, lands, houses, home, friends, company, pleasures, comforts; earthly goods of all kinds. Are any of us, in any sense, trying to live by these? Are we depending chiefly, or largely, on these things for nourishment and support? Are we deliberately and energetically seeking these things; are we laying ourselves out to obtain them; are we dwelling with complacency on the possession of them; are we dismayed at the prospect of the loss of them? If we are placed in such a situation that we must either miss or lose some earthly good, or else acquire and keep it in a way not in accordance with the will of God, can we rise to some degree of that spirit in which our Saviour resisted this temptation? Can we give up the object on which our hearts were set? Can we say: I give it up; I shall live without it; man shall not live by bread alone?"

Not by bread alone! There are those to whose lot but little bread falls in the shape of earthly comfort and pleasure. For them there has been but little brightness. Their life has been one long-continued struggle; disappointment after disappointment has befallen them; they have seemingly known no rest and no enjoyment; they have often eaten their bread with tears. And yet, somehow, they live. Seemingly destitute of all pleasures, they nevertheless live high, glad, joyous lives. It is because they are dwelling "on the heights;" they are living otherwise than "by bread alone;" they have "meat to eat" that the world knows not of.

That there is a higher bread to live by than that which is eaten with the mouth; that spirit is above flesh; that soul is above body; that there are worse things than poverty; that there are worse things than pain; that there are worse things than death,—these are some of the lessons which are taught by, and which we ought to learn from, the season which commemorates our Saviour's Temptation and Humiliation.

J. S. K.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

ORPHANS' HOME COLUMN.

BY REV. T. M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

On Washington's birthday the regular working hours and school sessions were observed, but in the evening the occasion was celebrated in the dining-room with various games and an original "Birthday March," viz: the children were arranged in the order of their birthdays in the year and then took partners as they stood. This manner of getting partners and the style of marching caused a great deal of amusement and was thoroughly enjoyed by the children.

On Wednesday, February 25th, three nice porkers and 437 lbs. of beef were converted into sausage, hams, etc. This was the fifth and last butchering for the season at the Home.

The question is frequently asked, where do your children come from, are there any at the Home from our section, etc.? In order that the friends of the Home, who have a part in supporting this large family, may know where the 85 children under our care are from, we give a list of the places and the number of children from each place. Counties are given in italics, and the towns in the counties follow. Twenty-one counties in Pennsylvania are represented here and all the children are Church orphans except two which are indicated as boarders; for these two we receive $130 a year each.

Philadelphia County 2; Montgomery—Pottstown 4, Pennsburg 2, Skippackville 1, Norristown 1; Bucks—Quakertown 1; Chester—Spring City 1; Northampton—Easton 1, Wind Gap 1 (Boarder), Bethlehem 1, South Bethlehem 1; Lehigh—Allentown 3, Catasauqua 8, Seipstown 2, Schnecksville 2, Macungie 2; East Texas 1, Slatington 1, Egypt 1; Monroe—Sciota 2: Berks—Reading 6, Hamburg 1, Millersburg 1, Host 1: Schuylkill—Mahanoy City 2, Schuylkill Haven 1 (boarder); Northumberland—Milton 2, Snydertown 2, Watsontown 1, Shamokin 1, Montour—Danville 2; Columbia—Orangeville 1; Lebanon—Lebanon 4, Palmyra 1; Lancaster—Reamstown 2; Dauphin—Harrisburg 7, Elizabethville 1; Centre—Rebersburg 3, Bellefonte 1; Cumberland—Mechanicsburg 3; York—Hanover 1; Adams—Gettysburg 1, Fairfield 1; Franklin—Waynesboro 2; Union—Mifflinsburg 2; Snyder—Selin's Grove 2.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE W. M. S. EASTERN SYNOD.

The Ex. Com. W. M. S. Eastern Synod met at the call of the President at 9.30 A.M. February 26, 1891, in the parlor of Palatinate College, Myerstown, Lebanon Co. There was a larger attendance of members on this occasion than heretofore. After the reading of Scripture and prayer by the President, in the absence of Secretary and minutes the transaction of business was immediately commenced.

Many questions being asked concerning the distribution of the published addresses, made at the meeting of the W. M. S. G. S. held at Lebanon in June last, the Cor. Sec. was directed to secure those intended for the society of the Eastern Synod, and divide and send them to the presidents of the Classical societies, so that they may be distributed before the annual meetings of these societies. In those Classes without a woman's organization the pamphlets shall be placed for distribution, in the hands of some lady interested in missions.

The custom of some of the Classical societies of reporting at the annual meetings monies which do no not properly belong to the woman's societies and which never pass through any of their treasuries, was discussed at some length, and the treasurer of the Synodical society was directed to send to each president of a Classical society a request to report only monies that pass through the treasuries of Woman's Classical Societies. It was resolved that all monies to be paid by Classical Societies toward the $700 assumed by the society of Eastern Synod, be paid into the treasury of Synod's society not later than September 30, 1891.

All presidents of Classical Societies were recommended to work up the subscription list of the Missionary Guardian to the best of their ability.

A communication from the Woman's Union Missionary Society of the Reformed churches in Harrisburg, earnestly inviting the W. M. S. Eastern Synod to hold its annual meeting in Harrisburg, October 23, 1891, was received and gratefully accepted. The Recording Secretaryship, made vacant by the removal of Mrs. Dotterer to a distant State, and the declination of Miss Graeff, elected at the last regular meeting of the society, was filled by the election of Mrs. A. C. Morey, Boyertown.

After the transaction of routine business the minutes were read, corrected and adopted, and the committee adjourned.

MRS. MOSSER, Sec. pro tem.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

SPECIAL MEETING OF CLASSIS.

At a special meeting of East Susquehanna Classis, convened at Catawissa, Pa., on Monday, Feb. 16, 1891, Licentiate Raymond E. Butz was received from the Classis of Lehigh, Eastern Synod; his call to the pastorate of the Catawissa charge was confirmed, and a committee of Classis appointed to ordain and install him. The ordination and installation took place on Monday evening, Rev. J. Calvin Leinbach preaching the sermon, which was in keeping with the interesting and solemn services of the occasion. The Liturgical services were conducted by Revs. Tilghman Derr and C. H. Mutschler. The young brother is to be congratulated upon being called to minister among the Catawissa people—a people whose sympathetic Christian hearts will thrill to every inspired word uttered, and will be ready to answer every call to duty. May the newly ordained brother enjoy a bright, useful and long ministry!

At the same special meeting, Rev. H. H. Sandoe was dismissed to the St. Joseph Classis, Synod of Ohio. STATED CLERK.

Sunbury, Pa., Feb. 1891.

FROM THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN READERS FORTY YEARS OR MORE.

Joel Hiser of Dewees, Clay county, Nebraska, says:

"I have taken the MESSENGER since May, 1846, and do not want to do without it."

Jacob C. Schriver of Gettysburg, Pa., writes:

"In the year 1845 or 1846, I subscribed for the MESSENGER. I also had it one year about two years before the above dates."

Peter Hoffer of Centre Hall, Pa., who is 72 years of age, says:

"I subscribed for the MESSENGER when I commenced housekeeping, which was in the year 1846, and have continued taking it ever since."

Benjamin Isenberg of Huntingdon, Pa., writes:

"I commenced taking the MESSENGER in the spring of 1850, and it has been a constant visitor to my house ever since. How a Reformed family can get along intelligently without the church paper is a question I am not prepared to answer."

P. H. Snyder of Everett, Pa., writes:

"I am now 63 years old, and have been a reader of the MESSENGER since I was a boy, as my father was a subscriber of it. No wonder it is so dear to me. I could not express my gratitude for its worth in words."

L. H. Diehl, Esq., of Astoria, Ills., writes:

"I have been a reader of the MESSENGER since 1842, a period of nearly fifty years. And for the past thirty years I would not have done without it for twice its cost. Every family in the Reformed Church ought to be a subscriber for life. I would not have missed the late Christmas number for its present cost."

Elder Geo. Hoobaugh of Green Park, Perry county, Pa., says:

"If I live another year I will have received the MESSENGER just fifty years."

W. G. King, Sr., South Bend, Pa., writes:

"I think I have had the MESSENGER since 1852. I would know but little about the work of the Church without it."

Poetry.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE CHURCH OF TO-DAY.

BY CHAS. KANE.

The Church of to-day as a pyramid high
Stands shedding her sunbeams afar;
With her foot placed on earth she points to the sky—
Basks in the bright radiance of Bethlehem's star.
She's been founded in sorrow, in trials and tears,
Her foes have sought to blot out her name;
Yet the stronger she grows with the lapse of her years,
For she's fed by omnipotent flame.

The Church of to-day—for what does she stand?
For all that is glorious, beautiful, true—
For all that enlightens, ennobles our land—
For all that makes us peculiarly grand;
Thrice blest is the work that she gives us to do.
With her breast plate of Faith and her anchor of Hope,
Charity true doth her ramparts adorn;
The kings of the earth shall arise at her call,
Her thanksgiving incense breathes forth on the morn.

They shall come from the East and the isles of the West,
And stand on her battlements high;
Those who dwell in her shadow shall call themselves blest,
For the day of her triumph is nigh;
From the furthermost ends of the earth,
To the uttermost bounds of the sea,
As a safe retreat for the nations and tribes,
They shall into her safe harbors flee.

An army with banners, a strong mighty host,
No foes can against her prevail;
The dominion of Satan shall be overthrown,
And his kingdom shall utterly fail.
Hail, grand and magnificent light,
To that city of refuge we flee;
The day-spring on high hath illumined our path—
We exulting thy glories shall see.

Murrysville, Pa.

Selections.

Here is a little test of character: what would you do if you were allowed to do what you most love to do?

Oh! many a shaft, at random sent,
Finds mark the archer little meant;
And many a word at random spoken,
May soothe or wound a heart that's broken. —Scott.

Let no knowledge satisfy but that which lifts above the world, which weans from the world, which makes the world a footstool.—Spurgeon.

The end of learning is to know God, and out of that knowledge to love Him as we may the nearest, by possessing our souls of true virtue.—Milton.

Cease, every joy, to glimmer on my mind,
But leave, oh, leave the light of hope behind!
What though my winged hours of bliss have been,
Like angel visits, few and far between!
Her musing mood shall ev'ry pang appease,
And charm when pleasures lose the power to please. —Campbell.

Science and Art.

Professor Holden is proposing to try for the parallax of some of the nebulæ at the Lick Observatory in a new way, by means of photography. He finds that with a sufficiently short exposure the image of the nucleus or central bright spot is almost as well defined as that of a star, and he expects that by measuring the distance between this image and a number of the smaller stars on the same plate, it will be possible to find the relative parallax of the nebula itself; which may be so, although it strikes one that the probability is that in most cases the nebula is likely to be quite as remote as the surrounding stars, and then the method would fail; but it is well worth trying.

The name Bacillus (a little rod), like the similar name Bacteria, is commonly applied to the rod-shaped forms of a group of minute plants which botanists know by the title "Schizomycetes," translated by German naturalists as Spaltpilze (splitting moulds). The word Schizomycetes refers to the mode of multiplication of these little rods. They attain a certain length and then divide across into two. Each half grows to the size of the parent and then similarly divides, and so on as long as food and other conditions of their life are present. One species (that common in old hay) has been observed to divide in this way every half hour, a rate which gives in every twenty-four hours more than three hundred billions (300,000,000,000) of individual rods, as the offspring of one parent rod. They are extremely minute, varying from the one-twenty-thousandth of an inch to the one-thousandth of an inch in length.

Items of Interest.

Inexhaustible supplies of very pure water have been found in the great Sahara Desert by drilling artesian wells. Some day this desert may be a blooming garden.

General Booth has secured $322,810 in cash and $189,980 in promises for his scheme of social regeneration. He asked for $500,000 to start the scheme and $150,000 a year to carry it on.

Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon have voluntarily surrendered themselves to the British authorities on their return from France, and they are now in prison in Ireland to serve out their sentence. The negotiations between the Parnell and McCarthy factions of the Home Rule party have failed.

Miss Kate Drexel, or Sister Catherine, made her final vows and took the black veil of the order of the Blessed Sacrament last week in Pittsburgh. This is a new order of which she will be the head, and which will be devoted to work among the Indians and Negroes, and which it is supposed will have the advantage of her millions of money.

The Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris stands upon the spot once occupied by a Roman temple. The length is 390 feet; width of transept, 144 feet; height of western towers, 224 feet; width of front, 128 feet, and length of nave to transept is 186 feet. The Cathedral covers 64,108 square feet.

The art of printing from movable types was discovered about the fifth century, in China, by the Chinese. Practically, however, the art was invented by one of four men—Laurens Coster, of Haarlem; Johannes Gutenberg, of Mentz; John Faust, of Mentz; and Peter Schoffer, of Mentz. The Dutch say that Coster invented printing, and that Gutenberg, one of his workmen, stole the invention. The Germans say that Coster was a tallow-chandler, and that Gutenberg made the invention.

The Lutheran Church is a Church of many languages. The latest statistics show that of her baptized membership throughout the world 32,000,000 speak German, 5,300,000 speak Swedish, 2,500,000 Norwegian, 2,300,000 Danish, 2,048,000 Finnish, 1,250,000 English, 1,113,000 Hungarian, 624,000 Livonian, 480,000 Courlanish, 272,000 Esthnian, 70,000 French, 70,000 Icelandic, 48,000 Bohemian, and that in every other civilized tongue she is well represented, numbering in the world 28,406 educated ministers, 38,381 church edifices, and 50,061,280 baptized members.

Hints and Recipes.

A sprinkle of salt upon the carpet before sweeping diminishes the dust and brightens the colors, yet a frequent application induces dampness in a sunless apartment.

When chickens are scarce and high-priced buy a can of boned chicken and mix with it a like quantity of chopped ham, seasoning with pepper and adding a little melted butter. This will make two dozen large sandwiches.

Uses of Turpentine.—Somebody says: The value of turpentine in the household is well-nigh inestimable. It keeps closets and store-rooms free from insects and bugs, if sprinkled lightly over the shelves and in the corners. A spoonful added to a pail of warm water makes an excellent paint cleanser, and it renders clothing impervious to moths during the summer months. As well does turpentine soothe burns, and afford relief for rheumatism and sore throat.

Old-Fashioned Loaf Cake.—Take three quarts of sifted (and well heaped) flour, a pint of soft butter, one quart of sugar, six gills of new milk, half a pint of yeast, three eggs, two pounds of raisins, a teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls cinnamon, and two of nutmeg. Scald the milk, cool to blood-warm, add the yeast, then the flour to which all the butter and half the sugar have been added; then mix together and let rise until light. It is better to set this sponge over night, and in the morning add the other ingredients (flour the raisins) and let rise again. When light fill the baking-pans and let rise again. Bake in a moderate oven. This recipe makes three large loaves, and is a standard, economical loaf cake.

Farm and Garden.

Raising Geese.—A poultry authority tells us that, like turkey eggs, the goose egg requires one month for incubation. It is never best to permit the young goslings to visit a pond until they are at least three weeks old. The house is the proper place to get them well started growing. You then run no risk of losing them. The Toulouse, Embden, and White China are among the best varieties. A pair will often weigh from fifty to fifty-five pounds when grown. Usually they are quite hardy, and can live with very little expense to the owner. In the fields they find much that they like, and will wander about all day and return at night.

Setting Milk.—Milk when first drawn, or at a temperature of 93 degrees or 95 degrees, will yield all its cream as soon as, or very soon after, its temperature has been reduced to 45 degrees, if the reduction be quickly made. To determine whether all the cream has been obtained, especially where the cold deep-setting or Swedish system has been used, the creamed milk should be heated up to a temperature of 100 degrees. If no cream comes to the surface it will be pretty good evidence that it was all obtained at first setting. There will nearly always be a slight scum that will come to the surface at such a time, but it will not be cream. There will be no butter in it. So advises the Butter-Maker's Guide.

Books and Periodicals.

Any of the books here noticed can be had through our Publication House, 907 Arch Street.

The Magazine of Art for March has for its frontispiece "Hunger Hath No Ears." Among the articles are—Current Art, The Proper Mode and Study of Drawing, The Use of Metal in Bound Books, and Japanese Pottery.

Cassell Publishing Co., New York, 35 cents a number, $3.50 a year, in advance.

Cassell's Family Magazine for March opens with the serial, "A Sharp Experience." Other articles are—How to Choose a New House, A Model Irish Town, Only Just, On Coloring Materials for Embroideries, How London Gets Its Fish, and Gatherer.

The Cassell Publishing Co., New York, 15 cents a number; $1.50 a year in advance.

Popular Science Monthly. Edited by W. J. Youmans. Contents for March. Some of the articles are—Supposed Tendencies to Socialism, Iron-Working with Tools, Hypocrisy as a Social Elevator, Cultivation of Sisal in the Bahamas, Koch's Method of Treating Consumption, The Tyranny of the State, Adaptation to Climate, and Sketch of Samuel Latham Mitchill, with portrait.

Published by D. Appleton & Co., 1, 3 & 5 Bond street, New York.

The Atlantic Monthly for March. Some of the contents are—Felicia, XVI., XVII., Richard Grant White, Capture of Louisbourg by the New England Militia, The State University in America, The House of Martha, XXII.—XXV., The Present Problem of Heredity, The Speaker as Premier, Railroad Problems of the Immediate Future, Pleasure: A Heresy, A New Silva of North America, Comment on New Books, and The Contributors' Club.

Houghton, Mifflin & Company, Boston, Mass.

Littell's Living Age. The number of The Living Age for February 28 contains—American Fiction, Edinburgh Review; The Shrouded Watcher, Blackwood's Magazine; Random Roaming, by the Rev. Dr. Jessopp, Blackwood's Magazine; Life and Labors of Schliemann, by Karl Blind, National Review; The Education of Genius, by James Sully, English Illustrated Magazine; Voltaire and His First Exile, Temple Bar; Maxims for Novel-Writers, Murray's Magazine; Frozen to Death, St. James's Gazette; Modern Fighting and Firearms, Army and Navy Gazette; Poetry and Miscellany.

$8.00 per year. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

Marriages.

On Thursday, February 5th, at Hummelstown, by Rev. J. F. Moyer, Mr. John A. Brightbill to Miss Kate C. Kremer, both of East Hanover, Dauphin Co., Pa.

On Thursday evening, February 12th, at the residence of the bride's mother, by the same, Mr. Harvey Aungst, of Linglestown, Pa., to Miss Katie E. Backenstoe, of Manada Hill, Pa.

On February 10th, by Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D., assisted by Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, Cla[illegible] Doll Marshall to Geo. Walker of San Francisco. Mrs. Walker is a granddaughter of George Doll, of this city.

In the Reformed church at Shippensburg, February 11, 1891, by Rev. T. R. Dietz, Mr. Frederick G. Johns, of Lancaster City, Pa., to Miss Lizzie S. Dice, of Shippensburg, Pa.

At Greenville, Pa., February 18th, 1891, by Rev. J. M. Schick, Mr. Joseph Reuf to Miss Mary Ferguson.

Deaths.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than two hundred and fifty words.

DIED.—On Monday morning, February 2d, John Amos, youngest son of Rev. O. H. Strunck, aged 7 months and 18 days.

The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon, with services at the St. John's parsonage. They were conducted by Revs. Allen R. Bartholomew of Pottsville, Calvin E. Bartholomew, of Cressona, and Willoughby Donat of town; after which the remains were interred in the Union Cemetery at this place.

Not eight months ago twins were born to gladden the hearts of our brother and his wife. Four months later they were called upon to part with the one, a girl; and now the other has gone to join his little sister, and be numbered with the angelic choir, and live with Him who ever loveth the little children. The bereaved parents have the deep sympathy of the St. John's congregation, over which our brother presides, together with that of the many friends, who pray that they may find strength and consolation in this dark hour in Him "who loveth whom He chasteneth;" and that it may be inspiring to them to know that when the last trumpet shall sound, and the faithful shall be gathered together, they shall see their dear ones in a place where there is no more parting, nor pain, nor sorrow; but where all is peace, and joy, and happiness.

DIED.—On Tuesday, January 13th, Mrs. Lydia K. Koch, aged 24 years, 9 months and 15 days.

Mrs. Koch died in the home of her father, Mr. Cyrus Alison's, near Shippensburg, Pa., whither she was taken from Philadelphia a few weeks before her death. Consumption, that insidious disease, marked her for its victim, and laid her low in death. In the fall Mrs. Koch desired to confess Christ before men, having made earnest preparation for this step, when Rev. Dr. G. H. Johnston, of the Church of the Strangers, Philadelphia, baptized and confirmed her. From this time on to her departure, she gave good evidence of her faith, and showed the spirit of quiet resignation to the divine will. Peacefully and happily she passed from the loving presence of a sorrowing husband, and tender parents and friends, into the blessed communion beyond the grave.

"It is not death to die,—
To leave this weary road,
And midst the brotherhood on high,
To be at home with God."

She was buried at Shippensburg, in the presence of a large congregation, the Rev. T. R. Dietz, pastor of the Reformed church, conducting the services, who impressively brought the consolations of the Gospel to all mourning hearts.

DIED.—January 17, 1891, Mrs. Catharine Klingensmith, of the First Reformed church, Greensburg, Pa., aged 68 years, 11 months and 15 days.

After passing through the troublous waves of this life, this faithful handmaiden of the Lord gently fell asleep in Jesus. She was baptized and confirmed by Rev. Dr. N. P. Hacke, and ever remained faithful to her Christian vows. As a constant reader of the MESSENGER, she took a deep interest in the work of the church at large, and as a regular worshipper of the congregation of which she was a member, she was devotedly active in furthering her interests. She was indeed a child of God, living the life of faith, and exemplifying her religion in all the walks of life; God's word was the meat for her soul and Christ her only hope—in Him she daily lived and in Him she peacefully died. Forgetting self, the well being of others seemed to concern her more than her own comfort, and the advancement of the Church was more to her than her own worldly prosperity. As death drew near she welcomed his coming, and hailed him as the messenger of God sent to take her home.

We mourn our loss in her death, but we rejoice in her victory and eternal gain. The two sons, whom she has left, mourn the loss of a mother's love and devotion, such as few children have enjoyed. May they continue to follow her godly example.

C. R D.

DIED.—Entered into rest, on Sunday, February 1, A.D. 1891, at 4.20 P.M., at Woodstock, Va., Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Lichliter, wife of Conrad Lichliter.

The deceased was the daughter of Frederick and Elizabeth Dinges. She was baptized in early childhood. On May 2, 1834, she was admitted to full membership in St. Paul's church, by the solemn rite of confirmation, by Rev. Jacob F. Dieffenbacher; and on March 21, 1844, was married to Conrad Lichliter by Rev. John Wm. Hoffmeier. Her husband survives her, and also their four children, Rev. Wm. F. Lichliter, pastor of St. Luke's church, Lancaster, Pa., J. H. Lichliter, Esq., Washington, D.C., D. C. Lichliter, M.D., Dayton, O., and Lizzie L. Whitmore, wife of Rev. G. A. Whitmore, Mechanicstown, Md. These three sons and her son-in-law were the pall-bearers at her burial. She was a woman of strong character, a devoted wife and mother, a kind neighbor, a devout Christian.

DIED.—Near Brady's Bend, Pa., February 1st, A.D. 1891, Elder James McKelvey, at the age of 61 years, 1 month and 11 days.

In the death of Bro. McKelvey the family parted with a kind husband and father, the community with a good citizen and helpful neighbor, and the church with a consistent and faithful member.

The funeral services were held in the St. Paul's Reformed church, Sugar Creek charge, and he was laid to rest in the Oak Grove Cemetery, which adjoins it. The sermon was preached by his pastor, based on the words of Christ to Martha, in the Gospel according to St. John 11: 25, 26. A large concourse of people attended the burial, thereby showing their high regard for the deceased as a man, a neighbor and fellow Christian.

Rest from your labors, dear husband, father, brother and fellow pilgrim. When the voice of the Son of Man will call the dead from their graves, may you come forth "unto the resurrection of life." John 5: 29.

PASTOR.

DIED.—February 3d, 1891, Margaretta Alberta, infant daughter of Rev. N. H. and Emma Skyles, of Jeannette, Pa., aged 2 months and 15 days.

The love of the home centred on this little one, and by her departure a dark cloud rests upon the family which is only dispelled by faith hearing Him say "Let the little children come unto me." Faith looks up, through tears, and says, "it is well with the child," knowing that in the atmosphere of heaven and in the rays which shine forth from the throne of God, she shall live the immortal life.

Revs. A. E. Truxal and C. R. Dieffenbacher officiated, assisted by local clergy. Burial in Brush Creek Church Cemetery.

C. R. D.

DIED.—Fell asleep, at her residence, on East Cumberland street, Lebanon, January 29, 1891, Mrs. Margaret Arndt DeHuff, in her 87th year.

In this occurence, not only a large circle of relatives were made to mourn, but St. John's congregation is again called upon to behold one of its most brilliant lights expire, or become absorbed in heavenly glory. Mrs. Dehuff was in all respects an exceptionally estimable woman. During all her long residence in this community society found in her a chaste and beautiful adornment. Her tastes in social matters were always up to the highest standard; her judgment was of the most valuable and reliabie kind, and her sympathetic interest in the general weal was ever strong and marked. She was a rare model of hospitality. It mattered not what might be the prevailing circumstances, she was always ready with a cordial welcome for those who sought admission to her home; even up to the close of her earthly career she evinced a perfectly guileless sympathy with all stages of life. Childhood was the object of her tender affection; she was glad to lay her hand in kindly benediction upon the head of youth, with all its bounding hopes and hilarious spirits; she took a just pride in the achievements of vigorous manhood; and yet preserved in a singularly beautiful manner the dignity of age.

But it was as a handmaid of Christ that the character of Mother DeHuff shone in its greatest beauty. In all her life the image of Christ appeared with an exquisite lustre. Her whole bearing, like His, was of the gentle and unobtrusive kind, but her influence was of irresistible force. A Christlike humility was the very foundation of her profession, and all the correlative Christian virtues followed in happy order. Her spiritual home, the Church, was her supreme earthly delight; the offices of devotion and means of grace there provided she prized far above the pleasures of this world, as highly as she valued these latter, and charity, benevolence, and mercy were channels in which the feelings of her heart continually flowed. Especially was her heart set upon the prosperity of our own beloved Zion. She read and studied with unusual intelligence and judgment all schemes and operations which aimed at our denominational welfare. The assembling of our Judicatures was a thing of peculiar significance to her; and many a clergyman whose eyes shall fall upon this statement will be able to recall experiences of her hospitable treatment upon such occasions.

Mother DeHuff was given a long time to testify in behalf of Christ, and, having done this faithfully and well, the end at last came; only to pass, however, into the realization that she was going home to be with the Lord. This brought sorrow both to the immediate friends to whom she had been so much, and also to the whole community. Her home, at which the service was held, was not sufficient to accommodate the large number of those who came to pay the last tribute of respect to her remains; and as she lay there in the casket, as if sweetly sleeping, holding a palm branch in her hand, we thought, "How nobly and truly she has gained the victory, through Jesus Christ our Lord!"

On the 2d ult. we tenderly laid her in her quiet resting place amidst some tears of grief that we must be separated a while from one who was such an inspiration to us; but at the same time with joy for the promise of Him whom she so faithfully held up to us, that He will some day take us to the blissful home in which she now dwells.

PASTOR.

SUPPLIES
FOR EASTER.

We offer a New Service for EASTER—with Music—entitled,

"All Hail Our Risen Lord!"

Arranged and composed by Rev. J. Cal. Leinbach and Ferd. K, Hill, organist of Trinity Reformed church, Sunbury, Pa.

Price—100 Copies,	$4 00
" " postpaid,	4 50
Single copy,	5

Also,

"Alleluia, Christ is Risen,"

By the same, at same rates.

Also Service No. 2, with music.

100 Copies,	$4 00
" " postpaid,	4 50
Single Copy, "	5

Service No. 1.

100 Copies,	$2 02
" " postpaid,	2 25
Single Copy, "	5
Four Services, "	15

Services of other Publishers,
Sample Copies, 5 Cents.

Confirmation Tract with Certificate, Rev. A. C. Whitmer, postpaid,		$ 8
Golden Censer, Rev. H. Harbaugh, D. D. A Book for Young Church Members, with Lithograph Certificate.	Roan Emb.,	75
	" " Gilt,	1 00
	Imit. Turkey,	1 50
	Real Turkey,	2 25
	Postpaid.
Easter Eggs, illustrated book,		60
	Postpaid.

EASTER CARDS IN QUANTITY.

We also can furnish in quantities for Sunday-schools:

Eggs (Wooden), per 100, $2.00

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia

Mention this paper.

Books

New Books every week. Catalogue, 132 pages. free; not sold by Dealers; prices too low; buy of the Publisher, JOHN B. ALDEN, 393 Pearl St., New York

Business Department.

TERMS:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage free. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.

No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrearages are paid.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made before the date transpires.

When the address of a paper is to be changed, the OLD and the NEW should be given.

☞Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

☞We do make mistakes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

☞Remittances should be made payable by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, or Registered Letter to the order of THE REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE ALMANAC
FOR THE
Reformed Church in the United States
—TWENTY-EIGHTH ISSUE—
FOR 1891.

We are ready now to receive orders for our Almanac for 1891, at the following rates:

100	Copies, per express,	$5.00
50	" "	2.75
12	" "	.75
1	Copy, Postpaid,	.12

When to be sent by mail 18 cents per dozen must be added for postage.

Also,

WESTERN ALMANAC

At the same prices as above.

GERMAN ALMANAC.

12 Copies,	90 cts.

Postage, 18 cts.

Single Copies, Postpaid, 12 cts.

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK.

IN OLDEN DAYS BEYOND THE SEA.

Translated from the German, to which are added Introductory and Closing Parts,

BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

An interesting book, giving a thrilling account of the trials and persecutions of those who were true to their faith in "olden days beyond the sea." Pages 305. Illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of retail price, $1.25.

Address,

Reformed Church Publication House,
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK,
"In Olden Days Beyond the Sea,"
AND
THE MESSENGER.

To any one sending us two new subscribers for THE MESSENGER and $4.00, we will send a copy of the above book postpaid.

To an old subscriber for THE MESSENGER, remitting $2.75, we will give credit for a year's subscription and send a copy of the above book, postpaid.

Address

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

Miscellaneous.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

PITTSBURGH SYNOD'S PROFESSORSHIP.

Dear Messenger:—I made my first and only attempt to contribute to your pages, several years ago, on my way back from Europe, during a storm at sea, whilst our snug little ship, the Rhyneland, was ploughing her way through the fierce and boisterous waves of the briny deep. There was something interesting, if not inspiring, in that terrible voyage which I undertook to describe; and I was both pleased and surprised to receive many kind words of compliment, both spoken and written, from different sources, on my contribution—pleased because my effort was appreciated, and surprised because mine is not the pen of a ready writer. I had then nothing to lose, and everything to gain. In this second contribution it is different; as I might now lose the reputation I made in my first article.

I am urged to take my pen at this time however by an important interest claiming the attention of the people of Pittsburgh Synod; and I will try to add my mite to the efforts being put forth to raise the money to endow our Seminary Professorship, by writing to the good people of our own Synod, who are expected to raise this money, and who are able and I believe will be found willing to do so, when the matter is presented to them in earnest and in the proper way.

Why are we so slow in this matter? Why not make up our minds to do this work at once? It can be done if we exert ourselves and go to work to do it, and if others do not throw cold water on our undertaking by writing in the Messenger that we do not need the Pittsburgh Synod's Professorship as much as we need the new Seminary Building. Why should we have been urged to and have consented to begin this work if the Professorship was not needed; and why do we continue to work if we are not in earnest about the matter? Let us do one thing at a time, as a Synod, and do that well, and then we can help to do something else. The writer long since secured one-tenth the amount needed. He is not done yet, but only waiting for some one else to move, when he will move, or at least try to move again. He will make a double effort to raise the last tenth, if the other brethren of the committee will secure the eight tenths in between.

Let us work together, fellow church members! I don't see why we cannot raise this money! We must make this our business. Why not make our church work our business as well as our secular work! We do not move so slow in our other enterprises. Look at the energy, activity, hurrah, and bustle displayed in worldly matters! My dear reader, compared with the good work of every other profession and occupation and of every person interested in the welfare of his fellow-men, how great a work is the church doing for you and me and for the whole human family. Suppose you have $20,000 to lay by for your children, won't every one of you agree with me that it will be a good investment for you and your children to put $1,000 in the church for them and have them form the habit of going to church instead of running loose and becoming Sabbath-breakers and forming bad habits? Won't $19,000, with good morals, be worth far more to your children than $20,000, with the opposite? Vastly more, and we all know this, without taking into consideration their spiritual welfare at all. We all know that children who are regularly in the sanctuary are not so apt to be bad and worthless, and more apt to be able to make money and to know the value and right use of it than those who have no church to go to. I think we will all agree that money spent judiciously for the church, instead of robbing our children, will enable them to make more money than they otherwise would and to use it rightly when made; and it will make them better men and women, which will tell on the future of this great country of ours.

Look at our nation. What a grand country we have, stretching from Maine to the Gulf and from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, what a length and breadth is here of fertile acres and rich soil, what a variety of climate, what an inexhaustible storehouse of minerals and oil and gas, what towns and cities and what an immense population! When we look back and see what we were a hundred years ago, what great progress we have made during the last century, and then endeavor to realize what this nation will be a hundred years hence at the same rate of progress, we are lost in amazement. And Western Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh Synod's field of operations, is not behind the rest of the country in any respect. Look east, look west, look north, look south, look anywhere and everywhere, throughout the bounds of our Synod, and you see that we are actually outstripping the rest of the country in wealth, population and progress. In some parts of our territory the population and wealth is twice what it was a few years ago. Look at our great coal fields and coal and coke work and natural gas wells. Count the new railroads which have lately been built. Our towns are becoming cities and new towns are springing up with unprecedented rapidity. We live in an age of activity and progress never before experienced, an age of wonderful achievements in every occupation or calling in life. Look at the people coming into our midst, who must be furnished with spiritual food from some source. Will we not endeavor to do our share in this great work by helping to prepare ministers, fully equipped for the work, to gather in the harvest?

Years ago I had an old neighbor who when a little boozy always claimed that every generation was getting smarter, that he knew it by himself, that he was much smarter than his father ever was. And is there not something in this after all? Do we not need to have our ministers better and more thoroughly equipped for their work, each decade, to do their share in Christianizing the world? In our church work we must learn a lesson from the activity of the world, if we would make the world better. Why will we lag behind our neighbor churches, or the world, with what we undertake to do for the purpose of making the world better, when we have such a short time to do it in? Let us do something that will stand for all time to come. Is not endowing the School of the Prophets the best work for our Synod to do now? Come, let us get to work, each one, and finish this matter now, Don't we all feel for, and pity the one-horse power minister? Many a poor man is in the ministry who had better be in some other occupation where he might amount to something for himself and the world. We don't believe the Lord calls any one to proclaim His inspired Word without giving him the talents to be successful, if he makes the right use of them by thorough preparation. We can not all be ministers, but we can all help to prepare those that are called by loosing our purse-strings and helping to endow our different institutions of learning.

Our love for our country should stimulate us to do this. We think we love our country, and yet we hardly know how dear it is to us and what a great country we have, until we view it from some of the nations of the old world. We then find out not only how we love our country, but also the opinion other people have of our country and our countrymen. We are proud of the standing of our countrymen in Europe. You don't need to tell where you are from, as the American citizen appears to be known everywhere, and has a name and reputation he may well be proud of. Will we try to raise the standard of American character? We should at least exert ourselves to our utmost, to maintain that standard. To what influence do we owe what we prize so highly if not to the Christian Church? It is plain to us that to maintain or raise our standard as citizens of this great nation, we must do so through the church of the living God. Let us go on with our Synodical Professorship, leaving others to work for the Building for the present.

We know that we have men in this Synod who singly and alone could endow this chair. But they apparently don't see it in that light. We have a number of men who could give $5,000 each, and thus make a short job of it. But they don't see as we see in this respect. We have many men in this Synod who could give $1,000 each and not feel it much. But some of them have put their thousands into new churches and likely have large families to provide for, and thus they do not think as we sometimes imagine they should. We really think, however, that we have several, or at least, one hundred men and women in this Synod who have $100 a piece to put into this fund during the present year. Surely this could be done now. Would not a single $100 from a hundred persons, with a number who would give more, perhaps $1 000, or who would double up to meet the end, in addition to the many who would give in less amounts, give us such a send off, that we could soon close the books. Cannot the minister or consistory in each charge in the Synod get a few large subscriptions towards this fund without a close canvas by any person?

Dear reader, could you have gone aboard the little Rhyneland in mid-ocean on our return trip, during the most of that terrible storm, which the captain said was the worst he ever had during the summer season, and seen every face aglow with cheerfulness, and every tongue loose with mirth and words of comfort to and for each other, you would no doubt have asked, what does it all mean?—poor, weak mortal man, why art thou not cast down and weeping? The answer would have been, poor, weak mortal, why we are as strong as the ship, we have faith in the Red Star Line, faith in the captain, and (some) faith in the snug little ship, and if the ship goes through, so will we. We dared not let you or our fellow-passengers know that we had an inward fear that our little boat might not be able to hold out to battle with the angry sea. How with our voyage through life in the ship of the church! Have we faith in the Most High? Have we faith in the Captain of the ship? Have we faith in the ship? The ship on the briny deep may and does go down. This one never. We have the assurance that the gates of hell shall not prevail against her. If it were not for this poor, weak humanity, this old Adam within us, and we could say that we are as strong as this ship, our faces would be all aglow with cheerfulness, our tongues loose with words of comfort for each other, our purse-strings untied, and our hands ever ready to pay over some of our funds, the Lord's share at least, to help gather other poor mortals into the ship.

Pardon me, dear reader, if I have aimed too low or too high and missed the mark in this article, and so have accomplished nothing. Charity (even money contributed to a good cause) covereth a multitude of sins. May you and I not be found wanting in our duty in this respect. We may not be as skillful in saying what we mean as some others. But money talks as well as fine writing, and each one according to his ability may, in this way, make himself heard for the Pittsburgh Synod's Professorship in the Theological Seminary at Lancaster.

W. R. Barnhart.

Greensburg, Pa., Feb. 25th, 1891.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

AN ANNIVERSARY.

On Sunday evening, February 22d, the Young Men's Association of St. Paul's Reformed church of Reading, Pa., held its sixth anniversary. The large pulpit arch was spanned with a few suitable decorated mottoes, and in the chancel and on the pulpit were many tropical plants, presenting a cheering garden-like picture. The large church was packed with an interested congregation. Rev. Stanley L. Krebs, of St. Andrew's Reformed church, delivered the anniversary address. Speak-

Continued on Page 13.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

Cuticura Soap
For Bad Complexions Red Rough Hands and Baby Humors.

Bad complexions, with pimply, blotchy, oily skin, Red, Rough Hands, with chaps, painful finger ends and shapeless nails, and simple Baby Humors prevented and cured by Cuticura Soap. A marvelous beautifier of world-wide celebrity, it is simply incomparable as a Skin Purifying Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and without a rival for the Nursery. Absolutely pure delicately medicated, exqusitely perfumed, Cuticura Soap produces the whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands and prevents inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, and most complexional disfigurations, while it admits of no comparison with the best of other skin soaps, and rivals in delicacy the most noted and expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. Sale greater than the combined sales of all other skin soaps.

Sold throughout the world. Price, 25c.
Send for "How to Cure Skin and Blood Diseases."

Address Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Aching sides and back, weak kidneys, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated Cuticura Anti-Pain Plaster. 25c.

PARSONS' PILLS
Make New, Rich Blood!
These pills were a wonderful discovery. No others like them in the world. Will positively cure or relieve all manner of disease. The information around each box is worth ten times the cost of a box of pills Find out about them, and you will always be thankful. One pill a dose. They expel all impurities from the blood. Delicate women find great benefit from using them. Illustrated pamphlet free. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cts. in stamps; five boxes $1.00. DR. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., 22 Custom House St., Boston, Mass.

$3000 A YEAR! I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a Year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. No money for me unless successful as above. Easily and quickly learned. I desire but one worker from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number, who are making over $3000 a year each. It's NEW and SOLID. Full particulars FREE. Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 420, Augusta, Maine.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
"Best & Goes Farthest."
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [63

BEECHAM'S PILLS
ACT LIKE MAGIC ON A WEAK STOMACH.
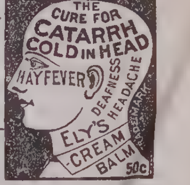
25 Cents a Box.
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
Applied into Nostrils is Quickly Absorbed, Cleanses the Head, Heals the Sores and Cures
CATARRH
Restores Taste and Smell, quickly Relieves Cold in Head and Headache. 50c. at Druggists.
ELY BROS., 56 Warren St. N. Y



GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE of 16,600f.
QUINA-
LAROCHE'S
INVIGORATING TONIC,
CONTAINING
Peruvian Bark, and Pure Catalan Wine.
Endorsed by the Medical Faculty of Paris, as the best Remedy for
LOSS of APPETITE, FEVER and AGUE, MALARIA, NEURALGIA and INDIGESTION.

KINA
QUINA LAROCHE

An experience of 25 years in experimental analysis, together with the valuable aid extended by the Academy of Medicine in Paris, has enabled M. Laroche to extract the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark (a result not before attained), and to concentrate them in an elixir, which possesses in the highest degree its restorative and invigorating qualities, free from the disagreeable bitterness of other remedies.
22 rue Drouot, Paris.
E. FOUGERA & CO., Agents for U. S.,
30 North William street, N. Y.
LAROCHE

BLATCHLEY WOOD FORCE PUMP
Cheapest and most efficient. A Complete Fire Department on your premises. Write for descriptive circular. CHAS. G. BLATCHLEY, Philada.

ing as a young man to young men, his address made an enthusing impression upon all present.

The association has 103 active and 30 associate members. Every Sunday at 6 P.M., the members hold a devotional meeting. During the past year these services were held on every Lord's Day, without a single omission. And in six years they were held on every Lord's Day, save three.

Literary and musical entertainments are held from time to time, and much valuable work has been done for the congregation and for outside objects of the church. The organization is in thorough sympathy with all the activities of the congregation, and in every instance defers to the counsel and instruction of the consistory. It has always cheerfully and promptly responded when its services for work or worship were challenged. As a consequence it has the cordial good will of the entire flock and is regarded as an efficient agency in the prosecution of its mission.

*

REOPENING OF TRINITY CHURCH, COLLEGEVILLE, PA.

This church was reopened for worship on Sunday, the 15th ult., after having been closed for four months, during which time extensive improvements have been made to the interior of the edifice. Dedicatory services were held Sunday morning and evening.

At the Sunday morning service, Rev. George W. Williard, D.D., LL.D., Professor of Theology at Ursinus College, delivered the dedicatory sermon, the dedicatory services being conducted by the pastor, Rev. Joseph H. Hendricks. The evening services consisted of addresses by Rev. Henry A. Bomberger, of York; Rev. S. O. Perry, Lower Providence; Rev. Charles E. Wehler, Blue Bell; Rev. H. T. Spangler, Collegeville, with appropriate music by the choir under the leadership of Abraham H. Hendricks, Esq.

During the morning the Building Committee having charge of the alterations to the church interior submitted a detailed report. The committee consisted of Messrs F. G. Hobson, Joseph C. Landes, A. D. Bechtel, Frank M. Hobson, R. J. Casselberry, J. H. Hendricks, J. S. Weinberger, Isaiah H. Detwiler and H. H. Fetterolf. The auditorium has undergone a complete transformation and is now one of the most stylish and comfortable places of worship that can be found in the country districts.

The old fashioned doors have been replaced by glass doors, swinging on noiseless hinges. All the wainscoting of the church has been removed and ash doors substituted. The woodwork in the church was formerly painted white. This has all been removed and ash and walnut substituted. The pulpit plan has been changed from the square to a circular form with handsome chancel rail.

New carpet has been laid over the church floor and in the vestibule, and the old pews have been replaced by circular ones of the latest design and finish. The church windows had square tops. These were taken out and gothic windows put in, and stained glass put in place of the old fashioned white glass.

Several of the windows have been donated. The congregation placed one suitably inscribed to the memory of Rev. Abraham Hunsicker, founder of the church, and of the Freeland Seminary; another is from the students of Ursinus College, and is to the memory of the late Rev. J. H. A. Bomberger, D.D., LL.D., President of Ursinus College. Two of the windows are donated by the Ladies' Aid Society and by the Sunday-school respectively.

The ceiling of the church has been beautifully frescoed, and the woodwork finished in oil. New pulpit furniture, corresponding in style and finish to the surroundings, was given by some special friends of the pastor.

The prayer meeting room has been divided into two rooms and vestibule, one of which is to be used for library purposes and the other for prayer meeting and Christian Endeavor purposes These rooms have been handsomely finished, painted, carpeted and decorated.

The total amount expended in the improvements in $3062.92, most of which has been raised.

Trinity church was built in 1863 and was remodeled and enlarged fourteen years ago. Rev. Joseph H. Hendricks has been pastor for twenty-eight years.—Norristown Herald.

Church News.

☞Stated Clerks of Classes and Pastors will oblige us by sending such Items of News as will be of interest to the Church.

OUR OWN CHURCH.

PENNSYLVANIA.

St. Clair.—Rev. T. J. Bower, pastor. On February 25th, the Willing Workers' Aid Society and friends of Frackville Mission, which is a part of St. Clair charge, made their pastor a surprise visit. They made their appearance at 8 o'clock, having come on the P. & R. R. R. They marched to the parsonage, and rang the door bell with such force that the family could not understand its meaning. The happy party expected to find the pastor at home, but were sadly disappointed. Business had called him to the Newcastle Mission, but he was sent for at once. They demanded possession of the house. Mrs. Bower at once surrendered. The party, numbering 30, were entertained as well as could be in the absence of the pastor. At 9.30 they made their way to the depot, just when the pastor arrived home. He at once went after them, and had time enough to receive their warm hands and thank them for their kindness, and also bid them a kind good night. The pastor, on his return to the parsonage, could only say, "Well, well, well." He and his family realized that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." The good things brought amounted to about $35, with over $5 in cash for the pastor's wife.

Hegins.—Deep Creek Charge. On the evening of February 14th, while the pastor, Rev. George J. Lisberger, was in the church giving catechetical instruction, some of the members of his flock took possession of his home, and on returning he was quite agreeably surprised to find in place of his old book-case a very handsome and spacious "receptacle of wisdom," filled with books—a birthday gift. It is not only a very useful gift, but best of all, it serves to strengthen the cords of love and fellowship between pastor and people.

Divine service was held in Frieden's church of this charge on Ash Wednesday, at 3 P.M. Regular midweek afternoon and evening services will be held during the entire Lenten season, anticipating daily services during Holy Week, and the celebration of the Lord's Supper on Easter Sunday. During this season efforts will be put forth toward a closer union and communion of the members, as well as a more thorough organization of the congregations and charge in general.

Sugar Creek Charge.—St. Paul's congregation, Rev. D G. Klein. Communion services were held in this congregation on the 22d of February. A special effort was made in behalf of Japan Missions, which resulted in envelope contributions to the amount of $13 21, whilst the regular communion collection, for classical apportionment, amounted to $8.21.

The congregation is gradually reviving from its depressed state and persons who had not communed for some time are coming back to their places at the Lord's table.

A missionary society was organized on Sunday evening, same date, and the names of fourteen members were enrolled, with prospects of early increase of numbers.

Martinsburg.—Rev. J. W. Pontius. On the 28th ult., the members of St. John's church remembered their pastor and family very liberally. Rev. Schafer made the presentation speech, to which the pastor replied, and after thanking them invoked the blessing of God upon them.

Fairview Charge.—Rev. H. S. Garner. At the winter communions held recently in this charge there were eight additions to the church, five of whom are heads of families. A week's service was held previous both at Millerstown and Fairview. At the former place the pastor was assisted at two services by Rev. J. J. Wagoner of Emlenton, Pa., and at the latter by Rev. D. N. Harnish, of Butler.

Kutztown.—St. Paul's, Rev. F. B. Hahn. Tuesday, February 10, St. Paul's Missionary and Aid Society was favored with an excellent address by Mrs. Mary G. Heitshue, President of the Women's Missionary Society of the Eastern Synod. Her subject was, "Woman's Work and Woman's Influence." Mrs. Heitshue has gained many warm friends for missions by her enthusiasm for the cause of Christ. Her address was highly appreciated by the audience. They say, "Come again, Mrs. Heitshue!"

Boalsburgh.—Rev. A. A. Black. The mid-winter communions of the Boalsburgh charge were brought to a close on Sunday, February 22d. They were each preceded by almost a week of evening services, all of which were unusually well attended. The pastor was assisted at Pine Grove and Pine Hall by Rev. S. H. Eisenberg, and at Boalsburgh and Houserville by Rev. M. O. Noll. The communion offerings were as follows: Pine Grove, $6.50; Boalsburgh, $35; Pine Hall, $17.73, and Houserville, $1.10. Total, $69.33. This amount squares up the apportionment for the present year.

Freeburg.—The Pennsylvania Normal Music School, Prof. F. C. Moyer, Musical Director. Announcement is made that the 39th session of this popular and successful institution will open on Monday, May 4th next. The many students of the school now occupying prominent places as teachers, organists, etc., in different parts of the country and commanding good salaries speak well for it. Professor Wm. Moyer, known to many of our readers, still occupies his old position. Terms can be had by addressing the Director.

York.—Heidelberg, Rev. H. A. Bomberger, pastor. The new chapel of Heidelberg church, York, Pa., was opened on Sunday, the 1st inst., with appropriate services. Rev. Drs. Klopp and Good were present and took part.

Pottstown.—The ninety-fifth anniversary

Continued on Page 14.

Cleveland's Baking Powder
Is Absolutely the Best,
Because—"It is richest in cream of tartar."
—Gen. Hurst, late Ohio Food Commissioner.

Regular features of every "wash day" are clothes torn, twisted and rubbed out of shape; and an aching back. You can't have any of these if you use Pearline. It cleans the house or hands, as well as it washes clothes. It injures nothing except dirt. Your heart will be heavy 'till you get it; your labor will be light when you have it.

Beware, Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 222 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

A NEW
Twilled Lace Thread
FOR CROCHETING.
BEST in the world!
Crocheting Book No. 2
50 Illustrated Patterns.
TEN CENTS.
Series of 12 Beautiful Illus. Tidies from London and Paris. Inquire for them of your dealer, or send 10 cents for spool—500 yards. 5 cents for Single Tidy or 60 cts. for 12 Tidy patterns, including copy of Crocheting Book No. 2.
GLASGO LACE THREAD CO., Glasgo, Conn.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.
BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:
JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

For Gas
BAILEY'S
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass
REFLECTORS,
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. A. J. WEIDENER, 36 South 2d St. Philada.
For Oil
ALSO CHANDELIERS for OIL and ELECTRICITY

CHOICE CARPETINGS
IN ALL GRADES,
AT POPULAR PRICES.
A full line of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and Standard Domestic and Imported Carpets.
☞ We request only an OPPORTUNITY to show you our stock.
IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE.
NEW STORE,
1217 Market Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

CARPET buyers had better purchase of J. & J. DOBSON, 809 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, in order to receive full value for their money. They retail Carpets of their own make, which are reliable in every way.

WE MAIL FREE to any address a sample vial of RUBIFOAM for the Teeth. Deliciously flavored.
E. W. HOYT & CO., Lowell, Mass.

of Zion's Reformed church, Rev. C. S. Wieand, pastor, was observed March 1st, with special services. The congregation worships in the oldest church building in the city, which was built in 1796 for the Lutheran and Reformed congregation. On the side of this building a log church stood for many years, but when it was erected is not known, the earliest legible date on a tombstone in the graveyard adjoining being 1770.

Emlenton.—Rev. J. J. Wagoner, pastor, St. John's church, of this place, celebrated the Holy Communion February 8th. Six were received by confirmation. Two children and two adults were baptized. Rev. R. C. Bowling, of Kittanning, a former pastor, was present on Friday evening and Saturday, and rendered efficient service.

Salem.—Rev. J. J. Wagoner, pastor. Communion service was held in the Salem Reformed church, February 15th. Five persons were received into the communion of the church—four by confirmation, one by renewal of profession. Five children were baptized. Rev. S. T. Wagner, of the Beaver charge, was present on Friday and Saturday. His service was highly appreciated by pastor and people. Offerings $14.

Norristown.—Church of the Ascension. A correspondent writes: "On the evening of February 24th Rev. Dr. H. M. Kieffer of Easton, Pa., delivered his lecture on "Angels in Stone," in the Church of the Ascension, for the benefit of the library fund of the Sunday school. Dr. Kieffer was pastor of this church for eleven years and was gladly received by his many friends and former parishioners, and he himself evidently enjoyed the occasion very much indeed. His lecture was well received and highly spoken of by those who heard it. His familiar voice and face awoke many fond recollections, and his sayings have softened the stone so that the angels can be gotten out a little further."

The Voice

Is easily injured—the slightest irritation of the throat or larynx at once affecting its tone, flexibility, or power. All efforts to sing or speak in public, under such conditions, become not only painful but dangerous, and should be strictly avoided until every symptom is removed. To effect a speedy cure no other medicine is equal to

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

The best of anodynes, this preparation rapidly soothes irritation, strengthens the delicate organs of speech, and restores the voice to its tone and power. No singer or public speaker should be without it. Lydia Thompson, the famous actress, certifies: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been of very great service to me. It improves and strengthens the voice, and is always effective for the cure of colds and coughs."

"Upon several occasions I have suffered from colds, causing hoarseness and entire loss of voice. In my profession of an auctioneer any affection of the voice or throat is a serious matter, but at each attack, I have been relieved by a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy, with ordinary care, has worked such a that I have suffered very little inconvenience. I have also used it in my family, with excellent results, in coughs, colds, &c."—Wm. H. Quartly, Minlaton, Australia.

Magical Effect

"In the spring of 1853, at Portsmouth, Va., I was prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia. My physicians exhausted their remedies, and for one year I was not able to even articulate a word. By the advice of Dr. Shaw I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and to my surprise and great joy, in less than one month I could converse easily, in a natural tone of voice. I continued to improve and have become since a well man. I have often recommended the Pectoral, and have never known it to fail."—George R. Lawrence, Valparaiso, Ind.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

Martinsburg Charge.—The Lord's Supper was celebrated in the Salem's church on the 8th ult., and in the St. John's church, Martinsburg, on the 15th ult. In each congregation services were held every evening during the previous week. One was admitted in Salem's by letter, and into St. John's church one by adult baptism and five by confirmation. On the evening of the 1st ult., St. John's Sociable celebrated its fifteenth anniversary. It was a very enjoyable service. On the 21st ult., the St. John's Sunday school gave a very interesting entertainment in ths Seminary Hall. The proceeds to be devoted to the library fund.

Bethel.—Rev. I. N. Burger, pastor. Christ Reformed congregation celebrated its first communion in the new church January 25th, just two weeks after the dedicatory services. All the services were well attended and a deep interest was manifested in them. With but a single exception, the members were all present and communed. Nine persons were received as follows—two by confirmation, three by certificate and four on renewal of profession.

This congregation struggled long against adverse winds and without a spiritual home, but having at length secured one wherein they may worship the God whom they love, all is zeal and earnestness. May the great Head of the Church bless their every endeavor to serve and to worship Him.

Centre Hall.—The winter communions closed in the Centre Hall charge on Sunday, February 8th. Unpleasant weather and bad roads interfered greatly with the services which began in each congregation on Wednesday evening, but there was generally good attendance and deep interest. The pastor was assisted at Spring Mills by Rev. A. A. Black, of Boalsburg, Pa. Additions, 6. Alms for classical apportionment, $58. At the close of service in the Spring Mills congregation the consistory requested the pastor to call a congregational meeting to consider the project of building a church during the coming summer. This congregation has been renting for several years and the time has fully come when they must have a house of their own. Rev. S. H. Eisenberg is pastor.

OHIO.

Baltimore.—Rev. N. H. Loose, pastor. At the midwinter communion services in St. Jacob's church there were seven additions.

Mt. Olivet.—Rev. L. M. Kerschner, pastor. At the midwinter communion services in this charge the following additions were made—Paradise, four; Mt. Olivet, nine. This closed the second year of the present pastorate, during which time 68 have been added to the latter and 14 to the former congregation. The benevolence has been increased three-fold over what it has been.

West Alexandria.—Rev. H. L. Hart, pastor. The midwinter communion services were held in West Alexandria and Johnsville congregations, on the 1st and 8th ult. Nine persons were added to the congregations.

Akron.—Rev. J. Dahlman, D.D., pastor. The Sunday-school rooms in the new church now being erected by the First church in Akron, O., were dedicated on the 8th ult. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev. L. Praikschatis, editor of the Kirchenzeitung.

In the afternoon appropriate services were held by the Sunday-school. Rev. A. Becker, of the German Publishing House, delivered an address in the German language, and Rev. E. D. Wettach, of Trinity church, Akron, an English address, bearing the greetings of his infant church to this mother of Reformed churches in that city.

In the evening the sermon was preached by Rev. Becker, in the German language. He was followed by Rev. R. C. Zartman, of Grace church, Akron.

Louisville.—Rev. J. J. Leberman, D.D. The Louisville congregation enjoyed a precious communion service on February 22d. Eighteen were received into fellowship with the church at preparatory service—fourteen by confirmation and four by letter. Nine children were also consecrated in holy baptism. Revs. Kendig of Canfield, and Herbruck of Canton, rendered valuable assistance by their excellent sermons. The work of the Lord is prospering there.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Concord.—About the middle of January Rev. P. M. Trexler and family received from Lebanon, Pa., a box containing many articles for their use. Such gifts are highly prized for their material value, but when it is remembered that they are expressive of that charity which is greater than faith and hope, they are still more highly prized. The kind givers have the sincere thanks of the receivers, and will be long remembered by them. Their prayer is that the richest blessing of our Heavenly Father may be their reward for this act of Christian kindness.

Change of Address.

The address of Rev. S. N. Callender, D.D., Secretary of Board of Foreign Missions, will, after April 1st next, be Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county, Pa. Those having business with the Secretary will please bear this in mind.

A GRAIN OF SAND.

"Between us and hell and heaven there is nothing but life, which is of all things the frailest."

One of the greatest of Frenchmen attributed the death of Cromwell, the subsequent ruin of his family, and the overthrow of his government to a seemingly trivial cause, "a grain of sand."

Do not neglect slight symptoms of disease, "While I was musing the fire burned."

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"Mrs. Latshaw had a severe attack of pneumonia. She barely escaped with her life; her lungs were very badly affected. In this condition she used your Compound Oxygen Treatment with great benefit, and is now better and stronger than at any time since the first attack of the disease." REV. D. LATSHAW, Parker's Landing, Pa., Oct. 8, 1888.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"Your Compound Oxygen Treatment has saved my wife several times from pneumonia." S. M. JEROME, No. 98 Grand Ave., New Haven, Conn., Jan. 3, 1880.

There's a 200 page book full of such indorsements as the above. If you want it, it is yours, FREE OF CHARGE. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, No. 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter Street, San Francisco, California.

Dyspepsia is the bane of the present generation. It is for its cure and its attendants, Sick Headache, Constipation and Piles, that have become so famous. They act speedily and gently on the digestive organs, giving them tone and vigor to assimilate food. No griping or nausea.

Tutt's Pills

Sold Everywhere.

Office, 39 & 41 Park Place, N. Y.

DO NOT STAMMER.

Mr. T. P. Causey, Law School, St. Louis, Md., writes: "I appreciate the benefit I derived from your treatment, and feel that the cure is a lasting one in my case."

Send for 54-page pamphlet to E. S. JOHNSTON'S Institute, N. E. Cor. 11th and Spring Garden Sts Phila., Pa.

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER.

BLACK DRESS GOODS.

A walk along the extensive stretch of counters devoted solely to the display and sale of black stuffs would furnish convincing testimony to every observer, of the great volume and importance of our dress goods trade.

Nowhere else in any city of the world, can there be found such a gathering of high class mourning goods, as well as every other description of black dress fabrics. In the whole range of manufacture there is nothing in weave and quality which can be desired, that is omitted from this great and valuable collection, which is really An Industrial Exhibit, on a grand scale, of the world's products in this line.

From all over the country orders come to us in increasing volume, as dealers and their customers in every State of the Union grow to recognize the absolute reliability of our fabrics and the care that is taken in their production. We are glad to supply them whenever we can, but under no circumstances do we allow the assortment at our own retail counters to be impaired, intending as we do, that such assortment shall remain unapproached and unapproachable.

We offer

A New and Complete Collection

OF

Black Goods for Spring and Summer

and commend the partial list herewith submitted to the examination of our patrons and the public.

It includes, in every quality and width of each,

Black Silk and Wool Sublime.
Black Silk and Wool Gloriosa.
Black Silk and Wool Henrietta.
Black Crepe Grenadine.
Black Voile de Cannes.
Black Tamise Stripes.
Black Fancy Pebble Cloths.
Black Brocade Grenadines.
Black Wool Batistes.
Black Wool Challies.
Black Wool Tamise.
Black Wool Poplin.
Black Mohair Brilliantine.
Black Sewing Silk Grenadines.
Black Camel's Hair Grenadines.
Black Bordered Grenadines.
Black Wool Carmelite.
Black India Stripes.
Black Bourette Tamise.
Black Polka Dot Serge.
Black Silk Warp Clariette.
Black Princetta Cloth.
Black Wool Nun's Veilings.
Black Wool Crepe Cloth.
Black Hemstitched Grenadines.
Wool Henrietta, Cashmere, Serge, Surah, Mohair, Plain Cloths, &c., &c.

Strawbridge
& Clothier,
EIGHTH & MARKET STS.,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Good Sense CORSET WAISTS

have been growing in favor for the past 10 years. Please examine them and you will be convinced of their merit.

Over 350,000 acres of Choice Farm Lands. Failure of crops never known. Best all-the year climate in the world. Soil adapted to all kinds of farming. Plenty of water. Low prices, and unusually liberal terms. C. E. SIMMONS, Land Com., C. & N. W. R'y, Chicago, Ill.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE

A Healthful Tonic.

Used in place of lemons or the juice it will harmonize with such stimulants as are necessary to take.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A VACANT CHARGE.

St. John's charge, Clarion Classis, which is vacant since January 20th, is deserving of some notice.

This charge, as it is now constituted is composed of three congregations Eddyville, Worthville and St. John's. The members are few in number, and from the farming and laboring classes. The salary paid the former pastor is not large, but the cost of living is correspondingly low.

The people are liberal in their contributions. The average per member for salary was higher than that in any other charge in the Classis. The report last year shows that the charge paid for benevolence $1.81 per member. In this charge has for a number of years led the Classis and stood with the few in the whole Church whose benevolence exceeded one dollar per member. This is only one way in which these people evince their love to the Church. But this is the best evidence a people can give that they are interested in the cause of Christ.

The people of St. John's charge desire a pastor. They are deserving. The prospects are encouraging. Any live, earnest, self denying pastor would be acceptable, and could accomplish much good.

Rev. W. W. Deatrick is the chairman of committee of supply, all communications respecting this charge should be addressed to him at Rimersburg, Pa. W.

NOTICE.

Harbor Missions at New York: 30 State Street.

All those who may expect relatives or friends from Europe to arrive at the port of New York, and those departing from here to Europe should communicate with our Harbor Missionary, Mr. Paul Sommerlatte, No. 30 State Street, New York City, and he will gladly give them all the advice and assistance possible without any charge. The names of the parties expected from Europe and the name of the ship they will arrive in, should be given to the missionary in time, and steerage passengers should be advised to carry the name of the missionary in sight while landing at New York, because the missionary is always present upon the arrival of steerage passengers in the Barge Office, and will take care of those directed to him.

Convenient lodging, good transportation, railroad and steamship tickets, passes, etc., can also be secured through the aid of our missionary. Address,

PAUL SOMMERLATTE,
30 State Street,
New York City, N. Y.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

Beneficiary Education.

Receipts during December and January.

Per Treas of Juniata Classis, Greenfield chge, 27.63, Yellow Creek chge, 26.50 Martinsburg chge, 25.00, Waterstreet chge, 22.50, Second Ref ch of Altoona, 21.50, St Clairsville chge, 20.34, and First Ref church of Altoona, 5.00, making	$147 97
Per Treas of Maryland Cl, Third Ref ch of Baltimore, 58.00, First Ref ch of Hagerstown, 23.70, Jefferson chg, 17.00, and Mechanicstown chge, 9 30, making	108 00
Per Treas of Mercersburg Cl, First Ref ch of Chambersburg, 60.00, Waynesboro chge, 20.00, and one year's interest on Studenour legacy from Treasurer of Synod, 12.00, making	92 00
Per Treas of Zion's Cl, First Ref ch of York, 25.00, and Shrewsbury chge, 25.00, making	50 00
Per Trees of Carlisle Cl, Carlisle Springs chge,	8 90

NOTE.—Funds are greatly needed at present, and unless furnished some of the beneficiary students will be compelled to discontinue their studies. This is particularly the case with reference to the beneficiaries of the Maryland, Carlisle and Virginia Classes.

WM. M. DEATRICK,
Treasurer Board of Education.
Mercersburg, Pa., Feb. 2, 1891.

Acknowledgments.

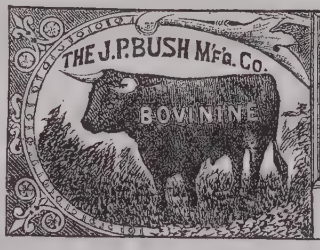
Statement

Of moneys received by the undersigned for Home Missions and Church Building Fund since November 24, 1890, viz.:

Rec'd per Rev U Henry Heilman, treas of Md Cl, from 1st Ref ch, Baltimore, 35.40, Christ Ref ch, Hagerstown, 35,62, Glade chge, 10.00, Weymer Miss Soc, Hagerstown, 34 22,		$115 24
Rev Wm A Haas, treas of W Susq Classis, from New Berlin chge, 3.91, Aaronsburg chge, 56.00,		59 91
Beaver Springs chge, 20.00, Rebersburg chge, 10,70, Liverpool, 20.43,		51 13
Jacob Funck, treas of Lebanon Cl, from Rev T C Leinbach, 38.61, Rev J B May, 6.50, Rev T M Yundt, 11.37, Rev J E Hiester, DD, 146.80, Rev S A Leinbach, 15.38, Rev J A Wickert, 42.00, Rev H J Welker, 20.00,		280 66
Rev Dr Klopp's church, Lebanon, for use of Zwingli Ger Ref ch of Harrisburg,		45 00
St Michael's cong, Rev S A Leinbach, 26.75, do, do, 47.65, Rev L D Stambaugh, 4 50, Women's C Miss Soc of Lebanon Cl. for one of the 1000 tens, 10.00, Rev T M Yundt, 4.56,		93 46
J A Fisher, treas of Oregon Cl, from Ref cong of Mink, Clackamas Co, Oregon,		28 00
Geo J Sweigert, adm of the estate of Catherine Sweigert, deceased, Jacksonville, Dauphin Co, Pa,		8 00
Rev A C Whitmer, on account of the 1000 tens, viz., from M F Koenig, Hazleton, 10.00, Miss Soc of Pennsburg, Pa, 10.00, do, St John's ch of Chambersburg, 10.00, do, Upton, 10.00, do, New Providence, 10.00, Mrs. ——, 10.00,		60 00
Ladies' Aid Soc of Kansas City,		60 00
Miss Soc and Little Workers of the Ref ch of Seattle, Wash,		15 00
Dr J Deisinger, Hellem, Pa, 10.00, Mite Soc of Rev C E Wehler, 10.00, Mrs Mary Harling, Duncannon, Pa, 10.00, Michael N Fringer, near Baltimore, 10.00, Miss Soc of Gettysburg, Pa, 20.00, Edmost Zahn, Lanc Pa, 10.00, Rev Geo A Whitmore's chge, Md, 40.00,		110 00
Mrs M A Wiest, treas of the Ref S S of New Holland, Pa,		6 60
Dr F A Gast, from Mrs Adeline Gast, Lancaster, Pa,		5 00
Rev J H Pannebecker, treas of Lancaster Cl, from Trinity Ref ch, Columbia, 4 59, Hummelstown chge, 16.57, Millersville chge, 32.98, St Luke's ch, Lan, 4.00, St Stephen's ch, Lan, 9.00, Elizabethtown chge, 4.04, First ch, Lan, 30.00, Willow Street chge, 33.34, New Providence charge, 4.07, St Paul's ch, Lancaster, 35 00,		173 59
Mrs Pilkey, treas, etc, birthday and Missionary money, first department of Salem Ref S S, Harrisburg, Pa,		6 56
Rev M H Dietenderfer, treasurer of Lehigh Claasis		100 00
From Miss Soc of St John's cong, Allentown, 64.75, S School 70.30, Young People's Guild, 12.46, Lehighton cong, 16.62, do, S S, 9.97, D Frank Knorr, per Dr Dubbs, 50.00, Salem Ref S S, 40.00, receipts for salary paid missionaries, 128.50,		264 10
Rev A Houtz, treas of Wyoming Cl, from Turbotville, 15.50, Watsontown, 28.00, Hazleton, 18 75, Plymouth, 6.00, Wapwallopen, 30.73		98 48
Conyngham, 4.41, McEwensville, 28.00,		32 41
Briar Creek, 3.36, Orangeville, 17.71, Freeland, 1.00, Milton, 15.15, Danville, 44.03,		101 25
Jesse Bollinger, treas of the Miss Soc of Emanuel Ref ch, Hanover, Pa, for use of Rev A M Schmidt, Bal, Md,		25 00
Do, do,		25 00
B Schmidt, Woodstock, Va,		20 00
Rev S R Bridenbaugh, from the Church of the Ascension, Norristown, Pa,		70 00
D B Mauger, treas of Gosh Cl, from
Pennsburg chge,		119 00
Wentz's chge,		126 00
Oley chge,		50 00
S S of Good Shepherd, Boyertown Ref ch, 33.69, Miss Soc, Zionsville Ref cong, 10 00, Trinity Ref cong, Pottstown, Pa, 56.75, Oley cong, Rev I Stahr, 25.00,		125 44
Rev T J Barkley, treasurer, from Gettysburg Classis,		150 00
Rev J David Miller, treas of Carlisle Cl, from Zion's charge, 23.90, Sulphur Springs charge, 33.09, Newburg chge, 25.75,		82 74
Rev F M Shultz, pastor of the Ref ch of Lisbon, Iowa,		12 50
Rev J O Miller, DD, York, Pa, dividend No 153 of Spangler legacy,		25 00
Rev E D Miller, Freeland, Pa, from "Little Gleaners" Juvenile Missionary Society of his congregation,		10 00
Rev Jno W Steinmetz, treas of Schuylkill Cl, from Olivet Mission, Reading, 16.55, St Mark's S S, do, 10.93, S S 1st Ref ch, do, 23.23, Young Men's Association, 1st Ref ch, do, 25.00, Ladies' Guild of do, do, 50.00, Orwigsburg chge, 18.73, Leesport Miss Soc, 17.27, Gernant's do, 2.15, Trinity Ref ch, Tamaqua, 24.00, 2d Ref ch, Reading, 38.00,		225 86
Isaac Lefevre, treas of the 2d Ref ch, Hbg, com collections,		13 96
Rev Wm M Deatrick, DD, treas of Mercersburg Cl, from
St Thomas chge, 19.00, Mont Alto ch, 10.00, Middleburg ch, 4.33, Upton ch, 2.95,		36 28
Grindstone Hill ch, 25.00, St John's ch, Chambersburg, 20.00, Shippensburg ch, 13.54,		58 54
Rev F A Rupley, DD, treas of Juniata Cl, from
Hickory Bottom chge,	6 30
Trinity Mission, Altoona, ($10 for one of the 1000 tens),	25 00
Water Street chge,	23 38
Woodcock Valley chge,	20 00
Martinsburg chge,	13 25
Altoona, Christ church,	55 00
St Clairsville chge (1½ of tens),	15 00
Sulphur Spring chge,	7 00
Friends' Cove chge,	10 00
		174 93
		$3094 64

Church Building Fund.

Rec'd per Jacob K Funck, treas of Lebanon Classis, from
Swatara chge,	15 00
Tulpehocken chge,	5 00
Annville,	33 00
		53 00
Rev W A Haas, treas W Susq Cl, from
Aaronsburg chge,		11 00
Rebersburg chge,		11 00
Rev A C Whitmer, from Women's Miss Soc of Philada Cl,		50 00
Sellersville chge, towards Tohickon Cl Ch Building Fund,		100 00
From the Immanuel Ref ch of Hanover, Pa, for use of the Trinity Ref Mission church of Altoona, Pa,		50 00



THE J.P. BUSH MF'G. CO.
BOVININE

BOVININE
A CONDENSED FOOD

A SEVERE ATTACK OF INFLUENZA, or "LA GRIPPE"

Always leaves the system in a Weak and Exhausted Condition. -BOVININE- The TONIC and NUTRIENT, will alleviate the feeling of lassitude and depression and tone up both body and mind to their normal state. Ask your Physician about it. C. M. HURLBURT, M.D., of South Dennis, Mass, writes: "I am convinced that for a person re"quiring a gentle stimulant, combined with food of a highly "nutritive quality, I have never found an article so eminently "fitted to fill that place as your BOVININE.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S
ROSES GROW and BLOOM.

We have the know-how of growing them, keeping them, shipping them. Acres of Glass. If you really like Roses you are bound to come to us in the end. Our NEW GUIDE—124 pp., illustrated, complete, the best book of its kind, FREE to all interested. We send ROSES, HARDY PLANTS, SUMMER BULBS, FLOWER and VEGETABLE SEEDS postpaid, to all post offices. Safe arrival and satisfaction guaranteed.
THE DINGEE & CONARD CO.—Rose Growers and Seedsmen—West Grove, Pa.

Per Rev A Houtz, treas of Wyoming Classis, from
Conyngham,	5 43
Bloomsburg,	5 00
Watsontown,	10 00
		20 43
Personal contribution of Treasurer to Hazleton Mission,		5 00
Per Jacob K Funck, treas of Lebanon Cl, from Rev Dr Klopp's ch, for Steelton Mission,		50 00
D B Mauger, treas Gosh Cl, from
Sassaman's Ref cong,	19 39
Rev Dechant's chge,	22 00
Trinity Ref cong of Pottstown,	24 00
Rev Dr Weiser's chge,	35 00
Rev Stahr's chge,	10 42
Rev Huber's chge,	23 00
Rev Keller's chge,	21 25
		155 06
Charles Santee, from Mrs C T Barnhart, Greensburg, Pa, contributed for Sioux City, Iowa, Mission, viz, by
Woman's Miss Soc of Amity Ref ch, of Myersdale, Pa,	7 50
Conard Miss Soc, Berlin, Pa,	10 00
Ladies' Aid and Miss Soc, St Paul's Ref ch, Meadville, Pa,	10 00
Soc of Christian Workers, 1st Ref ch, Greensburg, Pa,	22 50
		50 00
		$355 49

W. H. SEIBERT, Treasurer.

Publication Board.

Rec'd of Charles G Fisher, in payment of percentage from Reformed Church Publication House, for fourth quarter, 1890,	$300 00

GEO. W. HENSEL,
Treasurer P. B. of R. C. U. S.

Beneficiary Education.

Rec'd from "S,"	$3 00

Thankfully received,
CHAS. G. FISHER, Treasurer.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cures Bilious and Nervous Ills.

A characteristic advertisement in its straightforward business talk is that of J. J. H. Gregory, the veteran seedsman of Marblehead, Mass. Mr. Gregory's reputation for fair dealing and exact fulfilment of promises is a hardy annual, and has never failed to justify the entire confidence of his customers. All who want reliable seeds should be sure to send for his 1891 catalogue.

A GOOD REPUTATION.

"BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" have been before the public many years, and are everywhere acknowledged to be the best remedy for all throat troubles. They quickly relieve Coughs, Sore Throat, and Bronchial Affections. Price, 25 cents. For sale everywhere, and only in boxes.

A bald headed woman is unusual before she is 40, but gray hair is common with them earlier. Baldness and grayness may be prevented by using Hall's Hair Renewer.

Five churches were damaged by lightning in Yarmouth, Mass., and surrounding towns during a thunderstorm Saturday night.

Any article that has outlived 24 years of competition and imitation, and sells more and more each year, must have merit. Dobbins' Electric Soap first made in 1865 is just that article. Ask your grocer for it. He has it, or will get it.

Yesterday morning the thermometer at St. Johnsbury, Vt., ranged from 25 to 40 degrees below zero.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhœa. Sold by druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind Twenty-five cents a bottle.

EASTER SERIES

Prayer. Grace.
Precious Promises.
Confessing Christ.
God's Love.
Believing in Christ.
Assurance of Acceptance.
What is Repentance.
Gospel Invitations.
Love Manifest.

Just the Booklet to put into the hands of your unconverted friends. Torchon covers, richly EMBOSSED and tied with ribbonese, with handsome and appropriate Photogravure. Retail 25 cents each. We want an agent in every Church and C. E. Society. Send for sample copy and particulars, Fifteen cents.

Griffith, Axtell & Cady Co., Embossers, Holyoke, Mass.

DEAFNESS & HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Tubular Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Successful when all remedies fail. Sold only by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

USE FERRY'S SEEDS

BECAUSE THEY ARE
THE BEST.
D. M. FERRY & Co's
Illustrated, Descriptive and Priced
SEED ANNUAL
For 1891 will be mailed FREE to all applicants, and to last season's customers. It is better than ever. Every person using Garden, Flower or Field Seeds, should send for it. Address
D. M. FERRY & CO.
DETROIT, MICH.
Largest Seedsmen in the world

BAXTER C. SWAN
MANUFACTURER OF
CHURCH, HALL AND LODGE
FURNITURE
IN GREAT VARIETY.
Pews and Chapel Seatings, Pulpits, Pulpit Chairs, Communion and Altar Tables, S. S. Teachers' Desks, &c.
Write for information to
244 & 246 South Second St.
PHILADELPHIA, PA., U.S.A.

THE PENN MUTUAL LIFE

Insurance Company issues all approved forms of contracts adapted to every legitimate need; for protection, for investment, and for both; for long or short periods, at the lowest, sure rates.

Its policies are squarely reciprocal, free from ambiguity and objectionable features, absolutely NON-FORFEITABLE and INCONTESTABLE. Send for rates, etc. Home Office, 921 Chestnut St., Phila

AMERICAN
Fire Insurance Company,
Nos. 308 and 310 WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA

TACOMA $100 to $10,000 carefully invested here brings annually from twenty to $100 % Test us. Tacoma Investment Co., Tacoma, Wash.

☞ Send stamp for Catalogue. (Name goods desired.)
BABY CARRIAGES 100 styles. Automatic Brake on all. Free. Adjustable, Reclining and Invalid Wheel Chairs. Factory Prices.
LUBURG MFG. CO. 145 N. 8th St. Philada.

STAMMERING.

CURE GUARANTEED. French German Method. Write for testimonials. ECK'S SCHOOL, 837 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

SPRING OVERCOATS

NEW AND NOVEL
"EXCELLENCE"
AT $12.00.
E. O. THOMPSON,
1338 Chestnut Street.
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

CLINTON H. MENEELY BELL COMPANY,

TROY, N. Y. Manufacture a Superior Grade of

CHURCH CHIME PEAL AND SCHOOL BELLS

Best quality Bells for Churches, Chimes, Schools, etc. Fully warranted. Write for Prices. BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY, VAN DUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY,

BALTIMORE, MD.

Best quality Copper and Tin BELLS for Churches, Schools, &c. Also CHIMES AND BELLS. Price and terms free. Name this paper.

MENEELY & COMPANY

West Troy, N.Y., Bells

For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others.

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO

CINCINNATI, O., sole makers of the "Blymyer" Church, School and Fire Alarm Bells. Catalogue with over 2200 testimonials.

RIGGS & BROTHER,

Branch Store, 1005 Walnut St., Phila
Ladies' 14-Carat Gold Watches, $25.
" 14-Carat filled case " 18.
Boys' Silver Watches, $7.00.
Watches and Clocks repaired.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS

Over 200,000 ESTEY ORGANS are singing their own praises the world over, as the most reliable organ made for tone, durability and fine finish. The ESTEY PIANO is as thoroughly and carefully made and guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has. If you want a first-class Piano that is sure to please you buy an ESTEY. Lowest prices for cash, or on easy monthly payments.

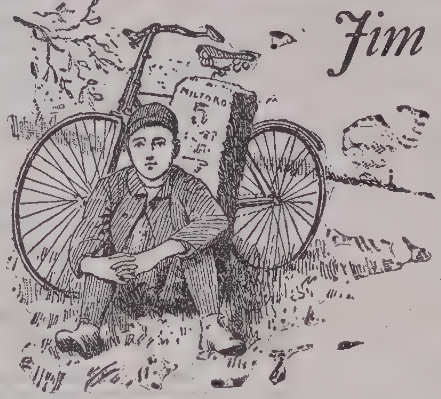
ESTEY, BRUCE & CO. 18 N. Seventh St. Philadelphia, Pa.

BIBLE-READING CHRISTIANS AND Sunday-School Workers will be glad to obtain a comprehensive insight into the contents of the Bible. On receipts of 21 cts., should you fail to find it at your book store, we will send you Books of the Bible Analyzed, by Rev. Schultze. It is warmly recommended as an indispensable aid to Bible reading and study. H. T. FRUEAUFF, Easton, Pa. For sale at Wanamaker's. The trade supplied by The J. B. Lippincott Co.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

ABSOLUTELY PURE



Jim Preston's Bicycle

A Story for Boys

BY ELLEN LE GARDE

A STORY of real pluck and enterprise. How Jim worked against obstacles, early and late, as a newsboy, express boy and a business boy, to earn sufficient money to pay for his Bicycle. Finely Illustrated.

This Story sent Free of Charge to any boy (or girl) who will send us the names and addresses of five other boys (or girls). Address

CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY
Philadelphia, Pa.

1891.

GREGORY'S SEED CATALOGUE

1891.

Home Grown, Honest, Reliable.

I offer you my Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue for 1891 FREE. Note the immense variety of seed it contains, and that all the best novelties are there. Not much mere show about it (you don't plant pictures) but fine engravings from photographs of scores of the choice vegetables I have introduced. Would it not be well to get the seed of these from first hands? To be the oldest firm in the United States making mail and express business a specialty proves reliability. Honest and honorable dealing is the only foundation this can rest on. My Catalogue is FREE as usual. A matter on second page of cover will interest my customers. J. J. H. GREGORY & SON, Marblehead, Mass.

The Breath of Spring is in the Air.

Time to practice EASTER MUSIC, is it not?

Send for our File List of Carols, Anthems, &c., or for Easter Alleluia (5 cts., 50 cts. doz.) Rosabel, or Our Easter Offering (15 cts., $1.44 doz.), a Cantata by Lewis.

MUSICAL SOCIETIES

should wind up the season by practicing such Cantatas as Don Munio ($1.50, $13.50 doz.), Wreck of Hesperus (35 cts., $2.40 doz.), 91st Psalm (60 cts., $5.40 doz.), Ballard. (Send for our List of 150 Cantatas.)

FAIRS and EXHIBITIONS

are made successful by introducing easy Cantatas, like Dairy Maid's Supper (20 cts., $1.80 doz.), Lewis, or Garden of Singing Flowers (40 cts., $3 60 doz.), or Rainbow Festival (20 cts., $1.80 doz.), Lewis.

BOYS and GIRLS

who sing will be delighted to take part in the brilliant flower cantata, New Flora's Festival (40 cts., $3 60 doz), New Flower Queen (60 cts., $5.40 doz), Kingdom of Mother Goose (25 cts., $2.18 doz.), Gipsy Queen (60 cts., $5.40 doz.) Send for Lists.

Much attractive Exhibition Music is found in School Collections,

Children's School Songs (35 cts., $3.60 doz.), Golden Boat (50 cts), charming action songs by Mrs. L. O. Chant, First Steps in Song Reading (30 cts., $3 doz.)

Any Book mailed, post-paid, for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY, Boston

J. E. DITSON & Co., 1228 Chestnut St., Phila.

ARCHITECTURE

CHAS. W. BOLTON, 1510 Chestnut St., Phila

Sketches of Churches, Public Buildings, Dwellings, etc., furnished gratis. Then, if desired, drawings and specifications will be prepared for a reasonable consideration.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address. T. A. Slocum. M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE TRUST CO.

Capital paid up $1,500,000 Surplus over $100,000

DENVER, COLORADO.

First Mortgage Loans and Gold Debentures.

Loans fully guaranteed. Safe as Government Bonds.
Philadelphia Office, Room 302 Bullitt Building,
ROBT. FORESMAN, Manager,

LIFE AND REMINISCENCES OF

GENERAL SHERMAN

By a distinguished author. Contributions furnished specially for book by prominent soldiers and statesmen. Agents Wanted. Will out sell everything. Send 35c. instantly for outfit. We guarantee best book and best terms. Buy no other. R. H. WOODWARD & Co., Balto, Md

---

Proclaim

SCOTT'S EMULSION
VICTORIA

Remember last winter's siege. Recall how trying to health

the Victory

were the frequent changes of the weather. What was it that helped you win the fight with disease, warded off pneumonia and possibly consumption? Did you give due credit to SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda? Did you proclaim the victory? Have you recommended this wonderful ally of health to your friends? And what will you do this winter? Use Scott's Emulsion as a preventive this time. It will fortify the system against Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases (specially in Children). Palatable as Milk.

Dr A H Strickler 14Feby90

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. All Druggists.

Reformed Church Messenger.

"AS THE TRUTH IS IN JESUS."

VOL. LIX.—NO. 11. PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, MARCH 12, 1891. WHOLE NO. 2931.

Entered at the Post-Office, Philadelphia, as second-class matter.

The Reformed Church Messenger.
ISSUED WEEKLY
IN THE INTERESTS OF THE
REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES
BY THE
REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE,
CHAS. G. FISHER, Proprietor,
Office: 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

(For Terms, see page 11.)

Editorial Notes.

—In response to the appeal in behalf of the Beneficiary Education cause we have received several contributions, some of which were anonymous. May others follow !

—" Wyoming " gives this week an account of the preliminary meeting at Lancaster, Pa., in reference to the organization of a Pennsylvania German Society. The prospects are that a society with a large membership will be organized at an early date.

—As we go to press we learn of the extreme illness of Rev. M. A. Smith of Nazareth, Pa. He is suffering from a complication of diseases of such a nature that his physicians have given up all hope of his recovery. The Lord be with him and his !

—Our request that the women of the Church lend a helping hand in the work of increasing the list of subscribers for the MESSENGER, has, we are glad to say, been favorably considered by several, and we expect good results. We trust many more will see their way clear to engage in the good work ; yea, we would like to have one active lady agent in every congregation. We could have it, if all pastors would do like some few have done.

—It should have been Tuesday and not Monday evening, March 17th, in the announcement given last week of the Concert by Franklin and Marshall Glee and Mandolin Clubs, in Association Hall, this city. The prospects are that a large audience will greet the clubs upon their first appearance here. It is to be hoped the Alumni, and friends of the College, and lovers of good music, will lend their presence upon the occasion. Tickets are to be had at 907 Arch St.

—By reference to the monthly report of J. L. Lemberger, Treasurer of Board of Foreign Missions it will be seen that the Church has responded nobly to the earnest appeal of the Board for contributions to its depleted treasury. And it is sincerely hoped that the good beginning in the way of coming to its help will not soon end. And surely would the Church stand by the work as it is now before her in Japan and encourage and hold up the hands of her missionaries there, she must continue to increase her contributions. There is every evidence that she will.

—We regret to announce the death of Nevin S. the only son of Rev. Samuel Mease, D. D., of Beatrice, Neb., which occurred on the 20th ult., in that city. He was a victim of the disease consumption. He was young man full of promise and gifted with noble qualities of heart and mind, making many friends and endearing himself to all with whom he came in contact. His death cast a gloom on the community and deep was the regret that one so young and useful, being in his 30th year, should be taken hence The bereaved father and sister have the sympathies and prayers of the Church.

—This week we are called upon to chronicle the death of two aged members of the Reformed Church, residing in Franklin county, this State, both of whom were somewhat known beyond the limits of their respective homes. The one, George Harbaugh of Waynesboro, Pa., died on the 4th inst., in the 76th year of his age. He was the son of George H. Harbaugh, and was born in Harbaugh's Valley, about two miles from Waynesboro, and was a brother of Rev. Henry Harbaugh, D.D., of blessed memory. He was married Dec. 20th, 1842, to Nancy Hoover. Two children were born unto them, both of whom preceded the father to the heavenly world, the son, Theodore, died last October. In 1860 he left his home, the old homestead, and since lived in retirement in Waynesboro. He was an active member of the Church and was greatly esteemed by all who knew him. His funeral took place on Saturday morning. Services were held in Harbaugh's church, of which he was a member; Revs. S. E. Stofflet, J. W. Santee, D.D., and I. M. Motter took part in the same.

—The other, Hon. Henry Ruby of Chambersburg, died Thursday night, the 5th inst., in the 87th year of his age. Judge Ruby, as he was generally known, occupied a number of prominent positions in life. In his early years he was connected with journalism, learning the trade of a printer in Chambersburg, Pa. At one time he was Superintendent of our Printing Establishment in that town, and made a manly struggle to carry it through one of its crises, brought on by the failure of the Church to give it her full and cordial support. He afterwards engaged in merchandizing in Orrstown and Shippensburg, Pa. When well advanced in years he retired from business and returned to Chambersburg, there to pass the remainder of his days. He has gone to his rest after an honorable and consistent life, mourned by many loved ones and the community in which he lived. His funeral took place on Monday, the 9th inst.

—Revs. G. W. Williard, D. D., and H. T. Spangler of Ursinus College, were in our city last week, soliciting contributions towards the fund now being raised to erect a new college building in memory of the late Rev. J. H. A. Bomberger, D. D. On Sunday, the 1st inst., Dr. Williard occupied the pulpit of the First church and delivered a Memorial Sermon upon Dr. Bomberger, and presented the claims of the college to the congregation, as Dr. Bomberger was for a number of years its pastor. Rev. Spangler occupied at the same time the pulpit of Heidelburg church, now vacant, but which has called Rev. R. C. Zartman of Akron, Ohio.

—The above named financial agents of Ursinus College have met with encouraging success in securing the amount needed to insure the erection of the proposed Bomberger Memorial building. The plans for it are well under way. It, we are told, will occupy a site on the college campus, east of the present structures, and will be of stone, four stories in height. The floor plans contemplate an auditorium of a seating capacity of about 1200 persons. There is to be a hall each for the Schaff and Zwinglian Societies, and a suitable room for the library. The Young Men's Christian Association is to have commodious rooms, and a laboratory will occupy one compartment. There will be study rooms for each sex, separately, and several recitation rooms and other apartments. The estimated cost is $40,000, and it is thought the furnishing will reach about $10,000, making the total cost $50,000. Of this sum $25,000 has been pledged by Mr. Robert Patterson, of Philadelphia, conditioned on the College authorities raising the remainder.

—We regret, as does the pastor, that the appeal in behalf of the Steelton Mission church to be found elsewhere, failed to reach us in time for insertion in our last issue. The pastor, Rev. M. H. Sangree, informs us that on account of the uncertainty of receiving the glass for the windows before the time fixed for the dedication and pressure of much work, made it impossible for him to prepare it earlier for our columns. However, it is to be hoped, that it will reach our readers in time to have them read and respond to it in a tangible way before that day, March 15th, so that their offerings may be then laid upon the altar. It is the desire of the energetic and self-sacrificing pastor that the church may be dedicated to the service of God free of debt. It can be if the strong appeal he makes is liberally and generously responded to. Should the time be too short for all to send their offerings before the day of dedication, they can be sent so as to have them in hand before Easter.

—Thursday evening, the 5th inst., it was our pleasure to be present at a reception tendered by the Mite Society to the new members received during the past year into the First Reformed church, this city. The exercises of the evening consisted of an interesting address by Mr. M. J. Brown of the Public Ledger and The Press of this city, upon the benefit of Guilds or Societies in a social and literary way upon churches, and vocal and instrumental music of a high order, followed by the partaking of refreshments and engaging in general conversation. Quite a large number were present, a greater part being young people, many of whom have come recently into the church. It was an enjoyable occasion. Pastor Sechler and his people have reason to be encouraged in their work.

Poetry.

"NOT I, BUT CHRIST."

(Galatians 2 : 20.)

"Not I, but Christ," be honored, loved, exalted ;
"Not I, but Christ," be seen, be known, be heard ;
"Not I, but Christ," in every look and action ;
"Not I, but Christ," in every thought and word.

"Not I, but Christ," my yearning supplication ;
"Not I, but Christ," my longed-for wished-for goal ;
"Christ, only Christ, my fondest meditation ;
Christ, only Christ, theme sweetest to my soul.

"Not I, but Christ," to gently soothe in sorrow ;
"Not I, but Christ," to wipe the falling tear ;
"Not I, but Christ," to lift the weary burden ;
"Not I, but Christ," to hush away all fear.

"Not I, but Christ," in lowly, silent labor ;
"Not I, but Christ," in humble, earnest toil ;
Christ, only Christ ! no show, no ostentation ;
Christ, none but Christ, the gatherer of the spoil.

Christ, only Christ ! no idle words e'er falling ;
Christ, only Christ ! no needless, bustling sound ;
Christ, only Christ ! no self-important bearing ;
Christ, only Christ ! no trace of "I" be found.

Christ, only Christ, ere long will fill my vision ;
Glory excelling soon, full soon I'll see—
Christ, only Christ, my every wish fulfilling—
Christ, only Christ, my all in all to be.

—The Churchman.

Communications.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE PENNSYLVANIA GERMAN SOCIETY.

On Thursday, February 26th, 1891, a preliminary organization of a Pennsylvania German Society was made in the city of Lancaster. As an event of large significance to the people whom it proposes to represent we give herewith a somewhat detailed account. We quote from the Lancaster New Era :

"Several months ago a spontaneous movement seems to have animated a number of newspapers in Eastern Pennsylvania looking towards the organization of a Pennsylvania German Society. The Philadelphia Inquirer, The New Era, The Lebanon Report, The Easton Express, The Harrisburg Telegraph, The Reading Times, and a number of other papers, all contained articles favoring the movement."

As the immediate result, on February 14th, five gentlemen quietly met in Lancaster, and discussed the question at issue. Their conclusion was that the public seemed ripe for the organization of such a society, "and it was determined to send out invitations to a number of representative men in the several Pennsylvania German counties of the State, asking them to meet in a conference . . . to discuss the matter thoroughly and determine what further action was desirable."

"In accordance with that invitation the following persons met at 10 o'clock, February the 26th, in the study of the Rev. Dr. J. Max Hark, No. 36 West Orange street.

"From Lehigh county : Judge Edwin Albright ; Dr. A. R. Horne.

"Northampton county : Hon. Jeremiah S. Hess ; Paul de Schweinitz.

"Carbon county : E. H. Rauch, editor Mauch Chunk Democrat.

"York county : Hiram Young, editor York Despatch.

"Lancaster county : Rev. Dr. J. Max Hark ; F. R. Diffenderffer, of the New Era ; Rev. H. A. Brickenstein.

"Lebanon county : Rev. Theodore Schmauk : L. L. Grumbine, editor of the Lebanon Report.

"Luzerne county : Rev. F. K. Levan.

"Dauphin county : Dr. W. H. Egle ; Maurice C. Eby, and Ews. Parthemore.

"Chester county : Julius F. Sachse"

Dr. W. H. Egle was chosen president, and F. R. Diffenderffer, secretary.

Letters strongly commendatory of the objects to be had in view by the proposed Society were read from Rev. J. M. Levering of the Moravian church at Bethlehem, Rev. Theo. E. Schmauk of Lebanon, Prof. Oswald Seidensticker of the University of Pennsylvania, J. F. Sachse, Esq., of Berwyn, Hon. Geo. F. Baer of Reading, Rev. Dr. A. J. G. Dubbs of Allentown, Rev. Dr. Clement Z. Weiser of East Greenville, Rev. F. K. Levan of Wilkesbarre, Hon. John W. Bickel of Norristown, Hon. J. S. Hess of Hellertown, Dr. A. R. Horne of Allentown, H. L. Fisher, Esq., of York, Rev. J. G. Dengler of Sellersville, E. H. Rauch of Mauch Chunk, Hon. Joseph C. Bucher of Lewisburg, Hiram Young, Esq., of York, Rev. Dr. Sheeleigh of Fort Washington, H. A. Schuler, editor of the Welt Bote, Allentown, and Frederick D. Stone, Esq., Librarian of the Pennsylvania Historical Society.

We copy again from The New Era :

EXPRESSION OF OPINION.

"The chairman then called for an expression of views, asking Prof. Horne to give his opinion. The professor thought the time had come for the Pennsylvania Germans to assert themselves. He believed a general meeting should be called.

"Judge Albright said two objects should be prominent in such a society, the literary and historical feature, and the social feature. Once a year or oftener, we should meet at the festive board, to secure it the regard of our own people and of outsiders. We should not be exclusive ; but it should not be a mass meeting either. Certain men should be selected to issue an invitation to Pennsylvania Germans who are in favor of such a movement.

"Mr. Parthemore also endorsed the latter name, and hoped it would be applied to the new society.

"Mr. Hess thought this should be a parent society. After that local societies might be formed in other States and cities.

"E. H. Rauch believed 'Pennsylvania Dutch Society' would best answer all the conditions of the proposed society's name.

"Rev. F. K. Levan said : The name question is important. He had a fixed opinion on the matter. He was no admirer of the name 'Pennsylvania Dutch.' In literature we are spoken of as descendants of the Germans and not of the Dutch. The phrase 'Pennsylvania Germans' has become proverbial everywhere. The term 'Pennsylvania Dutch' is a misnomer, to say the best of it. Mr. Levan made a strong and able argument against the name 'Pennsylvania Dutch.'

"Prof. Horne, who had to leave on an early train, endorsed the name Pennsylvania German, and promised hearty support to any action the conference might take. Prof. Horne moved the name to be assumed by the new society should be 'The Pennsylvania German Historical Society.'

"Rev. Mr. Schmauk said in New York city to-day the term 'Dutch' was used as a term of derision. He was in favor of adopting the best known and true name, that of Pennsylvania German.

"Rev. Mr. Brickenstein thought it would be a waste of time to call another meeting to organize still further. He thought prompt action should be taken now.

"Mr. Parthemore amended Prof. Horne's motion by proposing to call it a 'German, Dutch and Swiss Congress of Descendants of Early German Settlers of Pennsylvania.'

"Judge Albright opposed the amendment.

"The original motion was then carried."

So far the report from The New Era. Of course all this is a very brief synopsis of what was said. We may add that the very best spirit prevailed throughout. The proverbial Gemuethlichkeit of our race could be fairly felt. Some difference of opinion cropped out here and there, but it readily gave way to the general sense of what was the right thing to do in each case. It was easy to see that the members of the conference knew what they had come for, and meant to do their duty in the premises. Considering the few hours the session lasted there was much business done.

It was resolved to have a more general meeting for permanent organization. Several places were suggested for said meeting, particularly Philadelphia, Lebanon and Lancaster. After some discussion, Lancaster was selected, and Wednesday, April 15th, fixed as the day.

It was further resolved that the chairman be instructed to appoint a committee of five, of whom he shall be one, to formulate a call for the next meeting, and to have full executive powers.

Sincere regret was felt that President J. S. Stahr of Franklin and Marshall College, and Prof. O. T. Lyte of the Millersville Normal State School, who had both been active in initiating this conference, could not be present, owing to other binding engagements at the time.

WYOMING.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

LETTER NO. V.

My Dear Sisters : One of the most difficult, yet one of the most important lessons the Saviour desired to teach His disciples was that they, as the children of God, were to be free from ambition for position or place in His kingdom on earth, because their relation to the Father constituted in itself the greatest possible calling man can have. Discontent on the part of a Christian with his position or calling in life because it is too narrow for him, is simply an evidence that his worldly ambition is greater and stronger in him than his Christianity. The humblest position in life is glorified by the life and love of the glorified Christ in the occupant.

The female Christian slaves of the first two centuries of this era, did more effectual work for Christ and Christianity than all their modern sisters can do in pulpit or on platform in a thousand years, and simply because the glow of the newly-found heaven-born love gleamed through all their conduct, making every burden light, and winning respect for, and often faith in, the unseen Master from those whose bond-women they were. Imagine, if you please, the effect if they had constantly changed because of their humble position, and had put on supercilious airs, because, as children of God, they were superior to the "barbarians" who owned them.

The most important question for each one of us is not, "How can I better my position ?" nor yet, "What is my position ?" but "What am I in my position ?" The voice of Him who does not "keep the word of promise to the ear and breaks it to the hope," is, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much." "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted." It is altogether another voice that came to mother Eve, saying : "Your eyes shall be opened and ye shall be as gods," if she only had courage enough to break through the barrier of her position.

It is supposed by some, however, that whatever may be the law and correct theory in this matter, and whatever may have been the practice in the past, the Church of our day is confronted by a condition which not only demands the public activity of at least some of her female members, because these by their training and education are fitted to do effectual work in many directions formerly deemed outside of woman's province ; but also that they must be so employed to retain them in the Church at all, because these are no longer content to sit in silence in the seats of the synagogue. I believe that the supposition is not strictly true. For the condition, if legitimate, which, it is supposed, demands such activity, must itself be the outgrowth of the life of the Church. But there is very good authority for saying that "a good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit. And I believe I have clearly shown in the preceding letters that the thing supposed to be demanded by the condition is in violation of the revealed law of God.

If the condition be a disease coming from baneful influences from without, it is certainly better and wiser to get rid of the condition itself than to make it the basis of the justification of, or the excuse for, a violation of the law in question. For the farther one goes in a wrong direction the more wrong one becomes.

In to-day's edition of a popular daily paper, I see a notice of a public service in a church belonging to a prominent denomination, which, after giving the names of half a dozen misses who took part in the service, closes by stating that "the Rev. Dr. —— offered prayer." This is a specimen of the way in which the condition is met in many congregations of our day. Is there a better way? Yes, immeasurably better.

There is an old maxim, you know, that not anything comes of nothing. So here, if we would find a true remedy for the condition, we must first know the process of which it is the result.

It is a self-evident truth that the principle in anything governs everything developed from it. It matters not in how many directions or how far the developments may go, if they are legitimately unfolded or deduced from the principle, they can neither be antagonistic to it, nor to each other. This is true in the world of nature and in Christianity. Our Saviour Himself, we are told, grew in wisdom and stature. We cannot conceive that such growing could have been anything else than Godlike and manlike in its truest sense as well, for in His Person He was the Son of God and the Son of Man. And in such unfoldings of the powers of His life there could be no antagonism between Him and the Father, nor between Him and those who were true to the revealed law of God. If there was any antagonism against Him, as there was, it came from those who were faithless to the God of Abraham. It did not arise from their inferior relation to God, but from their perverseness in that relation. So in the Church of Christ. We all are governed by one Head, guided by one Spirit, knit together by one love and made to live by one faith. So long and so far as these control our thoughts, words and deeds, we must be in harmony both with God and each other. But here comes in the fact of our position again and of our twofold relation to God and to man. We are not in heaven, but upon earth; and these heavenly powers are to be unfolded in us where we are. Each member is to be governed and influenced in his or her position. Each branch in the Vine can serve the Vine best and the other branches as well, not by despising its position, nor by hindering the powers at work within itself, nor yet by coveting the position and powers at work in the others, but by simply making the best possible use of those it has.

Warrings and contentions in a Christian family may come from without, but they cannot legitimately come from within, so long as each member of it is loyal to the Master in the right use of the entrusted talent or talents. It matters not how much more the sons and daughters of our day may know than their parents, if such knowledge be sanctified by the wisdom of Heaven, it is not necessary to readjust the God-ordained law which regulates their conduct as children, to preserve the harmony of the family. The same is true in the congregation. And there must be something wrong in our modern system of education itself if it results in the condition in question. It is wiser, far, to let Paul's wisdom test the character of our education, than to make our education the test of Paul's orthodoxy.

It needs but little discernment to see that our system of education as controlled by the States makes no account whatever of the heavenly power referred to above. Its basis is the natural, not the spiritual order. It does not enjoin upon the pupils of its domain to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ," for as a system it knows nothing of either. Nor does it know anything of the law of man's sovereignty. The pupils of both sexes have the same curriculum from the primary to the high school. In most of the normal schools and many of the colleges the same system prevails. Both sexes are in constant rivalry in the class-room, in the debates of the societies, on the platform at commencements and anniversaries, at all times, in all places and under all circumstances they are in constant competition, without any thought of, or reference to, the present or future condition and position of either sex. Is it any wonder that shamefacedness innate in true womanhood is eliminated under such a process; and that woman cultured (?) in such a way should deem her rights abridged when she comes within the portals of the sanctuary of God and is there told that whatever has been the past non-distinction in sex between her and the young man in the pulpit, during all the years of their co-education, she is not now permitted to speak? Is any other outcome to be expected?

The same process is likewise going on, here and there, in the Church. At Sunday-school anniversaries, at missionary services, and even at some of the church festivals, boys and girls of tender age recite set pieces, repeat dialogues and play at preaching generally, while the pastor, perhaps, is director of the performance, and a large audience (the parents of the performers especially) looks on and listens with approving countenances at least, if not with audible demonstrations of applause.

Let no one justify these things on the ground of the Saviour's quotation: "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise." Nothing can be sweeter in itself and more acceptable to God than the spontaneous offering of praise to Him from the heart and lips of a child. And nothing can be more displeasing to Him and more hurtful to the child itself than to misuse its simplicity for a religious show. No one ever does things like this when in earnest with religion. You teach your child prayers, but you are utterly unworthy of the name of mother if you call in your friends and neighbors to see and hear how nicely you have succeeded. One does not need to go to Ober-Ammergau to see and hear sacrilege. Many a pastor who not only tolerates, but encourages these things turns around and rails at theatres and theatre-going members of the Church. "O shame! where is thy blush?"

Is it any wonder that the Church is losing its hold on the true manhood in the communities in which these things are prevalent? These things constitute the process from which the "condition" springs. For if your daughters can play at preaching during their girlhood, there is no reason in the world why they should not do so in good earnest when grown to womanhood. If one is right the other cannot be wrong. Can those of you who feel the pressnre of the condition (and a few of you seem to feel it very much) really believe that those things which cause it are the legitimate outgrowth of Christ in you? Since He declares Himself to be "meek and lowly in heart," should not the possession of "the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit which, in the sight of God is of great price," look less like artificial fruit in you, and more as if you had "heard Him and been taught by Him."

But whatever you may think, I know that the truest, noblest women of our Church agree with the God-inspired Peter on this point. This plain, blunt language may be considered discourteous by you. But is it not one of the great evils of our day that the sincere is subordinated to the agreeable, the prophecy of Micaiah, the son of Imlah, to that of Zedekiah, the son of Chenaanah? God Himself does not mete to us what we wish, but what we need. Chastisement, reproof and anger, even, are not inconsistent with the highest manifestation of love. The love that cannot rebuke is powerless to bless.

No, a far better way in which to meet this condition is that in which we meet a disease of any other kind. So long as all the organs of the body are kept in healthy activity, there can be no disease; and if one of them becomes diseased, its restoration to soundness depends upon the normal activity of those that remain unimpaired. So, if the Christian nurture in the family and the congregation had all along been of such a character as to harmoniously develop and bring into healthy activity all the powers present in the children of God entrusted to our care as a Church, there should be no such condition as the one in question. Prevention would have been better than cure. The condition being present, however, it is folly to meet it as in the case given above. In that way the disease only grows by what it feeds on. If the Rev. Dr. ——, as the heart of his congregation, would send pure, vigorous blood, regularly, not spasmodically, into the veins of every member of it, could such a diseased condition long continue?

Aye, one of the greatest needs of our day is true, vigorous manhood at the head of the family and the congregation. This confession I make to you, my sisters. For where men are still men, women are still women and children, children. If there were no Ahabs could there be any Jezebels? Your Brother in Christ, N.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

WHY IS IT THUS?

In the MESSENGER for Jan. 15th, there appeared an article by X under the title of "Ministerial Support," in which the writer clearly shows how ministers are deprived of many comforts on account of low salaries. Some time after this there appeared another article, entitled, "Why not Pay Pastors Promptly?" in which is stated the well known fact that pastors are not paid as promptly as they should be.

Now the question may be properly asked, Why is all this so? Why are the salaries so low? Why are pastors not paid more promptly? Why, as X says, is the Reformed Church behind other Churches in this matter? And why are the officers so unconcerned about the temporal contracts with their pastor? It seems to us that the answer to one of these questions will apply to all. In the first place we would say that men in all ages, past and present, have differed on questions of morality. An honest man decides what is right or wrong according to the conception he forms of God's attitude toward human duty. For example, one man thinks it is wrong to ride in the cars on Sunday; another thinks it is not. Therefore, even if both be alike honest, one can conscientiously go on his journey by rail and the other cannot Just so with regard to questions relating to the Church. Two men may be equally circumstanced, except morally; one will pay twenty dollars toward the pastor's salary, the other ten, and yet each satisfies the demands of his conscience.

Now why do men differ so widely on questions of right? Some one may reply that the reasons are numerous. Well, so they are, but after all, is not the main reason this, that men are taught so different and especially so in their collective capacity, as in congregations? If the Reformed Church is behind the age in this matter, who is to blame? The laity? We think not. What is the use to fault men for not doing something they have never been taught to do? Why blame them if the benevolent side of their nature has been left to shape its own course? And if men are taught no better then we can scarcely accuse them of committing wrong if they live up to the standard of their teaching.

Let us begin at the fountain head to remedy this matter. Let the teaching be such as to develope the benevolent side of our nature equal to that of any other Church. If this be done we shall find that the salaries, Classical apportionments, institutions of learning, missionary work, and all other benevoient objects of the Church, will soon take care of themselves.

We imagine that we hear a host cry out, "Why that is just what we are trying to do." Well, many are trying and where success accompanies the effort it will be noticed that there is little complaint about low salaries, unconcerned consistories, and careless members. Now why is it that the preaching and management of so many pastors does not have the desired effect? Do not all ministers wish their members to be liberal and benevolent? Most assuredly they do, but many of them fail on account of entertaining this delusion: that to give monies outside of their own congregations hinders the work at home. This delusion keeps many a pastor poor, deprives him of many comforts, and hinders the progress of the Church. Sooner or later will come the complaint that the pastor's salary is not paid up, that the consistory fails in its duty, and that everything is going wrong. Now, brethren, it is a well known principle that water will not of itself rise above its source. And so we say that neither will a congregation, including the consistory, rise above its head. Any minister who continually presents the needs of the Church at large to his membership and at times urges them to give of their means, thereby exercising the Christian virtue of benevolence, seldom has any trouble about his salary. Should any one doubt this let him attend the next annual meeting of Classis and notice that in nearly every instance the charge that pays little or nothing to benevolent objects has a pastor whose salary is small and that not paid up to date. In such a charge, also, one may expect to find but few subscribers to the MESSENGER and other church periodicals. If this is not sufficient to convince any one of this delusion, we would ask him to think a moment and to see whether he cannot recall a number of instances in which a charge, whose financial strength has varied but little, has had pastors whose successes varied quite materially. Some would report salaries paid, Classical apportionments paid, besides a handsome remainder in the treasury for other benevolent objects. Others would report just the reverse and yet the charge was the same. A poor farmer will not succeed even if he is permitted to have the use of a good farm.

Now we are aware that there are other reasons for the condition of affairs referred to above, but we hold that the principal one is the delusion we have just described. And, possibly, this is the only one in our reach to correct. We are also aware that it is not always best to say things which reflect on the ministry or any part of it, but, since the question is up for discussion, we think the truth should be told, not in a fault-finding manner, but for the good of the Church. Neither do we wish to excuse all of the laity, for some of them at least must co-operate with the pastor if his teaching is to have the desired effect: but we do maintain that the kind of men produced is a fair test of the teaching they receive, and that, in view of this fact, the proper place to begin to remedy existing evils is at the top not at the bottom. A LAYMAN.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

OUR SINGING.

We have congregational singing which, according to my ideas of worship, is the best always. We sing heartily, which is to be commended, but—I hesitate to say the thing that is lacking. Is it taste? Is it feeling? The two are so near akin they cannot well be separated. Perhaps my meaning will reveal itself as I write.

There are several hymns, which, when our pastor reads for us to sing, I feel sorry that they are to be sung, wishing the reading would end them. These hymns are really prayers. Do we shout prayers? No; voices grow subdued and solemn when the heart pours out confession and penitence to God. "Nearer my God to Thee," "Rock of Ages," "My faith looks up to Thee, "The Litany Hymn," etc.

From beginning to ending of these devout sorrow-laden hymns each voice sings its loudest, as though they were singing songs of triumph and victory.

Ought there not to be a difference in singing penitential hymns in Lent, and the joyous ones we expect to sing at Easter? Let horn, organ, viol, voices do their best to give a burst of joyful melody at Christmas and Easter. But the sweet minor notes of sorrow must be soft and low. No hymn at any time should be sung at the loudest the whole way through. We must be guided by the words and melody—mostly by the words.

Nature would be a good teacher for us in the matter of music, if we would but attend with listening ear. I wonder if the old masters didn't get hints of rhythm from her?

We go to the woods. No wind blowing we think. We stand still; we look up into the limbs of the trees—these wealth of leaves barely move—but we hear a low sighing; presently there is a rolling, roaring sound. The branches bend and sway—the wind is among them. Again it dies to low whispers, then swells the strong, fascinating music again. Over and over is this repeated. Not always loud, not always low. The poet sings:

> "Who shall chide my song? from the sounding trees,
> The passionate sun and the resolute sea,
> These were my masters, and only these."

But who of us will take heed to the voices of forest and sea? What we can do (and of course, do, in a certain sense) is to feel in our hearts the full meaning of the words we sing. Then, the music will, I am sure, adjust itself.

I do not write this in a disagreeable way of fault-finding. I hope it will not give that impression, as I, too, am

ONE WHO SINGS WITH THE CONGREGATION.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A LADY'S BIBLE CLASS.

By a strange coincidence, or rather, by a leading providence, I found my way into a Sunday-school Bible Class (in itself a common enough thing in Philadelphia), but this one proved to be aside from the common, and therefore extraordinary. So much so, that I wish in this public way to make mention of it, for the interest and possible good of others.

A friend and I upon entering the room, were cordially greeted by a lady, whom, I understood, was the teacher; she kindly invited us to join the class, which we did, and received a like welcome from several gentlemen members of the same. There were scarcely a score, when we first entered, but the number soon increased to upwards of a hundred men. The teacher, taking her place at a desk upon a slightly raised platform, immediately in front of the class began the services. Before proceeding farther with the services, I wish first to give a short description of the noble lady, as she stood there upon the platform, erect and stately as a queen. She is in stature about the average, of slender build, matronly in appearance—rather so, because of her snowy-bedecked brow, which, ordinarily betokens age or years of service, as is true of this good lady. Her features are bold and plainly outlined, upon which played the glow and radiance of a sunbeam, indicative of a true Christian character, the same in soft, loving tenderness beaming forth from her eyes, which seemed to penetrate the deep recesses of the human heart, and there, not unlike a devoted, affectionate mother pleading for the return of her prodigal son. O, the look of tenderness, of compassion and love that like, as a magnet, draws, and arrests and attracts all with whom it is brought in contact!

Such was the look of this lady teacher, humble and unassuming in her manner, a real personification of the Christian attributes and graces.

The services began by all kneeling and joining in prayer suitable to the occasion, a repetition of the Apostles' Creed and the singing of the old familiar hymn, "Just as I am," led by an elderly gentleman at the organ. They all sang; then followed the reading of the Gospel by St. Matt. 11: 15–30, after which the study of the lesson, a full description of which I shall not attempt. Suffice it to say, it was extremely interesting. The pointed questions, so well calculated to elicit a hearty response and to unbolt the prison doors of the sin-fettered soul. Her pleading accents of entreaty to accept the overtures of mercy so long rejected and the plaintive eloquence in the language of the Saviour: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest," could but call forth the unbidden tear, and bring all hearts into sympathy and rapport with herself and Lord. With zest and fervor like unto a matronly queen she pleaded of her subjects integrity and loyalty to the Crown. Yet in all modesty and humility she sought not self-aggrandizement, but obeisance to the Lord. After the study of the lesson, all again kneeling, recited the Lord's prayer and the Apostolic benediction by the teacher, not as a minister at the altar, standing with extended arms, but reverently and with child-like humility upon her knees.

Who can calculate the good that has resulted from the fifty years of service thus given to the Lord? Even from her seventeenth year she has not ceased to glean, and not only glean, but, as it were, with sickle in hand, she went out "into the highways and hedges and compelled men to come in," and like the good Samaritan, she turned not aside from the sick and wounded but with her own hands ministered to their wants and alleviated their sufferings, both by her words of cheer and comfort, and by the bestowment of her goods for their bodily ailments and comforts. And all without remuneration. A labor of love pure and simple. But is she not rewarded? Yea, verily; she is blessed with all temporal blessings—with physical vitality and endurance beyond that of the measure of her days (being now in her sixty-seventh year), yet is she agile, full of life and never misses a service. Besides, she is blessed with all spiritual blessings, "with a pure heart and sound mind, with a knowledge of God's will and a desire to perform it, with a firm faith in God and a soul full of love." Hence the inestimable labor of love for all these years.

Who among men are envious of such hire? Many, indeed, might covet her reward. Nor need any fear that thereby the harvest grows scarce. Nay, the "harvest is still plentiful, but the laborers are few." Nor is there need to fear that because of such sowing the harvest will yield less bountifully? Not, indeed, unless the seed of grace is less fertile than the seed of sin, which is contrary to the word, "Where sin abounded grace did much more abound." Nor yet, think you, that the Lord of the harvest cares aught who gleans or gathers the sheaves into His garner, or who it is that rescues the "lost sheep" and restores it to the fold, or yet who feeds the hungry, clothes the naked or ministers unto the sick and imprisoned. Nay, for thereunto are we called, and moreover, therein, will our fidelity to the Lord be judged, for inasmuch as we do those things unto the children of men, we do them unto the Lord. Is it not marvelous then, in the sight of God, of angels and of men, that there are to be found men who object to the undue influence woman exerts in the redemption of man? As though mortal man and not the Son of man was the Saviour of men; or as though the spirit that inspired the kindly sympathy in man was not the self-same spirit that inspired woman. Like as if the fountain could at the same time send forth waters "bitter and sweet."

Who will for a moment question the spirit that inspires this good lady to leave her cosy and comfortable home so early in the morning, travel a distance of thirty-one squares equivalent to four miles one way, in order to be present over a Bible Class that meets at 9 o'clock in the morning? Or who will question the spirit that has the power to awaken the interest of scores of men to meet at that early hour and engage in a service of praise and in the study of God's word?

And in this good work she is not alone, as I learned through a personal interview with her, but many others are similarly engaged and with like success. Thereby showing that this personage is not an exceptional one, but rather an example of the many who might be similarly engaged, but for the conservative Pauline environments falsely so interpreted.

This same lady is superintendent of a large school that meets at half-past 2 o'clock P.M., and has other engagements during the week.

I make mention also for the sake of those wishing to know, that this lady is an active deaconess in the Episcopal Church, and as such, is accomplishing a great work that would otherwise be left undone, and has two sisters engaged in a similar capacity, one having charge of the male portion of the Episcopal hospital, numbering over one hundred and fifty men, to whom she dispenses the word of God every Sunday morning. W. P. Z.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

ORPHANS' HOME COLUMN.

BY REV. T. M. YUNDT, Superintendent.

It becomes our sad duty this week to record the death of one of our little boys. Willie Yost, the boy who was afflicted with an enlargement of the spleen, and who was taken to a hospital in Philadelphia some time ago for treatment, was called to his heavenly home on Monday, March 2d. His body was sent to Snydertown, Northumberland Co., for burial.

Willie became a member of the orphan family on the 30th of December, 1887, when his mother, a widow with four children, brought us two of her boys. When he first came here, he was a bright, robust boy, of a gentle disposition. Having a certain impediment in his speech, he was always regarded with especial sympathy and was a general favorite in the family. About eight or ten months ago he became afflicted with a peculiar disease which the doctors pronounced enlargement of the spleen. The attendance of the Home physician was called to the case as soon as it became apparent and treatment was prescribed. However, the case grew worse and finally, for the satisfaction of all concerned, it was decided to place him in a Philadelphia hospital under the care of specialists. This was done as already announced. The case was pronounced a very peculiar one by all the doctors and we never received any assurance that the boy would recover.

The funeral was held at Snydertown on Thursday, March 5th, burial at Reed's Church some distance beyond Shamokin, where the father lies buried. The Superintendent, in company with Fred, the older brother of Willie, attended the funeral. Rev. C. H. Mutchler, pastor of the Augusta charge, preached the sermon and the Superintendent followed with address.

Willie was 9 years, 3 months and 14 days old when he died. Though young in years, he was of a sober, pious disposition, and had the hope of going home to his Saviour, should he be called away from his earthly home.

Doubly afflicted is the widow whose mainstay in life was taken away when her husband died leaving her with four helpless children and who is now called upon to give up one of those dear ones upon whom her joy and hope in life were set. May the Lord comfort her!

This is the fifth death in the circle of orphan children under the care of Bethany Home during a period of twenty-eight years. How wonderfully has God watched over and cared for His own!

Selected.

OLD MINISTERS.

I looked into a mirror this morning and am beginning to be convinced that I am committing the ministers' unpardonable sin. I am growing older. Undeniable streaks of grey are marking the hair on my head. I have read and heard it remarked so often that old men are shelved. And my time is coming, too. Hale, hearty, only old. I look out into Church, and lo, here and there among the earnest idlers are those who in this hour are unemployed because no man has wanted the old minister. Now this is not a very pleasant reflection just after you have seen the unwelcome grey come into your hair to stay, especially when you are convinced that you are unfit for anything but to preach, and perhaps far from well fitted for that. But, however unpleasant the reflection, the trouble must have a cause, and having a cause ought to have a cure.

Perhaps the cause lies in our Church and its system of locating pastors. I have heard that cause suggested. Surely there is a field for every workman if only we had a system by which the two could be brought together. So I peep out into the fields of our neighbors, but as far as I look I can see the unemployed, the superannuated minister, the old preacher, with no work to do because he made the mistake whatever it be.

I am told old lawyers, aged doctors, experienced mechanics of every sort, have work in abundance and lack no employment but have preference whenever any one stands in especial need of such service as they have to offer. I look around and find the remark well-nigh correct. So much so that in more than one instance of physician or attorney it was an absolute necessity for the practitioner well up in years, to take into partnership a younger man to relieve the burden of the overwork arising from the claims upon the time and talent, made desirable by the experience brought by the practice of years given to a profession.

Now I do not find that the superannuated minister lacks anything in the knowledge of his profession. He generally seems to understand the work to which he has consecrated his talents. He is most frequently willing to be useful. And I have found him a very good preacher. So that no charge can be laid to his qualifications for his office or its duties. One now and then does lack, but when you find any other aged workman lacking in any other profession or business they, too, are unemployed; so that this fact does not change the situation. I speak of the generally good characters found employed in the ministry, for there are very many such among the superannuated.

Then there occurs to me that possibly a difference might be found in the habits of the various occupations to which men give themselves, and I find one difference that seems both to satisfy the conditions of the case, and to carry with it an admonition to such of us as are at work where we are useful. In no profession are changes of place so frequent as in the work of the ministry. The physicians who practiced in the community where I first preached the Gospel less than twenty years ago, and the attorneys who were members of the bar in the county then, are nearly all of them in their old places, and I have changed pastoral relations four times. Of course I felt that each time I made a change it was in response to a call, and meant to be for the good of the charges I left as well as for the one to which I came, but nevertheless I changed. Less than three weeks ago I became a member of my present classis. In that time every field but one has changed pastors, and that one has not served his charge three full years. The only member of this classis of more than three years' life on the roll is one of that small army of the unemployed. Nor is this true only of the classis. During the same time there have been in the churches of this county. so far as I know, eighteen changes of pastors to seven who were in their charges when I came. Now in all this time the physicians and lawyers have remained. And whilst I know several ministers who are ready to obey the first good call for which they have their ears pricked, I hear of no physician or attorney who even speaks of removing.

This does not arise from any disposition among the people who care more for their bodies than their souls, nor because the love for the Church is any less than the love for justice. I find that with all that is worldly in people there is also an interest in spiritual things and a willingness to take the minister's words of reproof, warning and encouragement. In fact of all the changes in our Church and others since I came into my present field, only four of the nearly thirty pastoral changes were agreeable to any considerable portion of the charges made vacant, and in only one case was a majority of the congregation favorable to a charge.

I find also in looking over the Church generally, and in all denominations, a large number of aged pastors occupying high places in the esteem of the congregations who would sooner lose anything than their old minister. And men who are even much older than some of the unemployed continue constant in their service. Some, like the attorneys referred to, being compelled to have young men as assistants—we don't have partners in the ministry. Old age seems to be no objection to these revered fathers in the churches. They are not always the most eloquent, nor always the most energetic, nor always the most enthusiastic, nor always possessors of the characteristics which are paraded as the "first requisites of the man we need;" but they are nearly always the men who have been constant, faithful, devoted pastors of long standing in one charge. They are found in all localities, and they belong to all denominations.

It is not always the minister's fault that he changes frequently, nor does it argue discontent that one yields to the influence of a call. Every minister wants to be useful in his ministry and it is so hard to see an opportunity go by when it seems to afford a field of greater activity in the Church and for the Master. A vacant charge has a way of appealing to the heart of a faithful servant of Christ. Then the hope of accomplishing what neds to be done inspires. Frequently a man is so discouraged because his efforts are apparently without good results, and he believes under other surroundings he could succeed better. Besides often he has found himself weighed down by a sort of spiritual decline in the congregations he serves, when prayers and admonitions seem in vain, that he gladly believes that it would be better for his charge if God sent another workman to succeed where he feels he has failed. And so reason after reason, as varied as men and charges vary, might be suggested and all with one result. We change and in changing sacrifice all the advantages the few years have given us; and so we grow old changing and sacrificing, until we arrive at that point when some one discovers that the silver crown is showing itself and we are laid aside until that time when God shall change the silver for the gold.

Nor should we lay any blame upon the people. I guess it is natural. I know of an old physician who moved into a community and wondered why younger men were preferred, just as older ministers often do. And I doubt whether an old attorney could move into a new community and reap the benefit of his past experiences. The advantage which makes age so beneficial is that which accrues from the sum of the success in the years that have passed. And the lesson of it all is that in weighing the question of a change of pastorate, one should not forget to count among the things sacrificed the loss of the influence gained in the pastorate we propose to leave.

I am sure if all the effects of these changes could be counted, we would be slower in younger years to leave a field where God makes us useful and by longer years of devotion to the spiritual progress of the souls entrusted to us, makes ourselves more powerful in our work and to the people we serve in the Lord, and fewer of us would grow startled as we notice the change in the color of our hair, or the change from the line to the wrinkle in our faces.—Christian World.

The Family.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE YOUNG PROPHETESS:

A TALE OF THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE.

BY REV. R. LEIGHTON GERHART.

CHAPTER XI.

THE GILDED CHARIOTt.

Fearing to betray himself, Otho sank behind the rock, and with bated breath waited. He could no longer see the man, but he could distinctly hear the sound of his feet; and presently his rough breathing became audible. What to do in the event of discovery he did not know; for a time his mind was in a chaos of dismay and fright—a horror of despair came upon him. Then his thoughts began to arrange themselves in order, and he resolved, the moment his hiding was discovered, to hurl himself upon the man and dash him to the foot of the wall, in the faint hope of destroying him without attracting the attention of the others. It was a desperate resolution, one that, happily for himself and his friends, he was not called upon to execute. The footsteps of the climber came nearer,—so near at length that Otho, with clenched hands, and deathly pale face, nerved himself for his desperate assault. At the very last moment, so nearly as he could judge, the rough clatter of ascending feet ceased,—there was a pause, to the boy, awful in its intensity, and seeming endless in its duration, then, having evidently surveyed the rocks in his vicinity and become satisfied that no one was hidden near him, the climber was heard descending;—the opening behind the rock had escaped his eye. Waiting until he deemed it safe, Otho once more ventured to look out;—only a few lights were to be seen, and these were rapidly disappearing in the direction of the outside entrance to the cavern. The pursuers were satisfied that the monk was hastening down the mountain, and anxious to overtake him and recapture the children, whom it was supposed would endeavor to join their comrades on the march, they abandoned the cavern, and hurried through the woods in the direction of the highway. Having thoroughly satisfied himself of this by a reconnoitre, the monk bade the children follow him, and conducted them out of the cavern into the forest. Instead of seeking the road, however, he led his little party to a secluded dell, shrouded with pine and fir trees, where they remained until night set in.

"If we had tarried in the cavern," he explained, "we might have been caught. Finding us not on the road, Sir William may conclude that we are—in spite of his failure to discover us—still hidden somewhere in the cave, and migh station guards at the entrance to prevent our escape."

As soon as night had clouded the landscape, the return to the army, now far in advance, was begun. It was a wearisome journey, entailing great fatigue upon the whole party, but at length, on the second morning after their escape from the castle, so many miles had been covered that the monk informed the children they could go on without fear of recapture, as Sir William had doubtlessly, by this time, given up the search. It was necessary, he also said, for him to leave them, as his destination lay in a different direction.

It was at this time early morning, and all stood on an elevation, commanding a view of a wide range of country. The air was crisp and dewy, vitalized by the glowing light shed athwart the earth by the rising sun. The monk stood facing the east, his clear, beautiful face bright with the light of the new day. Whether it was the glory of the scene, or some inspiring thought, suggested by the view, that affected him, we cannot say, but there was a loftiness in his bearing, and a spirituality in his face, far surpassing that before noticed by the children. As they followed him through the long hours of their journey, the belief that he was a heavenly being had again risen in their hearts. His manner was so gentle, his voice so melodious, his conversation so spiritual, that it was impossible for them not to feel the contrast between him and others. In awe and wonderment, they whispered their conjectures to each other as hour after hour they had trudged on their way, but never ventured to question him on the subject. The thought that he was about to leave them, while filling every heart with sorrow and regret, emboldened Madeleine to seize the only opportunity left, to satisfy herself of the correctness of their conjectures. Trembling with suppressed excitement, she looked up into his radiant face, and asked:

"Is—is—heav—heaven far from here?"

The monk turned his beautiful face upward, his eyes were illumined brilliantly, for an instant he paused, and then said, his voice pervaded with the deepest emotion:

"Far, far beyond the stars, dear child!"

The boys glanced at each other; that a revelation was coming they knew, and in a state of the intensest expectancy, they waited.

Encouraged by the apparent willingness of their guide to speak, Madeleine framed a question that to her mind would remove all doubt.

"Is heaven your home?" she inquired, almost in a whisper.

"Heaven my home, dear Madeleine?" reiterated the monk, in tones so thrilling that every heart trembled, a smile of ineffable fervor and joy wreathing his face. "Ay, that it is! Here I am but a stranger and a pilgrim, a messenger of our God to do His will, but soon, ah! soon, in a few brief hours—they will not be many—He will bid me come, and I shall go to my heavenly home,— land of the blessed!"

"Wilt thou not tell us of that heavenly place? What is it like?"

"Would you know?"

"Ay, tell us Holy Messenger."

"The walls of that place—that heavenly city—are of precious, shining jewels; twelve kinds: each kind, in its own color, laid in a broad belt around the entire wall. There are twelve gates, dear children, and each gate is made of one lustrous, unstained pearl; and the streets,—those blessed streets trodden by sainted feet—are of gold, but of gold as clear as crystal. There is the pure, sparkling river of eternal life; and there the great white throne of God; and there the saints are, and the countless hosts of the angels of heaven. But farewell, dear children, farewell! I dare not tarry here. Go on your way, and the Lord of Hosts attend and guard you!" and while they wondered at what they heard, turning quickly, he was gone.

"It was an angel! it was an angel!" cried Madeleine, sinking on her knees to the ground, and raising her hands to heaven in praise and thanksgiving.

"Yes, this was an angel, that I think too," murmured Heintzpeter, kneeling also, "but where were the wings? I see not the wings He must have his wings under his coat. I think that was not a good way. I like to see the wings."

Who this strange man was the writer of this is not able to say, nor how he happened to be at the castle, and to be so familiar with its secrets. The monk certainly acted in a mysterious manner; but, if examined carefully, the evidences of his celestial origin are scarcely sufficient to convince a critical mind. It does not seem reasonable, for instance, that an angelic being should find so much difficulty in opening the door leading into the subterranean gallery; that he was even compelled to open it with his hands, is against this supposition. Then, how can we account for the fear he manifested when he fled from Sir William? The writer is somewhat of the mind of Heintzpeter, before believing the monk to be an angel, he would like to see the wings. Yet his manner, his language was certainly different from that, not only of ordinary men, but also of the monks and priests whom the children knew all their lives. It is probable that the man had at one time lived in the castle, perhaps as a servant, and had been led in his youth to devote himself to a religious life; and that, when he reached mature years, knowing the wickedness of Sir William, he had returned to his old home with the hope—vain, indeed—of working some change in the life of his old master. That he was an angel sent to deliver them, the young Crusaders never ceased to believe. And this belief was shared by all to whom they told the story of their marvellous escape; and there was probably not one in the army, rejoined a day or two later, who did not hear of it. Their story, however, underwent some changes as it passed from mouth to mouth. Instead of opening a door constructed in the wall of the castle, it was reported, that the monk, by the simple touch of his finger, caused the rocks to open; that, instead of hiding the children in the cavern, he saved them by blinding the eyes of their pursuers, who were thus left to grope about in utter darkness; and, finally, instead of bidding them farewell in the ordinary manner, the monk's cloak fell to the ground, disclosing the wide pinions and shining robes of an angel, and after commanding the children not to falter or doubt of the success of the Crusade, he spread his wings and flew up to heaven. This story, readily accepted in a superstitious and ignorant age, greatly stimulated the ardor of the Crusaders, and raised Madeleine and her comrades to a position of influence unknown to them before.

---

Copyrighted by Chas. G. Fisher, 1890.

Otho's first object, after overtaking the army, was to find Serena. So, making an appointment to meet his friends at the close of the day's march, he left them to follow at their leisure, and hurried toward the head of the column, scanning every face as he went in the hope of finding his cousin. He had not gone far before his attention was caught by the conversation of a little group, trudging on in the dust near him.

"Did you see the Prophetess?" inquired one.

"Ay, ay, I saw her; I got near enough to see her face," was the reply.

"And is it all as has been said?"

"Ay, and more besides."

"Tell us!" cried several voices.

"Well," replied the boy appealed to, "she is most beautiful, and is seated in a kind of chariot, all white and gilded, the like of which I never saw before, nor heard tell of, drawn by two milk-white horses.".

"Riding in a chariot!" ejaculated several in wonder.

"Ay, riding in a chariot; and I think it but right that such a sacred lady should ride thus—seeing especially all the good she does us."

"Most surely," responded several, though not as heartily as the speaker might have wished.

"This chariot has a splendid covering of cloth of gold, to shelter the Prophetess from the sun—and the rain, too, I suppose—and is most richly adorned with Turkish rugs, though what kind they are I know not, save that they are brilliant with many colors, and finer than anything of the kind I ever saw in all my life."

"Now, the saints preserve us!" screamed an irreverent voice from the crowd behind. "I'm sure I'd like to ride, too, and I'll be content if it's only on a good oaken plank; nor would I care for hot sun nor cold moon, so my legs got rested."

"I'll tell you how to rest your legs," answered a shrill voice.

"How?" went screaming back.

"Turn yourself upside down and walk on your hands awhile."

To be Continued.

THE THRIFTY HOUSEKEEPER.

She takes note of the kitchen fire, and closes up the dampers when she is not using it, and makes one fire do all the work it will at once. She saves her nice "drippings," and makes them serve in cooking instead of butter. She saves all the odds and ends of bread and meat left over from meals, and works them up into appetizing and nutritious dishes, instead of throwing them away. Her clothing she keeps clean by the use of aprons; she has suits of clothes suitable for dirty work. She "turns" her sheets when they grow thin in the middle. Her worn table-cloths are cut up into napkins for every-day use. She keeps rugs spread over places in the carpet that are subjected to the hardest wear. She carefully dries her tinware so it will not rust out. She keeps her old broom for rough use, and so prolongs the term of service of her best broom. She uses up her worn garments in making quilts and comforts, or in rugs and rag-carpets, and so in a thousand ways she saves what, if wasted, would be pure loss, and do nobody any good.

A millionaire was riding not long ago on a horse-car. A cart laden with bricks passing along dropped one in the street. The millionaire got off the car, ran and picked up the brick and carried it in his hands to some houses he was building up town. "Every brick," said he to a friend who was with him, "costs me a cent and a half apiece." His millions he had accumulated by saving littles, and more than one charitable institution has been endowed by his savings.

Of the thrifty housekeeper the saying is never true: "A woman can throw out with a spoon faster than a man can throw in with a shovel." The Christian Advocate.

Youth's Department.

THE TOMMY-JOHNNY RACE.

(Told by Tommy to the other boys.)

"I tell you what, boys, you should have been there,
The night before last—the ice was as glare
As a big looking-glass—where the brook has flowed over
The land that last summer was red with red clover;
The wind it blew hard the way that we went,
And we went like the wind when the both of us bent
To our oars—"
"Oars would do if the water were wetter,"
Broke in Bob.
"Well, skates, if you like the word better,"
Laughed Tommy. "But half-way down Johnny tripped,
And I went ahead, till somehow I slipped
On a twig, and then John got the lead—"
"That was odd!"
"Well, I made the 'odd' even the very next rod—
And I'm sure I'd have won—"
"If Johnny had not,
Heigho!" shouted Will. Tom's face it grew hot:
"But John didn't," he said, "though he'd easily win
In any ice-race that William was in—"

"Ho, ho! look a-here!" interrupted again
Master Bob: "If John didn't and you didn't, tell me then
Who did win your wonderful long-meadow race?"
"Why, I gained, and John gained, at the fearfullest pace,
And we both of us gained—don't you see, you dunce—
Till we both of us reached the rock-goal at once!"

—Charles Stuart Pratt.

A LITTLE ERRAND FOR GOD.

Helen stood on the doorstep with a very tiny basket in her hand, when her father drove up to her and said: "I am glad you are all ready to go out, dear. I came to take you to Mrs. Lee's park and see the new deer.

"Oh, thank you, papa; but I can't go just this time. The deer will keep, and we can go to-morrow. I have a very particular errand to do now," said the little girl.

"What is it, dear?" asked the father.

"Oh, it is to carry this somewhere," and she held up the small basket.

Her father smiled and asked: "Who is the errand for, dear?"

"For my own self, papa; but—oh, no; I guess not—it's a little errand for God, papa."

"Well, I will not hinder you, my little dear," said the good father, tenderly. "Can I help you any?"

"No, sir. I was going to carry my orange, that I saved from the dessert, to old Peter."

"Is old Peter sick?"

"No, I hope not; but he never has anything nice, and he's good and thankful. Big folks give him only cold meat and broken bread, and I thought an orange would look so beautiful and make him so happy! Don't you think that poor well folks ought to be comforted sometimes, as well as the poor sick folks papa?"

"Yes, my dear; and I think we too often forget them until sickness or starvation. You are right; this is a little errand of God. Get into the buggy, and I will drive you to old Peter's and wait till you have done the errand and then show you the deer. Have you a pin, Helen?"

"Yes, papa; here is one."

"Well, here is a $5 bill for you to fix on the skin of the orange. This will pay old Peter's rent for four weeks and perhaps this will be a little errand for God, too," said the gentleman.

Little Helen, who had taught a wise man a wise lesson, looked very happy as her fingers fixed the fresh bill on the orange.—Domestic Journal.

FLOSSY AT CHURCH.

She looked very pretty in her new white dress and broad-brimmed black silk hat, but best of all, she thought, were her new shoes that papa had brought home the night before. They were so shiny that she called them "looking-glass shoes" at once, and went to sleep with them in her arms.

Flossy's papa was the minister, and she was going to church for the first time

"You will be very good, dear, will you not?" asked mamma for the last time, as they walked up the church steps.

"Course I will, mamma," answered Flossy, cheerfully.

But when mamma looked around, after they had stood up to sing, Flossy had her family of paper dolls spread out in the book-rack, and she put up her lip when mamma, with a red face, took them down.

"They need to come to church, mamma, they are so bad; so I put them in my pottet on purpose," she whispered. But mamma shook her head.

After a while Flossy got tired, and wiggled around to make mamma look at her.

"It's too long, and I'd rather go home now, please, and fish in the rain water barrel," she whispered, but mamma did not pay any attention, so she put her head down in mamma's lap and went sound asleep, and did not wake up till papa was getting through. Then forgetting that she must not talk aloud, she cried out:

"Oh, but I'm glad it's over! Thank you, papa, for getting through at last."

And every one in the seats near by laughed. Only mamma looked sorry.

Pleasantries.

The following written definition of the word "bachelor" was handed in by a fifth grade boy. "A bachelor is a man who has no wife, nor wants no wife, nor can't get no wife."

Teacher: "Now each of you boys give a sentence, and turn it into the imperative form." Michael: "The horse draws the cart." Teacher: "There put that in the imperative." Michael: "G'lang, git!"

A bright little girl, who had successfully spelled the word "that," was asked by her teacher what would remain after the "t" had been taken away. "The dirty cups and saucers," was the prompt reply.

The daughter of a country rector taught the choir boys a new tune at a Monday evening's practice, to be sung on the following Sunday. Sunday morning came; "Well, Johnny," said Miss X, "I hope you haven't forgotten the new tune, for we depend much on you." "Naw mum, not a bit. Why, I've been a skeerin' the crows with it all week."—London Times.

NOTICE.

☞ Editorial Correspondence address to THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters pertaining to subscriptions and other business, address REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

☞ No notice taken of anonymous communications.

For Terms, see page 11.

THE REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER,
907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THURSDAY, MARCH 12, 1891.

WHAT the Theological Seminary is to young men studying for the ministry, and after they are in the ministry also, that should be the Catechetical Class to the younger people of the congregation, and to their seniors in like manner. Both may be regarded as seminaries ; both ought to be catechetical classes in the true seuse of the word. The latter includes systematic instruction in the doctrines of theology, or, in the language of St. Luke, "a declaration in order of those things which are most surely believed among us." In substance, it is the same as that which, in a more extended form, is taught in the Seminary. We once attended the exercises of a Seminary of this kind, which lasted for the full half of a day, and it seemed very much as if we were in a theological class room. We thought how well it would have been if many of the older people had been present. Years ago we taught a class in a school-house on the top of a mountain, where all the church members far and near attended, especially the aged. Many told us that they were just as much edified as if they had been in church. We would advise our members generally, especially young persons recently confirmed, to attend catechetical instruction as far as their engagements will permit, and more particularly during the Lenten period. We can assure them that it will help materially to confirm them in faith and holy obedience.

PRIVATE JUDGMENT.

The case of the Rev. Howard MacQueary, an Episcopal minister, who was recently tried and condemned for heresy in the Diocese of Ohio, is an illustration of what used to be very sharply denounced in the MESSENGER and our own Review as ultra or false Protestantism. He was charged with denying the old doctrine of the resurrection of Christ and of His supernatural birth, contrary to the doctrine of the Episcopal Church, which at his ordination as presbyter he had promised to preach and to teach. His defence was that his views on these two cardinal points were based on the Bible, as the only rule of faith, interpreted, of course, according to his own private judgment, which he maintained was the final court of appeal in the Protestant Church. So our left-handed friends, ultra Roman Catholic writers, contrary to history, have all along asserted, so vehemently that one gets tired of their endless repetitions. It is a mere man of straw ; but it is a useful fad, when they have nothing else to write about. Protestants make use of it sometimes as a shield or convenience when they are confronted by authority in their own churches and imagine that their own subjective opinions are worth more than the voice of the Church of all ages.—Mr. Mac Queary appears to be a man of some ability. At least he has written a book in which he has embodied his theological vagaries. The new Hypothesis of Evolution is on his brain and controls his theology. He has also read some German theologians of the rationalistic stamp, or the left wing, which has turned his head. It is too true, perhaps, that some Episcopalian ministers, both in this country and England, are too broad or latitudinarian in their theological views, and it is, therefore, the more instructive to see that their Church rises up and in its dignity through its constituted authorities, says, Thus far shalt thou go and no farther. It is the nature of truth always to asserts its authority in such proper form as its interests may demand—else the stones in the street would cry out.

TWO EXTREMES.

Now and then it becomes difficult for a minister to decide whether some of the members of his catechetical class should be admitted to the rite of confirmation or not. It is not clear that they have the necessary qualifications for that privilege, and yet it is not altogether clear that they should be debarred from it. In like manner conscientious young men and women sometimes have their doubts whether they are Christians in the proper sense of the term and have a right to go the Lord's table. In regard to this whole matter there are two extremes as in other cases of conscience. In the Reformed and Lutheran Churches, the danger always has been, especially where the catechetical classes are large, of receiving thoughtless, giddy young people to the communion, who ought to wait a year or two longer, or, at least, until it is evident that they have truly repented of their sins and believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. But then on the other hand, the minister too much wedded to his own preconceived views of conversion, may through his own inadvertence, infuse doubt or fear into the minds of some of his most conscientious catechumens, whilst he encourages those who believe they are justified, not by faith, but by some particular experience through which they may have passed. A long time ago, a minister in the Reformed Church, a very devoted follower of Mr. Finney, had a large and interesting catechetical class whom he had been instructing for some time. When the time arrived for their confirmation, about one half were rejected as unconverted persons, not fit to go to the Lord's Supper. They, however, were in earnest, trying to be Christians at least, and went to a Lutheran church in the neighborhood for further instruction, where they were confirmed and in their day became some of the best members in the church. Those that were confirmed in the Reformed church seemed to promise well at first, but subsequently they did not turn out to be as good Christians as those who had been supposed to be no Christians at all. Our Saviour speaks of the great sin which is committed in offending "one of the little ones" which believe in Him. Matt. 18 : 6. The two extremes to which we have referred may be avoided by following the instruction contained in the Heidelberg Catechism in answer to the Question : For whom is the Lord's Supper instituted ?

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER.

The earthly remains of the great Roman Catholic missionary, Francis Xavier, repose in a magnificent cathedral in the small town of Goa in Western India. Some time ago it was announced that they were to be exposed to view, an event which attracted a vast crowd of pilgrims that surged around the church, seeking for admittance, in order to view the venerated body and kiss its feet. It was said that it had been miraculously preserved for three hundred and fifty years, but a European traveler who saw it said it "was perfectly dried up." It must, therefore, have suffered the fate of the Egyptian mummies, as a matter of course, but not in all respects. It was minus the right arm, which was cut off by Papal authority and conveyed to Rome many years ago, where it is still exhibited as a relic. It is also minus two toes, which are said to have been bitten off and carried away by a devout Portuguese lady. Here we have an illustration, but only one among others, of what we are accustomed to regard as the "old superstition." But what would St. Paul say in regard to the gathering at Goa, if he had been present? We know what Zwingli would have said. We might also ask, what would Xavier himself, one of the greatest and best missionaries that have ever lived, have said to the thousands who had come together to honor his memory? It seems to us that he most likely would ask them why they stood all the day idle in the market, and told them to go out into the missionary field around them, to labor for Christ's kingdom and not idle away their time. This he would have done, or else we are very much mistaken in regard to his Christian character, which in some respects, we have always thought resembled that of St. Paul.

A COMMON REFORMED CREED.

We supply our readers with a few extracts from an interesting article in the February number of the "Quarterly Register" of the Alliance of the Reformed Churches, from the pen of Dr. Brandes, of Goettingen, Germany. They speak for themselves, and show that to assert that there is no common creed to all the Reformed Church in Germany is obviously an error. They also show that the supposition entertained by some of us in this country that the Heidelberg Catechism is, to a great extent, a dead letter in Germany, is also an obvious mistake.

"There is a common creed, acknowledged by all the Reformed Churches throughout Germany. There are Reformed Churches, to be sure, which have also local Confessions ; but there are also Confessions, acknowledged by all the Reformed Churches. Not taking into account the Helvetic Confession, there is above all, the Augsburg Confession, in its revised and amended form, as published in 1540 by the author himself, Philip Melanchthon. This confession, corrected in favor of those who felt compelled to follow the Swiss Reformed and subscribed by Calvin himself, volens et libens, at the Discussion at Regensburg, 1541, has been accepted not only by all our churches in the Empire, but acknowledged also by the Imperial authorities as the legal creed of the German Reformed Church.

"More influence, however, as to the spiritual life of our churches, has been exercised since the end of the sixteenth century by the Catechism of the Palatinate, commonly called the Heidelberg Catechism. Published at first for the Palatinate only, it soon became the textbook of the Reformed Churches all over Germany, and was recognized as setting forth the true teachings of the Scriptures. Down to this day it is the common standard of all our churches from the Memel to the Rhine, and from the banks of the Danube to the shores of the German Ocean. It is used in all our schools, and is the doctrinal symbol of our Churches. Where you find this, you may be sure that there is a Reformed district. You will find it in all the Reformed Churches of the Empire. The House of the Hohenzollern, now the Imperial Family of Germany, has made use of it, and so also the French Churches in Berlin. In this respect they resemble entirely the 'Reformed Church in the United States,' which belongs to the General Alliance, and derived its origin from Germany, consisting of members whose ancestors were formerly members of our Churches."

Synodical Editors.

(Elected by the Synods.)

Eastern, ... REV. JONATHAN H. PANNEBECKER.
Pittsburgh, ... " DAVID B. LADY.
Potomac, ... " J. SPANGLER KIEFFER, D. D.

A LESSON IN LENT.

It was in the room of a certain Professor, at College, years ago ; and the question for the moment under anxious discussion pertained to the selection of subjects for Senior Orations.

"Why," asked the Professor, "should not some one of you write on Patience? It would be an excellent subject." And then (for he was fond of quoting choice passages of poetry) he recited those fine lines of Dekker's:

> "Patience! why, 'tis the soul of peace:
> Of all the virtues, 'tis the nearest kin to heaven;
> It makes men look like gods. The best of men
> That e'er wore earth about him, was a sufferer,
> A soft, meek, patient, humble, tranquil spirit:
> The first true gentleman that ever breathed."

It was the first time we had heard this passage, and we remember well how the beauty of it impressed us, although the last line somewhat jarred upon our feelings of reverence. We have often read the lines since or repeated them to ourselves and never without being instantly and involuntarily reminded of that scene in the Professor's room and the discussion of the question of subjects for Senior Orations.

No one chose Patience as his subject; it was too much to expect that any one would do so. It was too far away; it was too lowly and common a thing for those impatient and impetuous Seniors. It appealed not to them; their thoughts were not along that line; it was too high above them; Seniors though they were they had not as yet advanced so far. They were in quest of something brilliant and striking. Their desire was for showy and captivating subjects. They had not yet emerged (and no one could blame them for not yet having emerged) from that preliminary but necessary stage of a student's life in which he is able to perceive and recognize only the external and superficial Heroisms and Glories.

It takes time to emerge. The years teach us life and experience are the best masters to learn from. Slowly and by degrees our eyes are opened, and we behold the heroism of that in which we once saw nothing heroic and the supreme glory of that in which no glory whatever was discernible at first. We think better of patience now than we did in those college days. We would pronounce it now most worthy of being the theme whether of oration or sermon. There are no words too high for it. Truly it is, as Chrysostom calls it, "the queen of the virtues." The essence of heroism is in it. In all the universe there is no might that can be compared with "the irresistible might of meekness."

How significant is the chief word which, in the New Testament, is rendered "patience!" It is a compound word, and signifies, according to the etymology of it, "remaining under." To be "under," and to "remain" there, meekly and steadfastly and loyally, since it is God's will, —that is patience. When all things are against one; when he finds himself baffled, and buffeted, and beaten on every hand; when disappointment, sorrow and trouble befall him; when all God's waves and billows go galloping and thundering over his head,—then is the hour for the manifestation of this royal virtue of patience. Thus being "under;" the Christian "remains" there; refuses to be swept away from his place; is content to remain there as long as it may be God's will; "bates not one jot of heart or hope;" holds his peace; trusts in God; and waits for the storm to pass by.

It is something well worthy of long-continued and earnest meditation in these days when we are all commemorating the patient suffering of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. We learn this virtue (as we learn all virtues) far better by example than by precept. It is a time for the special remembrance of His blessed example. Let us consider Him that endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself lest we be wearied and faint in our minds. Let us lay to heart the example of Him, "who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when He suffered, He threatened not; but committed Himself to Him that judgeth righteously." O impatient soul; flushed, irritated, angry; about to sin once more, as thou hast done so many thousand times before, by rash speech and act,—see thou do it not! Come away; sit down here in the solitude and silence of this sequestered spot; and here read over and over the History of His most blessed Passion and Death.

Patience! It is learned best in the school of Silence. Would that we might learn the high and sacred Art of Being Silent! Be still. Hold thou thy lips. Let not a word escape thee. Thou shalt be strong so long as thou art silent. Remember Him of whom it is so often said that He was "silent;" of whom it is said that He was "brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so He opened not His mouth."

Patience! Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial. There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man. God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood. Fight the good fight; there is One who fights with you and for you. He that endureth unto the end, the same shall be saved. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

Patience! It will soon be over. At longest, it cannot be long; think of the end and take courage.

> "The battle of our life is brief:
> The alarm—the struggle—the relief—
> Then sleep we side by side."

After toil, repose; after warfare, peace; after the uproar of life's conflict and struggle, the infinite calm of God's Everlasting Rest. It is not far off.

> "O Paradise, O Paradise,
> I feel 'twill not be long;
> Patience! I almost think I hear
> Faint fragments of thy song;
> Where loyal hearts and true
> Stand ever in the light,
> All raptured through and through,
> In God's most holy sight."

J. S. K.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

IN MEMORIAM.

Died.—At 120 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md., Thursday, February 12, 1891, Edward Roelkey, in the 54th year of his age.

It is with feelings of sadness and sorrow that we report the death of this good friend and brother, Edward Roelkey. He was born in Frederick, Md., in the year 1837. He grew up under the influences of a Christian home, and was catechised and confirmed by the late Rev. D. Zacharias, D.D. From his earliest years he took a profound interest in the Church and in everything that pertained to her welfare. One of his characteristics was his warm attachment to his pastor. He ever had a warm heart and a kind word for him. It was always a pleasure and a delight to visit his home, for one was ever assured of a warm and cordial reception. No one knew him, but to find in him a kind, free, and open-hearted Christian man. His home was the home of the ministry of the Church, whom he always met with a smiling countenance; greeted with a warm grasp of the hand; and treated with the kindest hospitality.

When he first came to Baltimore he united with the First English Reformed church on Aisquith street, and stood loyally by its interests as one of its officers, untii it was sold to the Germans.

On March 26th, 1875, he was received by certificate to membership in the First Reformed church on N. Calvert street. He was at once elected a member of the Consistory, and at the first regular meeting unanimously chosen Treasurer of the congregation, which position he held for fourteen consecutive years. He was faithful in the discharge of all his duties and proved himself worthy of the confidence reposed in him in every public and private relation. His strong love for his Church made him a live and active worker, and gave pleasure to everything that could be done to advance her interests. He was highly respected and by the force of his character his influence was widely felt.

He was a constant reader of the Messenger, and was consequently well informed on all church matters, in which he took a lively interest. A number of years ago, by the contribution of $100 to the Reformed Church Publication Board, he became a life member of the Messenger.

To the Mission at Washington, D.C., and St. Paul's Mission of Baltimore, he liberally contributed in their time of need; but very many of his gifts for charitable purposes were known only to those who received them. His great and absorbing desire ever was, that he might be able to do more and give more for the support of Church interests, at home and abroad.

Mr. Roelkey was married in Frederick, in the year 1859, to Miss Alice V. Himbury. They removed to Baltimore in the year 1866, where he engaged in the flour and grain business, the firm being known as Roelkey & Buschey.

In the year 1871 he was elected by the Corn and Flour Exchange, Chief Inspector of Grain. Through his untiring energy, unswerving integrity and skillful judgment for twenty years, Baltimore has grown from almost insignificance, to the second, if not the first city in the United States, in the shipments of cereals to foreign ports. The name of Edward Roelkey is known, not only throughout this country, but all over Europe, as a most reliable Inspector of Grain.

Mr. Roelkey was not only a good business man, but a kind, affectionate and faithful husband, making his home life in every sense of the word a benediction. Whilst his wife alone remains to mourn his loss, she has the sweet consolation of knowing that she stood lovingly by him during the years of his declining health with that womanly devotion which cheered and comforted him until the end came. May that peace which the world cannot give, sustain her in this trying hour.

But this grief stricken companion is not the only one who has sustained a great loss in the departure of this loved brother. The entire community has lost an influential citizen and the Church a ready and zealous supporter. But while we sincerely mourn his loss, "we sorrow not as those who have no hope."

His mortal remains were borne to their resting-place in Loudoun Park, on Sunday afternoon, February 15th, and committed to the ground, to await the general resurrection on the last day, and the life of the world to come. The pastor, Rev. J. T. Rossiter, was assisted in the service by Rev. C. Clever, D.D. The Knight Templars, a committee from the Corn and Flour Exchange, and six different organizations of which he was a member, joined in the funeral cortege to pay their respect to his memory.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

At a regular meeting of the Consistory of the First Reformed Church of Baltimore, held March 2d, 1891, the following action was taken on the death of Edward Roelkey:

Whereas, It hath pleased an all-wise and merciful heavenly Father, to remove from our midst, this beloved brother, who for fourteen years was a co-laborer with us; and

Whereas, It is but just that we should pay a becoming tribute to his worth in life and his memory in death, therefore,

Resolved, By the Consistory of the First Reformed Church of Baltimore, that for the zeal and devotion, which Bro. Roelkey ever manifested for the best interests of our church, as a member of this body, and as treasurer of the congregation for so many years, we here record our appreciation of him as a man of sterling worth, of consistent devotion to his church, and the esteem and regard of our membership for the efficient discharge of his official trust:

Resolved, That we recognize in his death, not only a loss to the congregation, but also the sundering of a link of pleasant Christian fellowship.

Resolved, That the bereaved wife, has the heartfelt sympathy of this Consistory and congregation in her hour of affliction, and that we affectionately commend her to Him whose strong arm and loving heart can alone sustain and comfort her.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mrs. Roelkey, published in the Messenger, and entered upon the minutes of the Consistory.

J. T. Rossiter,
G. S. Griffith, } Com.
J. T. Trebates,

Poetry.

LENT.

THE WILDERNESS.

Made flesh, baptized in Jordan, straightway led—
Ay, word of lovely stress!—
By Spirit-might upon Him newly shed,
"Up" to the wilderness.

Up into hunger, weariness, and strife,
All earthly want to know;
To take our struggle into His infinite life,
That He might help up so.

Yes, even to touch our sin; to feel the press
And urging of desire—
Our very grandeur chafed with littleness,
That strikes unholy fire.

To bear our human, through temptation, high
To God's own will and mind,
Where, strong with Strength Eternal, it can cry,
"Satan! Get thee behind!"

Think you that just those forty days He kept
For His share of our fast?
Think you the tears at Bethany He wept
Were Pity's first and last?

No thing He ever did for once and all:
Each single, bounded deed
Was dear, unstraitened promise, to forestall
On every hap and need.

Turn from your evil to His holy face;
Be sorry for your wrong.
He too repents; beforehand with His grace,
Has sorrowed for you long.

He sends rebuking that He may remit;
His love is in your pain;
Scourging you homeward, whore you still may sit
Safe at His feet again.

Go up into your wilderness with Him!
He knows its tangle wild—
The secret of its desert places dim—
And walks there with His child.

He marks each flinty footstep of your way,
Each blank where earth denies,
For sweet requitals when you walk one day
With Him in Paradise.

—Selected.

Selections.

The secret of success is constancy to purpose.

A man must become wise at his own expense.—Montaigne.

Pride requires very costly food—its keeper's happiness.—Colton.

If the membership of some churches were reduced their power would be augmented.

Our grand business in life is not to see what lies dimly at a distance, but to do what lies clearly at hand.—Carlyle.

If it costs much to be a zealous and successful Christian, it will cost infinitely more to live and die an impenitent sinner. Bible religion costs self-denial; sin costs self destruction.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D.

Prayer has an effect marvellous and certain; it is that of elevating the soul; also in those Christians who have the habit of prayer one finds a nobleness of heart, a dignity of character, and a general nobility in all they do, which one does not see in children of the world.—Joubert.

Science and Art.

The thread of the silk worm is so small that an average of forty-two of them are twisted together to form a thread of common sewing silk; that of the spider is many diameters smaller. Two drachms of spider web by weight would, if stretched into a straight line, reach from London, England, to Edinburgh, Scotland, a distance of over four hundred miles.

More substances are derived from coal tar than from any other product. From it alone, enough money has been won during the past twenty years to pay our national debt thrice over. Besides carbolic acid, with its secondary products picrine, the salicylates and resorcine, much used in the preservation of food, there are saccharine, the sugar of the future, the aniline dye stuffs, and benzol, which is the basis for nearly all our most valued and high-priced perfumes. It is to be noted that saccharine has none of the deleterious effects of sugar, and may be used by persons to whom every other form of sweet is forbidden.

The fly-spider lays an egg as long as itself. There are 4,041 muscles in the caterpillar. Hook discovered 14,000 mirrors in the eye of a drone, and to effect the respiration of a carp 13,300 arteries, vessels, veins, bones, etc., are necessary. The body of every spider contains four little masses pierced with a multitude of imperceptible holes, each hole permitting the passage of a single thread; all the threads, to the amount of 1,000 to each mass, join together where they come out, and make the single thread with which the spider spins its web; so that what we call the spiders' thread consists of more than four thousand united.

Items of Interest.

As a number of deaf mutes now attend the Sabbath-school of Bethany church, Philadelphia, it is proposed to organize a class to be taught by the sign language.

Every four miles along the dangerous Coast of New Jersey our government has placed the life saving stations. From September until the first of June eight men are to be found at each station.

The "army" of the Pope consists of 2 generals, 2 colonels, 2 lieutenant-colonels, 1 major, 2 captains, 4 lieutenants and 60 privates. The "cavalry" consists of 13 noblemen with 8 horses.

The Presbyterian Revision Committee completed its work during its recent sessions at Washington, and adjourned. It is stated that the sessions were harmonious, but that the result will not be published until after it is reported to the General Assembly.

Professor Orton, State Geologist of Ohio, says that natural gas is a stored deposit and certain of rapid exhaustion, and that when the supply of any territory is once used it is gone forever. There is no manufacture of it going on in the depths of the earth.

Lewis E. Gurley, of Troy, N. Y., has given $45,000 to the Troy Female Seminary, to be used in erecting a new building. He was born in Troy, in 1826, and for many years has been prominent in the moral and religious activities of that city. He is a man of great wealth, which he has made by his ability and industry.

It is proposed that there shall be at the World's Columbian Exposition, in 1893, an exhibit which shall present, so far as practicable, the history, present position, distribution and work of the churches and other religious organizations of this country. If, as is probable, there shall be held a great religious congress during the Exposition, the value of such an exhibit as is proposed, as an object lesson in connection with the congress, is obvious.

A careful investigation, recently made by the Missionary Board of the Church of Scotland, throws light on a disputed point. An expression of opinion was asked from all its missionaries in India, and persons in official life, regarding the continuance of missionary colleges and other educational institutions. The returns from about one hundred sources show sixty-five in favor of continuing the educational system and only sixteen unfavorable. The opinions received from civil officers were strong in favor of education.

Hints and Recipes.

No matter how large the spot of oil, any carpet or woolen stuff can be cleaned by applying buckwheat, and carefully brushing it into a dust-pan after a short time, and putting on fresh until the oil has all disappeared.

CHEESE STRAWS.—Two ounces of bread-crumbs, two of flour, two of butter, two of grated cheese, half a teaspoonful of salt and pepper mixed. Roll the paste out thin, cut in strips, lay on a sheet of buttered paper and bake ten minutes. Serve cold. Nice for lunch.

CURING HAMS.—I got the following method from an old cook book, and have found it very good: Hang up the hams a week or ten days; the longer, the tenderer and better, if kept perfectly sweet; mix for each good size ham one teacupful of salt, one tablespoonful of molasses, one ounce of saltpetre; lay the hams in a clean, dry tub; heat the mixture, and rub well into the hams, especially around the bones and recesses; repeat the process once or twice, or until all the mixture is used; then let the hams lie two or three days, when they must be put for three weeks in brine strong enough to bear up an egg; then soak eight hours in water; hang up to dry in the kitchen or other more convenient place for a week or more; smoke from three to five days, being careful not to heat the hams. Corn cobs and apple tree wood are good for smoking. The juices are better retained if smoked with the hock down. Tie up carefully in bags for the summer.—Mrs. Steele, in Prairie Farmer.

Farm and Garden.

MOISTURE-PROOF GLUE. — Farmers often want a moisture-proof glue; and it can be made by dissolving a pound of common glue in three pints of skim milk. The cement is stronger if powdered quicklime is added. A fire-proof cement, for use around stove-pipes, fire-places, and chimneys, where the danger from fire is greatest, can be made by mixing two parts of sifted fresh wood ashes and one part of air-slacked lime, with sufficient boiled linseed oil to make a smooth paste. It hardens quickly to the solidity of a stone. It is water and fire proof, and adheres to metal perfectly.—Household.

HOSPITALS FOR FOWLS.—People who keep many fowls should heed the advice of a poultry keeper, who says that some place should be set apart for the sick birds, and it should be clean, dry, and warm. As soon as a bird shows signs of illness it should be removed from the others, as delay may be dangerous, and cause the spread of some contagious disease. A cheap hospital made be made of a flour barrel, which should be in a warm room. Put the sick bird in the barrel until better. It is then protected from cold and draught. If roup breaks out, and the bird does not show signs of recovery in a day or two, it is best to destroy it at once.

Books and Periodicals.

Any of the books here noticed can be had through our Publication House, 907 Arch Street.

THE HAYDOCK'S TESTIMONY.. By L. C. W. Published by request of the Christian Arbitration and Peace Society. Philadelphia, 310 Chestnut St. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cts.

This is a story of the war between the North and South. The scene is laid in North Carolina, and the characters are of the Society of Friends, They conscientiously were opposed to war—and when drafted rather than pay the exemption tax allowed themselves to be dragged into the army, and refusing to bear arms were sentenced to be shot. But their heroic conduct forced those ordered to shoot them, to refuse to do so. Thus they preferred death to taking part in war—a heroism that was worthy of admiration. The purpose of the story is to show that arbitration and peace is better than war in any case.

THE EXPOSITOR'S BIBLE. Edited by the Rev. W. Robertson Nicoll, A.M., LL.D., Editor of "The Expositor." The Book of Ecclesiastes. By Samuel Cox, D.D. Armstrong & Son, New York. Price, $1.50.

This volume of this series known as the Expositor's Bible, is fully up to those that have preceded it. The basis of it is the author's lectures delivered twenty-five years ago, which have been out of print for twenty years. In rewriting it much of the former book is retained, and the added fresh material makes it all the more valuable and important. As a book Ecclesiastes is less familiar than many of the others. Hence an exposition of it is of interest and value to the student.

THE SERMON BIBLE. St. Matthew XXII. to St. Mark XVI. New York: A. C. Armstrong & Son. Price $1.50.

We have frequently told our readers of the value of this series of Sermons upon the Books of the Bible. The appearance of the successive volumes bears us out in recommending them to our ministers and intelligent laymen.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for March, 1891. Analysis of Contents. Frontispiece:—Antipholus of Syracuse, "Teach Me, Dear Creature;" The Argentine Capital, The Chinese Leak, March Days, In the "Stranger People's" Country, Comedy of Errors, Nationality in Music—with Special Reference to Hungarian Music, In the Vestibule Limited, Memories of the St. John's, Wessex Folk, part I., American Leads at Whist, and their History, Moods, The Literary Landmarks of Edinburgh, Professional Beauties of the Past. Editorial Departments. Monthly Record of Current Events.

Harper Bros., New York.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION makes its weekly visits and is always welcome—as it is filled with interesting reading and is finely illustrated. A home is the better of its coming. Perry Mason & Co., Boston, Mass., are the publishers. Price, $1.75 per year.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE. The number of The Living Age for March 7 contains—Gaspard de Coligny, Church Quarterly Review; Madeleine's Story, part II., Blackwood's Magazine; Aristotle as a Naturalist, Contemporary Review; The Father of all the Goats, Nineteenth Century; A Pompeii in Bohemia, Cornhill Magazine; An Evening with Schliemann, Blackwood's Magazine; The Decline of Indian Taste, Nineteenth Century; Nonconformists and Unionism, Fortnightly

Review; My Witches' Caldron, Macmillans Magazine; Royal Surnames, Speaker; Meissonier, Saturday Review. Poetry and Miscellany.

$8.00 per year. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, send us their annual catalogue and a package of their choice seeds. The reputation of this house is fully kept up and those in need of seeds or plants can rely upon them.

Peter Henderson & Co.'s Manual of Everything for the Garden for 1891, price 25 cts., is a fine specimen of the printer's art. It is a handsome volume. The seeds—vegetable and flower—which this firm supply their customers with are choice and reliable.

We have also received a memorial volume in which is given briefly the life of the founder of this house. It is the story of what can be accomplished by a man who would live a correct life and be of use to his fellow man. The address of the house is Peter Henderson, 33—37 Courtlandt Street, New York.

Marriages.

At Jenner X Roads, Pa., December 25, 1890, by Rev. I. N. Burger, Mr. Calvin Ankeny to Miss Cora L. Knepper.

At Jenner X Roads, Pa., December 25, 1890, by the same, Mr. John W. Trostle, of Stoyestown, Pa., to Miss Ella Scheil, of Jennertown.

February 5, 1891, at the bride's home, near Maytown, Pa., by Rev. M. M. Noacher, Mr. Clayton Stauffer, of Florin, to Miss Annie Ebersole, of Maytown, Pa.

In the Reformed church at Jefferson, February 10th, 1891, by Rev. H. F. Dittmar, Oscar D. Culler to Ella V. Feaster, both of Jefferson, Md.

On the 18th ult., by the Rev. Calvin U. Heilman, Mr. William B. Miller of Groton, South Dakota, to Miss Anna Grace Neff of Porter township, Huntingdon county, Pa.

Deaths.

Obituaries to be inserted must be no longer than two hundred and fifty words.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of St. Luke's Missionary Society of the Reformed church, Pleasant Unity, on the death of Mrs. Rev. E. H. Dieffenbacher.

WHEREAS, It hath pleased God, in His infinite goodness and wisdom, to remove from our midst, to the rest that remaineth for the faithful, our blessed sister and co worker.

WHEREAS, Not understanding this dispensation of an all-wise Providence, yet we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, therefore be it

Resolved, That as a just tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased who was an efficient, earnest and active worker, we acknowledge her worth as that of one who deserves an expression of our sincerest regard and esteem.

Resolved, That we will affectionately cherish the memory of our sister's many Christian virtues, and pray that the sincere faith and never-failing charity, which characterized her in every relation of life, may be emulated by all who knew her.

Resolved, That God may enable us, in His great mercy, to realize that the loss to her family and our loss is her gain.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the afflicted family, and pray that God may sustain them in this bereave ment.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and be published in the REFORMED CHURCH MESSENGER, the Christian World and the Greensburg Press.

G. M. SHEERER,
MRS. E. T. LUDWICK,
MARY E. TRUXALL,
Committee.

DIED.—At Reading, Pa., on the 5th ult., Jacob H. Hain, aged 67 years, 8 months and 2 days.

He was one of the early members and officers of the Second Reformed church. To the close of life he continued faithful in the regular use of the means of grace and the careful training of his family. During the present pastorate of more than 35 years he has had charge of providing the elements for the Holy Communion and keeping the service in proper order, and never at any time needed to be reminded of the duty which he regarded as a sacred privilege. His life was as unostentatious as it was circumspect. His religion was practical according to the standards of the church to which he belonged, and no promise of an improved type falsely so called, could allure him from the sanctuary to which his vows bound him. In all these respects, though dead, he yet speaks to us who are left to mourn his sudden death. He was highly respected by all who knew him, and who now with the congregation, unite in sincere sympathy with his family, who weep for him as one gone before at the call of the Master. C. F. McC.

DIED.—At her home, near Blue Knob, Blair county, Pa., January 22d, 1891, Mrs. Catharine Ritchey, wife of David Ritchey, aged 40 years, 6 months and 2 days.

The subject of the above notice was for nearly twenty-five years a consistent member of Mt. Hope Reformed church. Blessed with pious parents, in her early infancy she was dedicated to God in holy baptism and received into full communion with the church at the age of 15 years. She was faithful in her attendance upon the worship of God's house and as a member of the Sunday-school. Her illness was of short duration. Only eighteen days previous to her death she was in her accustomed place in the sanctuary, joining with the congregation in partaking of the Holy Communion and apparently in good health.

Now she is with the vast multitude of those who have died in the Lord. She leaves a husband, nine children and many friends to mourn her loss. Two children preceded her to the eternal world. But they that remain, while they sorrow indeed, they "sorrow not as others who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." C. W. S.

DIED.—February 11th, Mrs. Daniel Hilbush, of Mahanoy, aged 79 years and 5 months.

Mother Hilbush retired in her usual state of health, awoke at midnight, and gently fell asleep again only to awake in the presence of a holy God. She did not so much as disturb her husband by her side, nor was he conscious of her death until he called her in the morning, and lo! she was dead. Thus "the Lord giveth His beloved sleep."

She was born in Likens township, Dauphin county, a daughter of Adam and Catharine Romberger, dedicated to God in baptism, and at a ripe age indoctrinated in our holy religion and confirmed a member of the Reformed church.

In 1834 she was joined in matrimony with Daniel Hilbush. Three sons were born to them, all residing near their parents, to administer to their wants in the evening of life.

She was an active member of the Reformed church, attending upon the means of grace until lately, when her husband became blind, then she remained with him, directing his steps and attending to his spiritual wants by reading the Scriptures, the German church periodicals, and at every communion season they together celebrated the dying love of their Lord.

She with her husband and sons were liberal supporters of the church, only recently they gave a liberal gift to her institutions.

Her body was laid to rest in the St. Peter's Cemetery, awaiting the resurrection of the just, amid a concourse of mourning friends, when her pastor improved the sad occasion by the truth: "To be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord."

The Lord comfort the mourning friends with the consolations of the gospel of peace and the rich gifts of the Holy Ghost. A. R. H.

DIED.—Brother ex-deacon James A. Leinbach, of the St. John's church, after nearly two years of suffering from a cancerous growth, on Thursday night, February 26th, and was buried in the Union Cemetery on Sunday afternoon, March 1st.

The services were held in the St. John's church, with Rev. O. H. Strunck officiating. Carroll Lodge, I.O.O.F., of Schuylkill Haven, of which the deceased was a member, and Herndon Lodge, I.O.O.F., of Cressona, attended in a body. Brother Leinbach was forty-two years old, and leaves a wife and one daughter to mourn. Throughout his period of terrible suffering, he exhibited a wonderful degree of patience and faith, showing forth the true Christian spirit. And in that day when the Lord shall make up His jewels, no brighter nor fairer gem will be found than Brother Leinbach, for "It is well with his soul." A. L. B.

DIED.—November 23, 1890, Mrs. Mary Rhoads, aged 76 years, 8 months and 4 days.

Mother Rhoads was a consistent member of the Reformed church for many years, and died with the hope of a blessed resurrection.

DIED.—November 29, 1890, Simon F. Albright, of Maytown, Pa., aged 76 years, 3 months and 24 days.

Thus was laid to rest the oldest male member of the Reformed church of Maytown.

DIED.—In Porter township, Huntingdon county, Pa., on the 15th ult., Enoch Isenberg, aged 86 years, 1 month and 27 days.

DIED.—January 15th, 1891, near Mount Tabor, Mrs. Nancy Zimmerman, aged 72 years, 6 months and 11 days.

DIED.—January 15, 1891, at Scalp Level, Pa., Mrs. Maria Levy, aged 87 years, 9 months and 15 days.

DIED.—At Manchester, Md., February 3rd, 1891, Mrs. Lydia Crumrine, relict of William Crumrine, aged 81 years and 23 days.

SUPPLIES

FOR

EASTER.

We offer a New Service for EASTER—with Music—entitled,

"All Hail Our Risen Lord!"

Arranged and composed by Rev. J. Cal. Leinbach and Ferd. K. Hill, organist of Trinity Reformed church, Sunbury, Pa.

Price—100 Copies,	$4 00
" " postpaid,	4 50
Single copy,	5

Also,

"Alleluia, Christ is Risen,"

By the same, at same rates.

Also Service No. 2, with music.

100 Copies,	$4 00
" " postpaid,	4 50
Single Copy, "	5

Service No. 1.

100 Copies,	$2 02
" " postpaid,	2 25
Single Copy, "	5
Four Services, "	15

Services of other Publishers,
Sample Copies, 5 Cents.

Confirmation Tract with Certificate, Rev. A. C. Whitmer, postpaid,	$ 8
Golden Censer, Rev. H. Harbaugh, D. D. A Book for Young Church Members, with Lithograph Certificate. Roan Emb.,	75
" " Gilt,	1 00
Imit. Turkey,	1 50
Real Turkey, Postpaid.	2 25
Easter Eggs, illustrated book, Postpaid.	60

EASTER CARDS IN QUANTITY.

We also can furnish in quantities for Sunday-schools;

Eggs (Wooden), per 100, $2.00

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch St., Philadelphia

Mention this paper.

Books

New Books every week. Catalogue, 132 pages. free; not sold by Dealers; prices too low; buy of the Publisher, JOHN B. ALDEN, 393 Pearl St., New York.

Business Department.

TERMS:

$2.00 a year, in advance, postage free. Six copies to one address for one year, $10.00.

No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publisher, unless orders are sent direct to the Publication Office, at least two weeks before the time subscribed for expires, and all arrearages are paid.

The date appended to the subscriber's name on the slip pasted on each paper, indicates the day and year to which he has paid.

Renewals should be made before the date transpires.

When the address of a paper is to be changed, the OLD and the NEW should be given.

☞Should you remit, and on examining the label on your paper you do not find the proper credit given after two weeks have elapsed, please inform us by postal, so that any failure to reach us may be discovered, or any mistake or omission may be corrected.

☞We do make mistakes sometimes, and we want the aid of pastors, agents and all interested, in correcting them.

☞Remittances should be made payable by Check, Draft, Postal Money Order, or Registered Letter to the order of THE REFORMED CHURCH PUBLICATION HOUSE, 907 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHAS. G. FISHER.

THE ALMANAC

FOR THE

Reformed Church in the United States

—TWENTY-EIGHTH ISSUE—

FOR 1891.

We are ready now to receive orders for our Almanac for 1891, at the following rates:

100	Copies, per express,		$5.00
50	"	"	2.75
12	"	"	.75
1	Copy, Postpaid,		.12

When to be sent by mail 18 cents per dozen must be added for postage.

Also,

WESTERN ALMANAC

At the same prices as above.

GERMAN ALMANAC.

12 Copies,	90 cts.

Postage, 18 cts.

Single Copies, Postpaid, 12 cts.

Address,

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK.

IN OLDEN DAYS BEYOND THE SEA.

Translated from the German, to which are added Introductory and Closing Parts,

BY MISS REBECCA H. SCHIVELY.

An interesting book, giving a thrilling account of the trials and persecutions of those who were true to their faith in "olden days beyond the sea." Pages 305. Illustrated, nicely printed, and handsomely bound. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of retail price, $1.25.

Address,

Reformed Church Publication House,
907 ARCH STREET,
PHILADELPHIA.

THE NEW BOOK,

"In Olden Days Beyond the Sea,"

AND

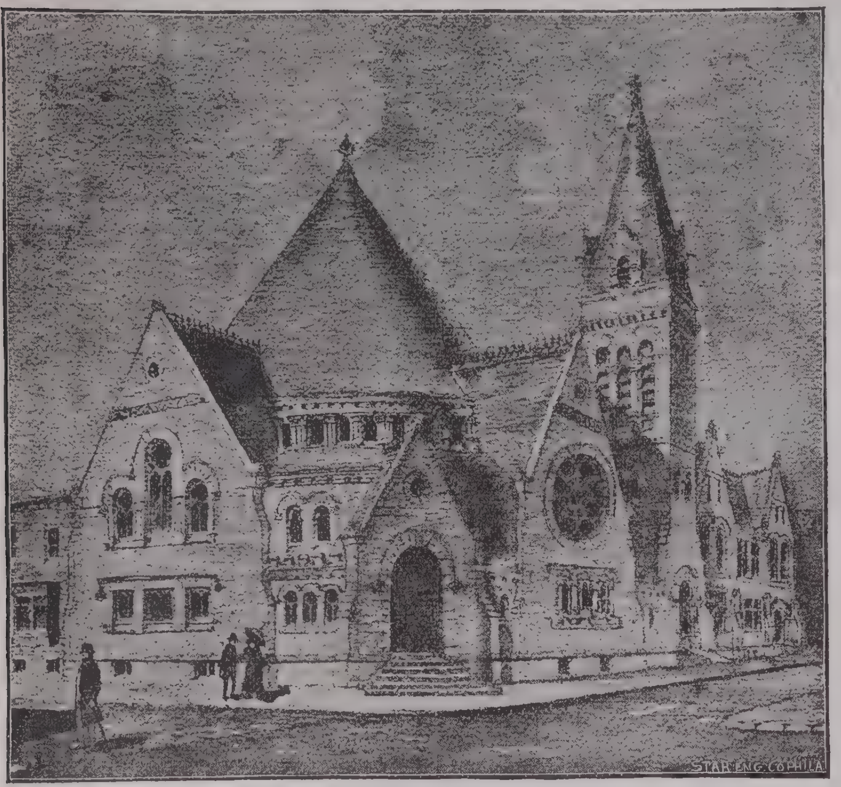
THE MESSENGER.

To any one sending us two new subscribers for THE MESSENGER and $4.00, we will send a copy of the above book postpaid.

To an old subscriber for THE MESSENGER, remitting $2.75, we will give credit for a year's subscription and send a copy of the above book, postpaid.

Address

Reformed Church Pub. House,
907 Arch Street,
PHILADELPHIA.



HEIDELBERG REFORMED CHURCH, YORK, PA.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

THE CHAPEL AND PROPOSED NEW EDIFICE OF HEIDELBERG REFORMED CHURCH, YORK, PA.

The dedication of Heidelberg Reformed Chapel, on Sunday, the 1st inst., was one of the most successful occasions ever enjoyed by a congregation of its years and strength. The people have had a mind to work, and this fact, together with the great devotion and unanimity of spirit characterizing their efforts, has accomplished the good results which have made all interested so happy. The completion of the chapel is a step, covering perhaps two-thirds of the distance, toward the church to be erected in a few years on the corner, a most desirable site. The accompanying cut gives a very correct idea of the chapel as it now stands and of the character of the building to be put up later on. The latter in material, style of architecture and workmanship, will be in accord with that part of the enterprise now completed.

The following is the programme of the services previous to, connected with and following the dedication of the chapel:

Friday, February 27th, Sermon by the Rev. Henry T. Spangler, of Ursinus College. Saturday, February 28th, Rev. Dr. J. O. Miller, of the First Reformed church, York. Sunday, March 1st, 10 A.M., Dedication Service, Sermon by the Rev. Dr. D. E. Klopp, of Lebanon, Pa.; 1.15 P.M., Sunday-school Rally; 3 P.M., Special Service, Brief addresses by invited Clergymen; 6 P.M., Men's Meeting, under the auspices of the B. of A. and P., conducted by the Pastor; 7 P.M., Sermon by Dr. Klopp. Monday, March 2d, Rev. W. S. Freas, of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, York. Tuesday, March 3rd, Rev. B. C. Conner, of the First M. E. church, York. Wednesday, March 4th, Rev. Dr. I. S. Weisz, of York. Thursday, March 5th, Rev. Dr. H. E. Niles, of the First Presbyterian church, York. Friday, March 6th, Rev. James W. Meminger, of St. Paul's Reformed church, Lancaster, Pa. Sunday, March 8th, Usual Services, conducted by the Pastor.

During the week commencing Monday evening, March 9th, up to Friday evening, services will be conducted by Rev. F. C. Yost, of Phœnixville, Pa.

At the services on Sunday a large congregation was present. A liberal offering was received and all present were greatly interested in the services, and pastor and people rejoiced at the bright outlook for the congregation.

The Sunday-school building, opened under such favorable circumstances, is about 60 feet square. On first story are the main room, infant room and library. Around two sides of the building are seven gallery class rooms with balcony in front, from which class rooms are entered. By opening double folding doors the class rooms are in full view of pulpit. The interior is finished in natural hard wood, while the exterior walls are built of marble. The windows are filled with handsome stained glass. It is well heated, ventilated and lighted. The audience-room, when built, will have a semi-circular interior, conforming to the amphitheatre arrangements of pews, and will accommodate about 800 people. The architect is Charles W. Bolton, 1510 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

AN APPEAL.

To the members of the Reformed church and all others who have ears to hear this statement and appeal, and hearts that beat in love for the kingdom of Jesus Christ, greeting!

My Friends:—Through two years we have wrought earnestly yet with joy, to establish and carry forward the work of the Lord in the Reformed church at Steelton. Much has been accomplished. Considering the feeble beginnings of the congregation two years ago, the First Reformed church of Steelton is in a prosperous condition. Yet a house of God wherein the congregation can worship the Lord, and which shall be the spiritual home of the congregation, is a NECESSITY for the life and prosperity of the congregation. By the favor of God a church has been built and is nearly finished.

In the judgment of good and wise men—ministers and elders—who are looking closely after the interests of this mission it is thought that the new church ought now to be dedicated, and the congregation at once occupy it as its spiritual home. Accordingly, we shall dedicate the church, if the Lord will, to the worship of the Triune God, at 10.30 A.M., on Sunday, March 15th, A.D. 1891. But the cost of the erection of the church is not all provided for. This fact gives me much solicitude. Two years of residence and work in Steelton have enabled me to know much about the conditions of life in this place, and I am almost sure that if it is not a NECESSITY that the whole of the church debt be at once provided for, it is at least very IMPORTANT as involving the very life and success, it may be, of the mission, that the congregation shall not have the burden of a church debt to carry into the future.

There have been contributed by my congregation, the citizens of Steelton, and by friends of the mission throughout Pennsylvania and part of Maryland, in money, subscriptions and pledges, $6,500 Three thousand more will be needed to meet the cost of the building. No money has been wasted. Economy of expenditure, with a due regard to the making of the building beautiful as a house where God in His infinite grace, we trust, shall let His presence dwell and His glory be revealed, has marked the whole work from the beginning to the end. This house of worship will be an honor to the Reformed church, a credit to Steelton, and a sacred joy surely to every one who has contributed, or shall contribute toward its erection. I have not time to visit you, or to address you personally by letter. But listen, please, to this appeal, and give it a kindly lodgment in your heart.

Send us, please, a gift in money, or a pledge for money, which will be sacredly laid on the altar of the new church on the day of its dedication, Sunday, March 15 A.D. 1891. Perhaps as congregations, or Sunday schools, or Missionary Societies, or as individuals, you may have some unallotted monies, which with the advice of your pastor you might donate to this work. From some source, in some way just and right, give us; People of the living God, money or pledges of money. Help us, please, in Jesus' name."

"Now's the day, and now's the hour."

Help us and I trust and believe the day is not far distant when this congregation shall with God's blessing be able and willing to help others who may be in need.

Send contributions or pledges to Rev. M. H. Sangree, Steelton, Pa.

Yours in the love of Jesus Christ,
M. H. SANGREE

Steelton, Feb. 28, 1891.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

CALVIN COLLEGE.

In conformity with the resolutions of Erie Classis and of the trustees of Calvin College, passed in June, 1890, the undersigned undertook, a few weeks ago, to make the church at large acquainted with their plans and wishes. Calvin College is to become the property of the whole church, as a connecting link between the English and the German sections of our church. It is especially adapted to this as a college that educates young men who will be able to preach in both English and German, no matter what theological seminary they may attend after graduation, though the design is, that they shall attend English seminaries, inasmuch as they have already complete command of the German. This course has been pursued by the authorities of Calvin College for some years, but cannot be continued, for certain reasons before explained, without pecuniary assistance now given by the American brethren.

So far very favorable responses have been received from the literary institutions of our church in Lancaster, Collegeville and Tiffin. But it seems that the church at large wants to become more fully ac-

Continued on Page 13.

HOOD'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPARILLA TRADE MARK

Hood's Sarsaparilla has by its peculiar merit and its wonderful cures won the confidence of the people, and is to-day the most popular blood purifier and strengthening medicine. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, dyspepsia, headache, kidney and liver complaint, catarrh, rheumatism, etc. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is peculiar to itself.

Hood's Sarsaparilla sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

MELLIN'S FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS. TRADE ORA ET LABORA MARK. FOOD

THE ONLY Perfect Substitute for Mother's Milk.

INVALUABLE IN CHOLERA INFANTUM AND TEETHING.

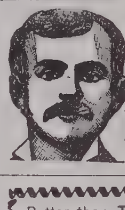
A quickly assimilated Food for DYSPEPTICS, CONSUMPTIVES, CONVALESCENTS.

A PERFECT NUTRIENT in all wasting diseases.

REQUIRES NO COOKING. KEEPS IN ALL CLIMATES.

SEND for our book, "The Care and Feeding of Infants," mailed free to any address.

DOLIBER-GOODALE CO., BOSTON, MASS.



$600 0.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.

VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA

"Once Tried, Always Used."

Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [64

Rubifoam FOR THE TEETH Deliciously Flavored 25¢ SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS

FREE TO LADIES

A MODERN HYGIEAN.

A BOOK CONTAINING ARTICLES ON SENSIBLE DRESSING.

NOT RADICAL DRESS REFORM

By Caroline M. Dodson, M. D., Philadelphia, President National Woman's Health Association of America; Oscar B. Moss, M. D., Kansas City; Mrs. Annie Jenness-Miller, New York; and other eminent writers upon this important subject.

A HANDSOME PAMPHLET BOOK ILLUSTRATED WITH FINE ENGRAVINGS OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

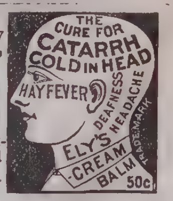
SENT BY MAIL, POSTAGE PREPAID, ON RECEIPT OF POSTAL CARD REQUEST.

GEO. FROST & CO. 31 BEDFORD ST. BOSTON.

ELY'S CREAM BALM Applied into Nostrils is Quickly Absorbed, Cleanses the Head, Heals the Sores and Cures

CATARRH

Restores Taste and Smell, quickly Relieves Cold in Head and Headache. 50c. at Druggists. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St. N.Y



GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE of 16,600f.

QUINA-LAROCHE'S

INVIGORATING TONIC, CONTAINING Peruvian Bark, and Pure Catalan Wine. Endorsed by the Medical Faculty of Paris, as the Best Remedy for LOSS of APPETITE, FEVER and AGUE, MALARIA, NEURALGIA and INDIGESTION.

KINA
QUINA LAROCHE

An experience of 25 years in experimental analysis, together with the valuable aid extended by the Academy of Medicine in Paris, has enabled M. Laroche to extract the entire active properties of Peruvian Bark (a result not before attained), and to concentrate them in an elixir, which possesses in the highest degree its restorative and invigorating qualities, free from the disagreeable bitterness of other remedies.

22 rue Drouot, Paris.

E. FOUGERA & CO., Agents for U. S., 30 North William street, N. Y.

LAROCHE

BLATCHLEY WOOD FORCE PUMP Cheapest and most efficient. A Complete Fire Department on your premises. Write for descriptive circular. CHAS. G. BLATCHLEY, Philada.

400,000 The largest circulation of any periodical in the world. "The Phila. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies free. CURTIS PUB. CO., Phila., Pa.

quainted with the workings of Calvin College, before opening their hearts and hands for its support. It is proposed, therefore, to publish in these columns, from month to month, reports from the college, the first of which is here following. To these reports there are to be added acknowledgments of money received. No such receipts, however, are published this month, because some of the donations have not yet taken definite shape.

Calvin College Notes.

In the higher classes, from five to eight declamations are recited and criticised each week, and then the class members elect by ballot one who is to reproduce his declamation before the whole school on Friday afternoon. The singing class prepares one song each week for the same closing exercises on Friday afternoon. Now we are always sure of one good song and one good declamation on these occasions.

The class in English literature at present reads Tennyson's Enoch Arden, The Lotus Eaters, Ulysses and Tithanus; the class in American literature, Irving's Legend of the Sleepy Hollow; the class in German literature, Fichte's Reden an das deutsche Volk. These classes each read from six to eight classic works each year.

Two entertainments are in preparation. The one is to be a concert, for the benefit of the college hall, which needs repairs; the other an athletic exhibition, for the benefit of the student's Sunday school chapel, which needs additional space for its infant department.

Scripture lessons for morning exercises are at present selected from topics of the Heidelberg Catechism in course.

The best frequented room of the college just now is its gymnasium, and the most attractive part of its apparatus seems to be the punch-bag.

Rev. Wm. H. Shulz of Leavittsburg, O., paid us a visit.

Four Cleveland pastors now teach in college as professors extraordinary—Rev. J. H. C. Roentgen comments on the Heidelberg Catechism, Rev. J. F. Winter instructs the high classes in English literature, Rev. Wilson Stearly of Grace church, lectures on History, and Rev. G. Jurany, the Hungarian missionary, lectures on ancient German literature. Each of these give the college two hours a week, gratuitously.

The distribution of religious literature in the city hospital has been attended to very faithfully by Student Hullhorst, from Nebraska, for more than a year.

Visiting the parents of Sunday-school scholars by the students has received a new impetus, since each teacher is called upon to report at each of the teacher's meetings. Teacher's meetings are held once a month. The programme is partly devotional, partly relating to work, and partly social. These meetings are held in private houses. Refreshments are served toward the close.

The two lowest classes of the preparatory department are just now studying very hard geography of the United States. Each class pursues this study for itself. At the close of the present term, before Easter vacation, the two classes are to examine each other publicly, and there are to be judges and markers, to determine which class knows the most of their own country.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

A TEXAS INVESTIGATION.

Some time during last summer a letter reached Lancaster, Pa., addressed to the Classis of the Reformed church. It being written in German, it was handed to Prof. Schiedt, of the College. After reading it he replied to the Texas parties from whom it had come, referring them to Rev. D. B. Shuey, of Emporia, Kansas, Superintendent of Missions.

A correspondence thereupon opened, and the Texas parties called loudly for help at once, claiming that they were Reformed and that they were about being deprived of their church property. That they had sold their church lot and bought another, and after paying all debts there was a balance of $882 cash in the treasury. This looked a little surprising, for experience teaches us that matters usually wind up in church affairs with a debt instead of cash in the treasury.

This was in Dallas, Texas, and remembering that one of our Reformed ministers had located there in 1885 and received missionary aid awhile from our Board, and the further fact that the copy of their local church constitution, which had been sent us, was unmistakably Reformed, and on account of the urgent appeal, it was thought best to make a personal investigation, especially since the German correspondence was very unsatisfactory.

On account of the numerous engagements we could not undertake the trip until February 5th. Less than 24 hours ride brings one from Emporia, Kansas, through the Indian Territory to the city of Dallas, in Texas, about 75 miles south of the territory line.

Proceeding to the Court-house investigations were commenced in the County Clerk's office, which was found to be more difficult than in most counties of Kansas, where the numerical system of indexing is used, while in Dallas the alphabetical system is in vogue. But without any assistance we soon got on the right track and found all that was necessary to satisfy us.

Some fourteen years ago a German church was organized, and although nearly all of them had been members of the Reformed church, one of whom helped to organize Zwingli Reformed church in Harrisburg, Pa., at the time of its organization, they, however, were organized into a German Presbyterian church, the minister having been of that denomination.

The Board of Church Erection of that Church afterwards loaned them $350 to build their church on Commerce street. This was given in 1879, and was covered with one of their conditional mortgages. The changes of pastorates have been rather frequent. In 1885 Rev. E. De Geller, of the Reformed church of Stockton, California, became their pastor, and they adopted a Reformed constitution and proclaimed themselves a Reformed church, and Rev. De Geller, if we remember rightly, received a stated salary from our Board.

But it now transpires, or at least the members say, he was receiving salary from the Presbyterian Board all along, and that he always told them that the Reformed church would not help them, and he therefore united with the Presbytery, whereupon his name was dropped from our roll of missionaries. The church was known as the "Deutsche Evangelische Reformirte St. Paulus Gemeinde," according to their constitution, which has never been changed until lately.

It is now an Evangelical church, belonging to that organization, and the title was easily accomplished by merely dropping the word Reformirte in the above title. And now comes another strange part of the history. When the congregation sold its church lot on Commerce street on December 18, 1888, it having been in the name of the German Presbyterian St. Paul's church, it was so deeded to Chas. J. Steuerwald, of New York. On the 17th of January, 1889, they purchased another lot on the north-east corner of Liberty and Texas streets, and the deed was made to J. J. Yost and Christian Mosser, trustees of the St. Paul's German Presbyterian church, and the property continues in that name, although the congregation is now under the Evangelical Association.

But in this change to the Evangelical church seven families who claim to have always been Reformed did not consent and would not enter the new organization, and have refrained from taking any part ever since. This looks somewhat mixed up and may cause trouble at some future time.

By the investigation I was fully convinced that the Reformed church can lay no legal claim whatever to anything there now. But a lesson on the importance of having a church extension fund was easily learned. With such funds building lots suitable for churches could be secured in all these new cities as they spring up, so that when the church is ready to establish a mission it would save the great expense of a lot.

Dallas will serve as an example. On June 15, 1878, the mission purchased the lot on Commerce Street for $300, and sold it December 18, 1888, for $4,440, reserving all the improvements which they moved to the new lot purchased for $1900, on which was a three-roomed house. This was purchased January 17, 1889, from Wm. H. Clark, who had purchased the same lot November 4, 1881, for $190, just one-tenth of the selling price.

Dallas is a beautiful city of 53,000 inhabitants, including the suburbs. Our church ought to be well established in such cities. D. B. Shuey.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

SPECIAL MEETING OF WYOMING CLASSIS.

At a special meeting of Wyoming Classis, held in Shiloh Reformed church, Danville, Pa., March 3, 1891, the pastoral relation of Rev J. A. Peters, D.D., to the Danville charge was dissolved, and he was dismissed to the Tiffin Classis, Synod of Ohio. Revs D. W. Ebbert, Sorber and G. W. Engle were appointed a committee to draft a minute relative to Dr. Peters' removal from the midst of the Classis. They submitted the following report, which was adopted by a rising vote:

Your committee appointed to prepare a minute with reference to the removal of Rev. J. A. Peters, D.D., to Tiffin Classis, Synod of Ohio, would respectfully report:

Whereas, A call to Rev. Dr. Peters, by the Regents of Heidelberg University, Tiffin, O., to the Presidency of the Literary Department, has made it necessary to dissolve his relation to a pastorate within our bounds, therefore,

Resolved, In acceding to the request of Dr. Peters, we do so with a painful sense of our loss. His able counsels and zealous activity in advancing the interests of our beloved Zion within our borders will be greatly missed; and yet, as he leaves us carrying with him his ripe scholarship and wide experience, we desire to add our testimony to the wisdom shown in the choice made for such an important post as that to which he has been called.

Resolved, That this Classis bids Rev. J. A. Peters, D.D., God-speed in the important work of education in one of the leading literary institutions of our church, and that we fervently implore the blessing of of our Heavenly Father upon this dear brother in the arduous labors in which he shall soon engage.

These resolutions called forth feeling remarks by the members of Classis present, and were very touchingly responded to by Dr. Peters.

The Danville charge is in good condition, spiritually and financially, and the time is not far distant when a division of the charge will be effected.

The committee appointed at the last annual meeting of Classis to visit the city of Scranton and examine into the feasibility of organizing a Reformed congregation there, brought in a very favorable report. Scranton is a growing city; there are many Reformed people there, some identified with other churches and some not; and Classis should not lose a moment's time in founding a mission there.

The report was adopted, the committee was continued, the interest at Scranton was commended to the care of the Board of Home Missions of the General Synod, and the Board was requested, should it adopt the overture of Classis, to send its superintendent into the field at as early a date as possible, to work up the field in conjunction with the committee of Classis.

Rev. D. E. Schoedler,
Stated Clerk.

Cleveland's Baking Powder
Is Absolutely the Best,
Because—"Cleveland's makes a fine grained, spongy cake."—Pattern Cook Book.

TEN POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS THINK OF IT!
As a Flesh Producer there can be no question but that
SCOTT'S EMULSION
Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites Of Lime and Soda is without a rival. Many have gained a pound a day by the use of it. It cures
CONSUMPTION,
SCROFULA, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS AND COLDS, AND ALL FORMS OF WASTING DISEASES. AS PALATABLE AS MILK.
Be sure you get the genuine as there are poor imitations.

HAIR
—ON—
Ladies' Faces
Destroyed forever. No pain, scar, shock, or injury by the Electric Needle by
DR. J. VAN DYCK,
Electro Surgeon,
1106 WALNUT ST, Phila., and 502 PENN AVE., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Never fails. Book free. Call or write.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.
W. BAKER & CO.'S
Breakfast Cocoa
from which the excess of oil has been removed,
Is absolutely pure and it is soluble.
No Chemicals
are used in its preparation. It has more than three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, EASILY DIGESTED, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as for persons in health.
Sold by Grocers everywhere.
W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

For Gas BAILEY'S For Oil
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass
REFLECTORS,
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. A. J. WEIDENER, 36 South 2d St. Philada.
ALSO CHANDELIERS for OIL and ELECTRICITY

CHOICE CARPETINGS
IN ALL GRADES,
AT POPULAR PRICES.
A full line of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and Standard Domestic and Imported Carpets.
☞ We request only an OPPORTUNITY to show you our stock.
IVINS, DIETZ & MAGEE.
NEW STORE,
1217 Market Street,
PHILADELPHIA.

CARPET buyers had better purchase of J. & J. DOBSON, 809 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, in order to receive full value for their money. They retail Carpets of their own make, which are reliable in every way.

CHURCH, HALL AND LODGE
Furniture. Pulpits, Chairs, Pews, etc.
BAXTER C. SWAN, 244 & 246 S. 2d St., Phila, Pa.

For Reformed Church Messenger.

FROM LANCASTER.

